CONTAINING,

Not only the Explanation of the Terms, but alſo the LAW itſelf, both with Regard to Theory and Practice.

A.

A B, When the name of a place begins with Ab, it denotes, that either the place belonged to ſome abbey, or that an abbey was founded there. Thus, Abingdon in Berkſhire took that name ſoon after Ciſſa king of the Weſt-Saxons had founded the abbey there; for before it was called Cloveſhoe. Cowell.

Abacot, A cap of ſtate, wrought up in the figure of two crowns, uſed in old time by our Engliſh kings. Cowell. Spelman.

Abactors, (Abactores) Drivers away, or indeed ſtealers of cattle or beaſts, not by one and one, but in great numbers at once; and therefore thus diſtinguiſhed from fures, thieves: Qui unam ovem ſurripuerit, ut fur, coercetur, qui gregem, ut abactor. It is derived from the verb abigere, to drive away. Cowell. Du Freſne.

Abacus, Arithmetic, or the art of numbering, from the abacus or table, on which the ancients ſet down their figures.——Omnium liberalium artium peritus, abacum præcipue, lunarem compotum et curſum rimatus. Cowell. Hen. Knighton, Chron. lib. 1. cap. 3. Du Freſne.

Abaciſta, An arithmetitian, whence the Italian abbachier and abbachiſta.—— Abacum certè primus a Saracenis capiens, regulas dedit, quæ a ſudantibus abaciſtis vix intelliguntur. Cowell. Will. Malmſ. hiſt. Ang. lib. 2. c. 10.

Abandum, (Abandonum,) Any thing ſequeſtred, proſcribed, or abandoned. Abandon, i. e. In bannum res miſſa; a thing banned or denounced as forfeited and loſt. Whence to abandon, to deſert, or forſake as loſt and gone. Cowell.

Abarnare, From the Saxon abarian, to detect or diſcover any ſecret crime.——Si homo furtivum aliquid in domo ſua occultaverit, et ita fuerit abarnatus, rectum eſt ut inde habeat quod quæſivit. Leges Canuti regis, cap. 104. Dr. Wilkins, in his Gloſſary on the Saxon laws, thus explains this word Abarnare: Rem clam et occultè geſtam probationibus manifeſtare: Unde murdrum abarnatum idem eſt ac murdrum probatum. Cowell. Du Freſne.

Abate, Is derived from the French word abbatre, to pull down, to overthrow, to demoliſh, to batter down, to deſtroy. In the writers of the Common law it is uſed both actively and neuterly; as to abate a caſtle, to beat it down. To abate a writ is, by ſome exception to defeat or overthrow it. A ſtranger abateth, that is, entreth upon a houſe or land void by the death of him that laſt poſſeſſed it, before the heir take his poſſeſſion, and ſo keepeth him out: wherefore, as he that putteth out him in poſſeſſion is ſaid to diſſeiſe, ſo he that ſteppeth in between the former poſſeſſor and his heir, is ſaid to abate. In the neuter ſignification thus: The writ of the demandant ſhall abate, that is, ſhall be diſabled, fruſtrated, or overthrown. The appeal abateth by covin, that is, the accuſation is defeated by deceit. Co. Lit. 134. b. 227. a. Cowell.

Abatement, (from abate,) Sometimes ſignifies the act of the abator; as abatement into land is, when a man dies ſeiſed, and another, who has no right, enters before the heir; ſuch entry is called an abatement. Abatement of a writ or plaint is, when for any default the defendant prays that the writ or plaint do abate, viz. ceaſe againſt him for that time. It is the affection or paſſion of the thing abated, as abatement of a writ or plaint, is the deſtruction of ſuch writ or plaint. And in this ſignification it is as much as exceptio dilatoria with the civilians, or rather an effect of it; for the exception alledged, and made good, works the abatement. Abatement, in the general acceptation of the word, ſignifies a plea put in by the defendant, in which he ſhews cauſe to the court why he ſhould not be impleaded or ſued, or if impleaded, not in the manner and form he then is. Co. Lit. 134. b. 227. a. F. N. B. 115. Cowell. Gilb. H. C. P. 186.

The chief pleas in abatement are,

I. To the juriſdiction of the court.
II. To the perſon of the plaintiff.
III. To the perſon of the defendant.
IV. To the count or declaration.
V. To the writ.
VI. Abatement by demiſe of the king, marriage, or death of parties.

A B A

I. Pleas in abatement to the juriſdiction of the court. Under this head of pleas to the juriſdiction, it will be neceſſary to make a diviſion of the courts, which, for this purpoſe, may be divided into, Firſt, The courts at Weſtminſter. Secondly, The reſt of the temporal courts in England.

Firſt, The courts of Weſtminſter are the ſuperior courts in the kingdom, and have a ſuperintendancy over all the other courts, by prohibition, if they exceed their juriſdiction; or, by writs of error, and falſe judgment, if their proceedings are erroneous: ſo that theſe courts have conuzance of all tranſitory actions, except between the ſcholars of Oxford and Cambridge, and every thing ſuppoſed to be done within their juriſdiction, unleſs the contrary eſpecially appears. On the other hand, nothing ſhall be intended within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, but what is expreſsly alledged; ſo that where an action is brought on a promiſe in a court below, not only the promiſe, but the conſideration of the promiſe, muſt be alledged to ariſe within an inferior juriſdiction; becauſe ſuch inferior courts are bounded in their original creation, to cauſes ariſing within the limits of ſuch new-erected juriſdiction; and therefore if a debtor, that has contracted a debt out of ſuch limited juriſdiction, comes within it, yet they cannot ſue there for ſuch debt; becauſe the cauſe of action did not ariſe within ſuch juriſdiction; and therefore it is not within the limits of their commiſſion to try and determine; for which reaſon the conſideration of the promiſe, which is the cauſe of action, muſt be alledged to be within the juriſdiction of the court; and not only ſo, but it muſt be proved upon the trial; and if the plaintiff prove a conſideration out of the juriſdiction, that cannot be given in evidence; and if it be, the defendant's counſel may tender a bill of exceptions: And therefore the firſt of Saunders 74. in the caſe of Deacock and Beſt, makes a true diſtinction between counties palatine and other inferior courts. For the county palatine is a general court, for all the ſubjects of that palatinate, and not merely for the cauſes ariſing within the county palatine; for if a debtor goes from a foreign into a county palatine, his objections go along with him, as much as if he went from one kingdom to another; and if it were otherwiſe, a palatinate juriſdiction would be a ſhelter and aſylum to debtors; for no proceſs but the ſupreme prerogative proceſs runs there; and therefore it is truly determined, though the caſe of action be out of the palatinate; yet if the party be a ſubject of that palatinate, as he is by coming into that dominion, that the action there may be brought againſt him.

Secondly, Of temporal courts in England: which may be divided into three, viz. Firſt, Courts palatinate. Secondly, Inferior courts. Thirdly, Courts not of record.

Firſt, Courts palatinate, which are three; firſt, Cheſter; ſecondly, Durham, erected by William the conqueror; and thirdly, Lancaſter, erected by act of parliament in Edward the Third's time. Theſe were ſuperior courts within their juriſdiction, in as ample a manner as a court of Weſtminſter; and the king's ordinary writs do not run there.

Secondly, Inferior courts of record. They are all the king's courts, though another may have the profits, and they ſit either mediate or immediate from the king; and they are either erected by letters patent from the king, or by preſcription; and the proceedings are preſerved on rolls, which are of ſo high a nature, that they are to be tried by themſelves only. Some of theſe have franchiſe to hold pleas within ſuch a compaſs; through which breve domini regis non currit.

Thirdly, Courts not of record, ſuch as the court baron, hundred court, and county court. Gilb. H. C. P. 188.

There are no pleas to the juriſdiction of the courts at Weſtminſter in tranſitory actions, unleſs the plaintiff by his declaration ſhews the cauſe of action accrues within the county palatine, or if it be between the ſcholars of Oxford and Cambridge. 4 Inſt. 213. 1 Sid. 103. There is a difference between a franchiſe to demand conuſance, and a franchiſe, Ubi breve domini regis non currit. For in the firſt caſe the tenant or defendant ſhall not plead it, but the lord of the franchiſe muſt demand conuſance; but in the other caſe, the defendant muſt plead it to the writ. 4 Inſt. 224. See titles Franchiſe, Conuzance. Where a franchiſe, either by letters patent or preſcription, hath a privilege of holding pleas within their juriſdiction, if the courts at Weſtminſter intrench on their privileges, they muſt demand conuſance, that is, deſire that the cauſe may be determined before them; for the defendant cannot plead to the juriſdiction: And the reaſon is, becauſe a defendant is arreſted by the King's writ. But within a franchiſe, where the King's writ doth not run, he is not legally convened, and therefore he may plead it to the juriſdiction.

The pleas to the juriſdiction of the courts at Weſtminſter, according to chief baron Gilbert, are,

Ancient demeſne. Herne's Pl. 351. See title Antient demeſne.
Held of the King's manor. Hanſ. 103.
Counties palatine. Raſt. 419. Herne 7. See title County palatine.
Cinque ports. See title Cinque ports.

Three things are to be obſerved with reſpect to pleas to the juriſdiction. Firſt, They muſt be pleaded before any imparlance; for by craving leave to imparl, the defendant ſubmits to the juriſdiction. 2 H. 6. 30. 22 H. 6. 7. Hard. 365. 1 Lut. 46. Except where antient demeſne is pleaded; for this may be done after imparlance, becauſe the lord might reverſe the judgment by writ of diſceit, and it goes in bar of the action itſelf, viz. in that court, becauſe it is coram non judice. Secondly, The defendant muſt plead in propria perſona; for he cannot plead by attorney without leave of the court firſt had, which leave acknowledges their juriſdiction; for the attorney is an officer of the court; and if he put in a plea by an officer of the court, that plea muſt be ſuppoſed to be put in by leave of the court. Thirdly, The defendant muſt make but half defence. See title Defence.

II. Pleas in abatement to the perſon of the plaintiff. And here are the following diſabilities, viz. 1. Outlawry. 2. Excommunication. 3. Alienage, 4. Præmunire; and 5. Recuſancy; which may be pleaded in abatement of the writ, and the plaintiff ſhall not be anſwered until he hath removed them; and therefore by the antient law he was ſaid to loſe liberam legem, becauſe he was not rectus in cur', until he had removed ſuch impediment.

Firſt, Outlawry; for until this is reverſed, for the King has granted his charter of pardon, the plaintiff is out of the protection of the law; becauſe he would not be amenable and attendant to the law, and ought not to have any privilege from it; but none ſhould be outlawed until after the exigent be returned; for the enquiring after him in the county is in order that he may appear; and therefore if he does appear at the return of the exigent the law is ſatisfied, and the outlawry muſt not be recorded againſt him. Lit. ſect. 197. Dy. 28, 222. Aſſ. 49. Br. Nonability 25, 23.

But this diſability is only pleadable when the plaintiff ſues in his own right; for if he ſues in auter droit, as executor or adminiſtrator, or as mayor with his commonalty, outlawry ſhall not diſable him; becauſe the perſon whom he repreſents has the privilege of the law. Co. Lit. 128. Nor when the plaintiff brings a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry, ſhall outlawry in that ſuit, nor at any ſtranger's ſuit, diſable him; for if he were outlawed at ſeveral mens ſuits, and one ſhould be a bar to another, he could never reverſe any of them. The outlawry itſelf is no objection; for that would be exceptio ejuſdem rei cujus petitur diſſolutio: Nor is another outlawry pleadable in bar to ſuch writ of error; for then two erroneous outlawries would be irreverſible; and therefore that is tantamount to exceptio ejuſdem rei cujus petitur diſſolutio. Co. Lit. 128. Doct. Placit. 396.

Outlawry does not entirely abate the writ, but is only a temporary impediment that diſables the plaintiff from proceeding; for upon obtaining a charter of pardon, or reverſing the outlawry, he is reſtored to his law, and ſhall oblige the defendant to plead to the ſame writ. Co. Lit. 128. Doct. Placit. 397.

As outlawry is a dilatory plea, when it is pleaded in another court than where the outlawry iſſued, the defendant muſt bring it in immediately. For this being in delay, if the court ſhould give time and it ſhould not be brought in, then the delay of juſtice would be from the court; and ſince there is a way of having it immediately, by producing it under the great ſeal, no time ſhall be given to bring it ſub pede ſigilli; but otherwiſe when it is in the ſame court; for then the record is already in court. Doct. Placit. 393. Stamf. 103. Fitz. Coron. 233.

In pleading outlawry in diſability in another court, the antient way was to have the record of the outlawry itſelf ſub pede ſigilli by certiorari and mittimus; but this being very expenſive, it is now ſufficient to plead the capias utlagatum under the ſeal of the court from whence it iſſues; for the iſſuing of execution could not be without the judgment; and therefore ſuch execution is a proof to the court that there is ſuch a judgment, which is a proof that the defendant's plea of matter of record is proved by matter of record; and therefore appears to the court not to be merely dilatory; and therefore on ſhewing ſuch execution, if the plaintiff will plead nul tiel record, the court will give the defendant a day to bring it in. Co. Lit. 128. Doct. Placit. tit. Outlawry. But where excommunication is pleaded, it is not ſufficient to ſhew the writ de excommunicato capiendo under the ſeal of the court; for the writ is no evidence of the continuance of the excommunication, ſince he may be abſoiled by the biſhop, and that will not appear in the king's court, becauſe ſuch aſſoilment is not returned into the king's court from whence the ſignificavit is ſent. But the reverſal of the judgment of outlawry muſt appear in the ſame court where the outlawry is returned; and therefore the iſſuing of the execution is a ſtrong proof of the continuance of the judgment; and if it is denied on the other ſide, they will give him a day to maintain his plea; but in caſe of an excommunication, the iſſuing the writ is no certain proof of excommunication, even at the time of iſſuing the writ; for he might be abſoiled between the ſignificavit and the iſſuing the writ de excommunicato capiendo; and therefore there muſt be a certificate under the ſeal of the biſhop to maintain the plea, ſince it is dilatory; and the court, on ſhewing only the writ de excommunicato capiendo, have no ground to give the defendant time; beſides, it is below the dignity of the court to write to the biſhop to ſatisfy dilatories; and there is no way by certiorari or mittimus to bring it in. Fitz. Cor. 233. 12 E. 4. 16. Doct. Placit. 396.

Outlawry in a county palatine cannot be pleaded in any of the courts of Weſtminſter; for he is only ouſted of his law within that juriſdiction, and it ſhall not extend to diſable a man in another county where they have no power; for the county palatine being a royal juriſdiction within bounds, the loſing the privileges of law within that juriſdiction, can be no diſadvantage to him in another county; and if he does not live within the palatine juriſdiction, he is not obliged to attend there. But it ſeems that outlawry in the county palatine of Lancaſter may be pleaded in the courts of Weſtminſter; becauſe that county was erected by act of parliament in the time of Ed. 3. but Durham and Cheſter are by preſcription. Fitz. Coron. 233. 12 Ed. 4. 16. Doct. Placit. 396.

2. Excommunication. This cannot be pleaded after general imparlance; for thereby the plaintiff is admitted to be a good plaintiff; but after a ſpecial imparlance it may be pleaded. When excommunication is pleaded, the biſhop's letter under his ſeal, witneſſing the excommunication, muſt be ſhewn; and though the plaintiff cannot deny the plea, yet the writ ſhall not abate, but the defendant eat inde ſine die; becauſe the plaintiff upon producing his letters of abſolution, ſhall have a re-ſummons or re-attachment. Lit. ſect. 201. 8 Co. 68.

Excommunication is a good plea to an executor or adminiſtrator, though they ſue in auter droit; and the difference between this and outlawry is, that an excommunicate perſon is excluded from the body of the church, and is incapable to lay out the goods of the deceaſed to pious uſes; but the outlaw, though incapable of law for his own benefit, may be allowed to do all charitable actions for the ſoul of the deceaſed; and it is one of the effects of excommunication, that he cannot be procurator or attorney for any other perſon; and therefore cannot repreſent the deceaſed. Co. Lit. 134. 43 E. 3. 13. Thel. 11.

Excommunication is no plea on a qui tam, becauſe it is for example, and the ſtatute having given the informer an ability to ſue, and not excepted excommunicated perſons from the liberty of informing, he is enabled to ſue by the ſtatute, notwithſtanding the cenſures of the church. 12 Co. 61.

When prohibition is brought againſt the biſhop, and he pleads excommunication againſt the plaintiff, and in the excommunication there is no cauſe of ſuch excommunication ſhewn, this is no good plea; for in ſuch caſe it will be intended, that the excommunication was for endeavouring to hinder the biſhop's proceeding by application to the temporal court; and if ſuch excommunication were allowed, it would deſtroy all prohibitions, and the plea of excommunication in this caſe is exceptio ejuſdem rei cujus petitur diſſolutio. Thelo. 10, 11. 28 E. 3. 27. 8 Co. 68.

In an action brought by the bailiffs and commonalty, the defendant ſhall not plead excommunication in the bailiffs; becauſe they ſue as a corporation, and a corporation cannot be excluded from the communion of the viſible church. Thelo. 11. 30 E. 3. 4. Co. Lit. 134.

When excommunication is pleaded in the plaintiff, he ſhall not reply, that he has appealed from the ſentence; for the ſentence is in force until it is repealed, and whilſt it is in force he cannot appear in any of the courts of juſtice; but he may reply that he is abſolved, for then his diſability is taken away. Bro. Excom. 3. 3 Bulſ. 72. 20 H. 6. 25. Rol. 226.

In the times of popery, excommunication certified by the pope, or delegates commiſſioned by him, did not diſable the plaintiff; becauſe the courts had no perſon to whom they ſhould write to have him aſſoiled. And it ſeems by this, that if the ſentence be a nullity, as if they excommunicate for a temporal offence, the King's court will write to the biſhop to aſſoil him; and when the plaintiff brings in the letter of abſolution, the court will oblige the defendant to plead in chief. Bro. Excom. 17. 1 Rol. Abr. 883. 14 Hen. 4. 14.

The court will not receive the certificate of excommunication of one biſhop from another, becauſe they muſt have the certificate from the biſhop whoſe ſubject he was; and he might have been aſſoiled by his own ordinary after the firſt certificate to the biſhop. Bro. Excom. Fitz. Excom. 8 Co. 68. Co. Lit. 134. Nor will they receive a certificate; becauſe he may ſtand aſſoiled by the preſent ordinary that now is, after the deceaſe of the biſhop who has certified; and the court will not receive any certificate, but from ſuch perſon to whom they can write to aſſoil. Bro. Excom. 21. Fitz. Excom. 26. 1 Rol. 883.

3. Alienage. It may be pleaded in abatement in an action real, perſonal or mix'd, that the defendant or plaintiff is an alien, if he be an alien enemy. Co. Lit. 129. b. But an alien in league ſhall maintain perſonal actions; otherwiſe he would not be able to merchandiſe and trade amongſt us. But he ſhall not maintain real or mix'd actions, becauſe there is no neceſſity that he ſhould ſettle amongſt us. Co. Lit. 129. b. Yelv. 198. 1 Bulſtr. 134. If alienage be pleaded to an alien in league, that muſt be in diſability of the plaintiff; but if it be to an alien enemy, it may be pleaded to the action; becauſe it is forfeited to the king, as a reprizal for the damages committed by the dominion in enmity with him. Bro. Denizen 10. Co. Lit. 129. b. See title Aliens.

4. Præmunire. Perſons attainted of præmunire are incapable of bringing any action; for they are out of the protection of the law. Lit. ſect. 199. Co. Lit. 129. See title Præmunire.

5. Papiſh recuſancy. This diſability of popiſh recuſancy convict, is by ſtat. 3. Jac. 1. c. 5. which diſables to all intents, as excommunication, except where he ſues for lands, lands, tenements, leaſes, annuities, rents, and hereditaments, or for the iſſues and profits thereof, which are not to be ſeized into the King's hands, his heirs or ſucceſſors.

III. Pleas in abatement to the perſon of the defendant. Under this head it will be neceſſary to conſider the privilege that the courts at Weſtminſter give to all ſuitors in general, and their own officers and ſervants in particular. As the courts of juſtice are open to all; ſo the law protects the perſons of thoſe who come to attend them both in going thither and returning. But in this caſe the defendant muſt appear in perſon, that the court may examine him, and that they may be ſatisfied upon his oath, that he was either proſecuting or defending ſome ſuit pending in that court, when he was arreſted. 2 Roll. Abr. 272. 2 Hen. 7. 2. 1 H. 6. 3. 38 H. 6. 30. So if the court gives either plaintiff or defendant leave to go after evidences in any cauſe depending in that court, and he be arreſted, he ſhall have privilege. 2 Roll. Abr. 272. 13 Hen. 4. 1. The courts not only protect the parties themſelves, but all witneſſes are protected eundo et redeundo; for ſince they are obliged to appear by the proceſs of that court, they will not ſuffer any one to be moleſted, whilſt he is paying obedience to their writ. 1 Moor 66.

The particular privilege, which the officers of each court enjoy, is not to be drawn out of their own court, to be impleaded elſewhere; for as their attendance is conſtantly to diſpatch the buſineſs of the court to which they belong, if they might be ſued in any other place, their cauſes muſt ſuffer, becauſe they could not be ſpared from their own court to defend them. 2 Roll. Abr. 272. 1 Lutw. 44, 639. Vaugh. 155. 2 H. 7. 2. But this is to be underſtood, when the plaintiff can have the ſame remedy againſt the officer in his own court, as in that where he ſues him; for if money be attached in an attorney's hands by foreign attachment in the ſheriff's court in London, he ſhall not have his privilege; becauſe in this caſe the plaintiff would be remedileſs. For the foreign attachment is by the particular cuſtom of London, and does not lie at Common law; ſo that if the attorney ſhould have his privilege, the plaintiff ſhould be without his redreſs. 1 Saund. 67, 68. So if a writ of entry, or other real action be brought againſt an attorney of the King's Bench, he cannot plead his privilege; becauſe, if this ſhould be allowed, the plaintiff would have a right without a remedy; for the King's Bench hath not cognizance of real actions. 1 Saund. 67.

But the privilege, which the court indulges their officers with, is reſtrained to the ſuits only which they bring in their own right; for if they ſue or are ſued as executors or adminiſtrators, they then repreſent common perſons, and are to have no privilege. Hob. 177. For more matter concerning the privilege of attornies, ſee Law of Attornies and Solicitors, chap. 8.

Miſnomer is a good plea in abatement; for ſince the names are the only marks and indicia of things that human kind can underſtand each other by, if the name be omitted or miſtaken, there is a complaint againſt no body. But though a defendant may, by pleading in abatement, take advantage of a miſnomer when their is a miſtake in the writ or declaration, as to the name of baptiſm or ſurname; yet in ſuch a plea he muſt ſet forth his right name, ſo as to give the plaintiff a better writ. Finch. 363. 9 Hen. 5. 1. One defendant cannot plead miſnomer of his companion; for the other defendant may admit himſelf to be the perſon in the writ. 1 Lutw. 36. The defendant, though his name be miſtaken, is not obliged to take advantage of it; and therefore if he be impleaded by a wrong name, and afterwards impleaded by his right name, he may plead in bar the former judgment, and aver that he is una et eadem perſona. Gilb. H. C. 218. In caſe of felony at Common law, if a perſon were indicted by a wrong name, he could not plead miſnomer, but was obliged to plead to the felony. For the fact being ſworn againſt the party preſent, it was thought there could be no injury by the miſnomer, as might be where the party appeared by attorney; and felons generally go by no certain name, nor have they any fix'd habitation. But this is altered by the ſtatute of additions, viz. 1 Hen. 5. c. 5. which was made to prevent the inconvenience of troubling one perſon for another. See Cro. Car. 104. 21 E. 4. 72. 2 Inſt. 870. 1 Sid. 40. Lit. Rep. 8. In criminal caſes, the party accuſed may take advantage of miſnomer, or the want of addition, but yet muſt plead over to the felony: But though ſuch plea be found for him, he is not to be diſcharged, but muſt be indicted over again; neither ſhall ſuch plea, if found againſt him, be peremptory, but he ſhall be tried on his plea in chief. 2 Hawk. P. C. 186. Alſo the ſtate, place of abode and dignity of the perſon impleaded is neceſſary to be ſet forth in judicial proceedings, leſt an innocent perſon, by having the ſame name with the real defendant, ſhould ſuffer; and therefore the ſtat. 1 Hen. 5. c. 5. enacts, that in all perſonal actions, appeals and indictments, there ſhall be added to the name of the defendants, their eſtates, degrees, miſtery and place of abode. See titles Addition and Miſnomer.

IV. Pleas in abatement to the count or declaration. The firſt act, after the appearance of the parties, and the admittance of the juriſdiction, and the abilities of both parties, is that the party ſuing counts or declares: and afterwards the party impleaded may demand oyer of the writ: and then, if there be any fault or inſufficiency in the count for a cauſe apparent in itſelf, or if there be a variance between the count and the writ, or between the writ and a record, ſpecialty, &c. mentioned in the count, the party impleaded ought to ſhew it, and plead. Thel. lib. 10. c. 1. ſect. 5. Fitz. Count 27. If the declaration varies from the writ, as by laying the cauſe of action in the reign of a preſent king, where the writ ſuppoſed it to have been in the reign of a former king; or by giving the defendant a name different from that in the writ. As where the writ calls him A. B. of London, Alderman, and the plaintiff declares againſt him as A. B. of London, Eſq; or where the declaration is otherwiſe defective, in not purſuing the writ, or not ſetting forth the cauſe of action with that certainty which the law requires, or laying the offence in a different county from that in which the writ was brought.

V. Pleas in abatement to the writ. The law is very ſtrict in obliging men to keep up to the legal forms it preſcribes; and therefore in the writ, which is the foundation of the whole proceeding, requires that certainty and exactneſs, as that no perſon ſhould be arreſted or attached by his goods, unleſs there appears ſufficient grounds to warrant ſuch proceedings; ſo that if the writ vary materially from that in the Regiſter, or be defective in ſubſtance, the party may take advantage of it. See 5 Co. 12. 9 H. 7. 16. 10 Ed. 3. 1. 2 Inſt. 662. Hob. 1, 51, 52, 80. Carth. 172. See title Writ.

VI. Abatement by demiſe of the King, marriage or death of parties. At Common law all ſuits depending in the King's courts where diſcontinued by the death of the King; ſo that the plaintiffs were obliged to commence new actions, or to have re-ſummons or attachment on the former proceſſes, to bring the defendant in; but to prevent the inconvenience, expence and delay which this occaſioned, the ſtatutes of 1 Ed. 6 c. 7. 7 & 8 Will. 3. c. 27. and 7 Ann. c. 8. which ſee under title Prerogative.

If a writ be brought by A. B. as baron and feme, whereas they were not married until the ſuit depended, the defendant may plead this in abatement; for though they cannot have a writ in any other form, yet the writ ſhall abate, becauſe it was falſe when ſued out. Fitz. Brief. 476. If a writ be brought againſt a feme covert as ſole, ſhe may plead her coverture; but if ſhe neglects to do it, and there is a recovery againſt her as a feme ſole, the huſband may avoid it by writ of error, and may come in at any time and plead it. Latch. 24. Style 254, 280. 2 Roll. Rep. 53. If an action be brought in an inferior court againſt a feme ſole, and pending the ſuit ſhe intermarries, and afterwards removes the cauſe by habeas corpus, and the plaintiff declares againſt her as a feme ſole, ſhe may plead coverture at the time of ſuing the the habeas corpus; becauſe the proceedings here are de novo; and the court takes no notice of what was precedent to the habeas corpus; but upon motion on the return of the habeas corpus, the court will grant a procedendo. For though this be a writ of right, yet where it is to abate a rightful ſuit, the court may refuſe it; and the plaintiff had bail below to this ſuit, which by this contrivance he is ouſted of, and poſſibly by the ſame means of the debt. 1 Salk. 8.

As to pleas in abatement by the death of parties, the general rule is, that whenever the death of any party happens pending the writ, and yet the plea is in the ſame condition as if ſuch party were living, there ſuch death makes no alteration. For where the death of the parties makes no change of proceeding, it would be unreaſonable that the ſurviving parties ſhould make any alteration in the writ; and it would be abſurd, that what made no alteration ſhould change the writ and the proceſs. G. Hiſ. C. P. 242.

By ſtatute 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 11. ſect. 7. it is enacted, "that if there be two or more plaintiffs or defendants, and one or more of them ſhould die, if the cauſe of ſuch action ſhould ſurvive to the ſurviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or againſt the ſurviving defendant or defendants, the writ or action ſhall not be thereby abated; but ſuch death being ſuggeſted upon the record, the action ſhall proceed at the ſuit of the ſurviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, againſt the ſurviving defendant or defendants." Before this ſtatute it was held, that if there were two executors, and they brought an action of debt, and one of them died, that the writ ſhould not abate; for in this caſe ſummons and ſeverance lies, after which the one executor does not proceed for a moiety, but for a whole, as repreſentative of the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 652. Co. Lit. 139. 1 Leon. 44. So in a quare impedit, by two jointenants, and one is ſummoned and ſevered, and the ſevered perſon dies, the writ ſhall not abate, becauſe the advowſon is an intire thing, and he proceeded for the whole, after the ſeverance; and ſo he may after the death of the ſevered jointenant. Dyer 279.

If there were ſeveral defendants in the original action, and one died, the writ did not abate; becauſe there being a joint demand, it ſurvives againſt the reſidue; but in this caſe there muſt be a ſuggeſtion on the roll, becauſe it would be error to give judgment againſt a deceaſed perſon. Hard. 151, 164. Style 299. 3 Mod. 249. Cro. Car. 426. 1 Jones 367. 1 Rol. Abr. 756. 1 Show. Rep. 186. But in a writ of error, if there be ſeveral plaintiffs, and one dies, the writ ſhall abate, becauſe the writ of error is to ſet perſons in ſtatue quo, before the erroneous judgment given below; and they that are plaintiffs in error were diſtinct ſufferers in the judgment, ſince there might be different executions iſſued thereupon, and different heirs were made by ſuch judgment, on the lands of each of them; and by conſequence the ſurvivor cannot proſecute the writ of error for the whole waſte, leſt by a colluſive perſuaſion, or by negligence or deſign he ſhould hurt the repreſentative of the deceaſed. Bridg. 78. Yelv. 208, 212, 213. 10 Co. 135. 1 Vent. 34. 1 Sid. 419. cont. But if any of the defendants in error die, yet all things ſhall proceed, becauſe the benefit of ſuch judgment goes to the ſurvivor, and he only is to defend it. Sid. 419. Yelv. 208. In an audita querela, by two, the death of one ſhall not abate the writ; for the ſurvivor is not to be reſtored to any thing he has loſt, but to diſcharge himſelf of the execution; and thereupon, notwithſtanding the death of the other, he may proceed for a diſcharge in toto for himſelf. 1 Vent. 34. 3 Hen. 7. 1. 3 Mod. 249. If there be ſeveral perſons named as plaintiffs in the writ, and one of them was dead at the time of purchaſing the writ, this may be pleaded in abatement; becauſe it falſifies the writ; and becauſe the right was in the ſurvivors, at the time of ſuing the writ, and the writ not accommodated, as the caſe was. 20 Hen. 6. 30. 18 E. 4. 1. 2 H. 7. 16. 1 Brownl. 3, 4. Clift. Ent. 6. Raſt. Ent. 126.

By ſtat. 17 Car. 2. c. 8. (made perpetual by 1 Jac. 2. c. 17.) it is enacted, that the death of either of the parties between verdict and judgment, ſhall not be alledged for error, ſo as judgment be entered within two terms after ſuch verdict.

By ſtat. 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 11. ſect. 6. it is enacted, that if any plaintiff happen to die after an interlocutory judgment, and before a final judgment obtained therein, the ſaid action ſhall not abate by reaſon thereof, if ſuch action might originally be proſecuted or maintained by the executors or adminiſtrators of ſuch plaintiff; and if the defendant die after ſuch interlocutory judgment, and before final judgment therein obtained, the ſaid action ſhall not abate, if ſuch action might originally be proſecuted or maintained againſt the executors or adminiſtrators of ſuch defendant and the plaintiff; or if he be dead after ſuch interlocutory judgment, his executors or adminiſtrators ſhall and may have a ſcire facias againſt the defendant, if living after ſuch interlocutory judgment; or if he die after, then againſt his executors or adminiſtrators, to ſhew cauſe why damages in ſuch action ſhould not be aſſeſſed and recovered by him or them; and if ſuch defendant, his executors or adminiſtrators, ſhall appear at the return of ſuch writ, and not ſhew or alledge any matter ſufficient to arreſt the final judgment; or being returned, warned, or upon two writs of ſcire facias it be returned, that the defendant, his executors or adminiſtrators had nothing whereby to be ſummoned, or could not be found in the county, ſhall make default, that thereupon a writ of enquiry of damages ſhall be awarded, which being executed and returned, judgment ſhall be given for the ſaid plaintiff, his executors or adminiſtrators, proſecuting ſuch writ or writs of ſcire facias againſt ſuch defendant, his executors or adminiſtrators reſpectively.

As pleas in abatement enter not into the merits of the cauſe, but are dilatory, the law has laid the following reſtrictions on them. Firſt, By the ſtatute of 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. for amendment of the law, no dilatory plea is to be received unleſs on oath, and probable cauſe ſhewn to the court. Secondly, No plea in abatement ſhall be received after a reſpondeas ouſter, for then would they be pleaded in infinitum. 2 Saund. 41 Thirdly, That they are to be pleaded before imparlance. See Yelv. 112. 1 Lutw. 46, 178. 2 Lutw. 1117. Doct. Pla. 224. Fourthly, That when iſſue is joined on them, if it be found againſt him who pleads ſuch dilatory plea, it ſhall be peremptory. 2 Show. Rep. 42. 6 Mod. 236.

Abatamentum, (from abate) Is an entry into lands by interpoſition; that is, when a perſon dies ſeiſed, and another who has no right enters before the heir. Co. Lit. 277. a.

Abator, Is he that abateth, that is, intrudeth into a houſe or land, void by the death of the former poſſeſſor, and not yet entered by his heir. Cowel. Old Natura Brev. 115. Perkins 76.

Abatuda, Is any thing diminiſhed. Moneta abatuda, is money clipt or diminiſhed in value. Du Freſne. Charta Simonis Comitis Leiceſtriæ et Montisfortis an. 1209. in 30 Regeſto tabularii regii, ch. 44. Si tempore ſolutionis hæc moneta Melgorienſis fuerit abatuda ſeu deteriorata, &c. Cowel. Du Freſne.

Abbacy, In Latin Abbatia, or Abbathia, is the ſame as to the government of a religious houſe, and the revenues thereof, ſubject to an abbot, as a biſhoprick is to a biſhop: we may call it his paternity. Talis abbatia (quæ paternitas Latino ſermone dicitur) funditus removeatur. Concil. Meldenſ. anno dom. 845. cap. 10. This word is uſed in ſome of our antient grants, particularly anno 34 & 35 Hen. 8. in a grant of the Counteſs of Pembroke. Sciant, &c. quod ego Iſabella Comitiſſa Pembr. pro ſalute animæ meæ, &c. Dedi Deo et abbatiæ de Nutteleg totam Wickham juxta prædictam abbatiam, &c. Cowel. Du Freſne.

Abbat, or Abbot, Abbas in Latin, in French abbe, in Saxon abbud, is a ſpiritual lord or governor, having the rule of a religious houſe. Some learned men derive it from the Syriack abba, pater. Juſtinian's Novel Conſtitut. 115. ſect. υπολειπον, terms him archimandrita; others cœnobiarcha, or archimonachus. Of theſe abbots here in England, ſome were elective, ſome preſentative: ſome were mitred, and ſome were not. Such as were mitred had epiſcopal authority within their limits, being exempted from the juriſdiction of the dioceſan; but the other ſort of abbots were ſubject to the dioceſan in all ſpiritual government. The mitred abbots were lords of parliament, and called abbots ſovereign, and abbots general, to diſtinguiſh them from the other abbots. And as there were abbots, ſo there were alſo lords priors, who had exempt juriſdiction, and were likewiſe lords of parliament. Some reckon twenty-ſix of theſe lords abbots and priors that ſat in parliament. Sir Edward Coke ſays, there were twenty-ſeven parliamentary abbots, and two priors. Co. Lit. 97. In the parliament 20 R. 2. there were but twenty-five abbots, and two priors: But in the ſummons to parliament at Winton, anno 4 Ed. 3. (in dorſo clauſo ejuſdem an. membran. 41.) more are named; to which I have added the founders out of the Monaſticon Anglicanum.

To which were afterwards added,

31. Abbot of St. Auſtin's Briſtoll.	Henricus Secundus Rex.
32. Abbot of Bardeney.	Rex Ethelredus, 712.
33. Prior of Semplingham.	Sanctus Gilbertus, 1131.

To theſe alſo Henry the eighth added the abbot of Taviſtock. And in the teſte to Magna Charta, the names of ſome other abbots are inſerted, among the great men of the realm. An abbot with the monks of the ſame houſe were called the Convent, and made a corporation. But the abbot was not chargeable by the act of his predeceſſor, unleſs it were under the common ſeal, or for ſuch things as came to the uſe of the houſe or convent. Terms de la ley 2. By ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. c. 28. All abbeys, monaſteries, priories, &c. not above the value of 200*l. per ann.* were given to the King. Anno 28 Hen. 8. the reſt of the abbots, &c. made voluntary ſurrenders of their houſes, to obtain favour of the King: And anno 31 Hen. 8. a bill was brought into the houſe to confirm thoſe ſurrenders; which paſſing, compleated the diſſolution, except the hoſpitals and colleges, which were not diſſolved; the firſt, till the 33d, and the laſt till the 37th of Hen. 8. when commiſſioners were appointed to enter and ſeize the ſaid lands, &c. Cowel.

Abatis, (derived from ἀβατος, bardus, vel ſtupidus) an avener or ſteward of the ſtables. The word was ſometimes uſed for a common hoſtler; being pronounced ſhort in the middle ſyllable, which diſtinguiſhes it from the genitive of abbas, an abbot. As in this old line,

Abbatis ad cœnan, dat equis abatis avenam. Cowel. Spelman. Du Freſne.

Abbettor. See Abet.

Abbrochment. See Abrochment.

Abbuttals, (from the French aboutir, to border upon) are the buttings and boundings of land either to the eaſt, weſt, north or ſouth, ſhewing on what other lands, rivers, highways, or other places it does abut: As in Cro. Jac. 184. The plaintiff hath failed in his abbuttals, that is, in ſetting forth how the land is abutted and bounded. Cambden ſays, that limits were diſtinguiſhed by hillocks raiſed on purpoſe, which were called botentines; whence we have the word butting. In a terrier, or deſcription of the ſite of land, the ſides on the breadth are properly adjacentes, lying or bordering, and the ends only in length are abuttantes, abutting or bounding: Which in old ſurveys, they ſometimes expreſſed by capitare, to head; whence abuttals are now called head-lands. Cowel.

Abdicate, (from abdico) to give up right; to reſign.

Abdication, (abdicatio) in general, is where a magiſtrate, or perſon in office, renounces and gives up the ſame, before the term of ſervice is expired. This word is frequently confounded with reſignation, but differs from it in that abdication is done purely and ſimply; whereas reſignation is in favour of ſome third perſon. Chamb. Dict. It is ſaid to be a renunciation, quitting and relinguiſhing, ſo as to have nothing further to do with a thing; or the doing of ſuch actions as are inconſiſtent with the holding of it. On King James's leaving the kingdom, and abdicating the government, the lords would have the word deſertion made uſe of; but the commons thought it was not comprehenſive enough, for that the King might then have liberty of returning. Abdication Debates. The Scots called it forfeiture of the crown, from the verb forisfacio. For the abdication of King James 2. See Stat. 1 Will. & Ma. ſeſſ. 2. c. 2. ſect. 7.

Abditorium, (from abdere, to hide) an abditory or place to hide and preſerve goods, plate, or money, or a cheſt in which relicks were kept. As in the inventory of the church of York, Mon. Angl. tom. 3. p. 173. Item unum unum coffeur, et una pixis de ebore ornata cum argento deaurato. Item tria abditoria et tres pixides de ebore ornatæ cum cupro deaurato. Cowel. Du Freſne.

Aberhed, from the French abbecher, to feed, is an old word, which ſignifies to be ſatisfied. Cowel.

Aberemurder, Aberemurdrum, plain or downright murder; as diſtinguiſhed from the leſs heinous crimes of manſlaughter and chancemedley. It is derived from the Saxon, æbere, apparent, notorious, and mord, murder. So æbere theof, a notorious thief. This aberemurder was declared a capital offence, without fine or commutation by the laws of Cnute, cap. 61. Irruptio in domum, et incendium, et furtum manifeſtum, et cædes publica, et domini proditio, juxta leges humanas ſunt inexpiabilia.—Hoc ex ſcelerum genere fuit, nullo pretio, etiam apud Saxones noſtros, expiabilium: cùm alia licuit pecuniis commutare, ſays Spelman. And in the laws of Hen. 1. c. 12. Ex his placitis quædam emendantur centum ſolid', quædam Wera, quædam Wita, quædam non poſſunt emendari, quæ ſunt Huſbreek, et Bernet, et Openthifthe, et Eberemorth, &c. Cowel. Du Freſne. Wilkins Leg. Anglo-Sax.

Abet, (Abettare) from the Saxon a, an energetical article, and betan, to ſtir up, or excite. In our law it ſignifies as much as to encourage or ſet on. The ſubſtantive abetment, ſignifies encouragement or inſtigation. Standf. Pl. Cr. 105. And abettor (abettator) is an inſtigator or ſetter on; one that promotes or procures a crime. Old Nat. Brev. 21. But both the verb and noun are always taken in the worſt ſenſe. As abettors of murder, are ſuch as command, procure, or counſel others to commit a murder: And in ſome caſes ſuch abettors ſhall be taken as principals; in others, but as acceſſaries; their preſence or abſence at the time of committing the fact, making the difference. Co. Lit. 475. Cowel. Spelman.

Abeyance, hath by ſome been derived from the French aboyer, to bark; but it ſeems rather to come from the French word béer, to gape after, or to expect. This word in Littleton, cap. Diſcontinuance, we find thus uſed: The right of fee-ſimple lieth in abeyance, that is, according to his own interpretation, only in the rememberance, intendment and conſideration of the law. Sir Edw. Coke calls it in gremio egis. And it is a maxim in law, that of every land there is a fee-ſimple in ſome man, or elſe it lies in abeyance. If a man makes a leaſe for life, remainder to the right heirs of J. S. the fee-ſimple is in abeyance until J. S. dies. Co. Lit. 342. In this caſe the remainder paſſeth from the grantor preſently; though it veſts not preſently in the grantee, but is ſaid to be in abeyance. Termes de la ley. If lands be leaſed to A. B. for life, remainder to another perſon for years, the remainder for years is in abeyance until the death of the leſſee, and then it ſhall veſt in him in remainder as a purchaſer, and as a chattel ſhall go to his executors. 3 Leon. 23. Where tenant for term of another's life dieth, the freehold of the lands is in abeyance till the entry of the occupant. Fee-ſimple in abeyance cannot be charged until it comes in eſſe; ſo as to be certainly charged or aliened; though by poſſibility it may fall every hour. Co. Lit. 378. The word abeyance hath been compared to what the civilians call hæreditatem jacentem; for as the civilians ſay lands and goods do jacere; ſo the common lawyers ſay, that things in like eſtate are in abeyance; as the logicians term it, in poſſe, or in underſtanding; and as we ſay, in nubibus, that is, in conſideration of law. Cowel. Spelman.

Abgatoria, Abgetorium, the alphabet A, B, C, &c. Mat. Weſt. reports of St. Patrick——Abgetoria quoque 345 et eo amplius ſcripſit, totidem epiſcopos ordinavit. So Sir James Ware de Scriptor. Hibern. lib. 1. Baptizavit quotidie homines et illis literas legebat, et abgatorias. Cowel. Du Freſne.

Abigevus, for Abigeus, (from abigo, to drive away) ſignifies a thief who hath ſtolen many cattle. Quantitas diſcernit furem ab abigevo, ſecundum quod furtum fuerit majus vel minus, ut ſi quis ſuem ſurripuit, fur erit, et ſi quis gregem, abigevus. Bract. lib. 3. c. 6. Cowel. Du Freſne.

Abiſherling, is underſtood to be quite of amercements. It originally ſignified a forfeiture or amercement; and is more properly miſhering, or miſkering, according to Spelman. Old authors have termed it a freedom or liberty, becauſe whoever hath this word inſerted in a charter or grant, hath not only the forfeitures and amercements of all others within his fee for tranſgreſſions, but alſo is himſelf free from the controul of any within that compaſs. Cowel. Du Freſne.

Abjuration, (Abjuratio) Is a renouncing by oath, and ſignifieth a ſworn baniſhment, or an oath taken to forſake the realm for ever. Saundf. Pl. Cor. lib. 2. cap. 40. Abjuration by the courſe of the Common law may be thus deſcribed: When a man or a woman had committed felony, and the offender for ſafeguard of his or her life had fled to the ſanctuary of a church or church-yard, and there, before the coroner of that place, within 40 days had confeſſed the felony, and taken an oath for his or her perpetual baniſhment out of the realm into a foreign country, chooſing rather perdere patriam quam vitam. But that foreign country into which he was to be exiled, muſt not be among infidels. 3 Inſt. cap. 51. Abjuration of the realm was the party's oath before the coroner himſelf, to depart the realm for ever at the time and place appointed for him; going the direct way to the ſea-ſide for that purpoſe; ſtaying there but one flood and one ebb, if he can have a paſſage; and till he can ſo paſs, going every day into the ſea up to the knees, (Fleta ſays, up to the neck) to try if he can paſs over; and if he cannot paſs within 40 days, then to put himſelf again into the church as a felon, &c. Finch of Law. A man abjured the realm and was taken out of the highway by force, and put in priſon, and afterwards eſcaped, and then was taken and arraigned for it; and becauſe he did not endeavour to go to his port when he was eſcaped, therefore he was not reſtored to the way, but was hanged. For it was ſaid, that his life was not granted to him upon the abjuration, but upon condition that he ſhould go to the port aſſigned him with ſpeed; and if he does not do ſo, he ſhall be hanged; but if he be taken out of the way, he ſhall be reſtored if he prays it, if no default be in him. Br. Coron. pl. 144. Cites 7 Hen. 7. 7. A man could not abjure for petit larceny, but for ſuch felonies for which he ſhall ſuffer death. Br. Cor. pl. 182. But at laſt, this puniſhment becoming but a perpetual confinement of the offender to ſome ſanctuary, wherein, upon abjuration of his liberty and free habitation, he would chooſe to ſpend his life; as appears by ſtat. 22 Hen. 8. c. 14. it was enacted by ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 28. ſect. 7. that thence after no ſanctuary, or privilege of ſanctuary ſhould be allowed; whereupon this abjuration ceaſed: And yet the abjuration by force of the ſtatute of 35 Eliz. cap. 1. before juſtices of peace or juſtices of aſſize, or by force of 35 Eliz. cap. 2. before two juſtices of peace or the coroner by a recuſant, remaineth ſtill; becauſe ſuch abjuration hath no dependence upon any ſanctuary. 3 Inſt. 115, 116. cap. 51. An abjuration for ever into a foreign country is a civil death; and called by Lord Coke a divorce between huſband and wife; and the wife of ſuch perſon may bring actions, or be impleaded during the natural life of the huſband, which ſhe may not do in any other caſe. Co. Lit. 133. The form of the oath of abjuration was thus, according to Staundforde, 'Hoc audis, Domine coronatur, quòd ego ſum 'latro bidentium, vel alicujus alterius animalis, vel ho-'micida unius, vel plurium, et felo domini regis Angliæ. 'Et quia multa mala et latrocinia, vel hujuſmodi in terra 'feci, abjuro terram domini regis Angliæ. Et quòd 'debeo me feſtinare verſus portum de tali loco quem 'mihi dediſti; et quòd non debeo abire de altera 'via: Et ſi faciam, volo quòd ſim captus ſicut latro et 'felo domini regis; et quod ad talem locum diligenter 'quæram tranſitum, et quòd non expectabo illic, niſi 'fluxum et refluxum, ſi tranſitum habere potero; et niſi 'tanto ſpatio tranſitum habere potero, ibo quolibet die 'in mare uſque ad genu, tentans tranſire: Et ni hoc po-'tero infra 40 dies continuos, mittam me iterum ad ec-'cleſiam ſicut latro et felo domini regis: Sic me deus ad-'juvet,' &c. For the abjuration oath to be taken, ſee ſtat. 13 Will. 3. cap. 6. 6. Ann. c. 7. ſect. 20.

Abolition, A deſtroying, effacing, or putting out of memory: It is the leave given by the King or judges to a criminal accuſer, to deſiſt from farther proſecution: Inſtitutæ actionis peremptio. See ſtat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 21. Cowel.

Abridge, (from the French abbreger) Signifies to make ſhorter in words, ſo as to retain the ſenſe or ſubſtance. But in the Common law it ſignifies particularly the making a declaration or count ſhorter, by taking away or ſevering ſome of the ſubſtance from it. For example, a man is ſaid to abridge his plaint in aſſize; and a woman her demand in action of dower, where any land is put into the plaint or demand, which is not in the tenure of the tenant or defendant. For if the defendant pleads non-tenure, joint-tenancy, &c. in abatement of the writ, the plaintiff may leave out thoſe lands, and pray that the tenant may anſwer to the reſt. The reaſon of this abridgment of the plaint is, becauſe the certainty is not ſet down in ſuch writs, but they run in general: And though the demandant hath abridged his plaint in part, yet the writ will be good for the remainder. Cowel. Brook. tit. Abridgment. By ſtat. 21 Hen. 8. cap. 3. The plaintiff in aſſiſe may abridge his plaint of any part whereunto a bar is pleaded, without prejudice to the reſidue; in like manner as he might do in caſe the plea in bar had been made to any certainty or number of acres.

Abrogate, Abrogare, To diſannul or repeal; as to abrogate a law, that is, to lay aſide, or repeal it. This word is uſed in the ſtat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 3.

Abſoniare, To deteſt, ſhun or avoid. It was uſed by the Engliſh-Saxons in the oath of fealty; as in the form of the oath among the Saxons recorded by Mr. Somner: In illo Deo, pro quo ſanctum hoc ſanctificatum eſt, volo eſſe nunc domino meo fidelis et credibilis, et amare quod amat, et abſoniare quod abſoniat, *per Dei rectum, et ſeculi competentiam. Accedas ad Curiam, Is a writ that lies for him who has received falſe judgment, or fears partiality in a court-baron, or hundred-court. It is directed to the ſheriff; and iſſued out of Chancery, but returnable into B. R. or C. B. and is in the nature of the writ de falſo judicio, which lies for him that had received falſe judgment in the county-court. In the Regiſter of writs, it is ſaid to be a writ that lies as well for juſtice delay, as for falſe judgment; and that it is a ſpecies of the writ Recordare, the ſheriff being to make record of the ſuit in the inferior court, and certify it into the King's court. Cowel. Reg. Orig. 56. F. N. B. Dyer 169.

Accedas ad vicecomitem, Is a writ directed to the coroner, commanding him to deliver a writ to the ſheriff; who having a pone delivered to him, ſuppreſſes it. Cowel. Reg. Orig. 83.

Acceptance, (Acceptatio) Is the taking and accepting of any thing in good part, and as it were a tacit agreement to a preceding act, which might have been defeated and avoided, were it not for ſuch acceptance had. For example; if a biſhop before the ſtatute 1 Eliz. leaſed part of his biſhoprick for term of years, reſerving rent, and then dies; and afterwards another is made biſhop, who accepts and receives the rent when due, by this acceptance the leaſe is made good, which otherwiſe the new biſhop might have avoided. In like manner, if baron and feme, ſeiſed of lands in right of the feme, join and make a leaſe or feoffment, reſerving rent; and the baron dies, after whoſe death the feme receives or accepts the rent; by this the leaſe or feoffment is confirmed, and ſhall bar her from bringing a cui in vita. Cowel. Co. Lit. 211.

Under this head ſhall be conſidered,

I. Where acceptance of rent confirmeth a leaſe.
II. Where acceptance of rent ſhall not make the leaſe good.
III. Acceptance of rent after the aſſignment of a term; and where acceptance of one eſtate ſhall deſtroy another.
IV. Where acceptance of one thing ſhall be a good bar to demand another, and where not.
V. Where acceptance of money diſcharges a bond.

I. Where acceptance of rent confirmeth a leaſe. Tenant in tail made a leaſe for years, rendring 20*s.* rent, and afterwards releaſed 19*s.* and died; the iſſue in tail accepted the 12*d.* rent: the better opinion was, that by the acceptance of the ſhilling for rent he had affirmed the leaſe, and could not diſtrain for the 19*s.* rent. Dyer 304. Tenant for life, remainder in tail; a ſtranger levies a fine to him in remainder, who leaſed the lands to the conuſor, rendring rent, the tenant for life died, and the iſſue in tail accepted the rent: adjudged, that by the fine and acceptance of the rent, the leaſe was affirmed. Dyer 299. See Smith againſt Stapleton, Plowd. 418, 434. Lord and tenant; the rent is behind many years, the tenant made a feoffment in fee, and the lord accepted the rent of the feoffee which became due in his time; adjudged, that by ſuch acceptance he ſhall loſe all the arrearages, and cannot avow for the ſame. 3 Rep. 65. Penant's caſe. Leaſe for years, rendring rent, with a clauſe of re-entry; the leſſee paid the rent, which the leſſor accepted, and put into a bag, but afterwards finding braſs money amongſt it, he refuſed to carry it away, and entered for the condition broken; but adjudged unlawful; becauſe after he had accepted the rent he is barred. 5 Rep. 113. Wade's caſe. Leſſor made a leaſe for years rendring rent at Lady-Day, with clauſe of re-entry; the rent was not paid at the day; afterwards the leſſor accepted it, and entered for the condition broken: adjudged, that his entry was lawful; for the rent was due before the condition broken; but if the leſſor accepts the next quarter's rent, then he hath loſt the benefit of re-entry, for thereby he admits the leſſee to be his tenant: and if the leſſor diſtrain for rent due at the ſaid feaſt, after the forfeiture, he cannot afterwards re-enter for the ſaid forfeiture; for by his diſtreſs, he hath affirmed the poſſeſſion of the leſſee: ſo if he makes an acquittance for the rent as a rent; contrary, if the acquittance be but for a ſum of money, and not expreſsly for the rent. 1 Leon. 262.

II. Where acceptance of rent ſhall not make the leaſe good. If a parſon or tenant for life make a leaſe for years, there no acceptance can make the leaſe good, becauſe the leaſe is void by their death. Dyer 46. 7. Rep. Earl of Bedford's caſe. A biſhop made a leaſe for years to two, not confirmed, afterwards he made another leaſe to one of them, which was confirmed by the dean and chapter, and died; the acceptance of the rent by his ſucceſſor did not affirm the firſt leaſe, becauſe it was void, and the ſame was in prejudice of the ſecond leaſe. Dyer 46. Tenant in tail made a leaſe for years, rendring rent to him and his heirs, and died; his ſon and heir accepted the rent, and was afterwards executed for treaſon, leaving iſſue a ſon; the King accepted the rent, but that did not make the leaſe good, the lands being in his hands by the attainder, and not in the reverter. Dyer 115. Leaſe for years, with condition, that the leſſee ſhall not alien or aſſign, without the aſſent of the leſſor, and if he did, that then the leſſor ſhould re-enter: he aſſigned part of the land without aſſent, &c. and then the leſſor before notice of the aſſignment, accepts the rent, and afterwards entered for the condition broken, and adjudged lawful; for the condition being collateral, he might aſſign the land ſo ſecretly, that it may be impoſſible for the leſſor to know it. 3 Rep. 65. Pennant's caſe. Cro. Eliz. 453. S. C. The provoſt of Wel's was parſon imparſonee of the parſonage of W. and made a leaſe of the tithes, rendring rent, which leaſe was confirmed by the dean and chapter, but not by the patron and ordinary; the provoſtſhip was united to the deanery; the provoſt died, and the dean accepted the rent: adjudged, that this leaſe was void by the death of the provoſt, and the acceptance of the rent did not confirm it, becauſe the patron and ordinary did not join in the leaſe. Dyer 239. Leſſee for years of an houſe and lands, rendring rent, provided that the leſſee ſhall not parcel out any of the land from the houſe; afterwards he did parcel out the land from the houſe; then the rent was in arrear, the leſſor demanded it, and tho' he had a title to re-enter for the condition broken; yet he afterwards accepted the rent which became due after he had a title to enter, and then he re-entered: adjudged, that tho' he accepted the rent, as aforeſaid, yet his entry was lawful. Noy 7. Leaſe for twenty-one years, rendring rent, on condition, that if the leſſee did let any part of it above three years, then the leaſe to be void, and that the leſſor might enter; he let it out for three years, and ſo from three years to three years, during the term of twenty-one years, if he ſo long lived; the leſſor accepted the rent of the aſſignee, and afterwards entered; this was a breach of the condition, and the acceptance afterwards did not diſpenſe with it, becauſe the original leaſe was void and determined. Cro. Car. 368.

III. Acceptance of rent after the aſſignment of a term; and where acceptance of one eſtate ſhall deſtroy another, and where not. Leſſee for years aſſigned his term, and died inteſtate, the leſſor brought debt againſt his adminiſtrator, who pleaded the aſſignment, and that the plaintiff had notice, and had accepted the rent of the aſſignee: adjudged, that by the death of the leſſee, the privity of contract was determined, and the action would not lie againſt the adminiſtrator. Cro. Eliz. 715. and cited in Walker's caſe, 3 Rep. 24.

Debt for rent; the defendant pleaded in bar, that before the action brought he aſſigned the leaſe to R. B. and that the leſſor had accepted the rent of the aſſignee, which became due after the aſſignment: adjudged, that ſuch acceptance was ſufficient notice of the aſſignment, and the plaintiff could not reſort to the firſt leſſee. 2 Bulſt. 151.

A man in conſideration of a marriage to be had with M. R. made an eſtate to her for life of certain lands in full ſatisfaction of her dower; afterwards they married, and the huſband died, and the widow brought a writ of dower againſt the heir, who pleaded in bar the acceptance of the eſtate for life: adjudged no good plea; for ſuch acceptance did not bar her of her dower at the Common law, becauſe ſhe had no title of dower when the acceptance was made; and beſides no collateral acceptance can bar any right of inheritance or freehold. See 4 Rep. Vernon's caſe.

A man made a leaſe of a manor for thirty years, excepting the wood, &c. and afterwards made a leaſe of the woods to the ſame leſſee for ſixty years, and a third leaſe to him of the manor for thirty years, without any exception; reſolved, that by the acceptance of this future leaſe, the leaſe for ſixty years was ſurrendered; becauſe by ſuch acceptance the leſſee had affirmed, that the leſſor had authority to make a new leaſe. 5 Rep. 11. Ives's caſe.

In a ſpecial verdict in treſpaſs, the caſe was, a leaſe was made to huſband and wife for their lives, and afterwards they accepted a new leaſe for themſelves and their ſon; habendum to all three of them, a die datus indenturæ, for the term of their lives with a letter of attorney to make livery: adjudged, that the acceptance of a ſecond leaſe, to commence a die datus, was a ſurrender of the firſt, and this by the expreſs agreement in writing of the leſſees themſelves; for otherwiſe the leſſor had no power to make a new leaſe. Moor 636.

A widow had judgment in dower, and upon a writ to the ſheriff he returned, that he had delivered eighty-four acres to her of the lands mentioned in the declaration; afterwards the widow brought a ſcire facias againſt the tertenant, ſuggeſting, that ſixty acres, parcel of the eighty-four, were the lands of another perſon not mentioned in the writ, and therefore prayed another diviſion; the tenant pleaded, that the other twenty-four acres were parcel of the lands recovered in dower, and that the widow had entered and accepted thoſe twenty-four acres; and upon demurrer to this plea, the tenant had judgment, becauſe by this entry and acceptance, though of a leſſer part, the widow had barred herſelf of the thirds of the whole in her declaration. Moor 679.

Leaſe for years to R. B. rendring rent; the next year a leaſe was made of the ſame lands to the lady P. for ninety-nine years; the next year the ſame lands were demiſed to the ſaid R. B. for forty-one years, who accepted the leaſe, but that did not extinguiſh his firſt leaſe; becauſe the leſſor by making the intermediate leaſe to the lady P. had only a reverſion, and could not afterwards give any intereſt to R. B. but if it had not been for this intermediate leaſe, then the acceptance of the ſecond leaſe for forty-one years had been a ſurrender of the firſt. Hutt. 104.

IV. Where acceptance of one thing ſhall be a good bar to demand another, and where not. Where the condition of a bond is collateral, there the acceptance of another thing is no bar; as if the condition be to make up an accompt; in an action of debt on the bond, the defendant cannot plead, that he made a leaſe for years to the plaintiff of lands, which he accepted. Dyer 1.

Where the condition is to pay money, there the acceptance of another thing is good; as in an action of debt on a bond, conditioned to pay 10*l.* at ſuch a day, the defendant pleaded, that before the day he gave the plaintiff a horſe in ſatisfaction, which he accepted, and held good. Dyer 56.

If a man be bound in 200 quarters of corn, with condition to pay 20*l.* the obligor may by agreement, give the obligee any other thing in ſatisfaction of the money; but if the condition had been to pay 100 quarters of corn, there the acceptance of money, or any other thing, had not been good, becauſe the contract was not made for money, but for a collateral thing. Peytoe's caſe, 9 Rep. 79.

Debt upon bond, conditioned for the obligor to make an aſſurance of ſuch lands to ſuch uſes as in the condition mentioned; the defendant pleaded, that he had made a feoffment of the ſame lands to other uſes than in the condition expreſſed, which the obligee had accepted; and upon demurrer it was adjudged an ill plea; for the obligor ought not to vary from the uſes ſet forth in the condition. 1 Brownl. 60. Acceptance of a leſs ſum may be in ſatisfaction of a greater ſum, if it be before the day on which the money becomes due. 3 Bulſt. 301.

Debt on bond; the defendant pleaded payment of the money according to the condition, &c. upon which they were at iſſue, and the evidence was, that the defendant had paid the money before the day appointed by the condition, and that the plaintiff had accepted it: adjudged, this was a good diſcharge of the bond, if it had been ſpecially pleaded; but as the defendant had pleaded, it muſt be found againſt him, and ſo it was. Godbolt. 10.

Aſſumpſit, &c. the defendant pleaded, that he gave the plaintiff a beaver hat in ſatisfaction of the promiſe, and that the plaintiff accepted it in ſatisfaction; the plaintiff replied proteſtando, that the defendant did not give the hat in ſatisfaction, and traverſed, that he (the plaintiff) accepted it in ſatisfaction; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, firſt, that the plea was ill, becauſe it was pleaded in ſatisfaction of the promiſe, when it ſhould be in ſatisfaction of the damages; but adjudged, that a releaſe of the promiſe had been a good plea in bar to this action; that if the defendant had pleaded a gift, without ſhewing that the plaintiff accepted it, this would have been an ill plea; becauſe the acceptance is as material as the gift, and either is traverſable; but this replication is ill, becauſe the plaintiff neither admitted or confeſſed the gift, but by a proteſtando; and if there was no gift, then there could be no acceptance. 2 Salk. 627. 5 Mod. 86. See Hob. 178.

V. Where acceptance of money diſcharges a bond. Debt upon bond; the defendant pleaded, that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the creditors of the defendant, that he ſhould by indenture convey lands to the ſaid creditors to be ſold by them, and the money to be ſhared amongſt them, and ſays de facto, that by indenture he ſold the lands to them, and aſſigned to them a leaſe for years of certain cuſtoms of wines and ſums of money, which they accepted; adjudged, that this indenture ſounds in nature of a covenant, the breach whereof muſt be ſatisfied by damages, which are uncertain, and ſhall not be accepted or pleaded in ſatisfaction, yet, it not being performed, it ſhall be no bar, tho' accepted by the creditors. Cro. Car. 192. See 6 Rep. 34. Blake's caſe. Debt upon bond for the payment of 7*l.* upon the birth of the plaintiff's next child; the defendant pleaded, that before the birth of the child it was agreed between them, that the plaintiff ſhould have a load of lime of the defendant; for which he would be indebted to him (the ſaid defendant) and that he would acquit him (the plaintiff) of the ſaid debt, and the plaintiff accepted it in ſatisfaction of the bond; and upon demurrer it was inſiſted, that nothing could be taken in ſatisfaction of the 7*l.* becauſe it was not a duty, but a ſum payable upon a contingency, and that the lime could not be accepted in ſatisfaction of the bond, becauſe the bond itſelf could not be diſcharged without a ſpecialty, and therefore he ought to have pleaded, that the plaintiff accepted it in ſatisfaction of the money mentioned in the condition, &c. And this laſt was adjudged a material exception. 2 Cro. 254. 1 Bulſt. 66. 1 Brownl. 109. Yelv. 192. Debt on a bond of 100*l.* conditioned for the payment of 52*l.* 10*s.* on a certain day; the defendant pleaded, that at the day, &c. he and his ſon gave a new bond of 100*l.* conditioned for the payment of 52*l.* 10*s.* at another day then to come, which the plaintiff accepted in ſatisfaction of the old bond; and upon demurrer it was adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the acceptance of a new bond to pay money at another day, could not be a preſent ſatisfaction for the money due on the day when it was to be paid on the old bond. Hob. 68. Debt upon bond, conditioned to pay 8*l.* &c. Defendant pleaded payment of 5*l.* before the day mention d in the condition, which the obligee accepted in ſatisfaction of the bond; and upon demurrer this was adjudged a good plea, upon this difference, that where a leſs ſum is paid before it is due, and the payment is accepted, it ſhall be good in ſatisfaction of a greater ſum; but after the money is due, then a leſs ſum, tho' accepted, ſhall not be a ſatisfaction for a greater ſum. Moor 677. Debt upon bond of 16*l.* conditioned to pay 8*l.* 10*s.* on a certain day; the defendant pleaded, that before that day, he at the requeſt of the plaintiff, paid to him 5*l.* which he accepted in ſatisfaction of the debt, and upon demurrer the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe the defendant had pleaded the payment of the 5*l. generally*, without alledging, that it was in ſatisfaction of the debt. It is true, he ſets forth, that it was accepted in ſatisfaction of the debt, but it ought likewiſe to be paid in ſatisfaction. 5 Rep. 517. Debt upon bond, conditioned, that in conſideration the plaintiff had paid 12*l.* to the defendant, he became bound to pay the plaintiff 12*l.* if he lived one month after the date of that bond; and if not paid at that time, then to pay to him 14*l.* if he lived ſix months after the date of the bond; the defendant pleaded, that after the ſix months, he paid the plaintiff 8*l.* and then gave him another bond in the penalty of 20*l.* conditioned to pay him 10*l.* on a certain day, in full ſatisfaction of the other bond, and that the plaintiff did accordingly accept the ſaid bond; upon a demurrer to this plea it was held ill; for admitting that one bond might be given in ſatisfaction of another, yet it cannot be after the other is forfeited, as it was in this caſe; becauſe after the forfeiture the penaly is veſted in the obligee, and a leſs ſum cannot be a ſatisfaction for a greater. 1 Lut. 501. Debt upon bond, conditioned for payment of 50*l.* and intereſt on the ſecond day of March, 31 Car. 2. the defendant pleaded in bar, that after the making the ſaid bond, he entred into another bond to the plaintiff of the ſame penalty, conditioned for payment of the like ſum, as in the firſt bond, which ſecond bond the plaintiff did accept in full diſcharge and ſatisfaction of the firſt; and upon a demurrer to this plea the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe the defendant did not alledge that he gave the ſecond bond in ſatisfaction of the firſt but only that the plaintiff accepted it, &c. 1 Lut. 501.

Acceſſory, or Acceſſary, (Acceſſorius) ſignifies a man guilty of a felonious offence, not principally, but by participation, as by command, advice, or concealment: Particeps criminis. Cowel. Acceſſaries are of two kinds, viz. acceſſaries before the fact, and acceſſaries after it. An acceſſary before is he, that being abſent at the time of the felony committed doth yet procure, counſel, command, or abet another to commit a felony, and it is an offence greater than the acceſſary after; and therefore in many caſes clergy is taken away from acceſſaries before, which yet is not taken away from acceſſaries after, as in petit treaſon, murder, robbery, and wilful burning, by 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 4. 1 Hale's hiſtory of the pleas of the crown 615. Acceſſaries after the fact is where a perſon, knowing the felony to be committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts, or aſſiſts the felon. 1 H. H. P. C. 618.

Under this head it is thought proper to conſider,

I. In what offences there are acceſſaries, and where not; and of acceſſaries by the Common law, and by act of parliament.

II. Acceſſaries before the fact.
III. Acceſſaries after the fact.
IV. Order of proceeding againſt acceſſaries.

I. In what offences there are acceſſaries, and where not; and of acceſſaries by the Common law, and by act of parliament. In the higheſt capital offence, namely, high treaſon, there are no acceſſaries, neither before nor after; for all conſenters, aiders, abetters, and knowing receivers and comforters of traitors are all principals. 1 H. H. P. C. 613. But yet as to the courſe of proceeding, it hath been and indeed ought to be the courſe, that thoſe who did actually commit the very fact of treaſon, ſhould be firſt tried, before thoſe that are principals in the ſecond degree, becauſe otherwiſe this inconvenience might follow, viz. that the principals in the ſecond degree might be convicted, and yet the principals in the firſt degree may be acquitted, which would be abſurd. 1 H. H. P. C. 613.

In caſes that are criminal but not capital, as in treſpaſs, mayhem, or præmunire, there are no acceſſaries, for all the acceſſaries before are in the ſame degree as principals; and acceſſaries after by receiving the offenders cannot be in law under any penalties as acceſſaries, unleſs the acts of parliament that induce thoſe penalties, do expreſly extend to receivers or comforters, as ſome do. 1 H. H. P. C. 613. It remains therefore, that the buſineſs of this title of acceſſary refers only to felons, whether by the Common law or by act of parliament. As to felonies by act of parliament; regularly if an act of parliament enact an offence to be felony, tho' it mention nothing of acceſſaries before or after, yet virtually and conſequentially thoſe, who counſel or command the offence, are acceſſaries before, and thoſe that knowingly receive the offender, are acceſſaries after; as in the caſe of rape made felony by the ſtatute of Weſtminſter 2. c. 34. 1 H. H. P. C. 613. 2 Inſt. 434. Staundf. P. C. lib. 1. c. 47. But if the act of parliament, that makes the felony, in expreſs terms comprehend acceſſaries before, and makes no mention of acceſſaries after, namely, receivers or comforters, there it ſeems there can be no acceſſaries after; for the expreſſion of procurers, counſellors, abetters (all which import acceſſaries before) makes it evident, that the law-makers did not intend to include acceſſaries after, which is an offence of a lower degree than acceſſaries before; as the ſtatute of 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. for ſtealing of records, the ſtatute of 33 Hen. 8 c. 8. for witchcraft, &c. 1 H. H. P. C. 614. And though generally an act of parliament, creating a felony, renders conſequentially acceſſaries before and after within the ſame penalty, yet the ſpecial penning of the act of parliament in ſuch caſes ſometimes varies the caſe. Thus the ſtatute of 3 Hen. 7. c. 2. for taking away maidens, &c. makes the offender, and the procuring and abetting, yea and wittingly receiving alſo, to be all equally principal felonies, and excluded of clergy. Again, the ſtatute of 27 Eliz. c. 2. makes the coming in of a Jeſuit treaſon, the receiving or relieving of him felony, the contributing money to his relief a præmunire. So that acts of parliament may diverſify the offences of acceſſary or principal, according to the various penning thereof, and ſo have done in many caſes. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 614, 615.

II. Acceſſaries before the fact. Thoſe offences, which in the conſtruction of law are ſudden and unpremeditated, cannot have any acceſſaries before, as killing a man per infortunium, ſe defendendo, or manſlaughter. And therefore, if A. be indicted of murder, and B. as acceſſary before, if the jury find A. guilty only of manſlaughter, there ſhall be no inquiry of B. but he ſhall be forthwith diſcharged; becauſe bare homicide is always ſudden, for if it were premeditated, it had been murder and not barely homicide; but there may be an acceſſary after. 1 H. H. P. C. 616. 4 Co. Rep. 43. b. Again, the ſmallneſs of the offence, though it be felony, yet becauſe it is not capital, excludeth acceſſaries before or after, and therefore in petit larceny there can be no acceſſary: And this is alſo the reaſon why there can be no acceſſary either before or after in manſlaughter per infortunium, or ſe defendendo, becauſe there is no judgment of death in that caſe. 1 H. H. P. C. 616. Cro. Eliz. 750. That which makes an acceſſary before is command, counſel, abetment, or procurement by one to another to commit a felony, when the commander or counſellor is abſent at the time of the felony committed, for if he be preſent, he is a principal. And therefore words that ſound in bare permiſſion, make not an acceſſary, as if A. ſays he will kill J. S. and B. ſays, you may do your pleaſure for me, this makes not B. acceſſary. 1 H. H. P. C. 616. 21 Hen. 7. 36. 37. Cromp. 41. b. If A. hire B. to mingle or lay poiſon for C. and B. doth it accordingly, and C. is poiſoned, B. though abſent, is principal, and A. is acceſſary; but if A. were preſent at the mingling or laying of the poiſon, though both were abſent at the taking of it, yet both are principal, for they are both equally acting in the poiſoning. But if A. buys the materials of the poiſon, knowing and conſenting to the deſign, and deliver them to B. to mingle and apply it, or lay it in the abſence of A. here it ſeems A. is only acceſſary before. H. P. C. 616. See 3 Inſt. p. 50. State Tr. vol. 1. p. 329.

If A. command or counſel B. to commit felony of one kind, and B. commits a felony of another kind, A. is not acceſſary; as if A. command B. to ſteal a plate, and B. commits burglary to ſteal the plate, A. is acceſſary to the theft, but not to the burglary. 3 Inſt. p. 51.

If A. commands B. to take C. and B. takes C. and robs him, A. is not acceſſary to the robbery. But if A. command B. to beat C. and B. beats C. ſo that he dies, A. is acceſſary, becauſe it may be a probable conſequence of his beating. 1 H. H. P. C. 617. Staundf. P. C. lib. 1. c. 45. the like it is if he command B. to rob him, and in robbing him B. kills him, A. is acceſſary to the murder. 1 Hale's H. P. C. 617. Plowd. Com. 475. Cromp. 43. b.

A. commands B. to burn the Houſe of C. B. kills, robs, or ſteals from C. A. is not acceſſary, for it is an offence of another kind; ſo if A. commands B. to ſteal the horſe of C. and he ſteals his cow, A. is not acceſſary. Plowd. 475. Saunders's caſe. But if A. command B. to ſteal generally from C. then he is acceſſary to any kind of theft from C. though it were done by robbery; for that varies the offence only in degree.

A. commands B. to poiſon C. B. kills him with a ſword, yet A. is acceſſary; for the ſubſtance of the thing commanded was the death of C. and the differing in the manner of its execution from the command doth not excuſe A. from being acceſſary. But if A. command B. to kill C. and B. by miſtake kills D. or elſe in ſtriking at C. kills D. but miſſeth C. A. is not acceſſary to the murder of D. becauſe it differs in the perſon. 3 Inſt 51. Plowd. Com. 475. Saunders's caſe.

A. gets B. with child, and before the birth counſels B. to kill it: The child is born, B. murders it. A. is acceſſary to the murder, yet at the time of the counſel given the child was not in rerum natura. Dyer 186. a.

A. lets out a wild beaſt, or employs a madman to kill others, whereby any is killed, A. is principal in this caſe though abſent, becauſe the inſtrument cannot be a principal. Dalt. c. 108.

A. commands B. to kill C. but before the execution thereof A. repents and countermands B. and yet B. proceeds in the execution thereof, A. is not acceſſary, for his conſent continues not, and he gave timely countermand to B. 3 Inſt. 51. Plowd. Com. 474. Saunders's caſe. Dalt. c. 161. But if A. had repented, yet if B. had not been actually countermanded before the act committed, A. had been acceſſary.

If many perſons come to commit an unlawful act, though one of them only doth it, they are all principals.

III. Of acceſſaries after the fact. This kind of acceſſary after the fact is where a perſon knowing the felony to be committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts, or aſſiſts the felon. 1 H. H. P. C. 618. This holds place only in felonies, and in thoſe felonies, where by the law judgment of death regularly ought to enſue; and therefore there is no acceſſary in petit larceny, homicide per infortunium, or homicide ſe defendendo. 1 H. H. P. C. 618. If A. knows that B. hath committed a felony, but doth not diſcover it, this doth not make A. an acceſſary after, but it is miſpriſion of felony, for which A. may be indicted, and upon his conviction fined and impriſoned. 1 H. H. P. C. 618. If A. ſees B. commit a felony, but conſents not, nor yet takes care to apprehend him, or to levy hue and cry after him, or upon hue and cry doth not purſue him, this is a neglect puniſhable by fine and impriſonment, but it will not make A. an acceſſary after. 1 H. H. P. C. 618. If B. commits a felony, and comes to the houſe of A. before he be arreſted, and A. ſuffers him to eſcape without arreſt, knowing him to have committed a felony, this doth not make A. acceſſary; but if he take money of B. to ſuffer him to eſcape, this makes him acceſſary. And ſo it is if A. ſhut the foredoor of his houſe, whereby the purſuers are deceived, and the felon hath opportunity to eſcape, this makes A. acceſſary; for here is not a bare omiſſion, but an act done by A. to accommodate his eſcape. 1 H. H. P. C. 619.

A. hath his goods ſtolen by B. if A. receives his goods again ſimply without any contract to favour him in his proſecution, or to forbear proſecution, this is lawful; but if he receive them upon agreement not to proſecute, or to proſecute faintly, this is theſtbote, puniſhable by fine and impriſonment; but yet it makes not A. an acceſſary. 1 H. H. P. C. 619. 42 Aſſ. 5. b. Fitz. Coron. 353. Staundf. P. C. 40. a. But if he take money of B. to favour him, whereby he eſcapes, this makes him acceſſary. Dalt. c. 263. Crompt. 41. b.

By ſtatute 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 19. "Receivers of ſtolen goods knowing them to be ſtolen, are to be deemed acceſſaries after the fact, and ſuffer as ſuch." But becauſe theſe receivers often concealed the principal felons, and thereby eſcaped being puniſhed as acceſſaries; therefore by 1 Ann. c. 9. it is enacted, that "whoſoever ſhall buy or receive ſtolen goods, knowing them to be ſtolen, may be proſecuted for a miſdemeanor, and puniſhed by fine and impriſonment, tho' the principal felon be not convicted"; and this ſhall exempt them from being puniſhed as acceſſaries, if the principal ſhall afterwards be convicted. But by 5 Ann. c. 31. it is enacted, that "if any perſon ſhall receive or buy knowingly any ſtolen goods, or knowingly harbour or conceal any felon, he ſhall be taken as acceſſary to the felon, and ſhall ſuffer as a felon." This ſtatute does not take away the benefit of clergy; but by ſtat. 4 Geo. 1. ſuch perſon may be tranſported for fourteen years. And by this laſt-mentioned ſtatute it is alſo enacted, that "whoſoever ſhall take a reward under the pretence of helping any one to ſtolen goods, ſhall ſuffer as a felon, as if he himſelf had ſtolen the ſaid goods, unleſs he cauſe ſuch felon to be apprehended and brought to trial, and give evidence againſt him." Upon this this clauſe the famous Jonathan Wild was convicted and executed. 10 Geo. 1.

It ſeems agreed, that the law hath ſuch a regard to that duty, love, and tenderneſs, which a wife owes to her huſband, as not to make her an acceſſary to felony by any receipt given to her huſband; yet if ſhe be any way guilty of procuring her huſband to commit it, it ſeems to make her an acceſſary before the fact, in the ſame manner as if ſhe had been ſole. Alſo it ſeems agreed, that no other relation, beſides that of a wife to her huſband, will exempt the receiver of a felon from being an acceſſary to the felony; from whence it follows, that if a maſter receive a ſervant, or a ſervant a maſter, or a brother a brother, or even a huſband a wife, they are acceſſaries in the ſame manner as if they had been mere ſtrangers to one another. 2 Hawk. 210.

But if the wife alone, the huſband being ignorant of it, do knowingly receive a felon, the wife is acceſſary and not the huſband. 1 H. H. P. C. 621. But if the huſband and wife both receive a felon knowingly, it ſhall be judged only the act of the huſband, and the wife ſhall be acquitted. 1 H. H. P. C. 621.

If a felon be in goal, for a man to convey inſtruments to him to make an eſcape, or to bribe the goaler to let him eſcape, makes the party an acceſſary; for though common humanity allows every man to afford them neceſſary relief, yet common juſtice prohibits all men unawful attempts to make their eſcapes. 1 Hale's hiſt. P. C. 621.

If A. be committed for felony, and B. an attorney adviſe the friends of A. to write to the witneſſes not to appear againſt him, who writes accordingly, this makes neither B. nor the friends acceſſary, but is a miſdemeanor puniſhable by fine and impriſonment. 3 Inſt. 139.

IV. Order of proceeding againſt acceſſaries. The acceſſary may be indicted in the ſame indictment with the principal, and that is the beſt and moſt uſual way; but he may be indicted in another indictment, but then ſuch indictment muſt contain the certainty and kind of the principal felony. 1 H. H. P. C. 623.

If a man were acceſſary before or after in another county, than where the principal felony was committed, at Common law it was diſpuniſhable, but now by the ſtatute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c 24. the acceſſary is indictable in that county where he was acceſſary, and ſhall be tried there, as if the felony had been committed in the ſame county; and the juſtices, before whom the acceſſary is, ſhall write to the juſtices, &c. before whom the principal is attainted, for the record of the attainder. 1 Hale's hiſt. P. C. 623. This writing is to be by writ in the King's name, under the Teſte of the juſtice ſo ſending it. Dyer 253. b.

The acceſſary ſhall not be conſtrained to anſwer to his indictment, till the principal be tried; but if he will wave that benefit, and put himſelf upon his trial before the principal be tried, he may; and his acquittal or conviction upon ſuch trial is good. But it ſeems neceſſary in ſuch caſe to reſpite judgment till the principal be convicted and attainted; for if the principal be after acquitted, that conviction of the acceſſary is annulled, and no judgment ought to be given againſt him; but if he be acquitted of the acceſſary, that acquittal is good, and he ſhall be diſcharged. 1 H. H. P. C. 623, 624.

It ſeems to be ſettled at this day, that if the principal and acceſſary appear together, and the principal plead the general iſſue, the acceſſary ſhall be put to plead alſo; and that if he likewiſe plead the general iſſue, both may be tried by one inqueſt; but that the principal muſt be firſt convicted; and that the jury ſhall be charged, that if they find the principal Not guilty, they ſhall find the acceſſary Not guilty. But it ſeems agreed, that if the principal plead a plea in bar, or abatement, or a former acquittal, the acceſſary ſhall not be forced to anſwer, till that plea be determined; for if it be found for the principal, the acceſſary is diſcharged; if againſt the principal, yet he ſhall after plead over to the felony, and may be acquitted. 1 H. H. P. C. 624. 2 Hawk. 323.

By ſtat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 15. Thoſe who are accuſed of the receipt of felons, or of commandment, or of force, or of aid of felony done, ſhall be bailable; but this ſeemeth to be only where it ſtands indifferent whether the party be guilty or innocent; for if there are ſtrong preſumptions of guilt, it ſeemeth that he is not bailable. 2 Hawk. 102. Anciently, the acceſſary could not be tried, unleſs the principal were attainted. 2 Inſt. 183. But by ſtat. 1 Ann. ſtat. 2. c. 9. ſect. 1. If the principal be convicted, or ſtand mute, or peremptorily challenge above twenty of the jury, the acceſſary may be tried and puniſhed as if the principal had been attainted; and this, although the principal be admitted to his clergy, pardoned, or otherwiſe delivered before attainder. But in the caſe of ſtolen goods, if the principal cannot be taken, the buyer or receiver may be proſecuted as for a miſdemeanor, to be puniſhed by fine and impriſonment, or other ſuch corporal puniſhment as the court ſhall think fit, although the principal be not convicted, which ſhall exempt the offender from being puniſhed as acceſſary, if the principal be afterwards taken and convicted. 1 Ann. ſtat. 2. c. 9. ſect. 2. 5. Ann. c. 31. ſect. 6. And by ſtat. 29 Geo. 2. c. 30. the buyer or receiver of ſtolen lead, iron, copper, braſs, bell-metal, or ſolder, may be convicted, although the principal hath not been convicted; and ſhall be tranſported for fourteen years. If the principal be erroneouſly attaint, yet the acceſſary ſhall be put to anſwer, and ſhall not take advantage of the error in that attainder; but the principal reverſing the attainder, reverſeth the attainder of the acceſſary. 1 H. H. P. C. 625.

It ſeemeth not reaſonable, where a perſon is charged as acceſſary to more than one principal, to try him on the conviction of one, before all of them have appeared; becauſe hereby he may be ſubject to the hardſhip and hazard of two trials for his life for the ſame offence, which is contrary to the general courſe of the law. 2 Hawk. 323.

If A. be indicted as principal, and B. as acceſſary before or after, and both be acquit, yet B. may be indicted as principal, and the former acquittal as acceſſary is no bar. 1 H. H. P. C. 625. But if A. be indicted as principal and acquitted, he ſhall not be indicted as acceſſary before, and if he be, he may plead his former acquittal in bar, for it is in ſubſtance the ſame offence. 1 H. H. P. C. 626.

Accord, is an agreement beween two perſons to give and accept ſomething in ſatisfaction of a treſpaſs, or offence done by one to the other. This agreement, when executed, may be pleaded in bar to an action for the treſpaſs; for in all perſonal injuries, the law gives damages, as an equivalent; and when the party accepts of an equivalent, there is no injury or cauſe of complaint; and therefore preſent ſatisfaction is a good plea, but if the wrong-doer only promiſes a future ſatisfaction, the injury continues till ſatisfaction is actually made; and conſequently there is a cauſe of complaint in being; and if the treſpaſs were now barred by this plea, he can have no remedy for the future ſatisfaction; for that ſuppoſes the injury to have continuance. 1 New Abr. 22. 5 E. 4. 7. Plowd. 5. b. 1 Roll's Abr. 129. See Raym. 450. 2 Keb. 332. 2 Jones 158, 168.

I. What ſhall be a good accord, and a bar of actions.
II. The form and manner of pleading accords.
III. To what actions may accord be pleaded.

I. What ſhall be a good accord, and a bar of actions. An accord muſt appear to be advantageous to the party, otherwiſe wiſe it can be no ſatisfaction; therefore in an action of treſpaſs for taking the plaintiff's cattle, it is no good plea to ſay, that there was an accord that the plaintiff ſhould have his cattle again; for this is not any ſatisfaction. 1 New Abr. 22. 9 E. 4. 19. 1 Roll's Abr. 128.

In covenant againſt the executor of tenant for life, &c. he pleads an accord that he ſhould quietly depart, and leave the poſſeſſion, &c. and held good; though after the death of tenant for life, he had no intereſt, but a licence in law only to carry away his goods. Yelv. 124.

An accord that each of them ſhould be quit of actions againſt the other, is not good; becauſe it is not any ſatisfaction. 1 Roll's Abr. 128. Style 245.

In an action upon the ſtatute of Rich. 2. if the defendant ſaith, that after the entry an accord was made between them, that the plaintiff ſhould re-enter into the land, and that the defendant ſhould deliver the evidences of the plaintiff to the plaintiff, this is not any bar of the action; for the delivery of the plaintiff's own evidences can be no ſatisfaction of the tortious entry. 9 Ed. 4. 19. 1 Roll's Abr. 128. But if he made title to the evidences it would be a good bar. 1 Roll. Abr. 128.

An accord that the defendant ſhould endeavour to make up and adjuſt differences between the plaintiff and J. S. that he did endeavour, and at his own coſt make up ſuch differences, is a good plea. 1 Roll. Abr. 128.

In treſpaſs for trampling his graſs, the defendant pleads that he was amerced in the court-baron of the plaintiff for the ſame treſpaſs, which was aſſeered to two ſhillings; for which he hath agreed with the plaintiff; and held a good plea by the acceptance thereof; though the amercement in the court-baron was extortion. Bro. Treſpaſs 66.

In an action on the caſe for ſlanderous words, the defendant pleaded an agreement between the plaintiff and him, that he ſhould confeſs that he had done the plaintiff wrong, and ſhould aſk forgiveneſs on his knees, and that after ſuch ſubmiſſion the plaintiff ſhould releaſe the defendant of all actions for the ſaid words; and that accordingly he (the defendant) did make the ſubmiſſion, and the plaintiff forthwith diſcharged him; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was objected, that it was ill, becauſe there was no conſideration in law pleaded to this action; for aſking forgiveneſs, is no conſideration: The plaintiff had judgment. 2 Roll. Rep. Covill v. Jeffery.

In an action on the caſe for words, the defendant pleaded an accord between him and the plaintiff, that whereas the plaintiff had done a treſpaſs to him, this treſpaſs of the defendant ſhould be ſet againſt the other; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged no good plea. Style 245.

Debt upon bond againſt the executor of the obligor; the defendant pleaded an accord 28 April, by which it was agreed, that he ſhould give the plaintiff a new ſecurity for this debt, and for another alſo which was due to him on bond, who accordingly gave a new ſecurity purſuant to the accord by a bill ſealed by himſelf, and upon a demurrer to this plea the plaintiff had judgment; becauſe one bond given in ſatisfaction of another, is no diſcharge; for it doth not amend the matter; though in this caſe the new bond binds the obligor in bonis propriis, whereas by the old bond he was bound only in bonis teſtatoris. 3 Lev. 55. Lobly v. Gildart.

In covenant, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant by indenture covenanted to permit the plaintiff to receive 100*l.* per annum rent, part of which was to go in ſatisfaction of a debt, and the reſidue to be paid to the defendant, and aſſigned a breach in diſturbing him (the plaintiff) in receiving the rent: The defendant pleaded an accord between them, that each ſhould deliver his part of the indenture to T. S. to be cancelled, and that each ſhould be diſcharged of all actions upon the ſaid indenture; and averred, that he did deliver his part, &c. and upon demurrer, this was adjudged ill; becauſe accord is no plea, unleſs executed on both ſides. 3 Lev. 189. Ruſſel v. Ruſſel.

Covenant, &c. in conſideration the plaintiff would permit S. P. to enjoy a farm in Chipſham for one year, paying 72*l.* rent, that then the defendant would pay to the plaintiff 200*l.* which was then in arrear for rent, and alſo the ſaid 72*l.* and the breach aſſigned was non-payment of the 72*l.* The defendant pleaded in bar, that before any cauſe of action did ariſe for breach of covenants, &c. it was agreed between him and the plaintiff, that he, (the defendant) ſhould pay to the plaintiff 30*l.* in diſcharge of all covenants, which ſum the plaintiff received and accepted in full ſatisfaction thereof; and upon demurrer the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe upon the defendant's own ſhewing, there was no covenant broken at the time of this agreement made; and accord and ſatisfaction is no good plea, but only in diſcharge of damages for a covenant actually broken, or for damages actually ſuſtained. 1 Lutw. 358. Snow v. Franklin.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit; the defendant pleaded an accord between the plaintiff and him to do ſeveral things, and averred the performance of part, and that he tendered to do the reſt, and upon demurrer this plea was adjudged ill, becauſe an accord was pleaded, but not executed. T. Jones 6. Sheppard v. Lewis.

In an action on the caſe the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration of money paid to the defendant, he promiſed to deliver 400*lb.* of wax, &c. and that at the day he delivered only 200*lb.* of bad wax; the defendant pleaded an accord between them for the ſaid 200*lb.* of wax, which agreement he had performed; and this was held a good bar. Dyer 75. Andrew's caſe.

Covenant for not repairing an houſe, the defendant pleaded in bar an accord, and execution of it in ſatisfaction of the repairs; this was held a good plea; for though a certain duty, which accrues by a deed, muſt be avoided by matter of as high a nature, and in ſuch caſe accord without writing is no ſatisfaction; yet where the duty accruing by a deed is not certain, but a wrong is done ſubſequent to the deed, for which damages only are recoverable, as in this caſe, for not repairing, there accord with ſatisfaction, is a good plea. 6 Rep. 43. Blake's caſe.

B. owed 100*l.* to A. which he covenanted to repay within three years; the ſaid B. covenanted likewiſe, that A. ſhould enjoy a leaſe of certain lands, &c. peaceably during all that time, but notwithſtanding this covenant, B. entered ſeveral times before the three years were expired, for which the action was now brought, and the breach aſſigned accordingly; the defendant B. pleaded, that after the firſt, and before the other entries, there was an accord and ſatisfaction between him and the plaintiff of all the ſaid entries; and this was held a good plea, becauſe damages for the entries were the ground of this action, which may be diſcharged without deed. 2 Roll. Rep. 187. Roberts v. Stoker.

II. The form and manner of pleading accords.

The beſt and ſafeſt way to plead an accord, is to plead it by way of ſatisfaction, and not by way of accord; for if it is pleaded by way of accord, a preciſe execution thereof, in every part, muſt be pleaded; and if there be a failure in any part, the plea is inſufficient; but if it be pleaded by way of ſatisfaction, the defendant need plead no more, but that he paid the plaintiff 10*s.* in full ſatisfaction of the action, which he received. 9 Rep. 80. See 1 Roll. Abr. 129. 1 Danv. Abr. 241.

Ejectment againſt three; they pleaded, that after the ſuppoſed treſpaſs and ejectment, there was an agreement between the plaintiff and defendants, that one of them ſhould pay unto the plaintiff 10*l.* in ſatisfaction thereof, which he had performed; and this was held a good plea. 9 Rep. 77. Petoe's caſe; and in that caſe it was held, that where the condition is by deed to pay money, there by accord between the parties, any other thing may be given in ſatisfaction of the money; but if the condition be to deliver 50 quarters of wheat, there an accord to pay money in ſatisfaction thereof is not good: It is otherwiſe, where the contract is without deed. Goldſ. 80.

In covenant, by the heir of the reverſioner againſt the executor of tenant for life, for not repairing, &c. the defendant pleads that the teſtator died the 19th of March, and that the 22d of March concordat' et agreat' fuit between the plaintiff and defendant, that the defendant ſhould quietly depart and leave the poſſeſſion to the plaintiff, and that in conſideratione inde the plaintiff did agree to diſcharge him of the breach in non reparando, and ſhews that the 25th of March he did depart, &c. this is no good plea; becauſe the concord is uncertain as to the time of his departure; and though he ſhews a departure within five days yet he cannot help the original inſufficiency of the concord, which is the foundation of all: And the time being indefinite, the departure ought to have been immediately. Yelv. 124. 125.

In an aſſumpſit for wares ſold and delivered, the defendant pleaded that he gave and delivered unto the plaintiff a bever hat in ſatisfaction and diſcharge, &c. and that the plaintiff accepted the ſaid hat in full ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the promiſes, &c. the plaintiff replied proteſtando that the defendant never gave him any ſuch hat in ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the ſaid promiſes, and pro placito dicit, that he never accepted a bever hat in ſatisfaction and diſcharge, &c. On demurrer, it was inſiſted firſt, that the iſſue ought to be upon the giving in ſatisfaction, and not upon the receiving in ſatisfaction; becauſe every gift or payment muſt be directed by him who gives or pays, and not by him who receives it; but the court held it well enough, and that the whole matter concerning the payment, as well as the acceptance in ſatisfaction, would be tried upon this iſſue; and as to the ſaid objection of its being pleaded to be given in ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the promiſes, &c. when it ſhould be pleaded in ſatisfaction of the money mentioned in the promiſes, and not of the very promiſes; the court held it of no weight. Carth. 347. 5 Mod. 86. 2. Salk. 627. S. C.

Debt on bond to pay 40*l.* at Michaelmas-Eve. Defendant pleaded a concord, that if he gave the plaintiff a hawk and 20*l.* at Michaelmas-Day the obligation ſhould be void, and ſaid that he gave a hawk and 20*l.* at Michaelmas-Day, and the plaintiff accepted it. This was held no plea; for it appears that for non-payment at the day the bond was forfeited, and ſo became ſingle, which cannot be diſcharged by ſuch a naked averment in fact of ſuch acceptance, although the agreement was before the day; but acceptance before the day was a good diſcharge. Cro. Eliz. 46.

In debt on a bond for 16*l.* conditioned to pay 8*l.* 10*s.* at Michaelmas. The defendant pleaded, that before that day he, at the plaintiff's requeſt, paid him 5*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.* which he accepted in full ſatisfaction of the debt; but becauſe he pleaded the payment of part generally, whereas he ſhould have pleaded the payment to have been in full ſatisfaction of the whole debt, the plaintiff had judgment. 5 Rep. 117.

Treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, &c. The defendant pleads that the treſpaſs was done by him and Jane Rowland; and that after the ſaid treſpaſs it was accorded between the plaintiff and the ſaid Jane, that the ſaid Jane ſhall abate 14*s.* due to the ſaid Jane from Edward, father to the plaintiff, in ſatisfaction of the ſaid treſpaſs, and avers that the ſaid Jane had abated the ſaid 14*s.* &c. And upon this the plaintiff demurred, firſt, becauſe it is a thing to be done for the benefit of a third perſon, and therefore the accord was not good. 2dly, Becauſe he ſaid that ſhe had abated the ſaid 14*s.* and not ſhewn how. As to the firſt exception the court was è contra; for it being in diſadvantage of one of the treſpaſſers, and made at the requeſt of the plaintiff, tho' it be to a third perſon, it is well enough; but as to the ſecond fault, the court held the plea to be ill; for ſhe ought to have ſhewn how ſhe had abated the 14*s.* as to ſay the father of the plaintiff owed her ſo much, and had paid her but ſo much, ſo that the 14*s.* be deducted and abated out of it; and to plead that ſhe had abated generally, as it is pleaded here, is uncertain and ill, and adjudged accordingly in the following term. Skin. 391. pl. 28.

III. To what actions accord may be pleaded.

In every action where only amends is demanded by way of damages, accord executed is a good bar in diſcharge of them. Cro. Jac. 100. pl. 29.

An accord with ſatisfaction is no good plea to an action real; for a right or title to a freehold cannot be barred by any collateral ſatisfaction. 4 Co. 1. 9 Co. 79. b. But in detinue for charters concerning a freehold and inheritance, an accord is a good plea. 7 E. 4. 33. 2 Co. 78. So in waſte againſt leſſee for years, though in the tenet, an accord is a good plea; becauſe a chattel only is to be recovered. Bend. 35. 9 Co. 78. 6 Co. 44. So in raviſhment of ward, and quare ejecit infra terminum. 9 Co. 78. An accord with ſatisfaction is a good plea in an ejectione firmæ; for an ejectment includes a treſpaſs; and they are ſo interwoven, they cannot be ſevered; and in all actions which ſuppoſe a wrong vi et armis, where a capias and exigent lay at Common law, there an accord is a good plea. 9 Co. 77. 1 Brownl. 134. S. C. 2 Brownl. 128. S. C. Godb. 149. In an appeal of mayhem an accord with ſatisfaction is a good plea, notwithſtanding the writ be feloniè. 6 Co. 44. 9 Co. 78.

Covenant for not repairing a houſe. The defendant pleaded in bar an accord, and execution of it in ſatisfaction of the repairs. Reſolved a good plea; for it is not pleaded in diſcharge of the covenant, but of the damages only, which are demanded by reaſon of the covenant being broken; and the covenant remains, and the plea ſounds only in diſcharge of the defendant, and is not like an obligation which is a certain duty, and there it is no plea, tho' it be before or after the day of payment. Cro. Jac. 99, 100.

When a duty in certain, accrues by the deed tempore confectionis ſcripti; as by covenant, bill or obligation, to pay a certain ſum of money, this certain duty takes its eſſence originally and only by writing; and therefore ought to be avoided by matter of as high a nature, though the duty be merely in the perſonalty. 6 Co. 43. 1 Lutw. 358. S. P. Cro. Jac. 254. S. P. See 2 Rol. Rep. 187.

Account, (Computus) Is a writ or action which lies againſt a bailiff or receiver, who by reaſon of his office or buſineſs, is to render an account to another, and refuſeth to do it. Cowel. Termes de la ley.

A writ of account lieth divers ways; for if a man make one his bailiff of his manor, &c. he ſhall have a writ of account againſt him as bailiff. And if a man make one his receiver to receive his rents or debts, &c. he ſhall have a writ of account againſt him as receiver. And if a man make one his bailiff, &c. and alſo his receiver, then he ſhall have an account againſt him as bailiff, and alſo as receiver. A man ſhall have a writ of account againſt one as bailiff or receiver where he was not his bailiff or receiver; for if a man receive money to my uſe, I ſhall have an account againſt him as receiver; or if a man do deliver money unto another to deliver over unto me, I ſhall have an account againſt him as my receiver. And ſo if a man enter into my land to my uſe, and receive the profits thereof, I ſhall have an account againſt him as my bailiff. Fitz. Nat. Brev. 117.

The proceedings upon this action, being difficult, dilatory and expenſive, it is now ſeldom uſed, eſpecially if the party has other remedy, as debt, covenant, caſe, or other action; or if the demand be of conſequence, and the matter of an intricate nature. For in ſuch caſe it is more adviſable to reſort to a court of equity, where matters of account are more commodiouſly adjuſted, and more advantageouſly determined for both parties; the plaintiff being in that court, intitled to a diſcovery of books, papers and the defendant's oath: And on the other hand, the defendant allowed to diſcount the ſums paid or expended by him, and all reaſonable allowances, and to diſcharge himſelf of ſums under 40*s.* by his own oath, if by anſwer or other writing he charges himſelf with the ſame; and he is intitled, after the account is ſtated, to a decree in his favour, if any thing be due to him on the balancing thereof. 1 New. Abr. 16. 1 Salk. 9. Carth. 89. Chan. Ca. 249. 1 Vern. 282, 470. 2 Vern. 176. Abr. in Eq. 10.

Though the action of account is ſeldom uſed, yet it may not be improper to conſider briefly,

I. For what things this action lies.

If a man delivers money to another, upon condition that if the defendant makes an aſſurance of certain lands by a certain day, that then he ſhall have the money, and if not, that he ſhall redeliver it to the deliverer; if he does not make this aſſurance, the deliverer may have a writ of account againſt him for the money. 41 Ed. 3. 10. Fitz. Accompt, 24. S. C. Br. 11. S. C. If a man delivers money to you to pay to me, I ſhall have account for this againſt you. 6 Hen. 4. 8. Godb. 210. S. P.

An action of account lies not for a thing certain; as, if a man deliver 10*l.* to B. to merchandiſe with, he ſhall not have account of the 10*l.* but of the profits, which are uncertain. Bro. tit. Account 355. 2 Brown. 76.

No action of account lies for rent reſerved on a leaſe; ſo if a leſſee of goods waſte them, yet no action of account lies againſt him. 1 Roll. Abr. 116.

If the bailee of goods waſte them, or refuſe to deliver them, no action of account lies, but an action of detinue, or trover and converſion. 1 Roll. Abr. 116.

If A. hath a term for years in a rectory, and tithes being ſet forth and ſevered from the nine parts, B. without any pretence of title, carries them away and ſells them, yet A. ſhall not have a writ of account againſt B. for, after ſeverance, the tithes immediately veſted in A. and the taking by B. was merely wrongful, and therefore without privity. Owen 86. 3 Leon. 24.

If A. acknowledges by deed, that he has received 100*l.* from B. to be adventured to the Weſt-Indies, and thence to England back again, and covenants to render a true account thereof upon his return; though B. may have a writ of covenant upon this deed, yet he may alſo have a writ of account thereupon, at his election. 1 Roll. Rep. 52. 2 Bulſt. 256.

Aſſumpſit, in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant, intending to go beyond ſea, delivered a box full of goods to the defendant, which he promiſed to diſpoſe of, and to give the plaintiff an account thereof at his return; the defendant pleaded in abatement, that he was bailiff to the plaintiff, to merchandiſe the ſaid goods; and that he ought to bring an action of account, and not an action on the caſe; and upon demurrer, it was adjudged, that here being an expreſs promiſe, on which the action is founded, aſſumpſit will lie as well as account; and that where-ever one acts as bailiff, he promiſes to render an account. 1 Salk. 9. Wilkins v. Wilkins.

II. Againſt whom action of account lieth, either by the Common law, or by Statute.

By the Common law, account lay only againſt a guardian in ſocage, bailiff, or receiver, or by one in favour of trade and commerce, naming himſelf merchant, againſt another naming him merchant, and for the executors of a merchant; for between theſe there was ſuch a privity, that the law preſumed them conuſant of each other's diſburſements, receipts and acquittances. 2 Hen. 4. 12. b. Co. Lit. 172. a. Co. Lit. 90. b. F. N. B. 117. 11 Co. 90. a. 2 Roll. Abr. 161.

The ſtatute of 13 E. 3. c. 23. gives an action of account to the executors of a merchant; the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. c. 5. to executors of executors; the ſtatute 31 Ed. 3. c. 11. to adminiſtrators: And by the ſtatute 3 & 4 Ann. c. 16. actions of account may be brought againſt the executors and adminiſtrators of every guardian, bailiff and receiver, and by one jointenant, tenant in common, his executors and adminiſtrators againſt the other as bailiff, for receiving more than his ſhare, and againſt their executors and adminiſtrators.

Before theſe ſtatutes, if one jointenant, or tenant in common, received all the profits, the other could not have his action, unleſs he actually appointed him bailiff or receiver. Co. Lit. 172. a. 186. a. 200. b. So if two had a ward in common, and one took all the profits. F. N. B. 118. So if there had been two executors, and one had received all the debts of the teſtator; for between theſe there was not ſuch privity as the law required. Bro. tit. Accompt, 58. 39 Ed. 3. 28.

Though an infant may be an executor, or may be charged in trover, being a tort; yet if he be made factor, bailiff or receiver, he ſhall not be accountable for what he does during his infancy, either in law or equity; for the ſame reaſon that other acts of his bind him not; therefore when ſuch one is appointed factor, his friends ſhould give ſecurity for his accounting. 1 Roll. Abr. 117. F. N. B. 118. Co. Lit. 172. S. P.

If I make J. S. my bailiff or receiver, and he makes a deputy, I muſt have account againſt the bailiff or receiver himſelf, and not againſt the deputy; for the receipt of the deputy was to the uſe of his maſter. F. N. B. 119. 4 Leon. 32.

If the King appoints J. S. or he of his own head takes upon himſelf the charge and care of the eſtate of a lunatick, he is but in nature of a bailiff, and accountable to the lunatick, his executors or adminiſtrators. 4 Co. 127.

A man ſhall not be charged in account, as ſurveyor, controller, apprentice, reve, or heyward, or a diſſeiſor, or other wrong-doer; for, to maintain an action of account, there muſt be a privity either in law or by the proviſion of the parties. Co. Lit. 172.

At Common law, if a man were diſſeiſed, and his entry taken away, he could never recover, by any action, the mean profits; but if the diſſeiſor made a feoffment in fee, by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, the diſſeiſee in an aſſiſe might have recovered damages for the mean profits, being a continuation of the firſt wrong. 2 Roll. Abr. 550.

But the chancery interpoſed, and at laſt carried the remedy farther than had been admitted at Common law; for though in the caſe of Owen and Aprice, which was adjudged 4 Car. 1. the court left the plaintiff to his remedy at Common law, for the recovery of the mean profits, and would not aſſiſt by their decree: So in the caſe of Eyre and Jackſon, 14 Car. 2. they refuſed to aſſeſs any damages for a treſpaſs; for that was a matter determinable at Common law, and to be aſcertained by a jury; but afterwards they began to make the perſon, who was the diſſeiſor of the mean profits, accountant to him who had the right; and this was firſt begun where lands were ſettled for the payment of debts, there ſuch truſtees, and the heir of the debtor, where accountants to the creditors for whom the profits were to be received; and this was very clear and plain; becauſe ſuch perſon came in and took the profits under the truſt; and this was ſettled in the caſe of Gilpin and Smith, 18 & 19 Car. 2. Afterwards they came to extend their notions; and the perſon that took the meſne profits by wrong, was taken as the truſtee for, and accountant to, him that had the right; and this was ſettled in the great caſe of Coventry and Hall, which was in the years 33, 34 & 35 Car. 2. and was thus: Sir Thomas Thynn, having treated with the lord keeper Coventry, for a marriage between his ſon and Catharine the daughter of the lord keeper, the ſaid Sir Thomas covenanted to ſettle lands on his ſon, but the conveyance was defective; becauſe it wanted the words, that he ſhould ſtand ſeiſed; the ſon recovered the lands by a decree in chancery, notwithſtanding the defect in the conveyance, againſt the heir at law of Sir Thomas the father; and afterwards came with his bill for the meſne profits; yet the court, on this bill, carried back the account againſt the heir at law, for all the profits received by him; and though it was objected, there was no agreement, nor no truſt, that the heir ſhould receive the profits for the rightful proprietor; yet the court reſolved that he ſhould account from the original juſtice, which intitled the proprietor to ſeek an account againſt the perſon that had taken the profits of the land; which in equity and juſtice belonged to him; and though the heir had the title in law, yet ſince, in equity and conſcience, the eſtate belonged to another, ſuch heir ought to account with him for the profits he had made of what was his: and from hence equity began to make all perſons account for the mean profits they had received to ſuch perſons as had the equitable title; but in the caſe, where the huſband ſold lands for valuable conſideration, and the wife, after his death, received her dower againſt the purchaſer, and brought her bill in chancery for the meſne profits, from the time of the death of her huſband; the lord chancellor Cowper would not relieve her; for that he ſaid he could not alter the law of dower, which gave no damages againſt a purchaſer under the huſband; and he law no reaſon in equity to introduce a different rule. 1 New. Abr. 18. cites 1 Chan. Rep. 32, 229. 1 Chan. Ca. 80, 81. 2 Chan. Ca. 71, 72, 134, 135. 2 Chan. Rep. 259, 261. 1 Vern. 295.

A bailiff cannot be charged as receiver, becauſe if he be charged as bailiff upon his account, he ſhall have allowance of his charges and expences, which he is not intitled to when he charged as a receiver; alſo he is not allowed, in an action brought againſt him as receiver, to plead that he was before charged as receiver. 1 Rol. Abr. 119.

By bailiff is underſtood a ſervant that hath adminiſtration and charge of lands, goods and chattels, to make the beſt benefit for the owner, againſt whom an action of account doth lie for the profits which he hath raiſed or made, his reaſonable charges and expences deducted. A receiver is one who receiveth money, and is to render an account of it, but is not allowed any charges or expences, but what is agreed on by the parties; and in this caſe the plaintiff is to declare by whoſe hands he received it. Co. Lit. 172. a.

III. What ſhall be a good bar to this action.

In account againſt one as bailiff, it is a good plea that he was never his bailiff. 1 Roll. Abr. 121.

In account againſt a bailiff, it is a good plea that he was the plaintiff's ſervant to drive his plough, and keep his cattle for the drawing of his plough, abſque hoc, that he was his bailiff in other manner, becauſe he is not accountable for this occupation. Bro. 34. 1 Roll. Abr. 121.

It is a good plea in bar to an action of account, that the plaintiff hath releaſed to him all actions. 1 Roll. Abr. 123. So it is a good plea in bar, that the plaintiff and defendant ſubmitted to the award of J. S. who awarded that the defendant ought to be acquitted againſt the plaintiff. Cro. Car. 116. Hetl. 114.

It is a good plea in bar, that after the receipt of the ſum of which the account is demanded, by the mediation of their friends it was agreed between them, that the defendant ſhould make an obligation of 100*l.* for the 100*l.* received, and the profit thence to ariſe, which obligation of 100*l.* he did make and deliver accordingly to the plaintiff; for the acceptance of the obligation deſtroys the duty, and the ſum in demand is thereby as ſtrongly releaſed as by a releaſe of all actions. Bro. 48. 1 Roll. Abr. 123.

IV. What ſhall be a good diſcharge before the auditors.

In an action of account there are two judgments; the firſt is quod computet, after which the court aſſigns auditors, uſually two of the officers of the court, who are armed with authority to convene the parties before them from day to day, at any day or place that they ſhall appoint, till the account is determined: The time by which the account is to be ſettled, is prefixed by the court; but if it be of a long and confuſed nature, the court, on application, will enlarge the time. If either of the parties think they do him injuſtice, he may apply to the court: and if the defendant denies any article, or demurs to any demand, it is to be tried and determined in court. 1 Mod. 42. 1 Brownl. 24. Co. Ent. 46.

Whatever may be pleaded to the action ſhall never be allowed of as a good diſcharge before the auditors; therefore, where in account the defendant pleaded never his receiver, &c. and this being found againſt him, he was adjudged to account: and before the auditors, he pleaded a ſubmiſſion of all debts, accounts, &c. to J. S. who awarded that the defendant ſhould pay 10*l.* only in diſcharge of all debts, accounts, &c. which he paid accordingly; this was held no good plea; for this award made before the action brought, ought to have been pleaded in bar thereof; which being omitted, he hath loſt the advantage thereof, and ſhall not plead it before auditors. Cro. Car. 116.

It is a good diſcharge before auditors, for a factor to ſay, that in a tempeſt, becauſe the ſhip was ſur-charged, the goods were caſt over-board into the ſea. 1 Roll. Abr. 124.

If a bailiff of a manor receives the rents and profits of the tenants, and retains them two or three years, yet in a writ of account, he is not to account for the profits thence ariſing in the mean time; for he had not any warrant to merchandize with the money, or to gain or loſe thereby.

Accountant-General, A new officer in the court of chancery, appointed by act of parliament, to receive all money lodged in court, in the place of the maſters, &c. He is to convey the money to the bank, and take the ſame out by order; and ſhall only keep the account with the bank; for the bank is anſwerable for all money received by them, and not the accountant-general. See ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 32. No fees ſhall be taken by this officer or his clerks, on pain of being puniſhed for extortion; but they are to be paid ſalaries, the accountant-general 650*l. per annum*, the firſt clerk 250*l.* and the ſecond clerk 120*l.* out of intereſt made of part of the ſuitors money.

Accuſation, (Accuſatio) The act of accuſing, or the charge brought againſt any one for a crime. By Magna Charta, no man ſhall be impriſoned or condemned on any accuſation, without trial by his peers, or the law. 9 Hen. 3. None ſhall be vexed upon any accuſation, but according to the law of the land: And no man may be moleſted by petition to the king, &c. unleſs it be by indictment, or preſentment of lawful men, or by proceſs at Common law. 25 Ed. 3. 28 Ed. 3. c. 3. None ſhall be compelled to anſwer an accuſation to the King, without preſentment, or ſome matter of record. Stat. 42 Ed. 3. Promoters of ſuggeſtions are to find ſurety to purſue them, and not making them good, ſhall ſatisfy damages to the party accuſed, and pay a fine to the King. 38 Ed. 3. c. 9. In treaſon there ſhall be two lawful accuſers. Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. A perſon is not obliged to anſwer on oath to a matter by which he may accuſe himſelf of any crime, &c. 2 *Mod. Ac etiam Billae, Words or a clauſe of a writ, where the action requires good bail. By ſtat. 13 Car. 2. ſeſſ. 2. c. 2. (which was the foundation of ac etiam billæ in writs) it is enacted, that no perſon arreſted by proceſs out of the King's Bench or Common Pleas, in which proceſs the true cauſe of action is not expreſſed, and for which the defendant is bailable by 23 Hen. 6. c. 10. ſhall be forced to enter into bond with ſureties for appearance in any ſum exceeding 40*l.* See titles Arreſt, Bail.

An ac etiam billæ ought not to be made out againſt any peer or peereſs, or any executor, or adminiſtrator, or upon a penal ſtatute, or for any debt or aſſumpſit under 10*l.* nor in action of account render, nor in any action of covenant or trover, unleſs the damages are 10*l.* or more; nor in any action of treſpaſs, or for battery, wounding or impriſonment, unleſs there be an order of court for it, or a warrant under the hand of one of the judges of the court, out of which the writ iſſues for that purpoſe. 1 Lill. P. R. 13.

In caſe for inveigling away his ſon, who was alſo his ſervant (the defendant being a ſeafaring man) an ac etiam billæ of 50*l.* was ordered on motion and affidavit. Comb. 311.

The plaintiff laid his ac etiam for 300*l.* and then ſwears only that the defendant owed him above 10*l.* juſt to bring him within the rule of ſpecial bail. The court ordered him to take common bail for his fraud. Comb. 265.

In an action of treſpaſs, aſſault and battery, by bill of Middleſex with an ac etiam for 48*l.* and recovered 100*l.* the court held the bail ſhould not be liable for more than the ac etiam, for that is the meaſure and ground of his undertaking. 1 Salk. 102. pl. 16.

Defendant in a ſcuffle bit off the fore-finger of an attorney's right hand; and in treſpaſs with an ac etiam by a judge's warrant, the bail was not held to juſtify themſelves to a ſum ſuitable to the ac etiam, the defendant being poor. 6 Mod. 230.

It was moved for a ſpecial ac etiam in treſpaſs for lying with the plaintiff's wife, which was granted; and held the defendant to 50*l.* bail. N. B. Affidavits were produced of the indecent liberty they took together. 11 Mod. 275. pl. 24. Hil. 8 Ann. B. R.

An action with an ac etiam billæ was brought in a great ſum to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail where nothing was due, as appeared on being ſummoned before a judge to ſhew his cauſe of action; the court held this not to be ſuch a contempt as to grant an attachment againſt the plaintiff, but directed, that if the defendant was demnified he might bring his action. 8 Mod. 227. 10 Geo. 1. Achat, (Fr. Achat) Is a purchaſe or bargain. Hence perhaps purveyors were by ſtat. 36 Ed. 3. called achators, from their frequent making of bargains; and hence perhaps may be alſo derived the word cates, ſignifying proviſion bought in the market for great feaſts. Cowel.

Acquittal, (from the French word acquitter, and the Latin acquietare, to acquit or diſcharge) Signifies in one ſenſe to be free from entries and moleſtations of a ſuperior lord for ſervices iſſuing out of lands; but in the moſt general ſignification it is taken for a deliverance and ſetting free of a perſon from the ſuſpicion of guilt; as he that on trial is diſcharged of a felony, is ſaid to be acquietatus de felonia; and if he be drawn in queſtion again for the ſame crime, he may plead auter foits acquit; as his life ſhall not be twice put in danger for the ſame offence. Acquittal is two-fold, acquittal in law, and acquittal in fact; acquittal in law is, when two are indicted, the one as principal, and the other as acceſſary, the principal being diſcharged, the acceſſary of conſequence will be acquitted by law: Acquittal in fact, is when by verdict a perſon is found Not guilty of the offence whereof he is charged. 2 Inſt. 385. *Staundf. If a perſon is lawfully acquitted on a malicious proſecution, he may bring his action, &c. for damages, after he hath obtained a copy of the indictment and the judge's certificate: But it is uſual for the judges of goal-delivery to deny a copy of an acquittal to him who intends to bring an action thereon, where there was probable cauſe for a criminal proſecution. Carth. 421.

A ſon-in-law indicted his mother for poiſoning her huſband his father, and ſhe being acquitted, brought an action for a malicious proſecution againſt him, and recovered damages; and he, to requite her kindneſs, brought an appeal of murder, on which ſhe was tried, convicted and executed. *Cro. Acquittance, (Acquietantia) ſignifieth a diſcharge in writing, of a ſum of money, or debt due; as where a man is bound to pay rent, reſerved upon a leaſe, &c. And the party to whom due, on receipt thereof gives a writing under his hand witneſſing that he is paid; this will be ſuch a diſcharge in law, that he cannot demand and recover the ſum or duty again, if the acquittance be produced. Termes de la ley. An acquittance in law ought to be a deed ſealed, tho' in common practice it is otherwiſe. 3 Salk. 298. pl. 2. If ſigned only and not ſealed, it is only an evidence or proof of payment, and no pleadable acquittance, becauſe it is no deed, ſo as it nothing differs from proof by witneſſes, only that it is not mortal as they are. Wentw. Off. of Executors. 217.

It is obſerved, that a general receipt or acquittance in full of all demands will diſcharge all debts, except ſuch as are on ſpecialty, viz. bonds, bills, and other inſtruments ſealed and delivered; on which account thoſe can only be deſtroyed by ſome other ſpecialty of equal force, ſuch as a general releaſe, &c. See 2 Cro. 650.

And yet contra in pleading of payment of rent reſerved upon a leaſe for years made by indenture; for there he may levy it by diſtreſs, and therefore averment may come in ure. *Bro. One by indenture was bound to pay a ſum of money, and in an action of debt thereupon the defendant pleaded payment; and without acquittance, per Montague, this is no good plea; for this indenture is like a ſimple obligation, payment whereof is no plea without acquittance. But it is otherwiſe if the obligation be with condition. Dyer 25. b. pl. 160.

The wife dum ſola had recovered 26*l.* damages, and had execution, and was yet poſſeſſed of the ſaid money, and that judgment was reverſed in error, and reſtitution awarded; and afterwards ſhe married the defendant, and thereupon the plaintiff brought ſcire facias to have reſtitution. The defendant pleaded that after the reverſal, and before this writ brought, he paid the ſaid 26*l.* to the plaintiff. The queſtion was, whether payment was good without acquittance. Barkeley juſtice held it was, becauſe the certainty of the damages appears not of record, and it may be that they were without proceſs, &c. ſo as the execution appears not of record; but the other three juſtices contra, becauſe the ſcire facias ſhews the recovery to be for 26*l.* and that plaintiff had execution for ſo much; therefore the judgment being reverſed, and he demanding reſtitution of 26*l.* only, payment is not good without acquittance. Jo. 326. pl. 8. Mich. 8 Car. 1. *B. Acre, (from the German Acker, that is, ager) is a quantity of land containing in length forty perches, and four in breadth, or, according to that proportion, be the length more or leſs. Crompton ſaith that according to the cuſtom of divers countries the perch differeth; being moſt commonly 16 feet and a half, but in Staffordſhire 24 feet. In the ſtatute made concerning ſowing flax, 34 Hen. 8. c. 4. 160 perches make an acre, which is 40 multiplied by four: And the ordinance of meaſuring land made 33 Ed. 1. ſtat. 6. agrees with this account; and by ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 7. if a man erect any new cottage, he muſt lay four acres of land to it after this meaſure. The word acre at firſt ſignified not a determined quantity of land, but any open ground, eſpecially a wide campaign, from the Saxon æcer, a field: And this antique ſenſe of it ſeems to be preſerved in the names of places, as Caſtle-acre, Weſt-acre, &c. in the county of Norfolk. When the word was applied to the meaſure of ground, the quantity was various, till determined by ſtat. 33 Ed. 1. ſt. 6. and 24 Hen. 8. c. 4. Action, Actio, is defined by Bracton, lib. 3. c. 1. in the ſame manner as by Juſtinian, lib. 4. Inſt. tit. de actionibus, viz. Actio nihil aliud eſt quam jus proſequendi in judicio quod alicui debetur. Action is otherwiſe defined to be a legal demand of one's right. Co. Lit. 285. 2 Inſt. 40. Mirror, cap. 2. ſect. 1. It implies a recovery of, or reſtitution to ſomething, (Co. Lit. 289.) and differs from a writ of error, which is no action, but only a commiſſion to the judges to examine the record, &c. Jenk. 25. 2 Inſt. Yelv. 209. But yet, if by writ of error, the plaintiff therein may recover, or be reſtored to any thing, it may be releaſed by the name of an action. Co. Lit. 288. b. The ſuit till judgment is properly called an action, but not after; and therefore a releaſe of all actions is regularly no bar of an execution. *Co. The deſign of entring into ſociety being the protection of our perſons and ſecurity of our property, men in civil ſociety have a right, and indeed are obliged to apply to the public for redreſs, when they are injured; for were they allowed to be their own carvers, or to make repriſals, which they might do in the ſtate of nature, ſuch permiſſion would introduce all that inconvenience which the ſtate of nature endured; and which government was at firſt invented to prevent. Hence therefore they are obliged to ſubmit to the public the meaſure of their damages, and to have recourſe to the law and the courts of juſtice, which are appointed to give them eaſe in their affairs; and this application is what we call bringing an action. 1 New Abr. 26.

I. The different kinds of actions.

Actions are divided, according to Lord Coke, into criminal and civil; criminal are either to have judgment of death, as appeals of death, robbery, &c. or only to have judgment of damages to the party, fine to the King, and impriſonment; as appeals of mayhem, &c. Co. Lit. 184. 2 Inſt. 40. Criminal actions or pleas of the crown are otherwiſe defined to be offences done againſt the crown and dignity of the King. Staund. P. C. 1.

A civil action is that which tends only to the recovery of that which by reaſon of any contract, or other like cauſe, is due to a perſon. Cowel. Civil actions are divided into real, perſonal, and mixed. Co. Lit. 284. 2 Inſt. 40.

A real action is defined to be that whereby a perſon claims title to have a freehold in any lands or tenements, rents or commons in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for life. Bract. lib. 3. c. 2.

Every real action is poſſeſſory, viz. of his own poſſeſſion or ſeiſin; or auncеſtrel, viz. of the poſſeſſion or ſeiſin of his anceſtor. 6 Co. 3. And real actions auncеſtrel are poſſeſſory, viz. when the anceſtor dies in poſſeſſion, and the land deſcends; or rightful, when only the right deſcends from the anceſtor. 6 Co. 3. b.

The law always diſtinguiſhed between a right of entry and a naked right to the land itſelf; and therefore there were different remedies; for to recover the naked right, the law only gave a writ of right; and in this action, the defendant at his election might put himſelf upon his country, or wage battle; but when the diſſeiſee had a right of entry, it was preſumed that the diſſeiſin was freſh and recent; and therefore the trial was coram paribus; but if the diſſeiſee did not come till the heir was ſeated in the poſſeſſion, and had paid relief to the lord, then the entry of the diſſeiſee was taken away, and his title became doubtful; and then they appealed to providence in ſuch deciſions; and if any freeman would, with his own body, defend the title of the poſſeſſor, the demandant was obliged to find a champion to enter the liſts with him. Booth 99. Co. Ent. 182. 1 H. 6. 7.

But to recover the right of poſſeſſion, the ancient way was by writ of entry, where the proceſs was by ſummons, grand cape before appearance, and petit cape afterwards, as in the writ of right, and the general iſſue was diſſeiſivit vel non diſſeiſivit; and this iſſue was tried by a jury, becauſe when the diſſeiſin was freſh, they did not put it upon the hazard of a battle, as they did in thoſe caſes where the long poſſeſſion had made the right doubtful. Booth 177, 179.

But in the writ of entry, they received no damages; for that ſuch writ only demanded the freehold, and was not mixed with the perſonalty; and therefore to recover the profits which are merely perſonal, they had an action of treſpaſs, which was the proper remedy for the damages ſuſtained. Booth 175. 2 Inſt. 289, 343.

There were anciently only three ſorts of writs of entry; one againſt the diſſeiſor himſelf; the other, which was againſt his feoffee, was called the writ of entry in the per; the third was after a ſecond alienation, which was called a writ of entry in the per and cui; but the ſtatute of Marlb. cap. 30. gave a writ of entry in the poſt, which did not lie in common againſt an alienee at a third hand. F. N. B. 191. Booth 175. 2 Inſt. 153.

And as a man might have have brought ſuch writ of entry for his own diſſeiſin, ſo he might have brought it for the diſſeiſin of his father, or he might have brought it for a diſſeiſin done to his grandfather, which was called a writ of ayle, or a diſſeiſin done to his great grandfather, which was called a writ of beſail, or any collateral coſins that were more remote than brothers and ſiſters, uncles and aunts, nephews and neices; and this was called a writ of coſinage. F. N. B. 191, 221. Booth 175, 176, 200.

But becauſe the proceſs in a writ of entry became tedious, when ſuch actions were removed out of the Lord's court into that of the King's, and thereby the proceſs which iſſued from three weeks to three weeks in the Lord's court, was depending ſo many ſeveral terms in the King's court, therefore the aſſiſe was invented, which was in the nature of a commiſſion to put the diſſeiſee in poſſeſſion by trial at one aſſiſes; and this was ſo ſudden and immediate a remedy, that the writ of entry became obſolete; and therefore when the aſſiſe was the uſual remedy, the writ of entry began to be called a writ of entry in the nature of an aſſiſe. Glan. cap. 7. Fleta 214, 215. See title Aſſiſe.

There was likewiſe other remedies, as the formedon in remainder and reverter, and a formedon in deſcender, which was given by the ſtatute de donis, which created eſtates-tail. See title Writs.

But the proceedings on real actions, being dilatory and expenſive, and in many caſes concluding the party upon one trial, a more commodious method was contrived to diſpute the title of lands, which begun in the reign of Hen. 7. in this manner; by forming a term for years, and the leſſee's bringing an ejectment to recover the term, and thereby to aſſert the title of the leſſor of the plaintiff; before this time, if a termor for years, who only claimed as a bailiff to the freeholder, had been ouſted of his poſſeſſion, he had only a remedy to recover damages in ejectment, and could not recover the term itſelf; but in the reign of Hen. 7. the courts of equity having obliged ſuch wrong doer to a ſpecifick reſtitution, the courts of law have likewiſe given an habere facias poſſeſſionem to recover the term in ſpecie. 1 New Abr. 27. See title Ejectment.

A perſonal action is that which one man may have againſt another, by reaſon of any contract for money or goods, or for any offence done by him, or ſome other, for whoſe act he is anſwerable. Bract. lib. 3. c. 3.

Perſonal actions are either ex contractu, or ex delicto; perſonal actions ex contractu, are thoſe founded on contract, as debt, which is to reſtore the things in numero; or detinue, which is to reſtore the ſame in ſpecie, or damages, where it cannot be had; alſo actions of account, covenant, aſſumpſit, quantum meruit, quantum valebat, covenant and annuity are perſonal actions. Perſonal actions ex delicto, are treſpaſſes founded upon force, which are treſpaſſes vi et armis, or upon fraud, which are actions upon the caſe. Therefore, if a man gets the goods or chattles of another, by lawful means, as by bailment, borrowing or pledging, he cannot have an action of treſpaſs, but muſt bring detinue or trover; becauſe the party had not violated his poſſeſſion. 1 New Abr. 28.

So where a man comes to buy goods, and they agree upon a price and a day for the payment, and the buyer takes them away, no trover lies, but an aſſumpſit for the money, becauſe the property was changed by a lawful bargain. 1 New Abr. 28.

If I borrow a horſe to go to Dover, and go to other places, the owner may have an action on the caſe againſt me, for exceeding the purpoſes of the loan; for ſo far it is a ſecret and fallacious abuſe of his property; but no general action of treſpaſs lies, becauſe it is not an open and violent invaſion of it. 1 Rol. Rep. 128.

Mixed actions are thoſe, in which the freehold is recovered, and alſo damages for the unjuſt detention of it. Co. Lit. 284. b.

II. In what caſes an action will lie, and who may ſue and be ſued. In life, liberty, and eſtate, every one (who has not forfeited them) has a property and right; and if they are violated, the law gives an action to redreſs the wrong, and puniſh the wrong-doer. Vaugh. 337.

For all injuries done to a man's perſon, reputation or property, he ſhall have an action, and for every right he is to have a remedy; for want of right and want of remedy are the ſame thing. It is alſo agreed, that where a perſon has ſeveral remedies, he may chooſe which he pleaſes; but he cannot deviſe or lay hold on any but thoſe preſcribed by the laws of his country; for if this were allowed, it would be conſtituting as many actions as there are men, which would be highly inconvenient. 1 New Abr. 28. Co. Lit. 145. Style 4.

But in this the great difficulty is, when a man ſhall be ſaid to have ſuffered an injury, or to have ſuch a right as will intitle him to an action; and here the rules eſtabliſhed by that ſociety, of which he is a member, muſt govern; and therefore, though a man had a right, and is barred by the ſtatute of limitations, yet he can have no remedy. 1 New Abr. 28.

So if I promiſe by word only to convey lands, or to give goods, without delivering poſſeſſion; or if I promiſe to build a houſe, without conſideration, &c. though by the laws of nature theſe promiſes are binding, yet no action lies; for without deed duly ſealed and executed, or without conſideration, no property is altered; and every ſuch promiſe is eſteemed, in the eye of the law, to be nudum pactum unde non oritur actio. 1 New Abr. 28. Yelv. 196. Cro. Car. 270. 1 Brownl. 111. 6 Co. 18. 1 Roll. Abr. 9.

Alſo in caſes where there may be damnum abſque injuria, the party can have no action; as if a ſchool be ſet up in the ſame town where an antient ſchool has been time out of mind, by which the old ſchool receives damage, yet no action lies. 1 New Abr. 28. 1 Roll. Abr. 107. 1 Mod. 69. Noy 184.

So if I retain a maſter in my houſe to inſtruct my children, tho' this be to the damage of the common maſter, yet no action lies. 11 Hen. 4. 47. 1 Roll. Abr. 107.

As the law grants redreſs for all injuries, and gives a remedy for every kind of right, ſo it is open to all kinds of perſons, and none are excluded from bringing an action, except on account of their crimes or their country; as men attainted of treaſon or felony, popiſh recuſants, perſons outlawed or excommunicated, convict in a præmunire, or alien enemies. Co. Lit. 128.

A man that hath a ſpecial and limited property in goods, as a carrier that hath goods delivered to him, a ſheriff who hath levied goods, a bailee who hath goods in his keeping, &c. ſhall have actions againſt thoſe who take them away, becauſe they are anſwerable in damages to the abſolute owner. 1 New Abr. 29. 2 Bulſt. 311. 1 Sid. 438. 1 Mod. 30. 2 Saund. 47. 2 Keb. 588. Yelv. 44. Dyer 98, 99.

Alſo a man who has cauſe of action againſt two, may bring it againſt which he pleaſes; as if A. takes the goods of C. and B. takes them from A. C. ſhall have his action againſt A. or B. at his election, becauſe both damnified C. in their taking. 1 Sid. 438.

So if two of the ſheep of A. have been loſt, and one of them is found again, and the ſhepherd of A. affirms it to be one of them, whereupon A. pays for the feeding of it, and cauſes it be ſhorn and marked with his own mark, and after the ſhepherd knowing this to be the ſheep of A. falſly and fraudulently affirms to the bailiff of the manor, to which waif and ſtray belongs, that the ſaid ſheep is a ſtray, whereupon the ſaid bailiff ſeizes it, &c. A. may have an action againſt his ſhepherd; for that by his falſe practice he hath created a trouble, diſgrace and damage to him; and tho' he hath good cauſe of action againſt the bailiff, yet this will not excuſe the ſhepherd. Allen 3. 1 Roll. Abr. 101.

So if one ſlanders my title, whereby I am wrongfully diſturbed in poſſeſſion, tho' I have remedy againſt the treſpaſſer, yet I may have an action againſt him who cauſed the diſturbance. Allen 3.

If there are ſeveral proprietors of a ſhip which hath uſually tranſported goods for hire, and a maſter placed therein by the part-owners, who hath 60*l.* wages for every voyage from London to T. and J. S. without making any contract with the part-owners, and none of them being preſent, delivers certain goods abroad to the maſter, to be carried for hire from London to T. and the ſhip ſafely arrives there, but the goods are ſpoiled through the neglect of the maſter, an action lies againſt the part-owners; for tho' the maſter is chargeable in reſpect to his wages, ſo are the proprietors in reſpect of the freight, at the election of the plaintiff. 1 New Abr. 29. Carth. 58. 2 Salk. 440. 3 Lev. 258.

III. In what caſes diſtinct things may be laid in the ſame action.

The diſtinction herein with reſpect to real actions, depends on the different kinds of writs; for all original writs are of two ſorts, viz. Breve nominatum et innominatum; the firſt contains the time, place and demand very particularly, and therefore in ſuch writ ſeveral lands by ſeveral titles cannot be demanded in the ſame writ: the other contains only a general complaint, without expreſſing time, damages, &c. as the writ of treſpaſs, quare clauſum fregit, &c. and therefore ſeveral lands coming to the demandant by ſeveral titles, may be demanded in ſuch writ. 8 Co. 87. See F. N. B. 209. Owen 11 Kelw. 105. Dyer 145. 2 Brownl. 274.

As to perſonal actions, the difference ariſes from the above mentioned diviſion of perſonal actions, viz. ſuch as are ex contractu, and ſuch as are ex delicto, or founded on a tort; therefore debt on an obligation and on a mutuatus may be joined, becauſe the writ is general, and the declaration upon both will be warranted by the authority given by the general words of the writ; ſo debt and detinue may be joined in the writ, becauſe there are writs in the Regiſter in which they are both compriſed in the ſame writ; ſo debt upon a leaſe and for cloths, they being in the words of the ſame writ; but debt and account, or debt and treſpaſs cannot be joined. Cro. Car. 20, 316. 1 Vent. 366. 1 Keb. 847. Bro. Joinder in Action, 97. Regiſter 95, 139.

The true reaſon why actions may or may not be joined is not the difference of the defendants pleas; for if that were the reaſon, debt upon an obligation (to which the plea is non eſt factum) and on a mutuatus, to which the plea is nil debet, could not be joined; therefore the true reaſon ariſes from the difference of the proceſs, and the fines paid on taking out the original; for in debt the old proceſs was ſummons, attachment and diſtreſs, and on taking out the original a fine was paid to the King, which was in proportion to the ſum demanded; but in treſpaſs the proceſs was a capias, becauſe the man that had committed a tort might be ſuppoſed to fly from juſtice; and in this action the court ſet a fine upon him in proportion to his offence, and levied it by a capiatur. 1 Vent. 366.

In perſonal actions ſeveral wrongs or treſpaſſes may be joined, becauſe they may be compriſed in the ſame writ, and ſo may ſeveral actions on the caſe, where the caſe is of the ſame kind; as an action for a fraud on the delivery of the goods, and on the warranty of the ſame goods, being both on the contract; ſo againſt a common carrier on the cuſtom of the realm, and trover may be joined, becauſe both on the tort; it being a violation of the cuſtom not to deliver the charge. 1 Co. 87. Jenk. 211. 3 Lev. 93. Raym. 233.

But actions founded upon a tort, and upon a contract, cannot be joined; as an aſſumpſit and trover againſt a carrier, for tho' theſe come under the general head of actions on the caſe, yet are they more diſtinct caſes than debt and account, which cannot be joined. 1 Lev. 101. 1 Salk. 10. 3 Keb. 59. 3 Mod. 322. 1 Sid. 244.

If trover and aſſumpſit are joined in one action, and upon Not guilty the jury quoad the trover find for the defendant, and quoad the aſſumpſit for the plaintiff, yet he ſhall not have judgment, for theſe cannot be joined in the ſame action, and the ſeverances of the jury will not help it, the declaration being nought at firſt. 3 Lev. 99.

One action will lie for entering the houſe of the plaintiff, breaking his cheſts, and carrying away his goods, and for beating his ſervant per quod ſervitium amiſit; for a general action of treſpaſs and a ſpecial action upon the caſe may be joined in one action. Allen 9. Style 43, 202.

If in an action upon the caſe the plaintiff declares, that whereas accommodaſſet to the defendant a gelding ad equitand' ab L. uſque E. & ibidem ſalvo deliberand' to the plaintiff the defendant intending to deceive the plaintiff, rid upon the ſaid gelding from L. to E. and from E. unto L. again, and by that riding ſo much abuſed the ſaid horſe, that he became of little value; and though he the plaintiff at E.

demanded a redelivery of the ſaid gelding, yet the defendant refuſed, and yet doth refuſe to deliver him, and hath converted the ſaid gelding to his own uſe; this declaration is not good, becauſe it contains diſtinct matters, for part is founded upon the contract, and part upon the tort, which are ſeveral cauſes of action. Cro. Car. 20.

An ejectment and aſſault and battery were joined in one writ, and not guilty pleaded, and a verdict and intire damages given for the plaintiff; and it ſeems to have been aided after verdict.

Where one hath a right to recover in the ſame kind of action, though he derives his right from different titles, yet being conjoined in him, he may recover in one action; as if in debt upon 2 E. 6. for not ſetting forth of tithes, though the plaintiff ſhews, that by preſcription the rector of A. hath had two parts, and the vicar of A. the third part of the tithes there, and that the ſaid rector and vicar, by ſeveral leaſes, did demiſe to the plaintiff, per quod he became proprietarius of the ſaid tithes, and the defendant ſowed, &c. this action is well brought, for though the vicar and parſon could not join becauſe they claim ſeverally by divided rights, yet when both titles are conjoined in one perſon, the matter of the title is alſo conjoined; and this being a perſonal action and founded upon a wrong, it is ſufficient to ſhew generally, that the plaintiff is firmarius or proprietarius of the tithes, without ſaying by what title. Yelv. 63. 1 Brownl. 86. Cro. Jac. Moor 914. Noy 3.

If A. being ſeiſed of a third part of a meſſuage, &c. in fee, demiſes the ſame to B. for years, who aſſigns to C. and A. by bargain and ſale inrolled, conveys his reverſion to D. and his heirs, who was then ſeiſed of another third part in fee, and afterwards the ſaid D. leaſes his third part alſo to the ſaid C. for years, and dies; and his heir, by bargain and ſale inrolled, conveys the reverſion of the ſaid two third parts to E. and his heirs, after which waſte is done, E. may bring one action of waſte upon theſe ſeveral leaſes, for that neither the intereſt of the terms nor of the inheritance were ſevered or divided to ſeveral, but were in one perſon at the time when the waſte was done. Poph. 24, 25. Cro. Eliz. 290. Owen 11. S. C.

If in covenant the plaintiff ſhews that A. was ſeiſed in fee of one meſſuage, and poſſeſſed of another for a certain term of years yet enduring, and let both to the defendant for a leſſer term of years, and that the defendant did covenant to repair, &c. and ſhews that A. by one deed did grant to the plaintiff the reverſion in fee, and by another the reverſion for years, &c. and that after the houſes were out of repair, &c. this action is well brought, for as upon ſeveral leaſes or upon ſeveral grants of a reverſion one action of waſte lies, ſo for the ſame reaſon one writ of covenant will lie. Cro. Jac. 329.

But one cannot in the ſame action join a demand in his own right, and that which he has in the right of another; as if in aſſumpſit againſt an adminiſtratrix, the plaintiff declares upon a ſale of goods to the inteſtate for 200*l.* and upon another ſale to the defendant herſelf for 27*l.* and that upon account the defendant was found indebted to the plaintiff in theſe ſums, and promiſed, &c. the declaration is naught; for the charge being in ſeveral manners, viz. in her own right and as adminiſtratrix, it ought to have been by ſeveral actions. Hob. 88. See Cro. Eliz. 406. Moor 419. Hob. 184. Noy 19. 1 Vent. 268. 2 Lev. 110, 111, 228. 2 Keb. 814.

Several perſons may join in an action where their intereſt is joint; as if the ſeveral cattle of A. and B. are diſtrained, and C. in conſideration of 10*l.* to him paid by A. and B. aſſumes and promiſes to them to procure the cattle to be redelivered to them; if they are not redelivered accordingly, one joint action lies, for the conſideration is intire and cannot be divided. Style 156. 1 Roll. Abr. 31.

So if A. hath one mill and B. another in the ſame manor, which they have uſed to repair, and time out of mind all the grain which was ground and ſpent in the houſes of the tenants of the ſaid manor, and was not ground at one of the ſaid mills, hath always, and ought to be ground at the other, and C. a tenant of the ſaid manor, grinds at another mill, &c. A. and B. may join in one action againſt C. for the damage is intire to both their mills. 2 Lev. 27. 2 Keb. 631. 2 Saund. 115.

If within the pariſh of A. there is a cuſtom for the pariſhioners yearly to elect two perſons to be churchwardens there, and according to the ſaid cuſtom B. and C. are elected, but the ſurrogate of the biſhop refuſes to admit and ſwear them into the ſaid office; upon which they bring a mandamus, and he falſly returns a cuſtom for the vicar to chooſe one churchwarden, and that therefore he cannot admit both the ſaid parties, but is ready to admit one of them; they may join in an action for this falſe return, for the mandamus and whole proſecution thereof was joint; and this is no office of profit, nor action brought for that, but for the unjuſt return. 3 Lev. 362.

So if the regiſter of the biſhop refuſes to regiſter a licence of a chapel for a conventicle, according to 1 Will. & M. and upon a mandamus to do it makes a falſe return, all the inhabitants may join in one action againſt him. 3 Lev. 363.

But if one man calls two other men thieves, and ſhews in certain of what, &c. they ſhall not join in one action againſt him; for the wrong done to one is no wrong to the other.

So in aſſault and battery; for the battery done to one cannot be the ſame as that done to the other, and one battery may hurt more than the other. Kelw. 55.

If two joint owners of a ſum of money are robbed upon the highway, they may join in one action againſt the hundred in which, &c. otherwiſe if the ſums are ſeveral, and ſeveral properties. Dyer 370.

If A. deliver goods to B. to deliver over to C. and B. does not deliver them over accordingly, but converts them to his own uſe; either A. or C. may have an action againſt B. But both ſhall not have an action; but he who firſt begins his action ſhall go on with the ſame. 1 Bulſt. 68. Hard. 321.

If A. is ſeiſed in fee of the reverſion of a cloſe expectant upon a term for years, and B. is poſſeſſed of another cloſe adjoining thereto, between which ſaid cloſes there runs a rivulet, and B. ſtops it, per quod the cloſe of A. is ſurrounded, ſo that the timber trees, &c. become rotten; A. in reſpect of the prejudice to the reverſion, and the termor in reſpect of the poſſeſſion, and of the ſhade, ſhelter, &c. may have an action, and a ſatisfaction given to the one is no bar to the other. 3 Lev. 209.

One action will not lie againſt ſeveral men for ſpeaking the ſame words; for the words of the one are not the words of the other, and can no more produce a joint action, than their words and tongues can be ſaid to be one. Palm. 313.

But if two men procure another to be indicted falſely for a common barretor, he may have an action upon the caſe againſt them both; though in ſtrictneſs the procurement of one is not the procurement of the other. Latch 262.

A man cannot declare againſt one defendant for an aſſault and battery, and againſt the other for taking away his goods; becauſe the treſpaſſes are of ſeveral natures, and againſt ſeveral perſons.

If A. leaſes for years to B. and C. rendring rent, and C. aſſigns his moiety to D. and after rent is arrear, A. may bring one action of debt; for the rent againſt B. and D. for the reverſion remains intire. Palm. 283.

IV. Actions local and tranſitory; and in what caſes the venue may be changed.

Originally all actions were tried in the proper counties in which they aroſe, purſuant to maximè vicini vicinorum facta præſumuntur ſcire; this created no inconveniency, for all men being anciently in decenna, they were eaſily come at, the decenna being reſponſible for their appearance; but when the cuſtom of the decennary began to wear off, men uſed to fly from their creditors, and this begot the diſtinction between local and tranſitory actions; the firſt relating to lands, which muſt be tried where the lands lie; the other a debt or duty adhering to the perſon where-ever he fled: hence men omitted to date their contracts from any certain place, and began their obligations with a Noverint univerſi; when this diſtinction was eſtabliſhed, it began to be abuſed to a great degree; for plaintiffs would lay their actions far from the place where the fact was done; and the defendants, for fear of being outlawed, were neceſſitated to carry their witneſſes into that county, how far ſo ever remote from the place where the fact was done. 1 New Abr. 33. 2 Inſt. 231.

To remedy this, the ſtat. 6 R. 2. c. 2. provides," that to the intent that writs of debt and of account, and all other ſuch actions, be from henceforth taken in their counties, and directed to the ſheriff of the county where the contracts of the ſame actions did ariſe; it is ordained that from thenceforth on pleas on ſuch writs, when it ſhall be declared that the contract thereof was made in another county than is contained in the original writ, that then incontinently the ſaid writ ſhall be abated."

This was intended to have confined all actions to their proper counties; but as it would have created greater miſchief than it was intended to prevent, if a creditor could not follow his debtor into another county; and as the ſtatute is ſo worded, that it only preſcribes that the declaration ſhall agree with the writ, as to the place, the judges conſtrued it ſo as to impower them to change the venue, and thereby oblige the plaintiff to give evidence of the fact within the county where the writ is brought; and this in effect tends to abate the writ according to the ſtatute. 1 New Abr. 34.

All actions real or mixed, as treſpaſſes, quare clauſum fregit, ejectment, waſte, &c. muſt be laid in the county where the lands lie. 1 New Abr. 34.

So an action of debt for rent, againſt an aſſignee of a term, on the privity of eſtate, is local, and will lie no where but in that county where the lands are. Cro. Car. 183. Latch. 187. 1 Jones 43.

So where A. granted a rent-charge to B. and C. for their lives, and the lands out of which it iſſued came to the defendant after the death of A. and the plaintiff, as executor of the ſurvivor of the grantees, brought debt for arrears incurred in their life time, and laid his action in the county where the lands lay; and on application of the defendant to have it tried elſewhere, ſuggeſting the plaintiff's power and intereſt in that county, but it was held a local action, and not triable elſewhere. Hob. 37.

A. as aſſignee of a reverſion, brought covenant againſt the aſſignee of the leſſee, on an expreſs covenant between the leſſor and the leſſee, for payment of rent reſerved out of lands which lay in Ireland, and which was made payable in London; on plea to the juriſdiction of the court, it was held, that though ſuch action may be maintained here by the leſſor againſt the leſſee, yet that by the aſſignment, the privity of the contract was deſtroyed; and there being nothing but a privity of eſtate between the two aſſignees it made the action local. Carth. 182. 1 Salk. 80. 3 Mod. 336. 1 Show. 191. S. C.

But where the leſſor brought debt againſt the leſſee, and declared on a demiſe of lands which lay in Jamaica; on plea to the juriſdiction of the court, and objection, that if the defendant had any good local plea, he was hereby deprived of it; the court held, that this being on the privity of contract, was a tranſitory action, and might be laid any where; and that if a foreign iſſue aroſe which was local, it might be tried where the action was laid; and for that purpoſe there may be a ſuggeſtion entered on the roll, that ſuch a place in ſuch a county is next adjacent; and it may be tried here by a jury from that place, according to the laws of that country; and upon nil debet pleaded, the laws of that country may be given in evidence. 6 Mod. 194. 2 Salk. 651. S. C.

If a declaration contains matters lying in two counties that join, it ſhall be tried by both counties, on a venire directed to the ſheriffs of both counties, who are to ſummon ſix of each county; but the trial may, by conſent of parties, be otherwiſe. See ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. that after verdict, judgment ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed, for that there was no right venue; ſo that the cauſe were tried by a jury of the proper county or place where the action is laid. See 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16.

An action of debt againſt the executor of a leſſee, in the detinet for arrears in the teſtator's life-time, may be brought any where; but where it is in the debet and detinet, for rent accrued in the executor's time, it muſt be where the lands lie. Latch 262, 271. 3 Co. 24.

All perſonal actions, as debt, detinue, aſſault, deceit, trover, and converſion, account, &c. may be brought in any county, and laid in any place; and the defendant cannot traverſe it, or be allowed to ſay, that the cauſe of action accrued in another county or different place, except in the caſe of an officer of juſtice, who may plead a ſpecial juſtification. Co. Lit. 282. 2 Inſt. 231. 7 Co. 3.

An action may be brought on a contract or matter which aroſe beyond ſea; as if A. enters into a bond to B. in any foreign country, and the bond bears date in no place, B. may bring his action where he pleaſes, and alledge that the bond was made in any place in England; but if there be a place mentioned, as Bourdeaux in France, then ſhall he alledge that the bond was made in quodam loco vocat' Bourdeaux in France, in Iſlington in the county of Middleſex, and from thence the jury ſhall come. Co. Lit. 261. Latch 4. 2 Keb. 315. 6 Mod. 228.

The defendant cannot by his plea oblige the plaintiff to lay his action in a different county from that in which he brought it, unleſs the matter pleaded be local, for in tranſitory actions he muſt move the court on affidavit, that if the plaintiff hath any cauſe of action, ſuch cauſe accrued in the county of, &c. and not where the plaintiff hath laid it, &c. and ſuch motion muſt be made before iſſue joined; for by joining iſſue, he agrees with the plaintiff, as to the manner of bringing the action, and though the court ſeldom refuſes on ſuch an affidavit to change the venue, yet if before or after the motion made, the plaintiff will enter into a rule, to offer no evidence but what ariſes in the county where he had laid his action, the cauſe will be tried there. 1 Sid. 44. 2 Salk. 669, 670.

But though the court, on application ſeldom refuſes to change the venue, yet there are caſes in which the judges have refuſed; as where a peer of the realm brings an action of ſcandalum magnatum, the court will not change the venue; becauſe a ſcandal raiſed on a peer reflects on him through the whole kingdom. 2 Mod. 215. 1 Lev. 56. S. P. For the king himſelf is party to the ſuit; but in lord Shaftſbury's caſe, who brought ſcandalum magnatum, and laid it in London, the venue was changed. 1 Vent. 364. 2 Jones 192. but note, that was by reaſon of the great influence he had in the city; and the eſtabliſhed doctrine is, that the venue cannot be changed in an action of ſcandalum magnatum. 2 Salk. 668. Carth. 40.

Alſo a ſerjeant at law, barriſter, attorney, or any other privileged perſon, whoſe attendance is neceſſary at Weſtminſter-hall, may lay his action in Middleſex, though the cauſe of action accrued in another county; and the court, on the uſual affidavit, will not change the venue. 2 Salk. 668, 670. 2 Show. Rep. 176, 177, 242. S. P.

But if a privileged perſon be ſued, and the action brought againſt him in the right county, his privilege will not intitle him to have it tried in Middleſex. Carth. 126. 2 Salk. 668.

So if an attorney lays his action in London, the court will change the venue on the uſual affidavit; for by not laying it in Middleſex, he ſeems regardleſs of his privilege, and is to be conſidered as a perſon at large. 2 Vent. 47.

If material evidence may be given in two counties, the plaintiff may elect to bring his action in which he pleaſes; as if A. draws a bill of exchange in Briſtol, payable in London, the action accrues by the refuſal to pay the money in London, and therefore the plaintiff is not obliged to change the venue. 1 Salk. 669. Comb. 84. 1 Lutw. 215. 7 Co. Bulver's caſe.

So where an aſſumpſit was brought for goods ſold and delivered, and the action laid in London, and a motion was made to change the venue upon affidavit that the ſale was in Kent, but it appearing that the delivery was in London, the court held, that where the matter conſiſts of two parts in ſeveral counties, the plaintiff ſhall have his election. 1 Vent. 344.

So in an action againſt a lighterman for not delivering goods, which was laid in London, where they were to be carried to, it was moved to change the venue; becauſe the the damages and neglect was in Kent; ſed non allocatur; for the neglect is tranſitory, and not material where it was; and the court will never change the venue for a carrier, which is the ſame caſe. 2 Salk. 670.

If the action be grounded on a ſpecialty, the court will not change the venue; for not being dated at any particular place, it may be preſumed to be omitted, that it may charge the defendant at any place. 2 Mod. 228.

It is not the courſe of the court to change the venue in an action of eſcape; per Holt Ch. Juſt. 2 Mod. 228. The court will not change the venue in an action of covenant. 1 Lev. 307.

V. Actions on the caſe.

It hath been obſerved, that for every right, and for every injury done a man in his perſon, reputation or property, the party hath a remedy, but this remedy he muſt take according to the methods laid down, and rules preſcribed by the law; for which purpoſe there are writs framed; and ſettled actions to which he muſt apply; as debt upon a contract, treſpaſs on a manifeſt and open invaſion of his property, &c. but where the law has made no proviſion, or rather, where no general action could well be framed before hand, the ways of injuring, and methods of deceiving being ſo various, every perſon is allowed to bring a ſpecial action on his own caſe. 1 New Abr. 44. Co. Lit. 56. a. 6 Mod. 53, 54. Nor is it any objection that ſuch action was never brought before; as where the leſſor coming to view the lands, to ſee if any waſte was committed, being hindred by a ſtranger from entring the premiſſes, brought an action on the caſe againſt him; and it was held to lie, though ſuch action had never been brought before. Cro. Jac. 478. 1 Rol. Abr. 108, 109. 2 Rol. Rep. 311. See 6 Mod. 53. and Lit. ſect. 108. Where per Littleton, no action having been brought on the ſtatute of Merton, it is to be preſumed that no action will lie: And Co. Lit. 81. b. per lord Coke, non-uſage is a good interpreter of a law. But per Holt Ch. Juſt. wherever an act of parliament gives a right, the Common law gives a remedy; ſo where the Common law gives a right, or makes a thing an injury, the ſame law gives a remedy or action. 1 Salk. 20, 21. 6 Mod. 54.

Under this diviſion of actions it is thought neceſſary to conſider,

1. In what caſes, and for what injuries an action on the caſe will lie.

2. Actions on the caſe againſt carriers, and upon the cuſtoms of England.

3. Concerning commons and commoners.

4. For conſpiracy.

5. For deceits, frauds, and on expreſſed and implied warranties.

6. On eſcapes and reſcous.

7. For and againſt innkeepers and hoſts.

8. For miſ-feaſance, non-feaſance, negligence.

9. For nuſances.

1. In what caſes and for what injuries an action on the caſe will lie.

In all caſes, where a man has a temporal loſs, or damage by the wrong of another, he may have an action upon the caſe to be repaired in damages. But an action on the caſe doth not lie, when there is not any temporal damage; as, againſt a woman, who pretends herſelf ſingle, and inveigles a man into a marriage, whereby he was diſturbed in conſcience. 1 Lev. 247. Vid. Ent. 13. See 1 Sid. 375. Nor doth action on the caſe lie, for refuſing to adminiſter the ſacrament. See 1 Sid. 34. Nor doth action on the caſe lie for not reading divine ſervice to a man, and the tenants of his manor. 5 Co. 73. a. 1 Rol. 110. Nor doth action on the caſe lie for a legacy; for it is only due by the ſpiritual law. Raym. 24. 1 Sid. 46.

No action on the caſe lies where the particular damage is not ſpecially alledged. As if there be an action upon the caſe for ſtopping up a highway, whereby buyers could not come to his coal-pit; for he ought to ſay that buyers were coming and were hindered. See, Salk. 15. 16.

Action on the caſe lies not for an act not prohibited by law, tho' it be to the damage of the party; as if a leſſee at will by negligence burn his houſe, an action upon the caſe does not lie; for the law does not puniſh him for permiſſive waſte. 5 Co. 13 b. Cro. Eliz. 777, 784. 4 Mod. 12. If a man erect a dove-cote, or coney-borough in his own land, tho' the doves or conies, hurt the neighbours, nō action lies. Mo. 420, 453. If a man ſhut the doors of his houſe againſt the ſheriff, who comes to do execution of the goods of another, which are in his houſe, no action lies. 5 Co. 81. Mo. 668. If a maſter give correction to the ſon and heir apparent of B. who was his apprentice, whereby he becomes lame, and is diſparaged in his marriage, B. cannot have an action upon the caſe. 1 Leon. 50.

If a ſchool be ſet up in the ſame town where an ancient ſchool has been time out of mind, by which the old ſchool receives damage, yet no action upon the caſe lies, becauſe it is lawful for a man to teach where he pleaſes: and this is for the eaſe of the people. 6 Mod. 46. per Gould, Juſtice. 11 H. 4. 47. 22 H. 6. 14. b. Fitz Action ſur le caſe 28. S. C. Bro. 42. S. C. Noy 184. S. C. cited. 1 Roll. Abr. 107. S. C. 1 Mod. 69. S. P. per Twiſden arguendo. In like manner, if I retain a maſter in my houſe to inſtruct my children; though this be to the damage of the common maſter, yet no action lies. 11 H. 4. 47. 1 Roll. Abr. 107. S. C. So if I have a mill, and my neighbour builds another mill upon his own ground; by which the profit of my mill is diminiſhed, yet no action lies againſt him; for every one may lawfully erect a mill on his own ground. 1 Roll. Abr. 107. Hard. 162. Brownl. 57. Noy 184. But if I have had a mill by preſcription in my own land, if another erects a new mill upon his own land, if this draws away the ſtream from my mill, or ſtops it, or makes too great a quantity of water run to my mill, by which I receive damage, ſo that my mill cannot grind as much as it was uſed to do, I ſhall have an action on the caſe againſt him. 22 Hen. 6. 14. Dyer 148. 1 Roll. Abr. 107.

If I have 100 acres of paſture in a town, and before this time no man hath ever had any paſture within the ſame town, and thoſe of the town hath uſed to agiſt their cattle in my paſture; and another who has a freehold within the town, converts his arable into paſture, ſo that thoſe of the town agiſt their cattle there; whereby I ſuffer damage, yet I cannot have any remedy againſt him; for it is lawful for him to make the beſt advantage he can of his own land. 22 H. 6. 14. Noy 184. 1 Roll. Abr. 107.

An action on the caſe lies not for a wrong, which is a felony; as if a man kill the ſervant of another, an action upon the caſe does not lie by the maſter per quod ſervitium amiſit. Yelv. 90. 1 Sid. 375. 1 Lev. 247. Nor doth action on the caſe lie for the battery of a man's wife, by reaſon of which ſhe languiſhed for ſix months, and then died. 2 Roll. 557.

2. Actions on the caſe againſt carriers, and upon the cuſtoms of England.

If a man delivers goods to a common carrier to carry to a certain place; if he loſes them, an action on the caſe lies againſt him; for by the common cuſtom of the realm he ought to carry them ſafely. If a man delivers goods to a common hoyman, who is a common carrier of goods, to carry them to a certain place, and gives him according to the cuſtom for the carriage of them, and after by default of good keeping of them they are loſt, an action upon the caſe lies againſt him; for by the common cuſtom of the realm he ought to keep and carry them ſafely. Hob. 25.

And if a man delivers goods to ſuch common hoyman to carry to a place, and after delivers them (being of good value) to another to keep ſafely in the boat, and does not diſcharge the hoyman, and after they are loſt through negligence, an action upon the caſe lies againſt him. Hob. 25. Cro. Jac. 330. pl. 9. S. C. ſays the defendant confeſſed the receipt, and ſaid he was a common bargeman; but that he fearing to carry it, delivered it to J. D.

to carry, and that he gave notice thereof to the plaintiff, and he agreed thereto, and diſcharged him of the carriage. The plaintiff traverſed the diſcharging him, and adjudged for the plaintiff; for the delivery by his aſſent is not material; but the only matter traverſable is the diſcharge, which is iſſuable and found for the plaintiff; and the judgment was affirmed on error brought.

In account for wares delivered ad merchandizandum; the defendant pleaded, that he was robbed of thoſe goods, and of many more of his own goods; it was held, that this might be a good plea for a factor or for a ſervant, but not for a common carrier, becauſe he receives a premium for the charge. Moor 462. Woodliffe's caſe.

A carrier agreed to carry goods of the plaintiff from H. to London, paying him for the carriage, and in an action on the caſe brought againſt the carrier, the plaintiff declared againſt him for not carrying goods, and that paratus fuit ſolvere; it was objected, that the declaration was ill, for he ſhould have ſet forth, that he had paid for the carriage, or had tendered the money; but the plaintiff had judgment. 2 Roll. Rep. 466.

Caſe, &c. by the plaintiff, who was a merchant, ſetting forth, that by the Common law every lighterman ought to govern his lighter, that the merchants goods come to no damage; that the plaintiff was a merchant and the defendant a lighterman, and that he had carried the plaintiff's goods from ſuch a place to ſuch a place for hire, viz. for ſo much money, and that he had ſo negligently governed his lighter that the goods were damnified; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the action would not lie, becauſe the plaintiff had not averred, that the defendant was a common lighterman; beſides, he did not ſet forth how his goods were ſpoiled, but both theſe exceptions were over-ruled; and though there was no promiſe, yet ſince this action ariſes ex malefacto, there is no occaſion to alledge a promiſe, for the delivery of the goods to a common carrier implies a contract. Palm. 523.

Caſe, &c. againſt a common carrier, for ſo negligently carrying the plaintiff's goods that they were loſt, and he declared likewiſe in trover; adjudged, that the declaration was good, becauſe the plea of Not guilty goes to both; but this was after a verdict. Sid. 244.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he delivered to the defendant (being a water carrier) goods in York to carry them from Hull to London, and that the goods were loſt; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was objected in an arreſt of judgment, that there was no poſitive agreement ſet forth between the plaintiff and defendant for any certain ſum for the carriage; beſides, the agreement was to carry the goods from Hull to London, ſo that the defendant did not undertake to carry them from York to London; but adjudged, that he ſhall be charged upon the general receipt at York, and that 'tis not requiſite to ſet forth any agreement of the premium. Sid. 36.

Aſſumpſit by a carrier, upon a promiſe to pay ſo much for carrying goods from York to London; if the plaintiff in his declaration doth aver performance, and doth not ſhew in what pariſh and ward he brought the goods, 'tis ill upon a demurrer. Sid. 178.

Caſe, &c. upon the cuſtom of England againſt a maſter of a ſhip, for negligently keeping the plaintiff's goods; in which a ſpecial verdict found, that the ſhip lay in the river Thames, and that the goods were delivered on board, &c. that in the night-time ſeveral perſons pretending to preſs ſeamen by force, ſeized thoſe men which were in the ſhip, and the goods were loſt; that the maſter was to have wages of the owner of the ſhip, and the mariners wages of the maſter; the queſtion was, whether the maſter was chargeable for the loſs of theſe goods; it was argued that he was not, becauſe the maſter is but a ſervant to the owners, and he receives his wages from them; but adjudged he is rather an officer than a ſervant, for he may pawn the ſhip if he ſee occaſion, be may ſell bona peritura, &c. and tho' he receives his wages from the owners, yet in effect he is paid by the merchant; for 'tis he who pays the owners, and there is no difference between this caſe and that of a hoyman or a common carrier. 1 Vent. 190, 238.

Aſſumpſit for money due by cuſtom for ſcavage; upon non aſſumpſit the jury found the duty to be due, but no promiſe expreſly made to pay it; adjudged that an aſſumpſit will lie for this money due by cuſtom, without an expreſs promiſe. 2 Lev. 174.

Caſe againſt the defendant for negligently keeping his fire, ſetting forth, that by the cuſtom of England every houſekeeper is bound to keep his fire ſafe at all times, leſt by the neglect thereof, and of his ſervants and lodgers, any damage ſhould happen; that the defendant being a houſekeeper in Chancery-lane took a lodger, who kept his fire ſo negligently that the goods of the plaintiff were burnt; the plaintiff had a verdict, but the judgment was arreſted, becauſe the cuſtom was never extended to ſervants or lodgers; beſides, he ſets forth, that his goods were burnt and ſpoiled, but did not ſay what goods. 1 Lut. 33.

Adjudged, that a common carrier is liable in reſpect of the reward he takes, and not becauſe the hundred is anſwerable over to him; for he was chargeable at Common law before the ſtatute of Winton, which makes the hundred liable; and the reaſon why he is chargeable is, becauſe he might be robbed by conſent and combination, of which it might be difficult to make any proof. 1 Salk. 143.

In an action on the caſe upon the cuſtom of the realm againſt the defendant, who was maſter of a ſtage-coach, the plaintiff ſets forth, that he took a place in the coach for ſuch a town, and that in the journey the defendant, by negligence, loſt the plaintiff's trunk; upon Not guilty pleaded, the evidence was, that the plaintiff gave the trunk to the man who drove the coach, who promiſed to take care of it, but loſt it; and the queſtion was, whether the maſter was chargeable, and adjudged that he was not, unleſs the maſter takes a price for the carriage of the goods as well as for the carriage of the perſon, and then he is within the cuſtom as a carrier is; that a maſter is not chargeable for the acts of his ſervant, but when they are done in execution of the authority given by the maſter, and then the act of the ſervant is the act of the maſter. 1 Salk. 282.

By ſtatute 6 An. c. 31. it is enacted, "that if any ſervant, thro' negligence, ſhall cauſe an houſe or outhouſe to be fired, ſuch ſervant being thereof convicted upon oath before two juſtices, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* unto the churchwardens of the pariſh of, &c. to be diſtributed amongſt the ſufferers, as to the churchwardens ſhall ſeem juſt; and upon non payment, ſhall be committed to ſome workhouſe by a warrant of one juſtice, there to be kept eighteen months at hard labour: and by the ſame act it is enacted, That an action ſhall not be brought againſt any, in whoſe houſe or chamber any fire ſhall accidently happen; and if it be brought, then the defendant may plead the general iſſue, and give the act in evidence, and if the defendant recover he ſhall have treble coſts.

3. Concerning commons and commoners.

A copyholder in fee preſcribed to have common in B. and alledged, that the defendant put his cattle into the common, which deſtroyed the ſame, ſo that communiam habere non potuit, ſed totum proficuum ſuum amiſit; and adjudged, the action did lie. 9 Rep. 111.

Caſe, &c. For that he was ſeiſed of ſixteen acres of land in Corſham, by reaſon whereof he had common in twenty acres adjoining every year after harveſt, and that the defendant had ploughed the ſaid twenty acres, by reaſon whereof the plaintiff had loſt his common; it was objected, that caſe did not lie, but an aſſiſe; but adjudged, that the plaintiff might have either action. Cro. Eliz. 199. 2 Leon. 184.

Caſe, for that the defendant having a wood adjoining to a common, where the plaintiff and other copyholders had common, the plaintiff kept conies in the wood, which ran out into the common, and eat up the graſs, &c. adjudged, that the action did not lie; becauſe when the conies were out of the wood, the defendant had no property in them, and the commoner is at no miſchief, for he may then kill them. Cro. Car. 281.

Caſe againſt R. B. for ſurcharging the common; it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that caſe would not lie, but an aſſiſe; adjudged, that the plaintiff might have either action. Style 164.

Caſe, &c. by a commoner for digging pits and ſpreading the gravel, &c. by which he loſt his common; the defendant pleaded, that he is lord of the ſoil, and that he did dig for coals, doing as little damage to the paſture as he could, and averred, that he had left common ſufficient; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged, that it amounted to no more than the general iſſue, and that the lord could not dig pits in the common, for the ſtatute of 43 Eliz. intends only an improvement by encloſing. Sid. 106. 2 Cro. 165.

Caſe, &c. for diſturbing him in a common, in which the plaintiff declared, that he was poſſeſſed of a meſſuage, and ſo many acres of land, &c. for a term of years not yet expired, and that for all that time habuiſſet & gaudere debuiſſet communiam paſturæ pro omnibus averiis levan' & cuban', &c. upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; it was objected againſt the declaration, that the plaintiff had not ſhewed any title either by grant or preſcription. Per curiam, This might be a good exception upon a demurrer, but 'tis cured by a verdict. 4 Mod. 175.

4. For conſpiracy.

It ſeems agreed, that for a falſe and malicious proſecution for any crime, whether capital or not, by which the party may be put in peril of his life, ſuffer in his liberty, reputation or property, an action on the caſe in the nature of a conſpiracy lies whether the proſecutor proceeded ſo far as actually to exhibit an indictment on which the party was acquitted, or not.

Where an action in nature of a conſpiracy lieth, the plaintiff muſt be lawfully acquitted; and therefore where there was a general pardon by parliament, and plaintiff did not plead it, but was tried and acquitted, he ſhall not have this action againſt thoſe who cauſed him to be indicted, becauſe he was not lawfully acquitted, viz. by the act of grace, which the court ought to have allowed without pleading it. Dyer 28, 85.

If a man is acquitted upon an inſufficient indictment, he cannot have this action againſt the indictors, becauſe he may again be indicted, and auterfoits acquit is no plea, unleſs where the acquittal is lawful. 4 Rep. 41.

Three conſpired to charge R. B. with a robbery, and preferred an indictment againſt him, which was returned ignoramus, the action lieth. 9 Rep. Poulterer's caſe.

It will not lie before a man is acquitted of the indictment, or it be traverſed or reverſed by error; for if it ſhould, it might prevent the trial at law. Goldſ. 51.

Caſe, in nature of a conſpiracy, againſt the mayor, town clerk and goaler of B. for that the plaintiff had levied a plaint of debt in the town-court before the mayor, &c. againſt R. B. and cauſed him to be arreſted, and that the defendants did conſpire to delay him in his ſuit, and had let R. B. go at large, without bail; adjudged, that the action lay. 1 Leon. 189.

This action ought not only to be falſe but malicious, and the malice ought to be proved; therefore where a robbery is committed, and the perſon robbed accuſes another by miſtake, as being like the offender, the action will not lie. Godb. 206.

It doth not lie againſt the jury, becauſe they are returned by the ſheriff to make their inquiry for the King, and being on oath, are ſuppoſed to be indifferent; neither will it lie againſt a judge for what he does in court as judge. 12 Rep. 23. Evans and Barker's caſe.

If a man will encourage another, who is robbed, to cauſe the felon to be indicted, and accompanies him to the aſſizes in order to the proſecution, and the party is acquitted, no action on the caſe will lie againſt him, unleſs he knew that the perſon was not robbed. 1 Brownl. 9.

Action on the caſe, wherein the plaintiff declared againſt three defendants, for that on ſuch a day and place per conſpirationem prius ibidem inter eos adinde habitam, and to oppreſs the plaintiff, and to cauſe him to be arreſted at the ſuit of William Gunton (one of the now defendants,) and that he might be detained in priſon for want of bail, they levied a plaint againſt him in the ſheriff's court, in a plea of treſpaſs, which was laid to the damage of the ſaid William Gunton, in 300*l.* by virtue whereof they cauſed him to be arreſted, and impriſoned for the ſpace of twenty days, when in truth the ſaid defendant Gunton had no cauſe of action againſt him: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the jury found Gunton Guilty, but acquitted the other two; and upon a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was objected, that this verdict had falſified the declaration, for that was in an action of conſpiracy between three, and two of them being acquitted, 'tis impoſſible for one to conſpire with himſelf; beſides the plaintiff did not alledge in his declaration, that the plaint levied in the Compter was determined either by a nonſuit, diſcontinuance, or a verdict againſt the plaintiff; and if ſo, then the plaintiff had commenced this action too ſoon, which is very true, and this might have been a good exception, if the defendants had demurred to the declaration; but 'tis not ſo after a verdict, which had found the defendant guilty of levying a plaint, without any cauſe of action; and threfore in ſuch caſes it ſhall be intended, that the plaint was determined in the inferior court, and againſt the defendant; by which it appeared, that he had no cauſe of action; and as to the objection, that this was an action of conſpiracy, it was adjudged, that this was an action on the caſe for an injury done to the plaintiff; for it was the arreſting him without a cauſe, which was the ſubſtance of the action, and not the conſpiracy. Moreton, juſtice, of a contrary opinion; and ſo was Saunders, who reports the caſe, that this was a plain action of conſpiracy by the words per conſpirationem inde verſus eos habitam. 1 Saund. 228.

Caſe, &c. in the nature of a conſpiracy, for indicting the plaintiff for barretry; one of the defendants was found guilty, and the reſt were acquitted; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that one cannot conſpire by himſelf; but adjudged, that this being in an action on the caſe, 'tis well enough. Raym. 180.

5. For deceits, frauds, and on expreſſed and implied warranties.

A merchant ſtranger, ſhipped 4500 kintals of wood to be brought to England, and a great tempeſt ariſing, the maſter caſt part of it into the ſea, and afterwards coming into port, told the cuſtom-officer, that he believed 2000 kintals remained, when upon further examination there were above 1000 more; and an information being exhibited for the forfeiture of thoſe 1000 kintals, for which no cuſtom was paid, it was adjudged, that the uncertain account made with the officer for 2000 kintals only before the landing, was good, becauſe it appeared there was no manner of deceit. Plowd. 1.

The defendant ſold ſheep, and warranted that they were ſound, and ſhould be ſound for a year next enſuing; adjudged, that the warranty is not impoſſible to be performed, no more than to warrant, that ſuch a ſhip ſhall return ſafe to London; ſo the action will lie. Owen 60.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration of 20*l.* paid by him to the defendant, he promiſed to deliver to him 400 pounds of wax on ſuch a day, and that at the day he did deliver 373 pounds of bad wax, which he warranted to be good and merchantable; by which he was damnified, &c. the defendant pleaded an agreement between them, as well for the twenty-ſeven pounds not delivered, as for the badneſs of that which was delivered; upon which plea the plaintiff demurred, becauſe the defendant had not anſwered the deceit; adjudged that it was not material to anſwer it, becauſe the warranty, that the wax was good, was after the contract made. Dyer 75.

Aſſumpſit, &c. for that there being a diſcourſe between the plaintiff and B. G. about certain hogs of the plaintiff's to be put to maſt; the defendant promiſed in conſideration the plaintiff would give B. G. 3*s.* for every hog put to maſt, that they ſhould be well fatted and redelivered to the plaintiff, and the action was brought for fifty hogs not redelivered; adjudged, that the action lay, tho' the defendant had no manner of benefit by the promiſe, becauſe it was grounded upon a deceit. Cro. Eliz. 200.

The plaintiff being a merchant in London went beyond ſea to trade, and appointed the defendant to receive all goods conſigned to him in his abſence, and to pay the cuſtoms, and to diſpoſe them to the plaintiff's uſe; afterwards twenty pieces of velvet were conſigned to the plaintiff, and imported into London, of which the defendant having notice, cauſed the goods to be landed without paying the cuſtoms, or agreeing with the officer, by reaſon whereof they were forfeited and ſeized; adjudged, that for this matter a ſpecial action on the caſe did lie. 2 Cro. 265.

The maſter declared, that B. G. was his ſervant, and had 65*l.* of his (the maſter's) money in his poſſeſſion, and that the defendant, to deceive him, procured a letter to be written and directed to the ſervant, and to be delivered to him, which he affirmed to be written by the maſter, and that he, the defendant, was ſent with it by the maſter to the ſervant, who cauſing it to be read, and underſtanding that his maſter had therein appointed him to pay the money to the defendant, he paid it accordingly; when in truth, the letter was counterfeited, and he never ſent the defendant for the money: It was objected after a verdict for the maſter, that he ought not to bring the action, but the ſervant; but adjudged the action was well brought by the maſter, for he had the loſs. 2 Cro. 223.

Caſe, in which the plaintiff declared, that he had 100*l.* delivered to him to pay to W. R. and that the defendant affirmed to him, that he was W. R. and thereupon the plaintiff delivered the 100*l.* to him, when in truth he was not the ſaid W. R. It was objected, that the action did not lie; but adjudged, that the plaintiff having alledged in his declaration, that the defendant falſo et fraudulenter had affirmed himſelf to be W. R. the action would lie upon this deceit. Moor 538.

The defendant having counterfeit jewels, and knowing them to be ſuch, ſent his ſervant with them to the plaintiff, being a merchan in Barbary, to ſell them there; and the plaintiff ſold them to the King of Morocco for 800*l.* and the ſervant received the money, and returned home to London; afterwards the cheat being diſcovered, the plaintiff was impriſoned in Barbary, and compelled to make reſtitution to the King; adjudged, that the action did lie againſt the maſter. Poph. 143.

A clothier made good cloth, to which he ſet his mark, and got a great trade; another clothier ſet the ſame mark upon bad cloth, for which the action was brought, and adjudged that it did lie. Poph. 143. 2 Cro. 468.

Caſe in nature of a deceit, wherein the plaintiff declared, that he, diſcourſing with the defendant about the purchaſe of certain houſes, the defendant affirmed the yearly rent to be ſo much, which the plaintiff believing, he bought the houſes; when in truth the yearly rent was not ſo much; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this action would not lie, becauſe there was only a diſcourſe about the houſes, and no warranty that they were of that yearly value; 'tis true, if a man ſells goods and affirms them to be his own, when they are not, an action will lie, becauſe the buyer cannot tell who had any property in them, and ſo it will in the principal caſe, becauſe the rent is a certain thing, and the ſame to every body; but to affirm a jewel or land is worth ſo much, when 'tis not, an action will not lie, becauſe that may be of greater value to one than to another. Sid. 146.

Caſe, &c. for a deceit; in which the plaintiff declared, that he bought ſilk of the defendant for ſuch ſilk, &c. whereas it was of another kind, and that the defendant knowing the deceit, ſold it to him; upon Not guilty pleaded, it appeared that there was no actual deceit in the defendant, who was the merchant, but that it was in his factor beyond ſea; but adjudged, that his deceit ſhall charge the merchant, becauſe 'tis more reaſonable, that he who puts a truſt in a deceiver ſhould loſe than a ſtranger. 1 Salk. 289.

Aſſumpſit, &c. to pay for a horſe a barley-corn a nail, doubling it on every nail; and the plaintiff averred, that there were 32 nails in the four ſhoes of his horſe, and that the barley-corn being doubled in every nail, it came to 500 quarters of barley; on non-aſſumpſit pleaded, the chief juſtice, at the trial, directed the jury to give the value of the horſe, which was 8*l.* in damages, and ſo they did 1 Lev. 111.

If there be a communication between A. and B. for the buying of certain ſheep, and thereupon B. the vendor ſays they are his own ſheep, when in truth they are the ſheep of another; but thereupon A. buys them of B. though B. made not any expreſs warranty of the ſheep, yet an action upon the caſe, in nature of diſceit, lies againſt B. 1 Roll. Abr. 90. Cro. Jac. 474. S. C.

So if the vendor affirms that the goods are the goods of a ſtranger, his friend, and that he had an authority from him to ſell them to him, and thereupon B. buys them, when in truth they are the goods of another; yet if he ſold them fraudulently and falſly, upon this pretence of authority, though he did not warrant them, and though it is not averred that he ſold them, knowing them to be the goods of a ſtranger, yet B. ſhall have an action upon the caſe for this diſceit. 1 Rol. Abr. 91.

In an action upon the caſe by A. againſt B. if the plaintiff declares that the defendant craftily intended, &c. and offering to ſell a gelding to the plaintiff, affirmed that he brought up that gelding from a colt, and that the ſaid gelding was then his own; which the plaintiff believing, afterwards, that is to ſay, upon the ſame day and year, and at the place aforeſaid, did buy the ſaid gelding, &c. the action lies upon this declaration, though there was no warranty upon the ſale; for this was an apparent deceit contrary to his own knowledge; and though it is not averred that he ſold him at the ſame time, when he affirmed he bred him up of a colt, but that he poſtea the ſame day and place bought him, giving credit thereunto, this ſhall be intended immediately after ſpeaking of the words; for all the words could not be ſpoke together. 1 Roll. Abr. 91. Style 310. S. C.

So in caſe in which the plaintiff declared that there being a colloquium between him and the defendant, concerning the buying and ſelling of two oxen which the defendant then had in his poſſeſſion, that he (the defendant) adtunc & ibidem falſo & malitioſe affirmabat, that theſe oxen were his, to which he giving credit bought them of the defendant for ſo much money, when in truth the ſaid oxen were the proper goods of J. S. and that he the ſaid J. S. poſtea, &c. lawfully recovered the ſaid oxen from the plaintiff, &c. and it was held after verdict, that the action lay on the bare affirmation, without any expreſs warranty, and though objected that it was not ſet forth that he ſciens that the oxen were the oxen of J. S. nor that he did it deceptive. Carth. 90. 3 Mod. 261. S. C. Comb. 142. S. C. 1 Show. 68. S. C.

So where the plaintiff declared that the defendant being poſſeſſed of a certain lottery-ticket, ſold it to him, affirming it to be his own, whereas in truth it was not his but another's; defendant pleaded he bought it bona fide, and ſold it: On demurrer, Holt C. J. held, where one having the poſſeſſion of any perſonal chattle ſells it, the bare affirming it to be his amounts to a warranty, and an action lies on the affirmation; for his having poſſeſſion is a colour of title, and perhaps no other title can be made out; aliter where the ſeller is out of poſſeſſion; for there may be room to queſtion the ſeller's title, and caveat emptor in ſuch caſe to have either an expreſs warranty or a good title; ſo it is in the caſe of lands, whether the ſeller be in or out of poſſeſſion; for the ſeller cannot have them without a title, and the buyer is at his peril to ſee it. 1 Salk. 210. See Style 343, 346. Cro. Jac. 197.

If the plaintiff declares, that whereas Queen Elizabeth was ſeiſed in fee of the advowſon of the vicarage of S. whereto the tithes in S. did belong, and that the defendant upon the ninth of June did affirm himſelf to be lawful incumbent thereof, and that he had right to the tithes from the death of J. N. and after upon the ſixteenth of June, the plaintiff having a communication with the defendant about his buying of the defendant the ſaid tithes till Michaelmas following, the defendant ad tunc ſciens that he had no right thereto (the defendant not having been inſtituted, &c.) yet falſo & deceptive ſold them to the plaintiff for 30*l.* and alledges in facto, that J. N. was after after preſented, &c. and took the tithes, &c. the action does not lie; for there was no warranty that the plaintiff ſhould enjoy them, and this affirmation alſo was in time precedent to the ſale. Cro. Jac. 196. Moor 467. S. C.

So if the plaintiff declares that upon a communication between the plaintiff and the defendant, for the purchaſe of a certain term for years, which the defendant then had in certain lands, the defendant aſſeruit to the plaintiff, that the ſaid term was worth 150*l.* to be ſold; to which the ſaid plaintiff fidem adhibens did give the defendant 150*l.* for the ſame; and that after the plaintiff, offering the ſaid term to ſale, could not get ſo much for the ſame; the action does not lie; for here was only a naked affirmation of the defendant, that the term was worth ſo much; and it was the plaintiff's folly to believe him. Yelv. 20.

But if on a treaty for the purchaſe of a houſe, the defendant affirms the rent to be 30*l.* per ann. whereas in truth it is but 20*l.* and thereby the plaintiff is induced to give ſo much more than the houſe is worth, the action lies; for the value of the rent is matter that lies in the private knowledge of the landlord and tenant; and if they affirm the rent to be more than it is, the purchaſer is cheated, and ought to have a remedy for it. 1 Salk. 211.

If A. being a goldſmith, and having ſkill in jewels and precious ſtones, hath a ſtone which he affirms to be a bezoar ſtone, and ſells it to B. for 100*l.* ubi revera it was no bezoar-ſtone, no action lies againſt A. for every one in ſelling his wares will affirm that his wares are good, or that the horſe which he ſells is ſound; and yet if he does not warrant them ſo, if falſe, no action lies. Cro. Jac. 4.

But if a man ſells a tun of wine, and warrants it to be ſound and not corrupted, if it be corrupted, an action upon the caſe lies. 1 New Abr. 52. 11 H. 6. 18. F. N. B. 94. S. P.

So if a man ſells a horſe, and warrants him to be ſound of his wind and limbs, if he be not, an action upon the caſe lies. 11 H. 6. 18. 1 Roll. Abr. 96. S. C.

If a man, knowing his horſe to be lame and foundered, offers him to me to buy, and warrants him to be ſound, &c. relying upon which I buy him, by which I am deceived, though the warranty was before the ſale, yet becauſe this was the cauſe of the ſale, an action upon the caſe lies thereupon. 1 Roll. Abr. 96.

If A. ſells a horſe to B. and warrants him to be ſound of wind and limb, and clean of legs, whereas he well knows that he is ſhoulder-pitch'd, and has ſplints upon his legs, an action lies againſt him upon this warranty; for theſe imperfections are not ſubject to the view of an unſkilful perſon otherwiſe. 1 Roll. Abr. 79.

The plaintiff declared that the defendant ſold him a horſe ſuch a day and place, & adtunc & ibidem warrantizavit equum prædict' to be ſound wind and limb, whereupon he paid his money, and avers the horſe had but one eye, &c. on plea of non warrantizavit, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was objected in arreſt of judgment, firſt, that the want of an eye is a viſible thing, whereas the warranty extends only to ſecret infirmities; but to this it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that this might be ſo, and muſt be found to be ſo, ſince the jury have found that the defendant did warrant. Secondly, as the warranty is here ſet forth, it might be at a time after the ſale, whereas it ought to be part of the very contract; and therefore it is always alledged warrantizando vendidit; ſed non allocatur; for the payment was afterwards, and it was that compleated the bargain, which was imperfect without it. 1 Salk. 211.

6. On eſcapes and reſcous.

On a ca. ſa. directed to the plaintiffs, who were ſheriffs of Norwich, they made a warrant to the three ſerjeants to arreſt B. G. which they did, and let him eſcape, for which an action on the caſe was brought by them againſt the ſerjeants, yet it was objected that the action did not lie, becauſe the ſheriffs were not damnified, there being no ſuit againſt them for the eſcape, and they might die before there was any; but adjudged that the action did lie before any ſuit againſt the ſheriffs, for the perſon arreſted did a wrong to them by the eſcape, and if they ſhould ſtay till they were ſued, he might die in the mean time. Cro. Eliz. 53.

Caſe, &c. againſt the ſheriffs of Briſtol, for ſuffering a man to eſcape who was committed by the commiſſioners of bankrupts; adjudged, that an action would lie. Moor 834.

A man was arreſted by the old ſheriff, who returned languidus; and afterwards, on leaving his office, he delivered the priſoner to the new ſheriff, who ſuffered him to eſcape; the action lies againſt him. 2 Cro. 380.

The old ſheriff took a man in execution, and on leaving his office, delivered him over to the new ſheriff; and upon a habeas corpus he was delivered to the marſhal in execution, who ſuffered him to eſcape, for which an action was brought againſt him; but upon a demurrer to the declaration it was held, that the action did not lie, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſhew that the old ſheriff delivered the priſoner in execution to the new ſheriff, with the cauſe of his impriſonment. 2 Cro. 587.

Judgment for the plaintiff in an action for a reſcous, and it was moved, that the party did not ſhew that the perſon was in cuſtody of the ſerjeant from whom he was reſcued, but the plaintiff had his judgment. Style 342.

Caſe againſt the ſheriff for ſuffering a perſon to eſcape, who was taken upon a capias excommunicatum; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict, but it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this action would not lie, becauſe the original matter was ſpiritual, (viz.) an excommunication for not paying tithes, and therefore the plaintiff ought to have his remedy in the Spiritual court; it is true, the original matter is ſpiritual, and after the excommunication the proceſs iſſues out of the Spiritual court; but it is directed to a temporal officer, and executed by him, and he ſuffering the perſon to eſcape, this is a perſonal injury, and the conſequential damages are temporal; but the court relied upon the caſe of the ſheriffs of Briſtol, ſo the plaintiff had his judgment. 1 Lutw. 122.

Caſe, &c. Againſt the ſheriffs of London, for ſuffering a priſoner to eſcape who was taken upon meſne proceſs; the defendants pleaded a reſcous in bar to this action; the plaintiff replied, that the perſon who eſcaped was arreſted in the pariſh of St. Andrew Holborn, in the county of Middleſex, in which county there is a priſon called Newgate, to keep priſoners arreſted for debt; whither they ought to be carried in ſome convenient time after the arreſt, and that the defendants might have carried this perſon thither within half an hour, but did not within two days after he was arreſted, but kept him in an alehouſe, which was not a place of ſafe cuſtody; and that the reſcous, if any, was made in the ſaid houſe; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was held to be all matter which might be given in evidence, and upon which no iſſue could be taken. 1 Lutw. 128. See titles Eſcape and Reſcous.

7. For and againſt innkeepers.

In an action againſt an innkeeper, the iſſue was, whether the goods were ſtolen through his default; the evidence was, that the inn was full of gueſts, and the innkeeper refuſed to entertain the plaintiff, who thereupon ſaid he would make a ſhift; adjudged, that if the inn was not full, an action lay againſt the innkeper for his refuſal. Dyer 158, 266. 4 Rep. 8. Southcote's caſe. 8 Rep. Caley's caſe.

The plaintiff declared, that it was the cuſtom for common inns to keep the goods of their gueſts ſafe; that he was hoſpitatus in hoſpitio, but did not ſay communi, and that his goods were embezilled; and this being objected in arreſt of judgment, it was diſallowed, becauſe the cuſtom was laid for common inns, &c.

An innkeeper deſired his gueſt to put his goods in ſuch a place under lock, otherwiſe he would not warrant the ſafe-keeping; the gueſt was negligent and left the goods in an outward room, but not locked, and were taken away; the innkeeper ſhall not be charged in an action. Dyer 266.

If a gueſt leave goods with an innkeeper (who hath no profit in keeping them) telling him he will return in two or three days, and in that time the goods are ſtolen, the innkeeper is not liable, without a ſpecial promiſe for the

ſafe-keeping; becauſe, when the plaintiff departed for ſo long a time, he is not a gueſt, but if he go out in the morning and return at night, he is a gueſt. 2 Cro. 188.

A ſervant lodged in a common inn with the goods of his maſter, which where there loſt, the maſter may have an action againſt the innkeeper; affirmed on error in the Exchequer Chamber. 2 Cro. 224.

Caſe againſt an innkeeper, upon the cuſtom of England, for the ſafe-keeping the goods of his gueſts, muſt be brought in the county where the inn is. Godbolt. 29 Eliz.

Caſe, &c. lieth againſt an innkeeper for denying lodging to a traveller, if he have any to ſpare, for his money; and in ſuch action the plaintiff need not ſhew that the defendant hath licence to keep an inn, and this action will lie, though he take down his ſign, if he ſtill keep the inn; it was likewiſe held, that 'tis lawful for any man to build an inn, if 'tis not ad nocumentum, &c. and that if the defendant is indicted for building it, theſe words muſt be in the indictment, otherwiſe it is ill. Godbolt 345.

In Caley's caſe before mentioned, theſe points were reſolved, that if the gueſt gives his horſe to the hoſtler, and requires him to put the horſe to graſs, and he doth ſo, and afterwards the horſe is ſtolen, he ſhall not be charged, becauſe 'tis not infra hoſpitium; but if the innkeeper put the horſe to paſture, without requeſt, then 'tis otherwiſe; and that if a writ be brought againſt an innkeeper, it need not mention that he keeps a common inn. 8 Rep. Caley's caſe.

A ſtranger came to an inn with an horſe without the knowledge of the owner, and there left him at hay; the horſe remained there 'till he eat out more than he was worth; the owner hearing where he was, demanded him of the innkeeper, who refuſed to deliver him without paying for what he had eaten; the court was divided, whether the innkeeper might keep the horſe; but this doubt was reſolved in a caſe about five years afterwards, (viz.) that he might keep the horſe till he was ſatisfied for his keeping, and ſhould not be put to his action againſt the perſon who left him at the inn. 1 Bulſt. 170. 2 Roll. Rep. 438.

It was the opinion of juſtice Doderidge, that if a traveller lodgeth three days together in a common inn, that in ſuch caſe the innkeeper is not anſwerable if his goods are ſtolen out of his chamber; but the court was of another opinion in Dalope's caſe; for clothiers and others coming to London to ſell cloths and cattle, ſtay commonly a week, and if they are robbed in the inn, the innkeepers ſhall be charged in an action. Latch 88, 126.

In an action on the caſe brought againſt an innkeeper for goods ſtolen out of the inn, the defendant pleaded in bar an agreement made between him and the plaintiff, that he (the defendant) would not be chargeable for any goods brought thither, by his gueſt, but for ſuch as were delivered either to himſelf or to his wife; and this was adjudged a good plea. Moor 158.

Caſe, &c. againſt an innkeeper for an horſe, &c. the defendant pleaded the general cuſtom of the realm, that where an horſe is put to an innkeeper to keep, and continues ſo long in the inn that his meat amounts to more than the value of the horſe, then the innkeeper may call four neighbours to appraiſe the horſe, and ſet a value upon his meat; and if it appear to them, that it comes to more than the value of the horſe, then the innkeeper may detain him as his own; and upon demurrer to this plea the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe there is no ſuch general cuſtom of the realm, 'tis only ſo in London and Exeter; but it was reſolved that an innkeeper might detain an horſe for his meat, or might have an action on the caſe for it. Moor 876.

Treſpaſs for aſſault, battery, and taking his horſe in Cheapſide; the defendant, as to the aſſault and battery, pleads Not guilty, and as to the reſt he ſet forth, that he was an innkeeper in St. Martin's pariſh, and that the plaintiff came to his houſe and agreed to give 2*s.* per week for his lodging, and 6*d.* for his horſe for a day and night; and if he did not pay the ſame, and 10*s.* more, which he owed the defendant, then he ſhould detain the horſe till he was paid, and ſhews how long he lodged there, and how many days, &c. his horſe was there, and how much was due, and becauſe it was not paid, he detained the horſe, till the plaintiff took him out of his (the defendant's) ſtable, and rode him to Cheapſide; where the defendant retook him, as he might lawfully; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that the defendant might detain the horſe for his hay and oats, whilſt he was in his poſſeſſion, becauſe it was in nature of a diſtreſs, but he could not retake him when once out of his poſſeſſion. Sed per curiam, If he hath the horſe by diſtreſs, then the taking him out of his poſſeſſion is a reſcous, and in ſuch caſe he may retake him; but here he had a property as well as a poſſeſſion by the agreement of the plaintiff, viz. to detain the horſe, if he (the plaintiff) did not pay for his lodging, horſemeat, and a debt of 10*s.* and having a property as well as the poſſeſſion, he might retake him. 2 Roll. Rep. 438.

The plaintiff declared, that he was an hoſtler, and that the defendant brought an horſe to him, and agreed to give ſixpence livery for a day and night, and becauſe the horſe had been there ſo many days and nights as amounted to 20*l.* he brought the action, and declared licet ſæpius requiſit', the defendant had not paid the money; it was inſiſted for the defendant, that there ought to have been a ſpecial requeſt; but adjudged, that were the ground of the action is a debt, there the law induceth a promiſe, and in ſuch caſe the requeſt is not iſſuable, nor any part of the conſideration; and in this caſe this promiſe is intire, and the plaintiff may demand for ſo many days and nights together, without bringing an action for every 6*d.* and that if a man brings an horſe to an inn and leaves him in the ſtable, without any ſpecial agreement to pay, &c. the innkeeper may detain him till he is ſatisfied for the keeping; and if he eat more than he is worth, he may get him appraiſed, and juſtify the ſale. Yelv. 66.

8. For miſ-feaſance, non-feaſance, and negligence.

Caſe, for that B. G. was excommunicated, and the inſtrument was delivered to the defendant, who was curate of the pariſh were B. G. lived, in order to publiſh it in the church, and that he maliciouſly raſed out the name of B. G. and put in the name of the plaintiff, and read it in the church, by reaſon whereof he was forced to abſent himſelf from divine ſervice, and to be at the expence to procure a diſcharge; it was objected, that this action would not lie, becauſe the matter was ſpiritual; but adjudged, that tho' the excommunication and the denouncing it was ſpiritual, yet the raſing the inſtrument was the offence, and that is temporal. Cro. Eliz. 838.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff did not declare upon the cuſtom of the realm, ſafely to keep fire, &c. but that the defendant ſtanding at his door, ſhot at a fowl, and fired his neighbour's houſe, for which the action was brought, and adjudged good; but it had not been good, if he had declared on the cuſtom. Cro. Eliz. 10.

Caſe, &c. for that the plaintiff brought a writ of entry againſt B. G. returnable Octab. Mich. and delivered it to the defendant, who was then under ſheriff, to execute in forma juris, and gave him a fee, who ſummoned the ſaid B. G. but intending to deceive the plaintiff, did not return the writ at the day, per quod retardatus fuit to recover the lands; the plaintiff had a verdict; it was inſiſted to ſtay the judgment, for that the action ought to be brought againſt the high ſheriff, and not againſt his under ſheriff; but adjudged, that the action is well brought againſt the under ſheriff, for 'tis imbezilling the writ. Cro. Eliz. 175.

A cuſtom was laid by the lord of a manor, that all the reſiants and inhabitants there had uſed to grind at his mill, and that the defendant being an inhabitant there, had built a mill contrary to the cuſtom; now, tho' the cuſtom was laid generally againſt all the inhabitants, yet 'tis good, becauſe ſuch a preſcription by way of tenure had been good, and if ſo, a fortiori, 'tis good by way of cuſtom. 2 Bulſt. 195.

Caſe, for that the defendant being a ſurgeon had undertaken the cure of the plaintiff's ſervant, who was bruiſed by a cart, and that he was not only careleſs in the cure, but but applied unwholeſome medicines, per quod ſervitium amiſit for one year; adjudged, that the action lay, becauſe the defendant had undertaken the cure. 2 Bulſt. 332.

Caſe, for that the defendant tam negligenter & improvide cuſtodivit ignem, that the plaintiff's houſe was burnt; upon Not guilty pleaded it was found, that the plaintiff was only tenant at will; adjudged, that at Common law no action lay againſt tenant at will, or for years, for permiſſive waſte, but for voluntary waſte 'tis otherwiſe. 5 Rep. 13.

If one is bound to repair a ſea-bank, and the danger is become inevitable thro' his negligence, or if he is not able to repair it, by reaſon whereof other perſons are charged to repair it; in ſuch caſe each of them may have an action on the caſe againſt him who ought to repair it, and recover damages according to their loſs. 10 Rep. 139.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant took his (the plaintiff's) gelding to depaſture, at 2*s. per* week, and that he (the defendant) was to keep the gelding ſafely, and to redeliver him to the plaintiff when he ſhould be thereunto required; but that he had kept him ſo negligently, that he was taken away by perſons unknown; upon a demurrer to this declaration, the better opinion was, that the action would lie, it being upon the negligence and the ſpecial promiſe of the defendant, &c. but that the plaintiff ought to alledge a requeſt for the delivery, and likewiſe to alledge, that the horſe was ſtrayed or loſt. Moor 543.

The plaintiff Markham entered into a recognizance with Sir Francis Willoughby, to one Tracy, and for the debt of the ſaid Sir Francis, who, together with one Fox, his ſervant, entred into a bond to Markham, to ſave him harmleſs, &c. in which the recognizance was recited; but there was a blank left for the chriſtian name and dwelling place of the ſaid Tracy; which after the ſealing of the bond, and without the aſſent of the plaintiff Markham, was filled up by the defendant Gomaſton, by reaſon whereof the ſaid bond was void, and thereupon the plaintiff brought an action on the caſe againſt the defendant, having before brought an action of debt againſt Fox upon this bond; and this matter being proved at the trial upon the bond, he was nonſuited, and after a great debate adjudged, that this action on the caſe would lie againſt the defendant for filling up this bond after it was ſealed. Moor 547.

A man had two cloſes adjoining time out of mind, and he ſold one of the cloſes to W. R. the queſtion was, who ſhould repair and make the fences; the court was divided, viz. two judges, that the vendor ſhould do it, and two judges that the vendee ſhould. Moor. 775.

Caſe againſt an apparitor, who having a citation againſt the plaintiff, returned, that he had ſummoned him, when in truth he had not, by reaſon whereof the plaintiff was excommunicated; adjudged, that the action would lie; and ſo it will againſt an archdeacon for refuſing to induct a clerk. Moor 835.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff ſet forth a cuſtom, that all the inhabitants in certain ancient meſſuages, held of the biſhop of Saliſbury, in that city, uſed to grind all the corn which they ſpent in their houſes or ſold, at certain mills called the Biſhop's mills, &c. and not elſewhere, without leave of the biſhop, and derived a title to himſelf, under a leaſe of thoſe made to him anno 11 Jac. and alledged, that the defendant at ſeveral times, from 2 Jac. to 12 Jac. had ground his corn elſewhere, &c. the plaintiff had a verdict, but could never get judgment, becauſe the cuſtom was unreaſonable for a man to grind all his corn at the mills, &c. which he ſhould ſell; beſides, damages were aſſeſſed for not bringing his corn to be ground at the mills ſeveral times, from the ſecond year to the twelfth year of king James, when the plaintiff's leaſe commenced in the eleventh year of that reign. Moor 887.

Caſe, &c. againſt a bailiff of a liberty, ſetting forth, that a warrant upon a fi. fa. was directed to him by the ſheriff, to levy a debt at the ſuit of the plaintiff, and that the defendant had levied the money and concealed the warrant, and made no return thereof; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the action ought not to be brought againſt an under bailiff but againſt the ſheriff, for even an under ſheriff ſhall not be charged for not returning a writ; which is very true, where there is no perſonal wrong ſuppoſed to be done by him; but in the principal caſe the bailiff is charged with a perſonal wrong by concealing the warrant after the money was levied, therefore the action lies againſt him. 1 Roll. Rep. 78.

Caſe againſt a bargeman, who juſtified, for that there were ſeveral paſſengers in his barge, and a ſudden tempeſt ariſing, all the goods in the barge were thrown overboard to ſave the lives of the paſſengers, amongſt which the goods of the plaintiff were thrown over, and that he had not any notice that there was money in the pack; adjudged, that the action would not lie, becauſe what the owner of the barge did in this caſe, was occaſioned by the act of God, and in defence of their lives. 1 Roll. Rep. 79.

Caſe againſt the defendant for making a falſe affidavit in Chancery, by reaſon whereof he was damnified to ſuch a ſum; there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and damages to 300*l.* It was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the action would not lie, but that the plaintiff ought to take his remedy by indictment; for when a man is compelled to give evidence, if 'tis falſe, he ſhall not be puniſhed by an action on the caſe: et per curiam, the judgment was ſet aſide. 2 Roll. Rep. 195.

Caſe, &c. for taking away a box with writings; the plaintiff had judgment in an inferior court; and upon a writ of error brought, the error aſſigned was, that the plaintiff in his declaration had made no title to the box, neither did he ſet forth that it was locked, ſealed, or nailed, nor the quality of the writings, whether bonds, releaſes, or other deeds, or evidences in particular, and for theſe reaſons, amongſt others, the judgment was reverſed. Godb. 370.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was poſſeſſed of ſuch goods in London, and that in conſideration of 2*s.* paid by him to the defendant at London, he promiſed, that if the plaintiff would deliver the goods to the defendant, he would carry them aboard ſuch a ſhip, and averred, that he did deliver the goods to the defendant, but that he had not carried them aboard the ſhip; upon non aſſumpſit pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſhew when and where he delivered the goods to the defendant, but only generally, that he did deliver them; adjudged, that it need not be ſhewed preciſely, becauſe 'tis only an inducement to the promiſe. Godb. 41.

Leſſee for twenty years made an under-leaſe to T. S. for one year, who after the end of the year, and before the firſt leſſee re-entered, took up the planks and other things which were fixed to the freehold, and the leſſee for twenty years brought an action on the caſe againſt him; adjudged that it would lie. W. Jones. 224.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was poſſeſſed of an houſe, &c. which had three windows on the north ſide et adhuc poſſeſſionatus exiſtit, and that the defendant was poſſeſſed of an houſe and a void piece of ground adjoining to the plaintiff's houſe on the north ſide et adhuc poſſeſſionatus exiſtit, and that his (the plaintiff's) lights were antient lights time out of mind; and that the defendant had built ſuper vacuam peciam terræ, and thereby ſtopped his (the plaintiff's) lights; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; it was objected in arreſt of judgment that the declaration was repugnant, for the ground could not be vacua, ſince it appears that the defendant built upon it: Sed per curiam, That part of the declaration ſhall be rejected as ſurpluſage; beſides, part of it might be ſtill vacua and not built on, and ſo it ſhall be intended. W. Jones. 326.

Caſe, in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant being a coachman, did by careleſs driving his coach break a pipe of wine of the plaintiff's which lay in the ſtreet, by which much wine run out and was loſt, and the defendant being arreſted for the ſame, he promiſed, that if the plaintiff would forbear to proſecute him for the ſaid wine, he would pay him as much as he was damni-fied; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, becauſe the plaintiff had not averred how much the wine was worth which was thus ſpilled; and therefore the defendant could not tell what ſatisfaction to make; neither did the plaintiff alledge that he required the defendant to make ſatisfaction; but adjudged, that by the declaration it appears, that the plaintiff had damage done to his wine, and that the defendant had not ſatisfied him for the damages, or made any tender of amends; and as to the value, that was now made certain by the jury, and the defendant is bound to take notice of what damage he had done. Style 458.

Caſe, &c. for that the defendant did ride an unruly horſe in Lincoln's Inn Fields, &c. which broke from the defendant and run over the plaintiff and grievouſly hurt him, &c. Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict, and it was inſiſted in arreſt of judgment, that it appears by the declaration, that this happened againſt the defendant's will, and ſo damnum abſque injuria; but adjudged, that the defendant was in fault to bring an unruly horſe into a place where miſchief might enſue, by reaſon of the concourſe of the people; and that it had been adjudged an action lay againſt a butcher, who had made an ox run from his ſtall and gored the plaintiff, and this was alledged in the declaration to lie in default of penning him up. 1 Vent. 295.

9. For nuſances.

It is clearly agreed, that for a common nuſance, which is an offence againſt the public, either by doing a thing which tends to the annoyance of all the King's ſubjects, or by neglecting to do a thing which the common good requires, no action on the caſe will lie; for this would create a multiplicity of actions, one man being as well intitled to bring an action as another; and therefore in ſuch caſes the remedy muſt be by indictment at the ſuit of the King. Co. Lit. 56. a. 1 Roll. Abr. 88, 110. 2 Roll. Abr. 140, 141. Moor 180. 4 Co. 8. 9 Co. 113. 2 Brownl. 147. Vaugh. 341. Cro. Eliz. 664. 3 Mod. 294. Carth. 191, 451. 1 Salk. 15.

But if by ſuch a nuſance I ſuffer a particular damage, as if by ſtopping up a highway with logs, &c. my horſe throws me, by which I am wounded or hurt, an action lies. Co. Lit. 56. Cro. Jac. 446. 1 Keb. 847. 2 Jones 157.

Alſo an action lies for continuing a nuſance, as where for erecting a nuſance 2 die Febr. the defendant pleaded a prior action brought for erecting a nuſance 20 die Martii, and a recovery thereupon, and averred theſe to be the ſame nuſance and erection; and on demurrer the plaintiff had judgment; for though he cannot have a new action for the ſame erection, yet he may for the continuing the ſame nuſance. 1 Salk. 10.

VI. Actions on the caſe upon aſſumpſit.

An aſſumpſit is an action the law gives a party injured, for the breach or non-performance of a contract legally entered into; it is founded on a contract either expreſs or implied by law, and gives the party damages in proportion to the loſs he has ſuſtained by the violation of the contract. 4 Co. 92. Moor 667.

But here it muſt be obſerved, that the law diſtinguiſhes between a general indebitatus aſſumpſit and a ſpecial aſſumpſit; for though they come under the denomination of actions on the caſe, and the party is to be recompenſed in damages alike in both, yet the firſt ſeems to be of a ſuperior nature, and will lie in no caſe but where debt will lie; but for a particular undertaking, or collateral promiſe to diſcharge the debt or duty of another, a ſpecial aſſumpſit muſt be brought. 1 New Abr. 163.

If A. and B. having dealings with each other, make up their accounts, and B. is found in arrear, and promiſes to pay the balance, an aſſumpſit lies againſt him, and A. need not bring a writ of account. Cro. Jac. 69. Yelv. 70.

So if A. gives money, or delivers goods to B. to merchandize therewith, and B. promiſes to render an account, aſſumpſit lies on this expreſs promiſe as well as account. 1 Salk. 9.

So if a tenant being in arrear for rent, ſettles an account of the arrears with his landlord, and promiſes to pay him the ſum in which he is found in arrear, an aſſumpſit lies on this promiſe. 1 Roll. Abr.

But if the obligor in a bond, without any new conſideration, as forbearance, &c. promiſes to pay the money, an aſſumpſit will not lie, but the obligee muſt ſtill purſue his remedy by action of debt. 1 Roll. Abr. 8.

So if a man leaſes for years, reſerving rent, an aſſumpſit will not lie, becauſe it ſavours of the realty. 1 Roll. Abr. 7.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for money by cuſtom due for ſcavage; adjudged upon a ſpecial verdict, by which it was found, that the ſum demanded was due by cuſtom, but that there was no expreſs promiſe to pay it. 2 Lev. 174.

If a man by grant of the King hath fines pro licentia concordandi, and one will not pay a fine, he may have an indebitatus aſſumpſit for it. 3 Leon. 179.

Neither debt nor general indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie againſt the acceptor of a bill of exchange; for his engaging is but a collateral promiſe, on which a ſpecial action on the caſe lies, founded on the cuſtom of merchants; but debt or a general indebitatus may be brought againſt the drawer, as for money received for the uſe of the party. Hard. 485, 486.

Alſo if A. delivers money to B. to pay over to C. and gives C. a bill of exchange drawn upon B. and B. accepts it, C. may have an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt B. as having received money to his uſe, but muſt not declare only on the bill of exchange accepted. 1 Vent. 153.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for 20*l.* forfeited by the ordinances and conſtitutions of a company, for not ſerving in the office of ſteward of the company, according to a bye-law by them made. 2 Lev. 252.

If one receives my rent under pretence of title, I may have an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him. 2 Mod. 263.

So where A. took out adminiſtration to a perſon ſuppoſed to have died inteſtate, and appointed J. S. his attorney, who received money, &c. and paid it to the adminiſtrator; afterwards a will appearing, the letters of adminiſtration were called in, and the executor brought an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the attorney; who objected, 1. That he acting only as attorney for him, who in fact was adminiſtrator, the receipt of the money was not his but the adminiſtrator's: And 2dly, That the action ought to have been a ſpecial aſſumpſit, the money being received by ſpecial authority, and that expreſly to the uſe of another; but the court held, that the authority being void, it was a receipt of ſo much money for the uſe of the plaintiff on an implied contract, for which an indebitatus aſſumpſit well lies. 1 Salk. 27.

If a feme ſole marries a man, who in truth is married to another woman, and he makes a leaſe of her lands and receives the rents, ſhe may bring an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him for ſo much money received to her uſe; adjudged after verdict, though objected, that he having no right to receive, the tenant remained ſtill liable, and he had his remedy over againſt the huſband; but the court held, that he being viſibly a huſband, the tenant was diſcharged, at leaſt that the recovery in this action would diſcharge the tenant, as it would be a ſatisfaction to the true leſſor. 1 Salk. 28.

If a ſheriff levies money upon a fieri facias, the plaintiff may have an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him for ſo much money received to his uſe. Comb. 430.

If A. takes an apprentice and receives 30*l.* with him, for which he is to teach him his trade, and make him free of the city of London, and being no freeman himſelf, the boy is bound likewiſe to a freeman; admitting that by the cuſtom of London, the laſt binding will not make him free without actual ſervice, yet an indebitatus aſſumpſit will not lie, nor has the party any remedy, unleſs for the cheat, or on a ſpecial action on the caſe for not making him a freeman. Comb. 431.

If three are bound in an uſurious obligation, and one of them pays part of the money, and afterwards the obligee brings debt againſt one of the obligors, who avoids the bond for uſury, yet the obligor who paid the money cannot not maintain an indebitatus aſſumpſit for it, for he is particeps criminis, and having parted with his money freely, he comes within the rule volenti non fit injuria. 1 Salk. 22.

But if A. pays money to B. upon a miſtake, as thinking that there was ſo much due on account, &c. he may maintain an aſſumpſit for it. 1 Salk. 21.

So if a man pays money upon a policy of aſſurance, ſuppoſing a loſs, when in truth there was not any, he may bring an indebitatus aſſumpſit for ſo much money received to his uſe. Skin. 412.

So if A. gives money to B. to pay C. upon C's delivering up writings, &c. and C. will not do it, an indebitatus will lie for A. againſt B. for ſo much money received to his uſe. 6 Mod. 161.

If one be named a commiſſioner to examine witneſſes in a cauſe in Chancery or Exchequer, who officiates accordingly, he may bring an aſſumpſit for his labour and pains; for though he is to be conſidered as an officer of the court, yet he is not compellable to attend againſt his will, nor does the truſt repoſed in him make his taking a reward bribery; for the party is to take care to name ſuch as will ſerve, and it is but reaſonable it ſhould be at the charge of him for whom he officiates. Carth. 208. Comb. 186. S. C.

The gentlemen uſhers and daily waiters to the King brought an aſſumpſit againſt the defendant, in which they declared, that all gentlemen uſhers, daily waiters, &c. time out of mind, had uſed to have a fee of 5*l.* of every perſon who voluntarily accepted the honour of knighthood, and that the defendant (on ſuch a day) had voluntarily accepted knighthood, and thereupon became indebted to them in 5*l.* and in conſideration thereof had promiſed to pay the money, which he had not performed; and upon a demurrer to this declaration, it was adjudged this action would lie for this duty. Carth. 95.

Where a man comes to buy goods, and they agree upon a price and a day for the payment, and the buyer takes them away, an aſſumpſit for the money is the proper action, for trover will not lie for the goods, becauſe the property was changed by a lawful bargain, and by that bargain the buyer was to convert the goods before the money was due; but if a man comes to buy goods, and they agree upon a price for preſent money, and the buyer takes the goods away without payment, trover lies, becauſe the property is not altered, and therefore the taking away the goods without payment of the money, is an injurious taking, for which the action lies; but if a man ſells goods on payment of money on a day to come, and the money be paid, and the goods not delivered, trover lies becauſe the property is in the buyer. 1 New Abr. 167.

If a man and woman, being unmarried, mutually promiſe to marry each other, and afterwards the man marries another woman, by which he renders himſelf incapable of performing his contract, an aſſumpſit lies, in which the woman ſhall recover damages; for though matrimonial cauſes are regularly cognizable in the ſpiritual courts, yet the contract in the preſent caſe being executory, and revoked by the huſband by the ſubſequent marriage, could not be inforced by eccleſiaſtical cenſures, as a contract in præſenti may; hence therefore, there being no adequate remedy in the ſpiritual courts, and marriage being an advantage, and the loſs of it a temporal loſs, it is fit that there ſhould be a remedy in the temporal courts, otherwiſe there would be a failure of juſtice. Carter 233.

All promiſes and contracts are to receive a favourable interpretation; and ſuch conſtruction is to be made, where any obſcurity appears, as will beſt anſwer the intent of the parties; otherwiſe a perſon, by obſcure wording of his contract, might find means to evade and elude the force of it. Hence it is a general rule, that all promiſes ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the promiſor, and are not to be rejected, if they can by any means be reduced to a certainty: Therefore,

If A. in conſideration that B. will marry his daughter, aſſumes and promiſes to give with her a child's part, and that at the time of his death he will give to her as much as to any of his children, except his eldeſt ſon; this is a good promiſe; for though a child's part in itſelf is altogether uncertain, yet being to give as much as to any of his children, the promiſe is certain enough, it being averred what the younger ſon had. 1 New Abr. 168. Poph. 148. 2 Roll. Rep. 104.

But if there be a diſcourſe between the father of A. and B. in relation to a marriage between the ſaid A. and the daughter of B. and B. tunc & ibidem affirms and publiſhes to the father of A. quod daret ei qui maritaret his ſaid daughter with his conſent 100*l.* and after A. marries the daughter of B. with his conſent; yet this affirmance and publication of B. ſhall raiſe no promiſe upon which an action upon an aſſumpſit may be brought, becauſe theſe words do not include any promiſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 6.

If a man promiſes another, in conſideration that he will aſſign to him a certain term, to pay him 10*l.* this is a good aſſumpſit, though the time of aſſignment and payment be not appointed; for the 10*l.* ſhall be paid in a convenient time after the aſſignment, which alſo muſt be done in a convenient time, and he ſhall not have time during his life. 1 Roll. Abr. 14, 15.

So if A. be indebted to B. for certain things to him ſold, and C. comes to B. and promiſes him that if A. ſhall not pay him the money, that then he himſelf will pay it; an action upon the caſe lies for B. againſt C. upon this promiſe, if A. does not pay the money in a convenient time. 1 Roll. Abr. 15.

If A. is indebted to B. in 10*l.* and upon this C. promiſes that in conſideration that he will forbear A. till ſuch a day, if A. does not pay him the ſaid day, he himſelf will pay him the ſaid day, this is a good promiſe, upon which B. may have an action againſt C. for though A. had the whole day to pay it, and ſo it was impoſſible for C. to pay it the ſame day, if he did not pay it, yet the ſubſtance of the promiſe is to pay, and the time limitted being impoſſible, is void, and then it ought to be paid on requeſt. 1 Roll. Abr. 13.

If A. is indebted to B. in 10*l.* by obligation, and A. dies and makes C. his executor, and C. in conſideration quod daret diem ſolutionis pro uno anno, promiſes payment, if C. does not pay it, an action on this promiſe will lie againſt him; for though in proper ſenſe, a day cannot be given upon the bond, yet it ſhall be taken according to common parlance, viz. deferring the day of payment. Cro. Eliz. 643.

If the plaintiff declares, that whereas there was a communication between the plaintiff and defendant, concerning the bark of certain wood, and that thereupon it was agreed that the defendant ſhould give to the plaintiff two ſhillings per ſeam for all the bark of ſuch wood as the plaintiff ſhould cut, and that thereupon the defendant aſſumed and promiſed to have ready upon a certain day, articles purporting the agreement, and an obligation for the performance thereof, &c. the declaration is not good, becauſe not ſaid in what ſum the obligation was to be; and a certain ſum cannot be intended, becauſe the number of ſeams are altogether uncertain; but being after verdict upon the general iſſue, it was adjudged for the plaintiff; but per cur. upon demurrer, or the ſpecial iſſue, it had been naught. 1 Sid. 270. 1 Keb. 776.

But if there be an agreement to enter into an obligation for performance of a thing of a certain value, without mentioning in what ſum, it ſhall be according to the value. 1 Sid. 240.

In an aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declared that the defendant in conſideration, &c. ſix months before the return of King Charles the ſecond, aſſumed to pay 20*l.* to the plaintiff, if Charles Stewart foret Rex Angliæ infra 12 menſes tum prox' ſequent', and adjudged a good promiſe; for the words ſhall be taken according to the ſubject matter, viz. that the King that was then out of poſſeſſion, ſhould be in poſſeſſion within ſix months. 1 Lev. 33. 1 Keb. 56. S. C. For more matter concerning Aſſumpſit, ſee title Aſſumpſit.

VII. Actions on the caſe for ſlander or defamation.

Slander is the publiſhing words in writing, or by ſpeaking of any perſon, by reaſon of which he becomes liable to ſuffer ſome corporal puniſhment, or ſuſtains ſome damage.

It

It is no excuſe, at leaſt in foro conſcientiæ, that the thing charged was true. The law does indeed, in compaſſion to mens infirmities, allow it to be a juſtification in an action for words ſpoke; but as to written ſcandal it admits of none, if the matter of the ſlander be true: yet it is very unbecoming a man, and much more ſo a chriſtian, to be guilty of this offence. If a perſon has done any thing which the law prohibits, he is liable to anſwer for it judicially; but it can anſwer no good end for private perſons to brand him with it, and there is a degree of cruelty as well as inhumanity in ſo doing. To rally a man for ſome foible or ſmall failing, if it be done with humour and in a friendly way, may do him ſervice; but the publiſhing even any of theſe, which can ſerve only to leſſen him in the eſteem of his neighbours, or make him the object of ridicule, ſhould be abſtained from; for, although it may not amount to ſlander in the legal notion of that word, it muſt create ill blood between the parties.

This offence was ever held in great deteſtation; but ſlander in writing hath at all times, and with good reaſon, been puniſhed in a more exemplary manner; for as it has a greater tendency to provoke men to breaches of the peace, quarrels, and murders, it is of much more dangerous conſequence to ſociety. Words, which are frequently the effect of ſudden paſſion, may ſoon be buried in oblivion; but that which is committed to writing, beſides that the author is actuated by deliberate malice, is ſpread further, and the ſlander is for the moſt part ſo laſting, as to be ſcarce ever forgiven.

For written ſcandal the party injured may proceed againſt the author by indictment or information, it being conſidered as a public offence; and he may alſo proceed by an action upon the caſe for the private damage thereby ſuſtained, or, if the defamation be merely ſpiritual, by a ſuit in the eccleſiaſtical court.

Peers and the great men of the realm, beſides theſe ways of redreſs, have another, by an action of ſcandalum magnatum, which is peculiar to themſelves.

If the ſlander is by words ſpoke, there is in general no other remedy than by an action on the caſe, or a ſuit in the ſpiritual court; yet even this may in certain caſes be proceeded againſt criminally; for inſtance, if it be a ſlander of the ſtate, as the ſaying the coin is abaſed by authority, or any other thing whereby the ſtate is or may be prejudiced; or if it be a ſlander which it more particularly concerns the public to prevent, as the ſpeaking any thing ſcandalous to a juſtice of peace in the actual execution of his office, it may be proceeded againſt by indictment or information. 4 New Abr. 480.

The criminal way of proceeding againſt perſons guilty of this offence, being proper to be treated of under the titles Indictment, Information, and Libel, and the method of proceeding by action of ſcandalum magnatum, under its proper title, it only remains to conſider that ſort of ſlander for which the remedy is by an action upon the caſe.

An action upon the caſe lies for publiſhing any words, by reaſon of which the perſon of whom they are publiſhed does in fact receive damage; but it is not always neceſſary to ſhew the damage received. The diſtinction is that where the natural conſequence of the words is a damage; as if they import the charge of being guilty of a crime, or of having ſome contagious diſtemper; or if the title to an eſtate is by them brought in queſtion; or if they are a diſgrace in an office, profeſſion, or trade, they are in themſelves actionable: But in other caſes the party, who brings an action, muſt alledge the ſpecial damage received from them. 4 New Abr. 482, 483.

It makes no difference whether the ſlander is publiſhed in writing or print, or by ſpeaking; for, although the party injured may, where it is in writing or print, (it being a publick offence) proceed in a criminal way againſt the author of it, he is not thereby precluded from obtaining ſatisfaction by action for the private injury to himſelf. 4 Co. 14. 3 Leon. 138. Cro. Eliz. 247.

Writing ſlanderous words of any perſon in a private letter to a third perſon, is ſuch a publication as this action will lie for. 2 Vent. 28.

If the words are a mere ſpiritual defamation no action lies, for only the ſpiritual courts have juriſdiction in this caſe. 1 Roll. Abr. 34.

But whenever any temporal damage is received from words, which in general are no more than a mere ſpiritual defamation, or if ſuch words are coupled with others which are actionable, a prohibition lies for the whole words to the eccleſiaſtical courts; it would be vexatious if proceedings could be in both temporal and ſpiritual courts; and as none but the former can make the injured party ſatisfaction for the damages ſuſtained, the proceedings in the latter being pro ſalute animæ only, it is very reaſonable that he ſhould be confined to an action in them.

Under this head it is thought proper to conſider,

1. Where action lies for words which import capital offences; and where not.
2. Where action lies for words which import the charge of other crimes; and where not.
3. Where action lies for words ſpoken of magiſtretes; and where not.
4. Where action lies for words ſpoken of men of profeſſion; and where not.
5. Where action lies for words ſpoken of tradeſmen; and where not.
6. Where action lies for ſlandering women; and where not.
7. Of adjective and negative words, and by way of interrogation.
8. Pleadings in actions of ſlander.

1. Where action lies for words which import capital offences; and where not.

An action lies for theſe words, Thou art a rebel, and not the Queen's friend. Cro. Eliz. 638. So it doth for ſaying of J. S. He is an enemy to the ſtate; for theſe are a great ſlander, if not a charge of treaſon. Cro. Eliz. 638.

So it is actionable to ſay of any perſon, he did treaſon in the Low Countries; becauſe he may be tried and puniſhed in England for a treaſon committed there. 1 Rol. Abr. 63.

Theſe words, He is a Jacobite, and is for bringing in the Prince of Wales and popery, to the deſtroying our nation, are ſaid to be actionable; becauſe they are a charge of evil principles. Salk. 696. In another report of the ſame caſe, theſe words are held to be actionable if ſpoken of a perſon in office; but it is not determined, whether they are ſo or not when ſpoken of a private perſon. Lord Raym. 812. The doctrine however in Salkeld ſeems to be law; for in a ſubſequent caſe it was held, that an action lies for the following words, ſpoken of any perſon, viz. He has the pretender's picture in his room, and I ſaw him drink his health; and he ſaid he had a right to the crown. 4 New Abr. 484. 8 Mod. 283. Fry and Corne.

An action lies for ſaying to J. N. Thou haſt killed a man; for although no particular man is named, it is a great ſlander. 1 Roll. Abr. 77.

So it does for ſaying You have killed a ſervant of J. S. or You have ſtole the horſe of J. S. although it is not ſhewn that J. S. had a ſervant or a horſe; for till the contrary is ſhewn, this ſhall be intended. Cro. Jac. 423.

It was heretofore held, that no action would lie for words importing a charge of murder, without an averment that the perſon ſaid to be killed was dead; but the later and better opinion is, that the party ſhall be intended to be dead, unleſs the contrary appears in the pleadings. 1 Vent. 117. Cro. Jac. 489. Sid. 53. Cro. Eliz. 569, 823.

The words, There is a great neſt of thieves at P. and John Burgis is the maintainer of them, and he is a ſtrong thief himſelf, are actionable; and the plaintiff had judgment, tho' the word ſtrong was not found. Dyer 75.

Caſe, &c. for calling the plaintiff murderer and thief; the defendant juſtified the word murderer, for that the plaintiff plaintiff was indicted for a murder at C. and the word thief, for that a robbery was done, &c. and the common fame was, it was by the plaintiff; adjudged, that the juſtification is not good. Dyer 236.

The words Mr. Halley (innuendo the plaintiff) is infected of the robbery and murder lately committed, and doth ſmell of it, are actionable, by reaſon of the word infected. Dyer 317.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, I will abide by it, that Chriſtopher Ruſſel was and is a falſe thief, and was at my door in the ſeſſions-day at night, between one and two of the clock after midnight, and would have robbed me, and did break open my door, and put me in jeopardy of my life; adjudged actionable. Dyer 26.

For ſaying that the plaintiff hired a man to kill the defendant, actionable. Cro. Eliz. 214.

The words My Lord Preſident ſhewed Mr. Stapleton's hand ſet to a book, wherein he conſented to the late rebel in the North; but by the means of Mr. Fairfax, my Lord was perſuaded, and the matter ſuppreſſed; actionable. Cro. Eliz. 25.

The words were, Parlor was in goal for ſtealing Mr. Piggot's beaſt; objected, that this was only an implication, that he did ſteal him; but adjudged actionable, for 'tis an expreſs affirmation of ſtealing. Goldſ. 130.

I was robbed, and you were privy to it, and had part of the money; actionable. Goldſ. 138.

You, &c. ſtole three pounds of tobacco out of my maſter's ſhop, actionable; but to ſay, he ſtole tobacco in his maſter's ſhop, not actionable, without averring, that there was tobacco there. Winch. 6

I doubt not to prove, he (innuendo Sir Robert Hitcham, who was then the King's ſerjeant) had ſpoken treaſon; objected in arreſt of judgment, that this was no direct affirmation; but adjudged, that it was more than an affirmation, for he ſaid, he doubted not but to prove it Hutt. 79.

Thou haſt taken out of my pocket 40l. of my money, and I will cauſe thee to be indicted at the ſeſſions of the peace, and to hold up thy hand at the bar for it, and that ex ulteriori malitia, at another day and place, he ſaid, he hath picked out of my pocket ſilver and gold; actionable, tho' ſpoke at ſeveral times. 2 Bulſt. 227.

Thou art a rogue and a raſcal, and haſt killed thy late wife, actionable; for the words ſhall be intended according to the uſual way of ſpeaking, and that he killed her wilfully. Cro. Car. 352.

The words, Mr. Long was robbed of 40l. and of plate, and Long and King have it; actionable. 1 Bulſt. 147.

The words, He hath harboured and received his ſon into his houſe, having notice before that he was a ſeminary prieſt, actionable; for it is felony by the ſtat. 27 El. cap. 2. 1 Bulſt. 181.

The words, Thou art a thief, and haſt ſtolen my corn, actionable; for it ſhall not be intended ſtanding corn, but reaped. 2 Cro. 39. Here the words are taken in the worſt ſenſe. Thou art a thief and haſt ſtolen my corn, and never made ſatisfaction; actionable. 2 Roll. Rep. 380.

Thou art a ſheep thief, ſpoken in Weſtmorland, where thoſe import a ſheep ſtealer; actionable. 2 Bulſt. 145.

Thou haſt robbed the church, and haſt ſtolen lead off the church, meaning the church of A. actionable, 2 Cro. 153.

Thou haſt been in goal for ſtealing a pan; actionable. 2 Cro. 154.

Thou haſt ſtolen my wood, actionable; for it ſhall be intended wood cut down. 2 Cro. 166.

The defendant ſaid, that one R. B. did ſay, that Mr. Lewis (being a juſtice of peace) did ſay, that there was no Prince in England; actionable; becauſe averred to be ſpoken maliciouſly, tho' on a hearſay. 3 Bulſt. 225.

Thou art a ſheep-ſtealer, or Thou art a horſe-ſtealer, tho' general words, yet actionable. 3 Bulſt. 303.

Mr. Berisford hath ſpoken treaſon, and I will prove it; actionable. 2 Cro. 275.

Tooſe his wife killed her huſband; actionable; for the words ſhall be taken in the worſt ſenſe. 2 Cro. 306.

Thou haſt committed treaſon beyond ſea, and run away from thy captain, actionable; for it ſhall be intended he committed treaſon againſt this ſtate. 2 Cro. 424.

Caſe, &c. for that the plaintiff's huſband died by the viſitation of God, and the defendant ſaid, Thou haſt poiſoned thy huſband; actionable. 2 Cro. 438.

Thou waſt in Lancaſter goal for coining, and were burnt in the hand for it; actionable. 2 Cro. 536.

Thou art a thief and haſt ſtolen my gold; actionable, without ſhewing when the words were ſpoken. 2 Cro. 622.

Caſe, &c. for that Sir William Ailoffe was robbed by perſons unknown; the defendant, to ſcandalize the plaintiff, being ſervant to Sir William, ſaid, Thou art a maintainer of thieves to ſteal my maſter's goods; actionable; for the words ſhall be taken in the worſt ſenſe. 2 Cro. 629.

She, meaning the plaintiff, is a thief to you and me, and hath ſtolen 20l. from me and 40l. from you; the defendant juſtified, that the plaintiff was a thief, and had ſtolen two hens from the defendant felonioufly, on ſuch a day and year; and upon demurrer, the juſtification was held ill, becauſe 'tis not a juſtification of all, but of part of the words. 2 Cro. 676.

The plaintiff did load a ſhip of my father's with barley, and did ſteal and cozen ſeven quarters thereof in meaſure; actionable, tho' the word cozen is joined with the word ſteal. Winch 45, 102.

The defendant ſaid, I will hang him, for he hath ſpoke words which are treaſon; tho' he did not ſet forth what the words were, 'tis actionable. Yelv. 107.

The defendant ſaid, that the plaintiff is a felon, and he (meaning the plaintiff) knew of the murder of B. G. and did conceal it; adjudged, that the ſubſequent words did enlarge the ſlander; for tho' to conceal felony doth not make a man a felon, yet it ſhews malice in the defendant to affirm, that the plaintiff did conceal a murder. Yelv. 154.

Caſe, for theſe words, viz. the plaintiff is a felon; a ſtranger who heard theſe words replied, Take heed what you ſay; the defendant anſwered, why, is he not a felon, who knew of a murder and concealed it? he (innuendo the plaintiff) knew of the murder of W. C. and did not reveal it till long after it was openly known; adjudged, that the words are actionable; for tho' to conceal a felony doth not make the plaintiff a felon, being an offence only fineable, yet the ſubſequent words ſhew the malice of the ſpeaker, and are a great ſlander of the plaintiff. Yelv. 154.

Caſe, &c. W. R. is a rebellious and traiterous knave; adjudged, that the word rebellious is not actionable, but being coupled with the word traiterous, the action lies. Cro. Eliz. 171.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thy father is a thief, and hath ſtolen more goods than I am worth; now, tho' the plaintiff did not aver that he was worth ſo much in goods, yet adjudged actionable without ſuch an averment; but if the words had been, for he hath ſtolen my goods, then the plaintiff muſt aver, that he had ſuch goods, &c. 2 Bulſt. 140.

Huſband and wife brought an action on the caſe againſt huſband and wife, for that the wife of the defendant ſaid, that the plaintiff's wife had procured one to murder W. R. actionable, tho' the murder did not follow. Moor 182.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, He hath laid wait to rob and was one of them who would have robbed me; actionable. Moor 409.

Caſe, &c. when wilt thou bring home my huſband's ſheep which thou haſt ſtolen; actionable. Moor 418.

At a trial in an action on the caſe for ſlanderous words, the defendant, by his counſel, in mitigation of damages, and to diſcredit the plaintiff, offered evidence, that one Medman had ſtolen ſheep, and that by agreement between the plaintiff and the ſaid Medman, the plaintiff did take a leaſe of a cloſe, &c. of Medman, to conceal him from the ſaid felony; the defendant then ſaid, that he would affirm all to be true that his counſel had ſaid; for which words the action was brought, and after a verdict for the plaintiff, he had judgment; for tho' the words, if true, are not an accuſation of the plaintiff as acceſſary to the felony, which is only fineable; yet 'tis a great ſlander to ſay a man choaks felony. Moor 428.

The defendant ſpoke falſly and maliciouſly of the plaintiff, that he was arraigned at W. for ſtealing twelve hogs, and if he had not made good friends, it had gone hard with him, with an averment, that he never was arraigned or queſtioned; the words actionable. Cro. Car. 628.

The words, He had four children by his ſervant Agnes, and hath killed them all, or cauſed them to be killed; actionable; the plaintiff averring, that he is not guilty or incontinent. Poph. 187.

B. G. is a baſe gentleman, and had four or five children by R. his maid, and hath either killed them or procured them to be killed; the firſt words are not actionable, but being joined with the laſt, ſhall be taken in the worſt ſenſe, and the word killing ſhall be taken unlawful killing. Latch. 159.

Caſe for theſe words, John Lewkner, &c. knowing that W. R. a goldſmith, carried with him a great deal of plate, did lie in wait to rob him, and ſet upon him in the highway, but he raiſing the county, John Lewkner fled away and loſt his horſe, &c. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that there was no felony committed, but only an intention to do it, and therefore the words amounted to no more than to charge the plaintiff with a miſdemeanor; but adjudged, that the action lieth, tho' the defendant did not charge the plaintiff with a felony; for an intention to commit felony comes very near to the act itſelf. Cro. Car. 99, 140.

Caſe, &c. againſt huſband and wife, in which the plaintiff declared againſt them for ſcandalous words ſpoken of him by the wife, viz. Thou and thy father had been hanged for coining of money, if you had had your deſerts, long ſince. Upon Not guilty pleaded, the wife was found guilty; it was objected, that this was not an affirmative charge, but only conditional, viz. if you had your deſerts; but adjudged actionable, for 'tis a condition which amounts to an affirmation. Palm. 68.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, he kept Faukner the jeſuit in his houſe a week together, knowing him to be a jeſuit: It was objected after a verdict for the plaintiff, that the action doth not lie, becauſe it might be before the ſtatute 27 Eliz. and it was not felony before; but adjudged, actionable. Palm. 410.

Caſe, &c. for that the defendant ſaid of the plaintiff, (viz.) ſhe cauſed Mr. Langley's ſervant to ſteal 30*l.* and received it; after a verdict for the plaintiff, the judgment was affirmed on a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, becauſe the plaintiff was charged with procuring a felony to be done, and receiving the things ſtolen. Allen 5.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, You are a rogue, you are a branded rogue, you have held up your hand at the bar, and I will have you hanged. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that branded rogue was not actionable; for it ſhall be intended to be done by virtue of the ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. c. 7. and if ſo, then his puniſhment is paſt, and conſequently the words not actionable, becauſe they cannot be any damage to him; but adjudged actionable, becauſe if a branded rogue wander again, it is felony by that ſtatute, and ſo the words put him in a nearer degree of felony. Allen 35.

Caſe, &c, You are a buggering rogue, go home and bugger another man. The plaintiff had a verdict, but it was moved to arreſt the judgment, becauſe the plaintiff is not charged with any act done; but adjudged actionable, becauſe the words imply an action done. Allen 61.

Action on the caſe, for theſe words ſpoken by the defendant, (viz.) That T. S. (the plaintiff) ſet upon him with violence in the highway, and took his purſe from him, and would have cut him in the middle, had not the plaintiff run away; actionable; though no felony was committed, or the plaintiff put in fear. W. Jones 302.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken to T. S. tell thy landlord, that he is a thief, innuendo the plaintiff; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the action will not lie; becauſe it is not averred, that plaintiff was landlord to T. S. and ſo it was adjudged. W. Jones 376.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, ſpoken at an election for knights of the ſhire; You and your crew brought the late King to his death: upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and 200*l.* damages; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words are not actionable, for they ought to be taken in mitiori ſenſu; not that the plaintiff killed the late King, but, that he attended him to his death; but adjudged, that the words import ſcandal, and that in common acceptation they amount to charge the plaintiff with the king's death. Hard. 203.

Thou haſt killed thy maſter's cook, and it doth not appear that he had a maſter, or that his maſter had a cook; actionable. Poph. 128.

Your ſon ſtole a horſe, and ſold him for 10*l.* actionable. Style 46.

The defendant ſpoke to a conſtable (viz.) there he is, take him, for I charge him with flat felony, without alledging, that the words are ſpoken falſly and maliciouſly; actionable becauſe the words themſelves were ſcandalous, and in ſuch caſe the plaintiff need not aver, they were ſpoken falſly and maliciouſly. Style 59.

The defendant, and another, having a diſcourſe about the defendant's cow, he ſaid, he (meaning the plaintiff) hath ſtolen her, and I charge him with flat felony, by reaſon whereof the plaintiff was impriſoned, &c. the defendant pleaded in bar an award, made, &c. adjudged, that the award went only to ſpeaking the words, and not to the impriſonment, ſo that the plea was entire, and yet did not go to all which was alledged in the declaration, and therefore naught: and tho' the declaration was likewiſe ill, yet, if 'tis good in any part, judgment ſhall be againſt the defendant for that part. Style 247.

Caſe, &c. The knave, the apothecary, that married my ſiſter, hath poiſoned my uncle, and I will have him taken up again to hang him; actionable. Style 245.

Caſe, &c. Thou art a ſcurvey fellow, I am no traitor, but I have ſeen thee in rebellion; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the firſt part of the ſentence imports no ſcandal; and to ſay, he hath been in rebellion, is not actionable, becauſe it might be upon proceſs out of Chancery; but adjudged, that the word rebellion is explained by the precedent words, I am no traitor, which ſhews, that ſuch a rebellion was intended which relates to treaſon. Sid. 381.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, thou art a rogue, and receivedſt ſtolen mutton of Beſs Gamble, and ſhe ſtole it, and thou was partner with her and hadſt part of it; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff was not charged with any crime, but Beſs Gamble; but adjudged, that the plaintiff's words, partner with her, relates to the whole ſentence, and muſt be conſtrued to be partners in theft. Sid. 412.

Caſe for theſe words, Thou haſt ſtolen as much lead out of my maſter's houſe as is as big as a houſe; after a verdict it was objected, that it might be lead fixed to the freehold, which is true, if the words had been, off my maſter's houſe; but it was, out of my maſter's houſe; the plaintiff had judgment. 1 Lev. 156.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou art a clipper and ſhall be hanged for it; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was inſiſted in arreſt of judgment, that it might be intended a clipper of cloth; but adjudged actionable, for it muſt be a clipper of ſuch things for which he ought to be hanged, and that is clipper of money; ſo where the words were, thou art a clipper and thy neck ſhall pay for it, adjudged actionable. 3 Lev. 166.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, I have an honeſt man in Langattock, who will prove that Williams (the plaintiff) ſaid he had killed a man in Ireland and buried him in the ſands, and the plaintiff averred he did not ſay ſo; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was inſiſted againſt him, that the declaration was ill, becauſe he did not aver, that he did not kill a man in Ireland, and that there was not a man in Langattock who could prove, that he (the plaintiff) ſaid ſo; but adjudged, that if the words had been laid as ſpoken from the report of another, then it muſt be averred, that the other did not ſo report; but here the defendant undertakes to prove it himſelf, by a man he had in Langattock. 3 Lev. 171.

Caſe,

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Nuttall, that was Solomon Smith's clerk, is a knave and a rogue, and I will prove it, and he is in Newgate, and is to be hanged for counterfeiting the King's hand and ſeal; actionable. Raym. 17.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words; Thou haſt ſtolen our bees, (innuendo a ſtock of bees) and thou art a thief; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict: It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that felony cannot be committed of bees, becauſe they are feræ naturæ; but adjudged, that the ſubſequent words, thou art a thief, do import, that the ſtealing was of ſuch bees, of which a felony may be committed, and ſo actionable. Raym. 33.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, viz. He is a clipper and a coiner; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict: It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words did not charge the plaintiff with clipping or coining money; for they may be applied to many other things; but adjudged actionable; for it muſt ſtrongly be intended, that the defendant meant money, and in that caſe they are uſually underſtood. 1 Vent. 172.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff ſet forth, that there was a diſcourſe between T. S. and the defendant, concerning the plaintiff and a baſtard child, ſuppoſed to be born of her (the plaintiff) ſince the death of her huſband, and that T. S. ſaid to the defendant, I hope ſhe did not murder her child; the defendant replied, but ſhe did, and blood requires blood (innuendo, ſhe had murdered her baſtard); upon Not guilty pleaded, the jury found the defendant guilty of ſpeaking theſe words, blood requires blood, modo et forma, as the plaintiff had declared; but as to the other words, Not guilty; and upon a writ of error brought it was inſiſted, that the jury having not found the words ſpoken by T. S. the words which they had found were inſenſible, without relating to the precedent words ſpoken by him; which, per curiam, is very true, and therefore the judgment was reverſed; but if thoſe words had been found, they are actionable. T. Jones 211.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, He is a clipper, (innuendo the coin of the realm) and his neck ſhall pay for it; actionable; for tho' the word clipper is not actionable, yet the ſubſequent words ſhew that it muſt be a clipper of money, becauſe they are, that his neck ſhall pay for it, which is a common expreſſion for hanging. T. Jones 235.

Caſe for theſe words, You are a raſcal, you have forgot ſince you lived in Black Bull-Yard, there you could procure broad money for gold, and clip it when you had done, and then the ſheers could go; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was inſiſted for the defendant in arreſt of judgment, that the words are not actionable; for they are not an imputation of any act done, but only of a power of doing it; but adjudged, that where the matter is confined to a particular place, as in this caſe, to the Black Bull-Yard, it muſt be intended that ſome act was done in that place, becauſe a power to do a thing is the ſame in all places, like the caſe of Horne v. Powell, Trin. 12 W. 3. C. B. where the words were, You may well ſpend money at law, for you can coin money out of farthings and half-pence, actionable; for the words import an act done, becauſe by a bare power to coin, he could not be ſupplied with money to ſpend at law. 2 Salk. 697.

Thou haſt killed my wife and art a traitor, when it appeared by the declaration that the wife was living, and for that cauſe not actionable. 4 Rep. 16.

He is a brabler and quarreller; for he gave his champion a deed of his goods to kill me, and then to fly out of the country; adjudged, that a purpoſe without an act done is not actionable. 4 Rep. 16.

Mr. Barham did burn my barn (innuendo a barn with corn) with his own hands, and none but he; not actionable; for 'tis not felony to burn a barn if 'tis not parcel of the dwelling-houſe, and the innuendo will not help, where the words are not ſcandalous. 4 Rep. 20.

Thou haſt ſtolen half an acre of corn, innuendo corn ſevered, not actionable; for the innuendo cannot alter the precedent words, and half an acre of corn can never be intended to be corn ſevered. Owen 57.

Thou haſt ſtolen a mare, or conſentedſt to the ſtealing her, not actionable; for the words are in the disjunctive; and a man may conſent when he doth not contradict it. Cro. Eliz. 780.

He hath poiſoned W. R. (innuendo quendam W. R. adtunc defunct'), and did not aver that he was dead at the time of the ſpeaking the words; adjudged, for that reaſon the action doth not lie. 2 Cro. 343.

Thou mayeſt well be richer than I, for thou haſt coined 30*l. in one day, and thou art a coiner of money*; not actionable, for he might coin by authority in the mint; here the words were taken in the mildeſt ſenſe. Godb. 167.

Thou art as errant a thief as any in England, for thou haſt broken up R. B's cheſt and taken away 40*l.* not actionable, for the firſt words are not ſo without an averment, that there is a thief in England, and they do not prove that any felony was done; and as for breaking open the cheſt, it might be upon pretence of title. 2 Cro. 687.

The plaintiff declared, that whereas ſeveral malefactors unknown had feloniouſly ſhorn the ſheep of R. B. and there being a colloquium between the defendant and another concerning the ſhearing the ſaid ſheep, but did not ſay feloniouſly, the defendant ſaid it was the plaintiff and M. who did ſhear them, innuendo felonice; adjudged, that the colloquium being laid only of the ſhearing, and not concerning the felony, and the defendant having not ſaid, that the plaintiff did ſhear the ſheep feloniouſly, but only that he did ſhear them, generally, the ſcandal muſt grow out of an innuendo, and ſo the words not actionable. 3 Bulſt. 85.

You might have known your own ſheep, and not have ſtolen mine; the court divided in opinion, two judges, that the words were not actionable, being no direct charge, but only by implication; two other judges, that they were actionable; for it is a ſtrong implication, and neceſſary conſequence of a charge, that the plaintiff had ſtolen the ſheep. Yelv. 144.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, (viz.) Bear witneſs miſtreſs, that he hath ſtolen my haircloth; not actionable, for it is not a direct affirmation to charge the plaintiff with a theft, but reſts only upon teſtimony and proof. Yelv. 126.

The words were as follow, (viz.) it would be proved by many vehement preſumptions, that W. R. the plaintiff, was an inventor and plotter of the death of M. M. becauſe he would not ſell him his land; adjudged not actionable, becauſe he doth not affirm any thing of the plaintiff, but refers all to preſumptions, which are uncertain, and ſlanderous words muſt be in the affirmative. Yelv. 153.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, he is in Warwick goal for ſtealing a mare, not actionable, becauſe no poſitive affirmation, that he did ſteal the mare. Hob. 177.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, thou haſt ſtolen me (innuendo the defendant) a hundred of ſlate; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was inſiſted for him, that this is the uſual phraſe of the country, thou haſt ſtolen me (i. e.) thou haſt ſtolen from me; ſed per Coke C. J. then the plaintiff ſhould have averred, that this was the uſual phraſe, &c. which he had not done, therefore it being inſenſible, the action will not lie. 1 Roll. Rep. 286.

Caſe, for theſe words, Margaret Whitacre is a thief and ſtole my wood, and I will put her in Bridewell; two judges only in court, and they were divided upon a motion in arreſt of judgment after a verdict for the plaintiff; for one held the words not actionable; it is true, the firſt part of the words are actionable, but they are qualified by the words which follow, viz. and I will have her put in Bridewell, becauſe by the ſtatute 43 Eliz. c. 7. Perſons who ſteal wood growing are to be whipped, and Bridewell is known to be the proper place for whipping; ſo that this is an accuſation for an offence which is not felony, but only puniſhable by whipping: But Rolls held the words actionable, viz. ſhe is a thief, and the words which follow being joined with the copulative and make them accumulative; it might have been otherwiſe if they had been, for ſhe ſtole my wood, becauſe then they would have been explanatory. Allen 10.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, thy huſband was the death of John Parrott, and had it not been for thee and thy huſband, he had been alive unto this day: After a verdict for the plaintiff, adjudged not actionable, for he might be the occaſion, but not the cauſe of his death. 2 Sid. 71.

Caſe,

Caſe, &c. for that the defendant carrying one Woodford to goal for felony, when he came thither, ſaid of the plaintiff maliciouſly and falſly, that he met one on the road, who told him; What are you carrying Woodford to goal, I ſhall follow you ſhortly, and bring with me Heneage Crawford for ſtealing a mare, for which words Crawford brought this action; and after a verdict it was held, that the words were actionable, though no direct affirmation that Crawford did ſteal the mare; but in the principal caſe judgment was given againſt the plaintiff, becauſe he did not aver in his declaration, that the defendant did not meet any body on the road who told him thoſe words; for that had been traverſable. 1 Lev. 82.

2. Where action lies for words which import the charge of other crimes; and where not.

The defendant being a juſtice of peace, directed his warrant to the conſtables, in which it was alledged, that the plaintiff was accuſed before him, for ſtealing a horſe, whereas he was never accuſed, nor ſtole any horſe; actionable, if the party was apprehended on the warrant. 1 Leon. 187.

Thou haſt cozened Mr. Windſor of his fee, and I will ſue thee for it in the ſtar-chamber; actionable. 1 Leon. 187.

The defendant Ford wrote a letter, in which were theſe words, it is reported that the lord Lumley ſeeketh my life, and the truth was, it was not ſo reported; actionable. 1 Leon. 187.

Thou didſt keep and ſell by falſe weights, and in beſtowing 24s. thy weights were falſe two ounces, and thy man will be a witneſs againſt thee; actionable. Brownl. 5.

The defendant ſaid, that the plaintiff maintained, victualled, and let go pirates, contrary to the law, &c. actionable; for though piracy is triable by the Civil law, yet by the ſtatute 35 H. 8. our law takes notice of it. Cro. Eliz. Morgan v. Kitt.

If you had your deſerts you had been hanged before now; actionable, for it ſhall be intended he committed an offence for which death was to be the puniſhment. Cro. Eliz. 62.

The defendant ſaid, that the plaintiff was a perjured perſon, and that he was forſworn in the court of Requeſts, and that he ſhall be ſet upon the pillory; actionable. Cro. Eliz. 135.

Thou haſt taken a falſe oath in the conſiſtory court of Exeter; now, tho' perjury in the Spiritual court is not within the ſtatute 5 Eliz. of perjury, yet the words were adjudged actionable. Cro. Eliz. 185.

He is a ſuborner of perjury; actionable, becauſe one cannot be ſuborner of perjury, but it muſt be neceſſarily intended, that he did ſuborn ſome perſon to forſwear himſelf. Cro. Eliz. 308.

One told me, he heard ſay, that Mrs. Meggs had poiſoned her huſband, ubi revera nullus dixit, &c. actionable; for it may occaſion her being indicted for petty treaſon. Cro. Eliz. 400.

Thou art a perjured knave, for thou didſt ſwear this day at the leet, that I baked bread in my houſe, when I did not; actionable, for tho' perjury cannot be in a leet, of which the law takes notice, ſo as to puniſh it by the ſtatute or otherwiſe, yet 'tis a diſcredit. Cro. Eliz. 709.

Thou art a healer of felons; actionable; for it ſhall be intended a concealer of felons. Hob. More's caſe.

The Devil appears to thee every evening in the likeneſs of a black man riding upon a black horſe, and thou conferreſt with him, and whatſoever thou doſt aſk, he doth give it thee, and this is the reaſon thou haſt ſo much money, and this I will juſtify; actionable. Hob. 129.

He hath caught the French pox, and hath carried it home to his wife; actionable. Hob. 219.

The plaintiff being heir to his father, and to his younger brother, the defendant ſpoke theſe words, thou art a baſtard, by reaſon whereof they gave away their lands; actionable. Godb. 415.

He is not worthy to bear office in ſuch a place, for he keeps a bawdy-houſe in London; actionable. 1 Bulſt. 138.

The defendant being arreſted by a warrant upon a latitat, ſaid, that it was a counterfeit warrant made by Mr. Stone; actionable. 2 Cro. 648.

Thou art a leprous knave, actionable; for 'tis as much as to ſay, thou wert laid of the pox. 2 Cro. 144.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, George Lucas is a falſe knave, and worthy to ſtand in the pillory; the defendant juſtified, for that the plaintiff took a falſe oath in the mayor's court, &c. and this juſtification was held good. Moor. 79.

Thou haſt forged a privy ſeal and commiſſion: it was objected, that he did not ſay what privy ſeal he meant; but it being alledged that the words were ſpoken to ſcandalize him, it ſhall be intended the King's privy ſeal. 1 Cro. 257, 326.

Thou waſt forſworn in a court of record, and that I will prove: Judgment was given in the Common pleas, that the action would not lie; becauſe he did not ſhew in what court of record he was forſworn; but upon error brought, that judgment was reverſed in B. R. and adjudged, that the action did lie; for it ſhall be intended the defendant ſpoke the words maliciouſly, accuſing him of perjury, in taking a falſe oath upon judicial proceedings in a court of record. Cro. Car. 366.

Thou art a whore and a two-penny whore; this was held to be a good cauſe of action in London by the cuſtom; for they puniſh ſuch perſons there, by carting them. Cro. Car. 350.

The plaintiff declared, that he was retained by T. S. as a ſervant in huſbandry, and behaved himſelf honeſtly, &c. and that the defendant to ſlander him, and to bring him in diſcredit with his maſter, ſaid, that he (the plaintiff) was a cozening knave and had cozened his maſter: after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the action would not lie for theſe words; ſed per curiam, the plaintiff had judgment. W. Jones 395.

Words ſpoken of an innkeeper, Colonel Egerton had the French pox, and hath ſet it in the houſe, and Smith and his wife have it; objected, that the word ſet made it inſenſible; but adjudged actionable, and well brought by the huſband alone. Style 112.

Thou wenteſt to the wells to be cured of the pox, actionable. Style 219.

Thou art a baſtard getting rogue, and hadſt a baſtard at Oxford, and art a pocky rogue, &c. actionable. Style 283.

He (meaning the plaintiff) got Mary Nabb with child, and the child is his, and I have tried it with ſieve and ſhears: objected, that the laſt words were inſenſible; but adjudged the firſt words were actionable. Style 379.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou haſt forged a deed to cheat W. R. of his lands; actionable, but 'tis not to ſay that he forged a writing or a warrant, becauſe thoſe are words of uncertain ſignification. Sid. 16.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou art a buggering rogue, and I could hang thee: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment; and adjudged, that the words were actionable; ſo 'tis to ſay, Thou art a thieving rogue; for thoſe words import an act done, but thieviſh rogue, imply only an inclination to ſteal. Sid. 373.

Men cannot have their cattle go upon the common, but Barber and his children will kill them with Barber's dogs; adjudged, upon error brought, not actionable. Dyer 118.

The plaintiff brought an action in London, for calling his wife a whore; 'tis actionable only there by cuſtom; but cuſtom to maintain actions for babling words is againſt law. 4 Rep. 18.

Sir Chriſtopher Hilliard is a blood ſucker, and ſucketh blood; but if a man will give him a bribe, as a ſheep or a couple of capons, he will take it; not actionable, for it cannot be intended what blood he ſucked. Cro. Eliz. 306.

For words ſpoken part in Latin, (viz.) Inimicus meus is an extortioner, not actionable. Cro. Eliz. 496.

Caſe againſt the defendant for ſpeaking theſe words, (viz.) the plaintiff hath ſaid maſs many times to W. R. upon demurrer to the declaration, it was adjudged ill, becauſe he did not ſet forth, where the maſſes were ſaid, nor the day when; for it might be in France, or in ſome other place out of England, and the ſtatute appoints no penalty, unleſs the indictment be within a year and a day. Godb. 106.

Caſe,

Caſe, &c. He is a cuckold, and a wittal, which is worſe than a cuckold, and B. B. hath lain with his wife; not actionable. 2 Cro. 78.

Thou haſt forged writings, for which thou ſhouldſt loſe thy ears; the court divided, two judges of opinion, that tho' the firſt words are not actionable, yet the ſubſequent words make them ſo, and they ſhall be conſtrued by theſe words. Two judges contra: the words are uncertain what manner of writings they were, and they may be frivolous writings, and then he is in no danger of his ears. 3 Bulſt. 265.

Caſe, for calling the plaintiff Idonor, in the Welſh language, with an averment, that it was ſpoken before thoſe who underſtood Welſh, and that it ſignified perjured; actionable. Hob. 191.

Caſe, for calling the plaintiff adulterer; not actionable, becauſe 'tis an offence not puniſhable at Common law, but only in the Spiritual court; but to call a man knave or villain, an action will lie. Moor 29.

Caſe, &c. for calling the plaintiff briber and common extortioner; not actionable, unleſs the plaintiff aver that he is an officer. Moor 182.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Hang him, he is full of the pox, I marvel you will eat and drink with him, innuendo the plaintiff; not actionable, for it may be intended the ſmall pox; beſides, the words were not ſpoken with an intent to defame the plaintiff, but by way of advice to a friend. Moor 573.

Cozening knave, not actionable. Hutt. 13.

Falſe knave, not actionable. Hutt. 14.

Caſe for theſe words, You are a rogue, a baſe rogue, a cozening rogue, a coney-catching rogue, a cut-purſe rogue; adjudged not actionable. Palm. 10.

Caſe for theſe words, Thou haſt the French pox: upon Not guilty pleaded, the jury found, that he ſpoke theſe words, (viz.) Thou haſt had the French pox; adjudged a material variance, and that the declaration was not maintained by this verdict. Allen 30.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou art a knave, and a cheating knave; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was held in arreſt of judgment, that theſe words are not actionable, upon the general inducement, that the plaintiff is verus et fidelis ſubditus, without ſhewing that he is of ſome trade, and ſo had ſome ſpecial damage. Sid. 48.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou art a forſworn fellow, and we will prove thee ſo; not actionable, becauſe in the future tenſe. Sid. 48.

Caſe, &c. by the plaintiff, who is a carrier, for theſe words, Thou haſt forged falſe letters, and haſt given me a falſe and forged acquittance: After a verdict for the plaintiff, adjudged in arreſt of judgment, not actionable. Sid. 155.

Caſe, &c. You are a forger of bonds, a publiſher of forgery, and ſue upon forged bonds: Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury found the defendant Not guilty, as to the firſt words, and adjudged, that the laſt words were not actionable, it not being laid, that he knew of the forgery. 1 Vent. 3.

3. Where action lies for words ſpoken of magiſtrates; and where not.

The plaintiff being a juſtice of peace, the defendant ſaid, Mr. Stukely covereth and hideth felonies, and is not worthy to be a juſtice of peace; actionable, for tho' his office is not named, the words neceſſarily refer to it. 4 Rep. 16.

The plaintiff being a juſtice of peace, and high ſheriff, the defendant ſaid, 'tis well known I am a true ſubject; but thou (innuendo the plaintiff's ſervant) ſerveſt no true ſubject, and thy own conſcience may accuſe thee thereof; actionable. 1 Leon. 335.

The plaintiff was a land-meaſurer, and the defendant having ſome diſcourſe about meaſuring lands, ſaid, Thou art a cozening and ſhifting knave, and a cheating knave; adjudged, that a ſurveyor of land, being an office of ſkill, the words are actionable. Godb. 287.

The defendant ſpoke of a juſtice of peace, viz. I am in danger of my life, my blood is ſought, and I was like to have been murdered; I was at Sir John Harper's houſe, and his ſon John Harper drew me forth to ſee a gelding in the ſtable, and then Tho. Beaumont (Sir Henry Beaumont's ſon) did throw his dagger at me twice, and thruſt me thro' the breeches twice with his rapier, to have killed me; all this was done by the inſtigation of Sir John Harper, and I can prove it; actionable. 2 Cro. 56.

Words ſpoke of a commiſſioner to examine witneſſes in Chancery, viz. Sir George Moor is a corrupt man, and hath taken bribes of King for executing that commiſſion; King hath ſet Sir George Moor on horſeback, with his bribes to pervert juſtice and equity: It was objected, that the plaintiff was only a voluntary commiſſioner, by the aſſent of the parties, and an arbitrator, and not a judge; but adjudged, that tho' not ſworn, yet having the King's commiſſion to execute, 'tis a truſt, and the breach of it is puniſhable. 2 Cro. 65.

The defendant ſpoke of a juſtice of peace, Mr. Kemp is a baſket juſtice, a partial juſtice, I will give 5*l. every year for his gifts in juſtice matters*; not actionable, for one may take a preſent in victuals, without any offence. 2 Cro. 90.

The defendant ſpoke of a juſtice of peace, You are a ſweet juſtice, you ſent your warrant for R. B. to be brought before you for ſuſpicion of felony, and afterwards ſent to R. B. to him to give him warning thereof, that he might abſent himſelf; actionable. 2 Cro. 413.

The defendant ſpoke of a juſtice of peace, He (innuendo the plaintiff) for malice and ſpleen, did many times wreſt the law, and pervert juſtice to ſerve his own turn: It was objected, that the words might be ſpoken before the plaintiff was a juſtice; but adjudged, they ſhall be taken in the worſt ſenſe. 2 Cro. 240.

Caſe, &c. againſt the biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, for writing a letter to the Earl of Leiceſter, that the plaintiff who was a juſtice of peace, was a vermin in the commonwealth, a falſe and corrupt man, an hypocrite in the church of God, a diſſembler; he hath uſed many corrupt practices to work his will, he procured my regiſter to be indicted for extortion; he willingly and wittingly hath boulſtered out one Greenwood, a lewd man, convicted of many offences, and knowing him to be an evil man, maintaineth him againſt me, without law, conſcience, or honeſty: Upon not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and 300*l.* damages; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that theſe words, written in a letter are not actionable, but that there muſt be ſome overt-act to make them a ſcandal; but adjudged, that if the letter had been written to the plaintiff, it might be ſo, but being written to another, 'tis actionable. Moor 141

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, My brother hath ſtole a black mare, and you (the plaintiff) were privy to it, &c. now, tho' privity doth not make a man acceſſary to the felony, yet the words being ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, are actionable. Moor 401.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, viz. He hath received money of a thief, (that was apprehended and brought before him for ſtealing of ſheep) to let him eſcape, and to keep him from the goal: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and 40*l.* damages, and upon a writ of error in the Exchequer chamber, the judgment was affirmed. Moor 695.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, one W. W. being taken as acceſſary to the ſtealing his own goods, Mr. Stafford knowing thereof, diſcharged him by an agreement of 3*l. to which Mr.* Stafford was party, whereof 30*s was paid to him, and the reſt was paid to his man by appointment*; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and judgment, which was affirmed in the Exchequer-Chamber. Moor 704.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken to a juryman, Thou art a juryman, and haſt been the overthrow of a hundred men by thy ſubtile and falſe means; actionable, with an averment that he had been a juryman in juries upon life and death. Moor 876.

Of a juſtice of peace, (viz.) he had two ſervants preſented five or ſix years ſince for ſtealing ſheep, and he deſired me not to proſecute them; actionable, with an averment that he was a juſtice of peace for the county where the words were ſpoken. Latch. 40.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was a juſtice of the peace and deputy lieutenant of Suſſex, &c. and had been often employed in commiſſions, and that a commiſſion out of Chancery was directed to him and others, to examine witneſſes in a cauſe then depending between the now defendant Large and T. S. and that he took the depoſitions of witneſſes, &c. and that the defendant ſaid Sir William Parker hath put out depoſitions that were taken, and hath inſerted others which were not taken; adjudged actionable. Palm. 67.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that there was a diſcourſe between the defendant and one Horewood of him (the plaintiff) who was receiver of the court of Wards, and that the defendant ſpoke theſe words of the plaintiff, (viz.) Mr. Deceiver hath deceived the King, and dealt falſly with him, and I have him in queſtion, and I doubt not but to prove it; after verdict for the plaintiff, and 400 marks damages, it was objected, that here was not a ſufficient deſcription of the perſon; beſides, he is not charged with any miſbehaviour in his office; but adjudged actionable, for the words deceiver cannot be intended of any other deceit than in his office. Palm. 69.

The plaintiff being a juſtice of peace, the defendant ſpoke theſe words, Mr. Hamond did put in of his own head theſe words taken in examination by him, (viz.) R. B. did ſteal twenty ſheep of ſuch a man's, and Mr. Hamond is a debauched man, and not fit for a juſtice; the firſt words are actionable, but the laſt the court took time to conſider. Style 22, 210.

The defendant ſpoke of an officer, (viz.) You have cozened the ſtate of 20000*l.* and I will prove it, for you have received 25000*l.* of the office, and not compounded for it, and have foiſted in words in the order of your commiſſion; actionable. Style 436.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace and deputy lieutenant of the county of Warwick, (viz.) I have heard that a maid of Sir John Knightly's ſhould report, that he being ſick, and ſhe looking thro' a hole of the door where he then lay, ſaw a prieſt (innuendo a popiſh prieſt) give the euchariſt and extreme unction to Sir John Knightly; and that the defendant, of his farther malice, &c. at another day ſaid, I have heard that a maid ſervant, who then lived with Sir John Knightly, peeped thro' a cranny of a door where Sir John lay ſick, and ſaw a popiſh prieſt anoint him, (extreme unction innuendo) and give him the ſacrament of the euchariſt; after a verdict for the plaintiff, and 1000*l.* damages, it was objected, that theſe words did not amount to calling him papiſt, for by the firſt words it doth not appear of what religion the prieſt was, unleſs by an innuendo, and in the latter words the extreme unction is brought in by an innuendo, which is not ſufficient; but adjudged, that one part of the words explain the ſcandal of the other, for a prieſt who gave the euchariſt and extreme unction muſt be a popiſh prieſt, and he to whom 'tis given, muſt be a papiſt, and the word anoint cannot be intended of any thing elſe but extreme unction, which is never done, nor the eucharift given but to thoſe who are papiſts. 3 Lev. 68.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was a true profeſſor of the proteſtant religion, &c. and had been a member of the long parliament, of both which, the defendant diſcourſing, ſaid to T. W. the plaintiff's ſervant, Your maſter is a papiſt, when he is at home he goes to church, and when at London he goes to maſs, &c. upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words are not actionable; for to call a man papiſt is not actionable, unleſs ſpoken of a biſhop. 1 Leon. 336. and Cro. Car. 192. Savage ver. Cook; 'tis true, if ſpoken of a man in ſome eminent office, 'tis otherwiſe, and that was Sir John Knightly's caſe, who was a juſtice of peace and deputy lieutenant; ſo in Peak and Tucker's caſe, where the plaintiff was a merchant, and the defendant ſaid of him, He is a rogue, a papiſt dog, never a rogue in town would have a bone-fire but he; this was on the day when King James came to the crown; adjudged in the principal caſe, that the words were actionable, becauſe he who goes to maſs forfeits 100*l.* by the ſtatute 23 Eliz. cap. 4. and is to be impriſoned for a year, therefore to ſay the plaintiff goes to maſs is actionable, for it expoſes him to corporal puniſhment. See Allen's Rep. 11.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, He is a forſworn juſtice, and not fit to be a juſtice of peace; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was inſiſted, that the words were not actionable, becauſe forſworn doth not intend judicial perjury, and there was no diſcourſe of his office; but adjudged actionable, becauſe the words forſworn juſtice ſhew that the defendant intended perjury relating to his office; for ſermo refert ad conditionem perſonæ. 1 Vent. 50.

Slander, &c. brought by a doctor of Civil law, who was alſo a juſtice of peace and chancellor of the biſhoprick of Norwich, for theſe words, He is not fit to be a chancellor or a juſtice of peace, he is a knave, a raſcal, and a villain, he is not fit to practiſe, he ought to have his gown pulled over his ears; actionable, the plaintiff had a verdict, and 40*l.* damages. 2 Lutw. 1288.

Slander, &c. In which the plaintiff ſet forth, that he was formerly choſen knight of the ſhire for the county of Glouceſter, and intending to ſtand candidate at the next election, there being a writ iſſued out to chooſe two knights, &c. the defendant, before the election, ſaid, Jack How is an enemy to the King and kingdom, and in the French intereſt; actionable; the plaintiff had a verdict and great damages, and upon a writ of error in parliament, the judgment was affirmed. 2 Lutw. 1293.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was a deputy lieutenant for the county of Middleſex, and a privy counſellor in Ireland, and that he ſtood choſen burgeſs for parliament at Chriſt Church, &c. and that the defendant ſpoke theſe words of him, (viz.) He is a papiſt; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and judgment, and afterwards a writ of error was brought, and the judgment affirmed, becauſe by the ſtatutes 23 Eliz. and the 3 Jac. and 25 Car. 2. papiſts are expoſed to ſeveral penalties and incapacities; à fortiori, as the words ſpoken do relate to a perſon thus qualified; 'tis true, the word papiſt was not actionable formerly, but times alter the ſenſe of words, and this word is now a word of reproach; ſo the word knave formerly ſignified ſervant, but now 'tis actionable to call an attorney knave; and to ſhew that the law doth alter with the times, there is no precedent before 21 Ed. 3. 23. of an infant bringing an appeal; but ſince that time, and now, 'tis very frequent. Raym. 482.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, He makes uſe of the King's commiſſion to worry me out of my eſtate, and afterwards the words were laid in Latin (without an Anglicè ad tenorem & effectum ſequen'); after a verdict for the plaintiff, and intire damages, the judgment was ſtayed; for tho' per curiam, the words are actionable, yet being laid ad tenorem & effectum ſequen', ſomething may be omitted which may alter the ſenſe, and 'tis not an expreſs allegation, that the defendant did ſpeak the words. 3 Mod. 71.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, ſet forth, that there was a rebellion in the Weſt by the Duke of Monmouth, that ſearch was made for the defendant, being ſuſpected to be in that rebellion; thereupon the defendant ſaid, John Prowſe is a knave, and a buſy knave for ſearching after me, and other honeſt men of my ſort, and I will make him give me ſatisfaction for plundering me; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was objected, that here was no colloquium laid of his office, or that the words were ſpoken relating to his office, therefore an action would not lie, tho' an information might; the court was divided. 3 Mod. 163.

The plaintiff being a juſtice of peace, the defendant ſaid, Sir William Berton's men have ſtolen ſheep, and he ſpoke to me that I ſhould not proſecute them; not actionable, becauſe not averred, that Sir William is a juſtice of peace. Poph. 180.

Of a juſtice of peace, Thou haſt forged a recognizance taken of one Fiſher, and others; actionable, for the word (forged) ſhall be intended (counterfeited), and the word (taken) ſhall be intended (acknowledged.) Cro. Eliz. 865.

The plaintiff was bailiff to R. B. for three years, and had the ſelling of all his corn; and the defendant ſaid,

Thou

Thou art a cozening knave, and thou haſt cozened me in ſelling falſe meaſure in my barley, and the country is bound to curſe thee for ſelling with falſe meaſure, and I will prove it, and thou haſt changed my barley which I bought of thee; not actionable, becauſe it doth appear that the words were ſpoken of the ſale of corn whilſt he was bailiff. Hob. 6.

The plaintiff being a knight, and one of the gentlemen of the King's privy chamber, the defendant ſaid, Sir William Bronker is a cozening knave and lives by cozenage; not actionable. 2 Cro. 427.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, upon a colloquium between the defendant and another, concerning the patronage to the church of C. that he was right patron thereof, whereupon the defendant ſaid, That Jaſborough (the plaintiff) was the true patron, but that he had loſt the patronage by being a ſchiſmatick and recuſant, both which he would prove on him; not actionable, without alledging temporal damages. 2 Roll. Rep. 43.

Of an attorney and town clerk of Southampton, who kept the court-roll, Thou haſt made many falſe certificates to the mayor and burgeſſes, and the more thou ſtirreſt in it the more it will ſtink; not actionable, becauſe the plaintiff did not alledge that there was a colloquium of his office, nor that the making certificates did belong to his office, or that he knew them to be falſe. Hutt. 123.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, The mayor of Tiverton hath cozened the town and country; adjudged, that the words are not actionable. W. Jones 308.

Caſe, &c. for words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace to his ſervant, viz. Your maſter's witneſſes (in ſuch a cauſe) were perjured, and your maſter is the maintainer and upholder of them; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was objected that the words were not actionable, for they did not relate to the plaintiff's office; beſides, 'tis not ſaid that he upheld their perjury, but that he upheld and maintained their perſons; but the chief baron Hale held the words actionable; for if true, they were a ſcandal to his office, and the word upholding can have no other meaning than abetting them in their perjury. Hard. 501.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, You would be a juſtice of peace, like Major Bell, (innuendo the plaintiff) a fool, an aſs, a coxcomb, a buffleheaded juſtice; not actionable, adjudged in arreſt of judgment, unleſs the plaintiff had a particular loſs. Sid. 67.

4. Where action lies for words ſpoken of men of profeſſions; and where not.

The defendant ſpoke of a clerk of the King's Bench, you are known to be a corrupt man, and to deal corruptly; actionable, for the words imply, that he dealt corruptly in his profeſſion. 4 Rep. Birchley's caſe.

The defendant ſpoke of a ſteward of a court and a barriſter, I marvel you will have ſuch a paultry lawyer for your ſteward, for he hath as much law as a jackanapes, by reaſon whereof he loſt his ſtewardſhip; actionable. Owen 13.

Is Martin your attorney? he is the fooliſheſt and ſimpleſt attorney towards the law, and if he do not overthrow your cauſe I will give you my ears; he is a fool and an aſs, and ſo I will prove him; actionable. Goldſ. 128.

Of an attorney, He will overthrow his client's cauſe; actionable. Cro. Eliz. 594.

Caſe for words ſpoken of an attorney, John Jenkinſon (the plaintiff) deſerveth to have his ears nailed to the pillory; actionable. Moor. 401.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken of a barriſter at law and reader, (viz.) one told the defendant, that the plaintiff Hele affirmed upon his credit, that the fee ſimple of ſuch lands was in the grantees of the King; whereupon Giddy the defendant replied, No, friends, Hele's warrants we know well, a great number in this country truſting to his warrants have been undone; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and 100*l.* damages; and upon a writ of error brought in the Exchequer-Chamber, the judgment was affirmed, for the words are actionable. Moor. 695.

Brown is a good attorney, but he will play on both ſides; actionable, but no judgment entered, becauſe the plaintiff did not aver the words were ſpoken of himſelf. Brownl. 5.

The defendant ſpoke of an attorney, Thou art a common maintainer of ſuits and champertor, and I will have thee thrown over the bar; actionable, by reaſon of the word champertor. Hob. 117.

Of a barriſter, viz. A fool, an aſs, an hangman, a counſellor at law, a fool in the profeſſion; actionable. Poph. 207.

Of an attorney, Thou art a paultry fellow, thy credit is fallen, for thou dealeſt on both ſides, and doſt deceive many who truſt thee; actionable, tho' an attorney may lawfully deal on both ſides as an arbitrator, yet by taking all the words together, it ſhall be intended they were ſpoken in the worſt ſenſe. Yelv. 32.

The defendant ſpoke theſe words of an attorney to his client, Your attorney is a bribing knave, and hath taken 20*l. of you for a bribe to cozen me*; adjudged actionable. Moor 855.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken of an attorney, Thou art a common maintainer of ſuits, and champertor, I will have thee thrown over the bar next term; actionable. Moor 867.

Caſe, in which the plaintiff declared, that he was ſteward of a court, &c. and alſo a town-clerk of Plymouth, and that the defendant ſpoke theſe words of him, (viz.) He is a preciſian, puritan, diſſembling, bribing, and a corrupted knave; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the words are not actionable, becauſe there was not a colloquium laid of the plaintiff, or of his offices of ſteward and town-clerk; but the plaintiff had judgment. 2 Roll. Rep. 23.

The defendant diſcourſing of Stone the lawyer, ſaid, This is a counterfeit made by Stone; it was a warrant to the ſheriff to arreſt another; actionable. 2 Roll. Rep. 266.

The defendant ſpoke of an attorney, He is a common barretor, a judas, and a promoter; and at another time, He is a common barretor, a cheater, and I will make him be barred of his practice; the words muſt be taken according to the quality and condition of the plaintiff; adjudged actionable. Cro. Car. 139.

Words ſpoken of an attorney, He is a cozener, and cozens his clients in the Sheriffs court of London; the judgment affirmed in error. Cro. Car. 190.

Of an attorney, I marvel you will employ ſuch a knave as Nicholls, you will have but diſgrace and diſcredit in employing him, he is proclaimed knave in a market; the judgment for the plaintiff affirmed in error. Cro. Car. 331.

Of a doctor of phyſick, Thou art a drunken fool, and an aſs, thou never wert a ſcholar, and art not worthy to ſpeak to a ſcholar, and that I will prove and juſtify; actionable. Cro. Car. 196.

Of a barriſter, He is a dunce, and will get little by the law, he was ever accounted but a dunce in the Middle Temple; actionable. Cro. Car. 278.

Of an attorney, He is a very baſe rogue, and a cheating knave, and hath maintained himſelf, his wife and children, by cheating; the judgment for the plaintiff affirmed in error. Cro. Car. 570.

Of a doctor in divinity, Doctor Sibthorp is robbing the church; and at another time, Doctor Sibthorp hath robbed the church; actionable. Cro. Car. 301, 417.

Of a barriſter, (viz.) William Gibbs hath done falſe by me, being his client, and hath joined with my adverſary; the plaintiff averring, that he was a practitioner; actionable. Style 283.

Of an attorney, He hath forged the will of W. R. upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; adjudged actionable. Hutt. 29.

The defendant Harriſon, who was a bachelor in divinity, came to the Common pleas where juſtice Hutton was ſitting, and ſaid, I accuſe juſtice Hutton of high treaſon; for which words an action was brought by the judge, and he had a verdict and 10,000l. damages. Hutt. 131.

Of

Of an attorney, viz. He ſtirreth up men to ſuits, and promiſeth, that if he doth not recover for them he will have no fees, &c. actionable; for the words tend to ſlander the plaintiff in his profeſſion, by ſtirring up ſuits unlawfully. Style 184.

Of an attorney, (there being a colloquium of him laid) the defendant ſpoke theſe words, Go tell the lawyer, that he is a baſe raſcal, and that I will have him loſe his ears, and teach him or any lawyer of them all, how they dare ſerve a writ on me; actionable, by reaſon of the words, I will make him loſe his ears. Latch 220.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was an attorney, &c. and that the defendant ſaid to him, You are a knave, you were attorney to my father, and for my mother againſt my huſband, and made him ſpend 100*l. and ſuch knaves as you have made my huſband ſpend all his eſtate*; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that there was no colloquium laid of the plaintiff's profeſſion, ſo that the word knave could not be applied to his being an attorney; but the better opinion was, that the ſubſequent words ſhew, that the word knave was intended in his profeſſion, and therefore a colloquium of it was not neceſſary. Allen 13.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was inſtituted and inducted into a parſonage in, &c. and that he executed the office of a paſtor in that church for the ſpace of four years, and that the defendant ſaid of him, You are a drunkard, a whore-maſter, a common ſwearer, and a common lawyer, and you have preached falſe doctrine, and deſerve to be degraded; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the words are not actionable, becauſe they import no civil or temporal damage to the plaintiff; but adjudged actionable, for, if true, he may be degraded, and ſo loſe his freehold. Allen 63.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of an attorney, He hath no more law than Mr. C.'s bull: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the words were not actionable in themſelves, and if they were, 'tis not averred, that Mr. C. had a bull; but adjudged actionable without that averment. Sid. 237.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he is an attorney, and that the defendant and J. P. had diſcourſe of the plaintiff and his profeſſion, and that he (the defendant) ſaid of the plaintiff, in the hearing of ſeveral people, Thou canſt not read a declaration, by reaſon whereof J. P. and R. W. who were formerly his clients, deſerted him; upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and judgment. Raym. 196.

Information for writing a ſcandalous letter to Hatton Rich, who owed the defendant 300*l.* and he delaying the payment, and going into the King's bench, the defendant Saunders wrote this letter to him, that if he had any honeſty, civility, ſobriety, or humanity, he would not deal ſo by him, and that he would one day be damned and in hell for cheating him; then the information ſets forth, that he publiſhed this letter in the preſence of many people: Upon Not guilty pleaded, there was a verdict for the informant, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the ſubſtance of this letter is not ſcandalous, but impertinent, and ſhewed only his ſenſe of the injury done him in not paying what was due to him; but adjudged, that the letter is ſcandalous, and tends to incenſe Mr. Rich to break the peace, and therefore an information lies, and Saunders was fined forty marks. Raym. 201.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a parſon, who was about to be retained chaplain to the Duke of Ormond, viz. He hath a baſtard on the other ſide of the river, and 'tis ſo certainly his, that I fear not to divulge it, and if I am troubled for it, I will juſtify it, whereby he loſt his chaplainſhip: after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the chaplainſhip was ſpiritual; but adjudged, that his preferment was temporal. 1 Lev. 248.

Caſe, &c. for that the plaintiff being bred up to the law, and practiſing it, the defendant did falſo & malitioſe write a letter to Anne Counteſs of Lincoln, who was his (the plaintiff's) client, that the plaintiff would give vexatious and ill counſel, and ſtir up a ſuit, and that he (the plaintiff) would milk her purſe, and fill his own large pockets, per quod he loſt the ſaid Counteſs and other clients: After a verdict for the plaintiff, and a motion in arreſt of judgment, Vaughan held theſe words were not actionable; that in ancient books no words were actionable, unleſs the ſlander concerned life; that the growth of theſe actions would ſpoil all converſe, for they extend to all profeſſions; that theſe words relate no more to the plaintiff's profeſſion than to ſay, that he had a little head; for every counſellor gives vexatious and ill advice, when he adviſes an action which proves unſucceſsful, becauſe the party is amerced pro falſo clamore, and to ſay, that all the words together make a ſlander, is to reaſon à male diviſis ad bene cunjuncta, which is never allowed; 'tis true, to ſay that he had the uſe of a woman's body, is actionable, it being an idiom of ſpeech that he lay with her; but to ſay he will milk your purſe ſignifies no more than milking a bull, if we take the words enunciatively; for this phraſe is not come to an idiom; but the other three judges held, that the words were actionable. 2 Vent. 28.

Caſe, &c. by an attorney, for theſe words, he is a cheating knave, and not fit to be an attorney: After a verdict for the plaintiff in was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words did not relate to his practice, and that he had not laid any communication of his profeſſion; but adjudged actionable; for the ſaying he was not fit to be an attorney, ſhewed, that the preceding words, cheating knave, muſt neceſſarily refer to his profeſſion as an attorney. 2 Vent. 172.

Theſe words ſpoken of a phyſician, He hath killed me with phyſick; not actionable; but to ſay, that he ſcienter & voluntarie did adminiſter phyſick to one to kill him; actionable. Cro. Eliz. 620.

Theſe words ſpoken of a preaching parſon, Parrat is an adulterer, and had two children by B. G*'s wife, and I will cauſe him to be deprived for it*; not actionable; for 'tis a ſpiritual defamation, and puniſhable in that court. Cro. Eliz. 502.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a lawyer: the plaintiff being of counſel for the defendant, he, the ſaid defendant, ſpoke theſe words, that the plaintiff had delivered copies of his evidence to his adverſary; not actionable; becauſe he might deliver them to a good intent, as well as a bad one. Moor 409.

Of a barriſter, (viz.) You are a paltry lawyer, and uſe to play on both hands; not actionable. 2 Cro. 267.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was educated in the ſtudy of the mathematicks, and for ſeveral years had been employed by his neighbours, and others, in meaſuring land, and that at ſuch a time and place, there being a diſcourſe between him and the defendant, concerning his (the plaintiff's) profeſſion and art aforeſaid, he (the defendant) did then and there ſay to him (the plaintiff) Thou art a cozener and a cheating knave, and that I can prove, &c. Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and upon a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was agreed by the court, That if theſe words had been ſpoken of one who got his living by a trade or manual occupation, as of a ſhoemaker, baker, &c. the action would not lie, becauſe the goodneſs or defects of their wares might be ſeen, and it was the folly of the buyer, that he was deceived in what he might have ſeen; but that a land-meaſurer was an artificial labour, and his deceit could not be preceived but by men of ſkill and art; but if the words had been ſpoken of a common meaſurer, viz. of one who meaſures by the rod, an action would not lie, becauſe every huſbandman could meaſure after that manner; not adjudged. 2 Roll. Rep. 72.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he had been an attorney pro diverſis annis jam elapſis, and that the defendant maliciouſly ſpoke theſe words of him, viz. He is a forging knave: After a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff in C. B. and a writ of error brought in B. R. it was objected, that the word forging is adjectively ſpoken, and therefore the action will not lie, unleſs it appear, that the plaintiff was an attorney at that time, which did not appear in this caſe; for it was ſaid, that he was an attorney pro diverſis annis elapſis, which might be thirty years ſince; it ſhould have been ultimo elapſis; but as he had declared, he might be an attorney long ſince, and not at the time of the words ſpoken, and the words in themſelves ſelves do not import a ſcandal in his profeſſion; and for this reaſon the judgment was reverſed. 2 Roll. Rep. 84.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a ſcrivener, He is a baſe rogue, a cozening rogue, a coney-catching rogue, and cut-purſe rogue: After a verdict for the plaintiff, the judgment was ſet aſide, for that the words are not actionable; becauſe a ſcrivener is not a profeſſion ſo much regarded in law as to enable him to maintain an action for calling him by ſuch adjective names. 2 Roll. Rep. 91.

The plaintiff declared, that the defendant, to defame him, being a merchant, did ſay, de præfat' the plaintiff, viz. He (innuendo the plaintiff) is a bankrupt; adjudged, that if theſe words, de præfat' the plaintiff had been left out, the plaintiff could never have judgnent; for by the innuendo there is not a ſufficient certainty of whom the words were ſpoken. 2 Roll. Rep. 243.

There was a ſuit in the ſtar-chamber between the company of woodmongers and carmen; and ſerjeant Richardſon, being retained for the carmen, ſaid, that he did know of his own knowledge, that the company of woodmongers had ſet up engine-bars, machinans et intendens deceptionem, &c. curiæ domini regis, and to ſcandalize the ſaid company; all which was found by the jury upon an indictment exhibited againſt him upon the ſtatute Weſtm. 1. c. 29. and they likewiſe found that the company did not ſet up any engine-bars; it was moved, that this indictment was inſufficient, becauſe it was never intended by that ſtatute to puniſh a pleader for words ſpoken in his client's cauſe, but for ſome act done in pleading by colluſion or deceit to inveigle the court; and juſtice Dodderidge ſaid, that he never ſaw but one indictment upon this ſtatute, and that was in the reign of Edw. 1. and it was upon pleading, and not for bare words; the indictment was quaſhed. Palm. 287.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of an attorney of B. R. viz. That he could not read a declaration, by reaſon whereof his clients left him; the court inclined they were not actionable, unleſs the words had imported ſome ſlander concerning his knowledge in his profeſſion, for the allegation of damages would not maintain the action; and 'tis very probable, that a declaration might be wrote in ſuch a hand, that a man might not read it. 1 Vent. 98.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of an attorney, You are a preſbyterian, and deſign to practiſe againſt the King and his intereſt; the defendant demurred to the declaration, and had judgment; for per curiam, the words are not actionable. T. Jones 23.

5. Where action lies for words ſpoken of tradeſmen; and where not.

William Kemp will be within theſe two days a bankrupt; actionable. Dyer 72.

Of a gentleman trading in lead in Derbyſhire, viz. He is a bankrupt, and is not able to pay his debts, but will run his country; actionable. Hutt. 46.

Of a merchant, being an alien born, viz. Firſcot is a bankrupt; actionable. 1 Bulſt. 134.

Of a dyer, Thou art a bankrupt knave; actionable, tho' two ſubſtantives; but if it had been bankruptly knave, otherwiſe. 2 Cro. 345.

Of a merchant, He is a bankrupt ſlave; actionable. 2 Cro. 578.

Of a ſhoemaker, He is a bankrupt rogue; actionable; for tho' it was inſiſted, that the word bankrupt is but an adjective to rogue, and ſo 'tis extenuated; yet it was adjudged, that the addition of the word rogue to bankrupt aggravates it; and that a ſhoemaker is within the ſtatute of bankrupts, for he gets his living by buying and ſelling. Hutt. 52.

Of a midwife, viz. Many have periſhed for her want of ſkill; actionable. Cro. Car. 153.

Of a merchant, viz. He is not worth a groat, he is 100l. worſe than nought; actionable. Cro. Car. 193.

Of a merchant, viz. Thou art a rogue and a beggarly fellow, and I will prove thee a bankrupt before next term; and at another time he ſaid to one Harris, Truſt him not, for he will be thy undoing; actionable. Cro. Car. 171.

Of a merchant, viz. He is a cheating knave, and hath cheated his father, by returning 20l. for wares; actionable. Cro. Car. 413.

Caſe, &c. Thou cameſt a broken merchant from Hamburgh into England; actionable; for 'tis the ſame as to ſay he is a bankrupt. W. Jones 321.

There was to be a trial at Guildhall, between one Buxton and another, plaintiffs, and Johnſon, defendant, who was likewiſe a merchant, and the day before the trial, one Bolton diſcourſing with the now defendant Lemman, aſked him, Will you be at the trial to-morrow, between Buxton and Johnſon, who replied, Johnſon is broke, I warrant you he dares not be there; adjudged actionable. Palm. 63.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken of a malſter, wherein the plaintiff laid a colloquium of his trade; the words were, Have a care of him, and do not deal with him, he is a cheat and will cheat you, he has cheated all the farmers at Epping, and dares not ſhew his face there, and now he is come to cheat at Hatfield: Upon not guilty pleaded, a ſpecial verdict found all theſe words, but there was no colloquium of his trade; adjudged, that the words ſupply the colloquium, ſo they appear to be ſpoke of his trade. 2 Lev. 62.

An action was brought by a draper for theſe words, You are a cheating fellow, and keep a falſe book, and I will prove it: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict, but the judgment was arreſted, becauſe plaintiff did not alledge, that there was any colloquium of his trade, or of his buying and ſelling at the time when the words were ſpoken; for to ſay a man is a cheating fellow, it doth not follow that he is ſo in his trade, for he may cheat at gaming and not in his dealing, and the words being general, may as well be applied to that as to his trade; and the keeping a falſe book doth not imply, that the defendant kept a falſe debt-book, for he might have a book which is falſe printed, as well as a falſe debt-book. 2 Saund. 307.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, viz. Orton ſays I am a perjured knave, but he is a perjured knave as well as I, for he and Field ſwore one for another: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved, that this was no poſitive charge that the plaintiff was perjured, but only by relation, viz. that he was perjured as well as the defendant; but adjudged for the plaintiff. Raym. 51.

Caſe, &c. for words of a broker, ſpeaking of his profeſſion, He is a cheating knave, he hath cheated me with braſs money; adjudged, that to call a tradeſman a cheat generally, an action will not lie, but if you ſpeak of his trade, it will lie. Raym. 62.

Caſe, &c. by a merchant for theſe words, (there being a communication of him,) I believe all is not well with Daniel Vivian; there are many merchants that have lately failed, and I expect no otherwiſe of Daniel Vivian: After a verdict for the plaintiff, the words were held actionable. Raym. 207.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he is a lime-burner, &c. and gets his living by buying and ſelling lime, and that the defendant ſpoke of him (the plaintiff) in arte ſua, viz. John Terry is a run-away, and a cheating rogue: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the defendant did not ſpeak thoſe words as relating to the trade of lime-burning, but generally de arte ſua, and he may have another trade; but adjudged, that tho' in ancient times it was the conſtant courſe to lay a colloquium in declarations for words, and it was a doubt, whether it was good without it till the caſe of Smith and Ward, 2 Cro. 673. yet in that caſe it was reſolved, that to alledge the words to be ſpoken de querente ſupplied the colloquium, and in the principal caſe the words are alledged to be ſpoken de arte ſua, which is applicable to his profeſſion. Raym. 86.

Caſe, in which the plaintiff declared, that he is a mercer, and that the defendant ſpoke theſe words, Thou art a cheating knave, and a rogue: After a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here was no colloquium laid of his trade; the judgment was ſtaid. Raym. 169.

Caſe brought by a merchant for theſe words, Auſtin Drake is broke, he is a beggarly fellow, and not worth a groat, and not able to pay his debts: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that theſe words are not actionable, for he may be an honeſt man and not worth a groat, and to be a beggarly fellow is no crime, for it imports only that he was a poor man, and that is not a fault but a misfortune; but the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe to ſay, He is not able to pay his debts, is actionable. Raym. 184.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he is keeper of a livery ſtable, and of Bell Savage Inn, and that the defendant had other ſtables in the ſame yard, and that T. P. coming with a waggon into the yard, aud enquiring of the defendant, which was Bell Savage Inn, the defendant replied, This is Bell Savage Inn, deal not with Southam, (the plaintiff) for he is broke, and there is neither entertainment for man or horſe; after a verdict for the plaintiff and great damages, the judgment was affirmed. Raym. 231.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that by buying and ſelling wares, uberrimam ſibi & familiæ acquiſivit vivendi ſuſtentationem, (without mentioning any trade) and that the defendant ſaid of him (the plaintiff) Thou art a pittiful, beggarly, broken fellow; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the plaintiff did not alledge, that he was of any trade; but this objection was over-ruled, and the plaintiff had judgment. T. Jones 140.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he is a renter of lands, and that he had gained great profit by buying and ſelling wheat, barley, &c. and that the defendant ſaid theſe words of him, (viz.) He hath cheated in corn; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was held per curiam, that the words are not actionable, and that the words of inducement were only a deſcription of a farmer, and if they ſhould be actionable, every farmer would be intitled to the like action. T. Jones 156.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared that, there being a communication of his trade, the defendant ſaid, He was a cheating knave, and kept a falſe debt book, with which he cheated the country; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that to ſay of a tradeſman, He is a cheating knave, tho' there was a colloquium of his trade, is not actionable; becauſe it may be intended he ſold his goods too dear, and ſo cheated the buyer in the price; and to ſay he kept a falſe book is not actionable, becauſe he may keep ſuch a book, not knowing it to be falſe; but adjudged, that the words taken all together are actionable, for tradeſmens books are often given in evidence, and therefore they ought not to be falſe. 1 Vent. 263.

Caſe for theſe words, ſpoken of a merchant who made a bone-fire at his door when King James the ſecond came to the crown, (viz.) He is a rogue, a papiſt dog, and a pittiful fellow, and never a rogue in town had a bone-fire before his door but he; after a verdict for the plaintiff, and 500*l.* damages, a writ of error was brought; but per curiam, the words are actionable. 3 Mod. 103.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a farmer, He owes more money than he is worth, he is broke and run away; after a verdict for the plaintiff, per curiam, the words are actionable.

His ſon Brooks hath deceived me in a reckoning for wares, and his debt-book which he keepeth for ſale of his wares in his ſhop, is a falſe debt-book, and I will make him aſhamed of his calling; not actionable. Brownl. 4.

The plaintiff declared, that for many years paſt fuit mercator, &c. and the defendant ſaid, Thou art a beggarly knave, and a bankrupt; it was doubted whether actionable, becauſe he did not alledge, that he was a merchant at the time the words were ſpoken. Cro. Eliz. 794.

Caſe by an innkeeper againſt the defendant, for calling him, (the plaintiff) Catterpillar, for he liveth by robbing his gueſts; adjudged not actionable. Moor 179.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of an innkeeper, Your maſter Thomas Clerke did harbour and lodge cut-purſes and rogues, and did receive ſtolen goods, and there are yet ſome in his houſe; and declared, that by reaſon of ſpeaking thoſe words he loſt his gueſts; adjudged, not actionable; for an innkeeper's houſe being common to all his gueſts, he may lodge cut-purſes, and receive ſtolen goods, and not know them to be ſuch. 2 Roll. Rep. 136.

Caſe, &c. againſt huſband and wife, in which the plaintiff declared, that he was a freeman of London, and a tradeſman, and that he got his living by buying and ſelling crewel, and that the wife, &c. ſaid, He (the plaintiff) is a cheater, and hath cozened and cheated my huſband of 500*l.* after a verdict for the plaintiff, and 40*l.* damages, the judgment was arreſted, for that the words were not actionable, becauſe it did not appear that the cozening and cheating was in any thing concerning his trade. W. Jones 366.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was a common brewer, and that the defendant, upon a diſcourſe which he had with another concerning the plaintiff, ſaid theſe words of him, I will give my mare a peck of malt, and give her water after it, and ſhe ſhall piſs as good beer as Thomas Fen breweth (innuendo the plaintiff) by reaſon whereof he loſt ſeveral cuſtomers, but mentioned none in particular; and that being moved in arreſt of judment, after verdict for the plaintiff, the judgment was reverſed; for the words are not actionable, without alledging a particular loſs. W. Jones 444.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken of a diſtiller, in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant diſcourſing with one Iles, aſked him of whom he bought aqua vitæ, who replied, of Mr. Godfrey (the plaintiff); thereupon the defendant ſaid, He is a variet, he hath ſuppreſſed his brother's will, to cozen and deceive men of their legacies, we will make him cry peccavi on his knees, he maketh ſhew of religion, but is an hypocrite; adjudged not actionable, becauſe the words do not relate to his trade. Palm. 21.

The plaintiff being a mercer, declared againſt the defendant for theſe words, (viz.) Thou doſt owe more than thou art worth, and art not able to pay thy debts; adjudged not actionable, becauſe the words do not imply any fraud or deceit, ſo they will not amount to a bankruptcy within the ſtatutes, for a man may owe more than he is worth, and yet be an honeſt man, and have credit by friends to ſupport him in trade. Style. 213.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a merchant, Thou art a cheating rogue, and a runagate rogue; after a verdict for the plaintiff, adjudged not actionable; for to ſay generally, that a man is a cheater, is not actionable without a colloquium laid of his trade or profeſſion, which was not done in this caſe. Hard. 8.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a watchmaker, (viz.) He is a bungler, and knows not how to make a good piece of work; after a verdict for the plaintiff, wherein the jury ſaid that he was a watchmaker, it was objected, that there was no colloquium laid of his trade; 'tis true, if the words had been, he could not make a good watch, it would have been known what he meant, but here the words are indifferent, and may have no relation to his trade; the judgment was ſtayed. 1 Mod. 19.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was a merchant, and that by his good name he had the goodwill of his neighbours, and alſo that by buying and ſelling he got diverſa lucra, &c. and that the defendant called him a bankrupt; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, becauſe it did not appear that he gained his living by buying and ſelling; the judgment was ſet aſide. Sid. 299.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he for ſeven years laſt paſt, had lawfully uſed the art of buying and ſelling, and had gained great profit thereby, for the ſupport of himſelf and family, and that the defendant falſo & malitioſe ſaid of him (the plaintiff), He is a runagate, and worſe than a rogue, and if he had his deſerts he had been hanged; whereby he loſt his cuſtom, but he did not lay any ſpecial damage; after a verdict for the plaintiff the judgment was ſtayed, becauſe runagate is not of the ſame ſignification as bankrupt; and here the plaintiff did not ſet forth what trade he uſed, and it might be that of a tinker or pedler, who are rogues by the ſtatute Eliz. ſo the words are not actionable. 2 Lev. 214.

Caſe, &c. in which ſhe declared, that ſhe was ſkilled in dancing, and taught young women to dance, by which ſhe gained a livelihood, and that the defendant, to injure her, ſaid, She is as much a man as I am, ſhe is an hermaphrodite; by which ſhe loſt divers ſcholars, but did not mention any in particular; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was adjudged, that the words are not actionable, for 'tis no ſcandal to her profeſſion to ſay, ſhe is an hermaphrodite, for young women are commonly taught by men to dance, and here is no ſpecial damages laid. 2 Lev. 233.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he is a trader, and that the defendant ſpake theſe words of him, You are a cheat, and have been a cheat for many years; not actionable without laying a colloquium of his trade. 2 Salk. 694.

Caſe for words ſpoken of a butcher, in which a colloquium was laid of a cow killed by him, and of the fleſh of that cow; and that the defendant ſaid, The cow died with calving, by reaſon whereof he loſt ſuch and ſuch cuſtomers; there was a verdict for the plaintiff, &c. and upon a writ of error brought, the judgment was reverſed, becauſe the words in themſelves are not actionable; 'tis true, here are ſpecial damages laid, but yet that will not help, becauſe he did not alledge, that he could not ſell the cow, but only that he loſt his cuſtomers. 2 Salk. 695.

6. Where action lies for ſlandering women; and where not.

The plaintiff being in communication of a marriage with the Earl of Kent, the defendant ſaid, that Arſcot reported, That he had the uſe of her body, innuendo, that he had carnal copulation with her; actionable. 2 Cro. 162.

Caſe, &c. by the huſband, for words ſpoken of his wife, (viz.) Mrs. Miller is a whore, and hath had the pox, and hath holes one may turn his finger in them, Mr. King, the apothecary, gave her a drink for it, and therefore take heed how you drink with her; actionable. 2 Cro. 430.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Elizabeth Roots did lie with a weaver of Colcheſter in a ditch, (innuendo had carnal knowledge of her body) and the weaver's breeches were down and they were at it; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the weaver might lie with the plaintiff without any offence, and where the words in themſelves are not actionable, an innuendo will not make them actionable; ſed per curiam, Tho' the words are not actionable, yet the circumſtance which follows ſhews the intention, which was to ſlander the plaintiff, and adjudged, that the action lies. 1 Roll. Rep. 420.

Of a widow, who was about to marry with one Cowley, viz. She is a whore, and her children which ſhe had by Brian her late huſband, are Frambiſhe's baſtards; tho' the firſt are words of heat, and the laſt repugnant, yet adjudged actionable. Cro. Car. 234.

Of an alehouſe-keeper's wife, (viz.) Hang thee bawd, thou art worſe than a bawd, thou keepeſt an houſe worſe than a bawdy houſe, and thou keepeſt a whore in thy houſe to pull out my throat; actionable. Cro. Car. 234.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou art a whore, and T. H.'s whore, thou didſt play the whore with him at ſuch a gate, and didſt forget thy gloves behind thee; thou hadſt a baſtard by him, which was ſent to Ireland; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the action would not lie, becauſe the plaintiff did not alledge any temporal loſs, this being in its nature a ſpiritual offence, and puniſhable in that court; but adjudged, that by the ſtatute 18 Eliz. and 7 Jac. the one appointing a puniſhment for a woman who hath a baſtard, and the other appointing that a whore ſhall be ſent to bridewell for a year, had altered the nature of the offence, and given the temporal courts juriſdiction; and tho' ſhe is not puniſhed by the juſtices, by virtue of theſe ſtatutes, 'tis ſufficient, that ſhe is liable to be puniſhed. Palm. 298.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that there was a communication of marriage between the plaintiff and one Mary Hicks, who had 300*l.* portion, which marriage was like to take effect, but that the defendant, in the hearing of ſeveral people, ſaid, Mary Hicks is Mr. Edwards his whore, (innuendo the plaintiff) whereupon ſhe refuſed to marry him; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it was not alledged, that the marriage was agreed on, nor that the words were ſpoke of the plaintiff, but only by the innuendo; but the judgment was affirmed. Allen 6.

Caſe, &c. Thou art a whore, and a baſe burnt arſe whore; actionable. 2 Sid. 5.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant, to ſcandalize him and his niece, ſpoke of the ſaid niece, and her aunt, I hold it not fit this girl ſhould live with her aunt, ſhe keeping a bawdy-houſe, with an averment, that ſhe did at that time live with the aunt; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words are not actionable, becauſe ſhe keeping doth not imply, that ſhe did keep a bawdy-houſe; but adjudged, that this ſpeaking by a participle in the preſent ſenſe, doth imply, that ſhe did keep a bawdy-houſe. 2 Sid. 15, 33.

Caſe, &c. He aſſaulted my wife, with an intent to raviſh her; actionable, for though here was only an act intended and not done, yet an aſſault with an intent to raviſh, is a defamation, and actionable. 2 Sid. 76, 100.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, your daughter Bridget is a Whore, and a pocky arſt whore; after a verdict for the plaintiff in C. B. and a writ of error brought in B. R. adjudged actionable; for though to ſay, thou art a whore, is not actionable, nor to ſay, thou haſt the pox; but when the word whore is coupled with the pox; it is intended the French pox. Sid. 50.

Caſe, for calling the plaintiff whore, in which ſhe declared, that ſhe lived in the borough of Southwark, and that omnes exercitantes artem meretricii et conſervatores lupanar' et communes lenones per conſuetudinem uſitatam et approbatam within the ſaid borough were impriſoned and carted; adjudged, that ſince this preſcription is in the conjunctive, and the plaintiff had not alledged, that ſhe was ſtill an inhabitant there, and ſo was not capable to be puniſhed, within the preſcription, that the action did not lie. Sid. 97.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that ſhe was poſſeſſed of a copyhold dum ſola & caſta vixerit, and that the defendant, intending to endanger the loſing her copyhold, ſaid, Thou art a whore and I will throw thee out of thy living; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was adjudged in arreſt of judgment, that the words are actionable, becauſe accoupled with words which imported ſpecial damages; but as entire damages were given for theſe and other words ſpoken at another time, and the other words were not actionable, the judgment was ſtayed. Sid. 214.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, Thou art a whore, and my huſband's whore; the cauſe was tried in the Sheriff's court in London, and the proof was, that the words were ſpoken in Clerkenwell, out of the city, and thereupon the counſel for the defendent demurred on the evidence, for tho' the words are actionable in London, they are not out of it; the judge over-ruled the demurrer, whereupon a bill of exceptions was tendered to him to ſeal, but the parties being poor, the plaintiff had a verdict, and ſmall damages. The defendant, inſtead of pleading Not guilty, ſhould have pleaded, that the words were ſpoken in Clerkenwell, and traverſed, that they were ſpoken in London. 1 Lev. 116.

Caſe, &c. by huſband and wife, for theſe words ſpoken of her, (viz.) She is a ſtrumpet and a bawd, and kept a bawdy-houſe; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the laſt words only being actionable; and that it being the preter-tenſe, (viz.) kept a bawdy-houſe, it ſhall be intended before the general pardon; but adjudged, that the ſcandal remains, and that it ſhall not be ſo intended, unleſs it appear, that the defendant ſpoke in that ſenſe. 2 Lev. 233.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, You are a whore; and the plaintiff declared, that by reaſon of ſpeaking the words ſhe loſt her marriage: Upon Not guilty pleaded, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and judgment; upon a writ of error brought, error aſſigned was, that the loſs of marriage was the cauſe of this action, and it doth not appear that it was within the juriſdiction of the court, viz. the court of Marſhalſea, where the action was brought, and the judgment was reverſed. Raym. 63.

Caſe

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, You are a bawd, and I will prove you a bawd, and you took 5 s. for a clean pair of ſheets for two whores and two rogues; and at another time for theſe words, You are a bawd, and I will prove you a bawd, and have you carted: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict and entire damages; and upon a motion in arreſt of judgment, the words were held actionable, becauſe a bawd is puniſhable in the ſpiritual court. Raym. 115.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a midwife, viz. She is an ignorant woman, and of ſmall practice, and very unfortunate in her way; there are few that ſhe goes to, but lie deſperately ill, or die under her hands; actionable. 1 Vent. Wharton v. Brook.

Huſband and wife brought an action on the caſe, for theſe words ſpoken of the wife, She is a whore, ſhe is my whore, and concluded ad damnum ipſorum: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the words were not actionable without ſpecial damages laid; and that the concluſion ad damnum ipſorum was ill: Sed per curiam, the words are actionable, and the concluſion is well; for if ſhe ſurvive, the damages will go to her. 3 Mod. 120.

Caſe for theſe words ſpoken to the ſervant, Thy miſtreſs is a whore, and would have lain with me ſeven years ſince, and I would not, unleſs ſhe would go to the hedge: Now, tho' it was laid in the declaration, that ſhe was in communication with W. R. of a marriage between them, who was ſeiſed of lands of 200 l. per annum, and that by reaſon of ſpeaking theſe words ſhe loſt her marriage; yet the words were adjudged not actionable, becauſe they were a ſpiritual defamation, and puniſhable in thoſe courts; but if the words had been ſpoken to the man, who was in communication of marriage with her, ſo as the purpoſe was to hinder the marriage, the action would lie for the loſs. Cro. Eliz. 786.

Thou art a whore, for R. B. the goldſmith had the uſe of thy body, and the cart is too good for thee; not actionable, for the Common law cannot define who is a whore. Goldſ. 172.

Thou art Luſcomb's hackney whore, and a thieviſh whore, and I will prove thee ſo; not actionable; quia verba accipienda ſunt in mitiori ſenſu. Goab. 278.

Slander by a feme ſole for theſe words, You are a whore, and a forſworn jade, and I will prove you one, by reaſon whereof ſeveral perſons who courted her before, did now avoid her company; the plaintiff had a verdict, but could never get judgment, becauſe ſhe did not alledge the loſs of marriage with any particular perſon. 2 Lutw. 1295.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, brought againſt the defendant by the huſband and wife, Thou hold Calabine's baſtard-bearing whore, thou didſt throw thy baſtard into the dock, innuendo quandam ſocam vocat' le Armitage, &c. adjudged not actionable. W. Jones 356.

Caſe, &c. You are a pimp and a bawd, and fetch young gentlewomen to young gentlemen; the court inclined, that the action would not lie, for a bawd is not puniſhable by our law, unleſs ſhe keep a bawdy-houſe, for the other is a crime of eccleſiaſtical cognizance. 1 Vent. 63.

Caſe for ſpeaking theſe words, viz. This is the whore that W. R. got a baſtard on, and ſpent all my money upon, and the queen hath been too long in town for my eaſe: After a verdict for the plaintiff, the judgment was arreſted, becauſe no ſpecial damages were laid. Style 274.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, She hath married the huſband of another woman; and the plaintiff averred in his declaration, that he had no other wife; he had a verdict, but the judgment was arreſted, becauſe it might be that his firſt wife was dead, or that ſhe was beyond ſea for ſeven years; and then the caſe is out of the ſtatute 1 Jac. cap. 11. and probably the defendant might mean, that the plaintiff was contracted to another man, and ſo in conſcience he was her huſband. Allen 37.

Caſe, &c. She was with child by T. S. whereof ſhe miſcarried, by reaſon whereof her father turned her out of doors; adjudged, that an action would not lie without ſpecial damages alledged, as that ſhe had loſt her marriage. 1 Vent. 4.

Caſe, &c. for that the defendant falſe & malitioſe, wrote a letter to a man who intended to marry the plaintiff, in which he tells him, that He ought not to marry her, for before God ſhe is my wife, and therefore if you do, you will live in adultery with her, and your children will be baſtards; and ſets forth, that this letter was delivered at Exeter, by which ſhe loſt her marriage; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words were not actionable, becauſe the defendant claimed nothing but his own, which was lawful for him to do; and of this opinion were three judges at firſt, againſt the opinion of Twiſden; but afterwards they agreed with him, that the words were actionable, for admitting that the contract was private, he ought not to publiſh it, unleſs he could prove it; but to acquaint the woman herſelf with it; but this was done to ſcandalize her, and being found to be falſe & malitioſe, the plaintiff had her judgment. Sid. 79.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that ſhe was about to marry J. S. and the defendant ſaid, She is a whore, a common whore, and R. N.'s whore, per quod maritagium amiſit; the jury found, that the defendant ſpoke the words, but that the plaintiff did not loſe her marriage thereby: Et per curiam, in arreſt of judgment, the words are not actionable, being only ſcolding. 2 Mod. 296.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words, She is a whore, and had a baſtard by her father's apprentice: After a verdict for the plaintiff, the judgment was arreſted, becauſe fornication is a ſpiritual offence, and no action for it lay at Common law without ſpecial damage. 2 Salk. 696.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that ſhe being a young woman, the defendant, to hinder her marriage, ſaid, What did you go to London for but to drop your ſlink; ſhe went to London laſt winter to lie in, and to my knowledge ſeveral people have lain with her; adjudged not actionable, without ſpecial damages laid, becauſe fornication is only a ſpiritual offence. 2 Salk. 693.

7. Of adjective and negative words, and by way of interrogation; and of ſlandering a title, and calling one baſtard.

There was a treaty of marriage between the plaintiff and one Mary Syvedale, with whom he was to have 600*l.* and the defendant ſaid, Hath that baſtard Brian Nelſon cauſed you to be arreſted? &c. by which he loſt his marriage; actionable, tho' ſpoke by way of interrogation. 2 Cro. 422.

Have you brought home the forty yards you ſtole? The judgment for the plaintiff affirmed in error. 2 Cro. 568.

Thou art a long ſhag-haired murdering rogue; actionable, tho' adjective words. Cro. Car. 232, 318.

Caſe, &c. for that the defendant having a colloquium of the plaintiff, ſpoke theſe words of him, I know what I am, and I know what Snell is, I never buggered a mare; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that theſe words do not charge the plaintiff with buggery; adjudged, a charge of buggery by implication, and that it might be ſo underſtood by thoſe who heard it. 2 Lev. 150.

The defendant ſaid, that Lands were lawfully aſſured to John Talbot for 1600 years, and that he was lawfully poſſeſſed thereof, whereas in truth they were not lawfully aſſured; it was adjudged, that tho' John Talbot had a limitation of the land by a will, yet becauſe the defendant took upon him to take notice of the law, and to meddle in a matter which did not concern him, the plaintiff had judgment. 4 Rep. 175. See 2 Leon. 111.

The plaintiff was in treaty with R. B. to demiſe to him the manor of D. and the defendant præmiſſorum non ignarus, ſaid, I have a leaſe of the ſaid manor for ninety-nine years, and ſhewed a counterfeit leaſe, knowing it to be counterfeit, by reaſon whereof R. B. did not proceed; adjudged, that ſince the defendant knew of the treaty, and that the leaſe be produced was forged, and yet he publiſhed it, and by that the plaintiff loſt his bargain, the action would lie. 4 Rep. 18.

The earl of Arundel gave a manor to the plaintiff in tail; the defendant was a copyhold tenant of an houſe and lands held of the ſaid manor for his life, and the plaintiff being in treaty with R. B. to make a leaſe of the ſaid houſe and lands, to commence after the defendant's death, for which R. B. was to give 500*l.* the defendant ſaid, The late earl of Arundel made a leaſe of my tenement to one R. W. for ſixty years, to begin after my eſtate is ended, and the ſame is a good leaſe; by reaſon whereof R. B. would not give him 10*l.* to make him a leaſe; actionable. 2 Cro. 163.

The plaintiff and his wife had both lands by deſcent, the defendant ſpeaking of them ſaid, (viz.) Shall Elborow's wife ſit above my wife? he is but a baſtard; by reaſon whercof the plaintiff was at great expence to defend his title; actionable, tho' the plaintiff had not laid that there was any ſpeech about his eſtate, or that he was about ſelling or leaſing it. 2 Cro. 642.

Error to reverſe a judgment in an action on the caſe for calling the plaintiff baſtard, wherein the plaintiff ſet forth, that his grandfather was tenant in tail of ſuch lands, with divers remainders over, that his father was the iſſue in tail, and that he was his youngeſt ſon, and that W. R. was about purchaſing the land, and offered him a ſum of money for his title, and to join in the conveyance; but afterwards, by reaſon of ſpeaking thoſe words, he refuſed to give him any thing; the error aſſigned was, that the plaintiff hath not aſſigned any ſpecial loſs, for upon his own ſhewing he had no title, being a remote remainderman to the eſtate; but adjudged, that tho' he had not a preſent title, yet it appears, that by poſſibility he might inherit the eſtate-tail, and being offered money for that poſſibility to join in the conveyance, he had a preſent loſs and damage by ſpeaking thoſe words; ſo the judgment was affirmed. 2 Cro. 213.

Suit was brought in the ſpiritual court againſt the defendant, for ſaying, that the plaintiff had a baſtard; the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was adjudged the reputed father of a baſtard by two juſtices of the peace, according to the ſtatute, by reaſon whereof he ſpoke thoſe words; this was a plain confeſſion of the libel, but that court would not allow the juſtification, and therefore the defendant moved for a prohibition, which was granted. 2 Cro. 535, 625.

In a ſpecial action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant did endeavour to queſtion him, and to charge him at the quarter-ſeſſions, to be the reputed father of a baſtard child; adjudged, that the action doth not lie, becauſe 'tis only an eccleſiaſtical ſlander, and to be puniſhed in the ſpiritual court; but if he had declared, that the defendant had procured an order to be made at the ſeſſions againſt him to be the reputed father, and ſo to keep the child; in ſuch caſe the action would lie, becauſe of the temporal loſs and damage. 2 Bulſt. 343.

Caſe againſt the defendant being an attorney, for that the plaintiff being ſeiſed of lands in fee which he had by deſcent from his father; and having agreed with one W. R. who was to purchaſe them, the ſaid W. R. came to the defendant, deſiring his advice in the conveyance, who told him, that he had heard that the plaintiff's father had granted a rent-charge in fee out of the lands, by reaſon whereof the ſaid W. R. refuſed to purchaſe; and all other perſons were afraid of incumbrances ad damnum, &c. the defendant pleaded in abatement, that he was an attorney at law, and that W. R. came to him for his counſel, and that he privately ſpoke the words; and upon demurrer, the defendant had judgment. Moor 187.

The defendant, who pretended a title to the lands, ſpoke publickly, that he had a better title, &c. than the tenant in poſſeſſion, for which words the tenant brought an action; and adjudged, that it did not lie, becauſe the defendant claimed a right to the lands; but if another man had ſpoke the ſame without any pretence to a title, it had been otherwiſe. Moor 188.

Caſe for theſe words, (the plaintiff being about the ſale of his lands) I would not wiſh any man to deal with the land, for I know one who hath a good title to it, and will not depart with their intereſt for any reaſon; the defendant juſtified, for that he had a leaſe in reverſion of part, &c. adjudged, that if he claimed a title himſelf 'tis not actionable; but here he ſaid, he knew one who had, which he ſhall not ſalve by applying it to himſelf. Moor 410.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was ſeiſed of lands, and had a diſcourſe with J. S. about ſelling the ſame, and the defendant knowing thereof, ſaid to J. S. Take heed how you buy it, for 'tis mine, if every man had his own; and I will ſpend 20*l. but I will have it*; by reaſon whereof he loſt the ſale, &c. after a verdict for the plaintiff the judgment was arreſted, for that the words are not actionable, becauſe he claimed the lands to himſelf; but it had been otherwiſe if he had affirmed, that a third perſon had a title. 1 Roll. Rep. 409.

Caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was ſeiſed of ſeveral parcels of land, and that the defendant being tenant at will of one parcel, and there being a diſcourſe between him and J. S. of the ſale of the lands, he (the defendant) ſaid to J. S. that he, the defendant, would keep the poſſeſſion till the 17*th day of Auguſt*, and that after that day the plaintiff had no title to it, but that one G. D. had, by reaſon whereof he loſt the ſale; adjudged, that tho' the words were ſpoken of a parcel of the land, yet the plaintiff ſhall recover damages for the loſs of the ſale of the whole. 2 Roll. Rep. 447.

This action will not lie without ſhewing ſome loſs; as for inſtance, the plaintiff was ſeiſed in fee of copyhold lands within the juriſdiction of the defendant's court, who ſaid, he had no title to the lands; the judgment for the plaintiff was reverſed by error, becauſe he did not ſhew that he had any loſs by ſpeaking the words. Cro. Car. 99, 140.

Error of a judgment in an action on the caſe, wherein the plaintiff declared, that one J. D. was delivered of a baſtard-child, and that the defendant diſcourſing with her concerning the plaintiff and the ſaid child, ſaid, He (meaning the plaintiff) is the reputed father of that baſtard child; the error aſſigned was, that theſe words are not actionable; and ſo it was adjudged, unleſs the plaintiff had alledged ſome temporal loſs, as marriage or the like; or that by reaſon of the ſpeaking theſe words, he was ordered to maintain the baſtard. Cro. Car. 315.

8. Pleadings in actions of ſlander.

If two have ſpoke words for which an action lies, the action againſt them muſt be ſeveral; for, as the ſpeaking of one is not the ſpeaking of the other, they cannot be charged jointly in an action. Cro. Jac. 647.

Nor can two who are ſlandered by the ſame words join in an action againſt the publiſher of them; but each muſt bring a ſeparate action. Cro. Car. 512.

It is declared by the ſtatute of limitations, that all actions upon the caſe for words ſhall be brought within two years after the publiſhing them; but it has been held, that in ſome caſes of ſlander this ſtatute is no bar.

In an action for words the plaintiff declared, for certain falſe and ſcandalous words of which the tenor follows, and then the declaration recites ſome words; it was held on a motion in arreſt of judgment, that the action did not lie, becauſe, as the expreſs words are not ſet out, ſome which would perhaps have rendered the reſt not actionable might be omitted. It is indeed in many caſes ſufficient to plead a deed or record by way of recital, for in ſuch caſes the recital may be compared with the deed or record; but, if there is any miſtake in thus reciting words, no recourſe is to be had to any thing by which it may be ſet right. Cro. Eliz. 857.

It was alledged, that the defendant ſpoke certain words, and then the declaration went on cumque etiam poſtea the defendant ſpoke other words; a verdict being found for the plaintiff, and entire damages given, it was inſiſted upon, in a motion to arreſt the judgment, that, as the latter words are not by reaſon of the cumque etiam ſufficiently affirmative, and only by way of recital, the plaintiff ought not to recover. Several caſes were cited, where, in treſpaſs and battery, the judgment had been arreſted, becauſe it had only been alledged cum the defendant committed ſuch a treſpaſs or ſuch a battery. Sed per cur. This being an action upon the caſe, and the firſt words being laid positively, the latter shall be intended to be so. Besides, cumque etiam shall here be intended to mean the same as porro moreover; for so these words are explained in divers dictionaries, and in that sense they are used by several classic authors. 3 Lev. 338.

If the words found by the verdict are not precisely the same as those laid in the declaration, yet if they agree in substance, an action lies. Dyer 75.

In an action for these words, If Sir John Sydenham might have his will he would kill the King; the defendant pleaded that he spoke other words, absque hoc that he spoke the words laid. The jury found specially that he spoke these words, I think in my conscience, if Sir John Sydenham might have his will, he would kill the King; and the question was, if the variance between the words laid and the words found was fatal; the court of King's Bench were of opinion that, as the words laid were actionable, and the force of them not taken off but rather augmented, by the others, which are also found, it was not; and their judgment for the plaintiff was, upon a writ of error brought in the Exchequer-Chamber, affirmed. Cro. Jac. 407.

J. N. brought an action for these words thus laid, You have murdered J. S. innuendo J. S. modo defunctum; and judgment was for the plaintiff. Upon a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, it was reversed; because, as the words modo defunctum can only relate to the time of the declaration, and it is not averred that J. S. was dead at the time the words are laid to be spoke, there was no ground of action when the suit was commenced. Cro. Ja. 215. Cro. Ja. 343. 1 Roll. Abr. 77. Hob. 6.

In an indictment it must be laid, that the defendant spoke the words charged falso & malitiose, because that has been the usual form; but neither of these technical words are necessary in a declaration in this action. Style 392.

Upon a motion in arrest of judgment it was objected to a declaration, that it only alledged that the defendant spoke hæc ficta falsa verba, whereas it ought to have alledged quod ficte et falso dixit; but it was held to be well enough. 1 Keb. 273.

A writ of error being brought, upon a judgment in an action for words, it was assigned for error, that the words were not laid to be spoke maliciously: Sed per cur. This is no error, for such words are in themselves malicious. Noy 35. Ow. 51.

It is sufficient to alledge in a declaration, that the defendant spoke the words palam et publice; for the words palam et publice imply that it was in præsentia et auditu aliorum. Cro. Eliz. 861.

Where two sets of words are declared for, and only the first are laid to be spoken in præsentia et auditu quamplurimorum; the præsentia et auditu quamplurimorum of the first shall go to the second. 2 Lev. 193.

If the declaration alledge that the words were spoken in præsentia diversorum, it is well enough, although it is alledged to be in auditu; for, as the words were spoken in præsentia, it shall be intended they were spoken in auditu diversorum. Cro. Eliz. 846.

As the sense of words is to be collected from the consideration of the whole of them, and all the circumstances which attended the speaking of them, if any of these are omitted in the declaration of the plaintiff, the defendant may, in pleading, avail himself of such of them as he thinks it material for him to shew. 4 Co. 13 b. 14. a. 19. b. Cro. Car. 510.

In an action for calling the plaintiff a perjured man, the defendant pleaded in his justification, that the plaintiff was perjured in a certain cause, and judgment was for him. Another action being brought by the plaintiff for the same words, the defendant pleaded this judgment, and it was held to be a good plea. 2 Brownl. 49.

After a judgment in an action for these words, He is a rascally alderman, a factious alderman, a lampooner; a second action was brought for the same words, with an averment that the word lampooner means libeller. Upon a demurrer to a plea, in which the former judgment was pleaded in bar, it was insisted that by this explanation of the word lampooner, it becomes a different action. Sed per cur. As the plaintiff has been once barred in an action for the same words, he shall never intitle himself to another action by any explanation of one of those words. 1 Lev. 248.

If the words as laid in the declaration are not actionable, no additional one in a replication can make them so; for no rejoinder can be to words in a replication, which were not contained in the declaration or plea. Style 70.

It is in general very dangerous for a defendant to demur in an action upon the case for words; for he may, after taking the chance of trying the fact, avail himself of any matter of law in arrest of judgment, which would have been good upon a demurrer. 4 Co. 14. a. Doct. Pl. 186.

In all cases, where there is not in the words themselves a sufficient ground of action, the want of this must be cured by averment, otherwise no action lies. 4 New Abr. 513.

It was heretofore doubted whether the want of certainty in the words themselves, as to the person of whom the words for which an action is brought were spoke, could be supplied by any averment without the help of a colloquium: but it seems to be now settled, that an averment that the words were spoken of the plaintiff is sufficient, although it is not alledged that there was, at the time of speaking them, a colloquium concerning him. Cro. Jac. 241. 1 Roll. Abr. 80. Cro. Jac. 673. Cro. Car. 378. Cro. Jac. 107. 1 Roll. Abr. 79.

Whenever there is an apparent uncertainty in the words themselves, no averment can cure this; but, whenever a certain person is intended, it may by averment be ascertained who this is.

If three men have given evidence at a trial, and J. S. says to them, One of you three is perjured, no action lies; for there is in these words such an apparent uncertainty as cannot be cured by averment. 1 Roll. Abr. 81. Cro. Jac. 107.

But if a conversation be concerning six defendants to a bill in Chancery, and it is said by J. S. These defendants are those who helped to murder T. S. every one of them, although no one is particularly named, may have an action with an averment, that he is one of the defendants concerning whom such conversation was had. 1 Roll. Abr. 75.

So if these words are spoke, That perjured rogue and villain Potter, any one of the name of Potter, if it is averred that they were in a conversation concerning him, may maintain an action for them. 1 Roll. Abr. 76.

It has been held, that if the person, of whom the words are spoken, is in any one respect well ascertained, there is no need to remove by averment, every other doubt, as to this point, to which the words may be liable. Thus, if it be said to J. S. Go tell thy landlord Hendey he is a thief, an action lies for one whose name is Hendey, with an averment that the words were spoke of him; nor is it necessary for him to aver that he is the landlord of J. S. 1 Roll. Abr. 80.

So if these words are spoke by J. S. to J. N. Thy master Brown hath robbed me, one of the name of Brown, if it be averred that these words were spoken of him, shall have an action for them, although there is no averment that he was the master of whom the words were spoke; for it shall not be intended that J. N. had more masters than one of that name. Cro. Jac. 444. 1 Roll. Abr. 79.

The doctrine of these two cases, which corresponds with what is laid down in Wiseman and Wiseman, Cro. Jac. 107. is shaken by some subsequent cases.

In one of these it is held, that if these words are spoke to J. S. Thy brother is perjured, it is not enough for the party who brings an action, to aver that they were spoken of him, but he must also aver that he is the brother of J. S. Cro. Car. 443.

In another case it is laid down that, if it is said to J. N. Your son J. N. stole my hens, an action brought by J. N. the younger, with averment that the words were spoken of him, does not lie, because it is not likewise averred that he is the son of J. N. to whom the words were spoke. 1 Roll. Abr. 84.

But

But in a ſtill later caſe the former, which ſeems to be the better opinion, is confirmed.

It was held in this, that, if theſe words are ſpoke, Captain Nelſon is a thief, an action lies for Robert Nelſon, with an averment that they were ſpoken in a converſation concerning him, although it is not averred that he is a captain, or uſually called ſo. 1 Roll. Abr. 85.

No action lies for theſe words, ſpoken of J. S. He is as great a thief as any in England, unleſs it be averred that there is a thief in England. Cro. Jac. 187.

So none lies, if it be ſaid to J. N. You are as bad as your wife when ſhe ſtole my cuſhion, without an averment that the felony here alluded to was committed. Cro. Jac. 331.

So none lies for ſaying to J. S. You are as great a rogue as J. N. who ſtole quilts, except it is averred that J. N. did ſteal quilts. Com. 267.

But if theſe words are ſpoke to J. N. As ſure as God governs the world, or King James this kingdom, you are a thief, an action lies without averring that God governs the world, or King James this kingdom; for things ſo apparent as theſe need not be ſhewn. Sid. 53.

So where the defendant had ſpoke theſe words, J. S. ſays I am a perjured rogue, he is a perjured rogue as well as I, J. S. ſhall have an action, although it is not averred that the defendant was a perjured rogue; for the words as well as I, amount to a confeſſion of his having been ſo. 1 Lev. 65.

So if it be ſaid of J. N. he robbed the Hockley butcher, there is no neceſſity to aver, in an action brought by J. N. that there was a Hockley butcher, for the words themſelves imply that there was one. Comb. 247.

It is not neceſſary to aver, what the meaning of words ſpoken in a foreign language is in Engliſh; for it is the duty of the judge, before whom the cauſe is tried, to inform himſelf of this from thoſe who underſtand the language. 1 Roll. Abr. 86.

No action lies for words ſpoken of a perſon in office, unleſs it be averred, that at the time of ſpeaking the words there was a colloquium of his office; for the diſgrace in office is here the ſole ground of the action. Cro. Jac. 557.

So none lies for words of a man of profeſſion, unleſs a colloquium of his profeſſion is laid. Strange 1138.

So it is not actionable to ſay of a tradeſman, He is a cheat, unleſs theſe words are alledged to be ſpoke of him in a converſation concerning his trade. 5 Mod. 395. 2 Saund. 307. Salk. 694. Ld. Raym. 1417. Str. 696.

But if it appears from the words themſelves, that they do relate to the office, profeſſion, or trade, of the perſon of whom they are ſpoke, it is not neceſſary to alledge a colloquium. Thus, if it be ſaid of J. S. a phyſician, He is no ſcholar, an action lies, although no colloquium is laid of his profeſſion; for, as no man can be a good phyſician unleſs he is a ſcholar, theſe words neceſſarily imply a ſlander in his profeſſion. 1 Roll. Abr. 54.

So an action lies for theſe words of a tradeſman, Have a care of him, do not deal with him, he is a cheat, he has cheated all the farmers at E. and now he is come to cheat at F. it being apparent from the words themſelves, that they do relate to his trade. 2 Lev. 62.

So theſe words, if ſpoke of a man in trade, He is a ſorry pitiful fellow, and compounded his debts, are actionable without alledging a colloquium; for ſuch words muſt greatly leſſen the credit of a tradeſman, and be very prejudicial to him. Ld. Raym. 1480.

If it is alledged that the colloquium was at a certain place, and that the defendant ſpoke the words laid, it is well enough, although it is not averred that he ſpoke them then there; for it ſhall be intended that they were ſpoke where the colloquium was. Palm. 385.

It is ſufficient to aver, that the words, for which the action is brought, were ſpoke of the plaintiff in a colloquium with J. S. it not being neceſſary to aver, that they were ſpoken in a converſation concerning the plaintiff. 1 Keb. 273.

Nothing, which would otherways have been doubtful, can be reduced to certainty by an innuendo; for the uſe of this, which means no more than the word aforeſaid, is to point out what was before well aſcertained. And ſo little regard is paid to words which only come in under an innuendo, that no iſſue can be taken upon ſuch words. 4 Co. 17. Cro. Car. 443.

If it is alledged that one of the ſervants of J. S. (innuendo J. N. a ſervant of J. S.) is a thief, no action lies; for, as it is not averred that theſe words were ſpoken of J. N. it ſhall not be collected from the innuendo that he was the perſon intended. 4 Co. 17. b.

So for theſe words of J. N. He did burn my barn, (innuendo) a barn with corn in it, no action lies; becauſe theſe words, taken in the milder ſenſe, (it not being felony to burn a barn that has no corn in it, unleſs it is parcel of a manſion-houſe) would not be actionable, and the innuendo ſhall not make them ſo. 4 Co. 20. 1 Roll. Abr. 82.

So no action lies for ſaying of J. S. He hath forſworn himſelf, (innuendo before the juſtices of aſſize); for theſe words are not actionable in themſelves, and what is ſuppoſed by the innuendo could not have been collected from them. 1 Roll. Abr. 82.

So where theſe words were ſpoke to J. N. Thou (innuendo the plaintiff) art a thief, no action lies; for the want of averment that they were ſpoken of the plaintiff ſhall not be ſupplied by an innuendo. 1 Roll. Abr. 83.

But on the other hand, as the innuendo ſhall not ſupply any defect in the words themſelves, or the want of averment, no repugnancy therein contained ſhall vitiate, if the words would, without the help of an innuendo, have been actionable. Thus, an action was brought for theſe words ſpoken of J. S. He was perjured in his anſwer in the Star-Chamber (innuendo in a certain bill exhibited there by the plaintiff). It is impoſſible that what is contained in this innuendo can be true, becauſe, as a man is not ſworn to ſuch a bill, he cannot be perjured in exhibiting it; yet it was held that this action did lie: Et per cur', As theſe words are in themſelves actionable without it, the innuendo, being repugnant, is void, and ought not to be regarded. 4 New Abr. 516. Cro. Eliz. 609. 1 Roll. Abr. 83.

In the caſe of ſlander for words ſpoke, the law, which conſiders that theſe may and frequently do proceed from ſudden paſſion, allows the truth of the charge implied in them to be pleaded in juſtification. Thus, if an action is brought for calling the plaintiff a thief, the defendant may plead in his juſtification, that the plaintiff has been guilty of a theft. 1 Roll. Abr. 87.

So if the words, for which an action is brought are, J. S. is a perjured man, the defendant may juſtify by pleading that J. S. was perjured in a certain cauſe.

But however the tenderneſs of the law may admit it to be a juſtification of words ſpoke, that the charge therein contained is true, it admits of no ſuch juſtification in the caſe of written ſlander. Thus, in an action for publiſhing a libel, upon Mr. Branley, recorder of Warwick, it was agreed by the whole court, that, where ſlander is in writing, the truth of the charge therein contained can no more be juſtified in an action upon the caſe, brought by the injured perſon, than in a criminal proſecution at the ſuit of the crown. 4 New Abr. 516.

In an action for theſe words ſpoken of the plaintiff, He is a thief, the defendant pleaded that he had been guilty of ſtealing ſomething. It was replied, that after the felony, and before the ſpeaking of the words, the plaintiff had been pardoned by a general pardon. Upon a demurrer, this replication was held to be good; becauſe the guilt as well as puniſhment is taken away by the pardon. It was alſo laid down, that it makes no difference, in ſuch a caſe, whether it was a general pardon or a ſpecial one, of which the defendant might perhaps be ignorant; for that he is at his peril to take care how he ſpeaks words which are ſlanderous. Hob. 81.

But where the plaintiff to a plea of juſtification replies a general pardon, it is incumbent upon him to ſhew, that he is not within any of the exceptions therein contained. Raym. 23.

An action being brought for theſe words, He ſtole plate out of my chamber, the defendant pleaded that he had loſt plate out of his chamber, and that, ſuſpecting the plaintiff to have ſtolen it, he had ſpoke the words. This plea was upon upon a demurrer held to be ill; et per cur', Suſpicion is not a ſufficient juſtification for the ſpeaking ſuch words. Cro. Car. 52.

Common fame will juſtify the arreſting a perſon on ſuſpicion of having committed a felony, and charging him in a judicial way with being guilty of it; but common fame is no good juſtification for ſuch a charge in an extra-judicial way. 1 Roll. Abr. 43. Hob. 82. Cro. Eliz. 248. Hutt. 13.

The preciſe words, and the whole of them, as laid in the plaintiff's declaration, muſt be confeſſed and juſtified in the defendant's plea, otherwiſe it is no good juſtification. 4 Co. 13. b. 14. a.

If an action is brought for theſe words of the plaintiff, He is a traitor, it is not a ſufficient anſwer, for the defendent to plead that he only ſpoke the following words, Such things traitors do, or any other words than the very words laid in the declaration. Cro. Eliz. 153. 1 Roll. Abr. 83.

So if the plaintiff declares, that whereas ſhe was of good fame and reputation, the defendant ſpoke the following words of her, She is a common whore; and the defendant alledges by way of juſtification, that at the time of ſpeaking the words, ſhe was not of good fame or reputation, this plea is ill; for it is no anſwer to the charge contained in the words, and only goes to what is laid by way of inducement, which required no anſwer. Style 118.

So if a declaration charges the ſpeaking certain words of the plaintiff, it is not a good juſtification, for the defendant to alledge that he heard another ſpeak the words, quæ eſt eadem; for the preciſe charge ought to be juſtified; and beſides, it can never be the ſame thing to ſpeak words and to hear them ſpoke. 2 Roll. Rep. 284.

So if theſe words are laid to be ſpoke of J. S. He is a thief, and hath ſtolen 20 l. or 40 l. and the defendant pleads that the plaintiff did ſteal two pullets; this is no good juſtification, it being no anſwer to the charge. 1 Roll. Rep. 214.

So where in an action for theſe words, Thou haſt played the thief, for thou haſt ſtolen my cloth and half a yard of velvet, the defendant juſtified the ſpeaking the following words, Thou haſt ſtolen part of the velvet delivered to you; this juſtification was held to be ill, becauſe it only goes to part of the words laid in the plaintiff's declaration. Cro. Eliz. 239.

So if the words, for which an action is brought, charge a tradeſman with being a bankrupt upon the firſt day of April 17 Ja. and the defendant pleads that the plaintiff became a bankrupt upon the firſt day of April 15 Ja. and that therefore he ſpoke the words; this plea is not a good bar; becauſe it is not alledged that the plaintiff continued a bankrupt till the time of ſpeaking the words, for he might afterwards recover his credit in trade. Cro. Ja. 578.

But although it is not a good juſtification unleſs all the preciſe words, in the declaration of the plaintiff, are juſtified, yet the defendant is not confined to do this only; for, if any other words were ſpoken at the ſame time, by which the force of thoſe laid would be taken away, he may in pleading avail him thereof. 4 Co. 13. b. 14. a. 19. b. Cro. Car. 510.

In an action for ſaying to the plaintiff You are a murderer, the defendant alledged, that in a converſation with the plaintiff concerning poaching, the plaintiff confeſſed he had killed a great number of hares, and that thereupon the defendant ſaid to him, You are a murderer (innuendo a murderer of hares) this plea, which confeſſes and juſtifies the words, was held to be a good juſtification; for it would be unreaſonable, where this is done, to put the defendant to the general iſſue. 4 Co. 13. b. 14. a.

Beſides that ſlanderous words, publiſhed by ſpeaking, may always be juſtified if the charge contained in them is true, they may in certain caſes be juſtified where it is not ſo. Thus, any words which import the charge of a crime may, notwithſtanding the falſity of them, be publiſhed, if they are publiſhed in a courſe of juſtice. Cro. Eliz. 230, 248. Hob. 82. Hutt. 113. 1 Roll. Abr. 43. 4 Co. 14. b. 15. a.

So a barriſter my juſtify the ſpeaking words, in pleading his client's cauſe, that are both falſe and ſlanderous, for which if ſpoken on another occaſion an action would lie. Cro. Ja. 90. 1 Roll. Abr. 87. Style 462.

So a witneſs may juſtify the ſpeaking ſlander, although it is falſe, in giving his evidence; this being done for the furtherance of juſtice. Cro. Eliz. 230.

So if a parſon, without any intent to ſlander, recites a ſtory in his ſermon which is falſe as well as ſlanderous, the doing this may be juſtified. Cro. Ja. 91. 1 Roll. Abr. 87.

Heretofore the truth of the charge contained in the words was allowed to be given in evidence, in mitigation of damages, on a plea of Not guilty; but at a meeting of all the judges, upon a caſe in the court of Common pleas, it was agreed not to allow this to be done for the time to come; becauſe, unleſs the truth of the words is pleaded by way of juſtification, the plaintiff cannot come prepared to defend himſelf as to that point. Str. 1200.

VIII. Actions popular, or actions qui tam.

Actions qui tam are ſuch as are given by act of parliament, which give a penalty and create a forfeiture for the neglect of ſome duty or commiſſion of ſome crime, to be recovered by action or information, at the ſuit of him who proſecutes as well in the King's name as in his own. It is ſometimes called a popular action, when the penalty or part of it is given to any one who will ſue for the ſame. 1 New Abr. 37.

Under this head is conſidered,

1. In what caſes actions qui tam lie: and what ought to be the form of them.
2. In what courts they may be brought and where laid; and the proceedings and pleadings in them.
3. Of the judgment, coſts, and compounding the penalty in ſuch actions.

1. In what caſe actions qui tam lie; and what ought to be the form of them.

Wherever a ſtatute prohibits a thing, as being an immediate offence againſt the publick good in general, under a certain penalty, and the penalty or part of it is given to him who will ſue for it, any perſon may bring ſuch action or information, and lay his demand tam pro domino rege quam pro ſeipſo. Co. Ent. 375. 1 Lutw. 133, 138. Dyer 95. 1 And. 139.

Alſo where a ſtatute prohibits or commands a thing, the doing or omiſſion whereof is both an immediate damage to the party, and alſo highly concerns the good of the publick, the honour of the King, &c. the party grieved may, and as ſome ſay, ought to bring his action on ſuch ſtatute, tam pro domino rege quam pro ſeipſo, eſpecially if the King be intitled to a fine. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 265. 4 Co. 13.

It is agreed, that an action or information on a publick ſtatute, need not recite the ſtatute on which it is grounded, whether the offence be ſuch only becauſe prohibited, or be an evil in its own nature, and whether it be prohibited by more than one ſtatute, or by one only; for the judges are bound ex officio to take notice of all publick ſtatutes. 5 H. 7. 17. b. 2 Roll. Abr. 79. Plowd. 179. 4 Co. 48. Cro. Eliz. 236. Cro. Car. 229. Dyer 155, 159.

But if the proſecutor takes upon him to recite the ſtatute, and materially varies from a ſubſtantial part thereof, this is fatal, becauſe it does not judicially appear to the court that there is ſuch a foundation for the proſecution as that whereon it is expreſly grounded. See 2 Hawk. 246.

But if an information contain ſeveral offences againſt a ſtatute, and be well laid as to ſome and defective as to others, the informer may have judgment for what is well laid; as where the words of the ſtatute are fully purſued in the deſcription of ſome of the offences, and not of others; or where the time is in part certain and in part uncertain.

uncertain. Cro. Jac. 104. 1 Sid. 368. 2 Keb. 366, 367. 2 Rol. Abr. 696. Cro. Jac. 529.

Alſo an action or information qui tam, need not conclude contra pacem, or in contemptum domini regis, as an indictment muſt. 2 Hawk. P. C. 266.

He who brings an action on a penal ſtatute, which gives one moiety of the forfeiture to the King, and the other to the informer, may either have a writ againſt the defendant, quod reddat domino regi, & A. B. qui tam, &c. quas ei debet, or quod reddat A. B. qui tam, &c. quas ei debet, and in either caſe the writ is well purſued by a declaration in the name of the plaintiff only. 1 Jones 261. Cro. Car. 256. Plowd. 77. Dyer 95.

It ſeems agreed, that every information muſt be in this form, viz. that the informer tam pro domino rege quam pro ſeipſo ſequitur, even where it is brought upon a ſtatute, which gives one third part of the penalty to a third perſon; but there is great variety in the form of ſuch informations in other reſpects; for ſometimes they ſay that the action accrues to the informer, to demand the forfeiture for the King and himſelf, and ſometimes that it accrues to the King and to the informer, and to J. S. viz. where it is divided into three parts; and ſometimes they have no clauſe at all of this kind, and ſometimes a proceſs is prayed to bring in the defendant to anſwer the informer, and ſometimes to anſwer as well the King as the informer, and ſometimes to anſwer concerning the premiſſes, without ſaying to whom. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 265, 267.

Such information may demand what is due to the informer, without mentioning what is due to the King; alſo if the quantum depend on what ſhall be found by the jury, a blank may be left for the ſum; but if it demand more or leſs for the party than his due, it is inſufficient as to him; but even in ſuch caſe it may be ſufficient as to the King's ſhare. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267.

If the action be popular, i. e. ſuch as any perſon may bring, it may conclude ad grave damnum, without adding of the plaintiff; becauſe every offence for which ſuch action is brought, is ſuppoſed to be a general grievance to every body. Bro. Action popular 2. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267.

Where the penalty is given for continuing ſuch a practice for a certain time, or for doing ſuch an act within ſuch a time, the information muſt be very particular in bringing the offence within the time preſcribed. 1 Lutw. 162. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267, 268.

By the ſtat. 18 Eliz. cap. 5. None ſhall purſue againſt any perſon on a penal ſtatute, but by way of information or original action, except where the penalty is limited to certain perſons, &c. yet popular actions in the King's Bench or Exchequer, ſeem not within the meaning of this ſtatute; for it doth not reſtrain the ſuit to original writs, but only to original actions, and ſuch actions by bill are properly orignal ones in the courts in which they are concerned; and therefore it ſeems a reaſonable conſtruction that the meaning of the ſtatute was only to reſtrain ſuits commenced in inferior courts, and afterwards removed into ſuperior. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267, 268.

2. In what courts they may be brought, and where laid; and the proceedings and pleadings in them.

By the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. "All offences againſt penal ſtatutes, for which any common informer may ground any popular action, bill, plaint, ſuit or information, before juſtices of aſſiſe, or niſi prius, or of general goal-delivery, or of oyer, &c. or of peace, &c. (except offences concerning recuſancy, or maintenance, or the King's cuſtoms, or tranſporting gold or ſilver, or munition or wooll or leather, &c.) ſhall be commenced, ſued, tried, recovered and determined by action, plaint, bill, information or indictment before the juſtices of aſſiſe, of niſi prius, of oyer, &c. or goal-delivery, or before juſtices of the peace of every county, city, borough or town corporate or liberty, having power to inquire of, hear and determine the ſame, wherein ſuch offences ſhall be committed in any of the courts, places of judicature, or liberties aforeſaid reſpectively, only at the choice of the parties which ſhall or will commence ſuit or proſecute for the ſame, and not elſewhere, ſave only in the ſaid counties or places, or places uſual for theſe counties or any of them; and the like proceſs in every popular action, bill, plaint, information or ſuit, ſhall be as in actions of treſpaſs vi et armis at Common law; and all informations, actions, bills, plaints and ſuits whatſoever, either by the attorney general, or by any officer whatſoever, in any of the courts of Weſtminſter, for or concerning any the offences aforeſaid, ſhall be void."

"And in all ſuits on penal ſtatutes, the offence ſhall be in the proper county; and if on the general iſſue the offence be not proved in the ſame county in which it is laid, the defendant ſhall be found not guilty."

"And no officer ſhall receive, file, or enter of record, any information, bill, plaint, count or declaration on the ſaid ſtatutes, which by this act are appointed to be heard and determined in their proper counties, till the informer or relator hath taken an oath before a judge of the court, that the offence was not committed in any other county, than where by the information, &c. the ſame is ſuppoſed to have been committed, &c. the ſame oath to be there entred of record."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it has been holden, that no action of debt or information, or other ſuit whatever, can be brought on any penal ſtatute made before 21 Jac. 1. in any of the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, for any offence not excepted by the ſtatute, and for which the offender may be proſecuted in the county, unleſs ſuch offence ſhall be committed in the ſame county in which ſuch court ſhall ſit; and as to the objection, that by this reſtraint of ſuits on penal ſtatutes to the ſaid courts, the offence would become diſpuniſhable by the offender's removing from the county; it may be anſwered, that he may be ſued to an outlawry in the ſame manner as in an action of treſpaſs. 1 Salk. 372. 5 Mod. 425. 2 Lev. 204. 3 Inſt. 192. 1 Jon. 193.

That where a ſubſequent ſtatute gives an action of debt, or any other remedy for the recovery of a penalty in any court of record generally, it ſo far impliedly repeals the reſtraint of 21 Jac. 1. and conſequently leaves the informer at his liberty to ſue in the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall. 1 Salk. 372.

That the ſtatute gives no juriſdiction to the courts therein mentioned, over any offences, in relation to which they had none before; and therefore that ſuits for ſuch offences muſt be brought in the courts of Weſtminſter, in the ſame manner as before. Cro. Car. 119. Lite. Rep. 163. Hutt. 98. 1 Vent. 8.

That the ſaid ſtatute hinders not the removal of any cauſe in the King's Bench by a certiorari, after which it may be either tried there or in the county by a niſi prius. 1 Jones 193. 2 Hawk. P. C. 271.

Alſo where a ſtatute limits ſuits by an informer qui tam to other courts, yet any one may, by conſtruction of law, exhibit an information in the Exchequer for the whole penalty, for the uſe of the King. 1 And. 127. Cro. Jac. 178. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267.

That on the laſt clauſe of the ſtatute it cannot be aſſigned for error, that it did not appear upon the record, that an information, &c. was filed with ſuch previous oath as the ſtatute requires, for it is no parcel of the record, but is only directory to the officer, that no information ſhall be received, unleſs the informer be firſt ſworn. Cro. Car. 316.

By the 18 Eliz. cap. 5. "Every informer on any penal ſtatute, ſhall exhibit his ſuit in his proper perſon, and purſue the ſame either by himſelf or by his attorney in court, and ſhall not uſe any deputy."

Any informer qui tam, or plaintiff in a popular action may be nonſuit, and thereby determine the ſuit as to himſelf at the leaſt; and though the king cannot be nonſuit, the attorney general may enter a nolle proſequi to an information by the king only. Co. Lit. 139. Bro. Nonſuit 68. See 1 Sid. 420. 1 Salk. 21.

By the ſtat. 29 Eliz. cap. 5. and 31 Eliz. cap. 10. "If any natural-born ſubject or denizen, ſhall be ſued on any penal law in the King's Bench, Common Pleas, or the Exchequer, where he is bailable, or by form of upon a demurrer held to be ill; et per cur', Suſpicion is not a ſufficient juſtification for the ſpeaking ſuch words. Cro. Car. 52.

Common fame will juſtify the arreſting a perſon on ſuſpicion of having committed a felony, and charging him in a judicial way with being guilty of it; but common fame is no good juſtification for ſuch a charge in an extra-judicial way. 1 Roll. Abr. 43. Hob. 82. Cro. Eliz. 248. Hutt. 13.

The preciſe words, and the whole of them, as laid in the plaintiff's declaration, muſt be confeſſed and juſtified in the defendant's plea, otherwiſe it is no good juſtification. 4 Co. 13. b. 14. a.

If an action is brought for theſe words of the plaintiff, He is a traitor, it is not a ſufficient anſwer, for the defendent to plead that he only ſpoke the following words, Such things traitors do, or any other words than the very words laid in the declaration. Cro. Eliz. 153. 1 Roll. Abr. 83.

So if the plaintiff declares, that whereas ſhe was of good fame and reputation, the defendant ſpoke the following words of her, She is a common whore; and the defendant alledges by way of juſtification, that at the time of ſpeaking the words, ſhe was not of good fame or reputation, this plea is ill; for it is no anſwer to the charge contained in the words, and only goes to what is laid by way of inducement, which required no anſwer. Style 118.

So if a declaration charges the ſpeaking certain words of the plaintiff, it is not a good juſtification, for the defendant to alledge that he heard another ſpeak the words, quæ eſt eadem; for the preciſe charge ought to be juſtified; and beſides, it can never be the ſame thing to ſpeak words and to hear them ſpoke. 2 Roll. Rep. 284.

So if theſe words are laid to be ſpoke of J. S. He is a thief, and hath ſtolen 20 l. or 40 l. and the defendant pleads that the plaintiff did ſteal two pullets; this is no good juſtification, it being no anſwer to the charge. 1 Roll. Rep. 214.

So where in an action for theſe words, Thou haſt played the thief, for thou haſt ſtolen my cloth and half a yard of velvet, the defendant juſtified the ſpeaking the following words, Thou haſt ſtolen part of the velvet delivered to you; this juſtification was held to be ill, becauſe it only goes to part of the words laid in the plaintiff's declaration. Cro. Eliz. 239.

So if the words, for which an action is brought, charge a tradeſman with being a bankrupt upon the firſt day of April 17 Ja. and the defendant pleads that the plaintiff became a bankrupt upon the firſt day of April 15 Ja. and that therefore he ſpoke the words; this plea is not a good bar; becauſe it is not alledged that the plaintiff continued a bankrupt till the time of ſpeaking the words, for he might afterwards recover his credit in trade. Cro. Ja. 578.

But although it is not a good juſtification unleſs all the preciſe words, in the declaration of the plaintiff, are juſtified, yet the defendant is not confined to do this only; for, if any other words were ſpoken at the ſame time, by which the force of thoſe laid would be taken away, he may in pleading avail him thereof. 4 Co. 13. b. 14. a. 19. b. Cro. Car. 510.

In an action for ſaying to the plaintiff You are a murderer, the defendant alledged, that in a converſation with the plaintiff concerning poaching, the plaintiff confeſſed he had killed a great number of hares, and that thereupon the defendant ſaid to him, You are a murderer (innuendo a murderer of hares) this plea, which confeſſes and juſtifies the words, was held to be a good juſtification; for it would be unreaſonable, where this is done, to put the defendant to the general iſſue. 4 Co. 13. b. 14. a.

Beſides that ſlanderous words, publiſhed by ſpeaking, may always be juſtified if the charge contained in them is true, they may in certain caſes be juſtified where it is not ſo. Thus, any words which import the charge of a crime may, notwithſtanding the falſity of them, be publiſhed, if they are publiſhed in a courſe of juſtice. *Cro. So a barriſter my juſtify the ſpeaking words, in pleading his client's cauſe, that are both falſe and ſlanderous, for which if ſpoken on another occaſion an action would lie. Cro. Ja. 90. 1 Roll. Abr. 87. Style 462.

So a witneſs may juſtify the ſpeaking ſlander, although it is falſe, in giving his evidence; this being done for the furtherance of juſtice. Cro. Eliz. 230.

So if a parſon, without any intent to ſlander, recites a ſtory in his ſermon which is falſe as well as ſlanderous, the doing this may be juſtified. Cro. Ja. 91. 1 Roll. Abr. 87.

Heretofore the truth of the charge contained in the words was allowed to be given in evidence, in mitigation of damages, on a plea of Not guilty; but at a meeting of all the judges, upon a caſe in the court of Common pleas, it was agreed not to allow this to be done for the time to come; becauſe, unleſs the truth of the words is pleaded by way of juſtification, the plaintiff cannot come prepared to defend himſelf as to that point. Str. 1200.

But if the proſecutor takes upon him to recite the ſtatute, and materially varies from a ſubſtantial part thereof, this is fatal, becauſe it does not judicially appear to the court that there is ſuch a foundation for the proſecution as that whereon it is expreſly grounded. See 2 Hawk. 246.

But if an information contain ſeveral offences againſt a ſtatute, and be well laid as to ſome and defective as to others, the informer may have judgment for what is well laid; as where the words of the ſtatute are fully purſued in the deſcription of ſome of the offences, and not of others; or where the time is in part certain and in part uncertain.

uncertain. Cro. Jac. 104. 1 Sid. 368. 2 Keb. 366, 367. 2 Rol. Abr. 696. Cro. Jac. 529.

Alſo an action or information qui tam, need not conclude contra pacem, or in contemptum domini regis, as an indictment muſt. 2 Hawk. P. C. 266.

He who brings an action on a penal ſtatute, which gives one moiety of the forfeiture to the King, and the other to the informer, may either have a writ againſt the defendant, quod reddat domino regi, & A. B. qui tam, &c. quas ei debet, or quod reddat A. B. qui tam, &c. quas ei debet, and in either caſe the writ is well purſued by a declaration in the name of the plaintiff only. 1 Jones 261. Cro. Car. 256. Plowd. 77. Dyer 95.

It ſeems agreed, that every information muſt be in this form, viz. that the informer tam pro domino rege quam pro ſeipſo ſequitur, even where it is brought upon a ſtatute, which gives one third part of the penalty to a third perſon; but there is great variety in the form of ſuch informations in other reſpects; for ſometimes they ſay that the action accrues to the informer, to demand the forfeiture for the King and himſelf, and ſometimes that it accrues to the King and to the informer, and to J. S. viz. where it is divided into three parts; and ſometimes they have no clauſe at all of this kind, and ſometimes a proceſs is prayed to bring in the defendant to anſwer the informer, and ſometimes to anſwer as well the King as the informer, and ſometimes to anſwer concerning the premiſſes, without ſaying to whom. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 265, 267.

Such information may demand what is due to the informer, without mentioning what is due to the King; alſo if the quantum depend on what ſhall be found by the jury, a blank may be left for the ſum; but if it demand more or leſs for the party than his due, it is inſufficient as to him; but even in ſuch caſe it may be ſufficient as to the King's ſhare. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267.

If the action be popular, i. e. ſuch as any perſon may bring, it may conclude ad grave damnum, without adding of the plaintiff; becauſe every offence for which ſuch action is brought, is ſuppoſed to be a general grievance to every body. Bro. Action popular 2. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267.

Where the penalty is given for continuing ſuch a practice for a certain time, or for doing ſuch an act within ſuch a time, the information muſt be very particular in bringing the offence within the time preſcribed. 1 Lutw. 162. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267, 268.

By the ſtat. 18 Eliz. cap. 5. None ſhall purſue againſt any perſon on a penal ſtatute, but by way of information or original action, except where the penalty is limited to certain perſons, &c. yet popular actions in the King's Bench or Exchequer, ſeem not within the meaning of this ſtatute; for it doth not reſtrain the ſuit to original writs, but only to original actions, and ſuch actions by bill are properly orignal ones in the courts in which they are concerned; and therefore it ſeems a reaſonable conſtruction that the meaning of the ſtatute was only to reſtrain ſuits commenced in inferior courts, and afterwards removed into ſuperior. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267, 268.

2. In what courts they may be brought, and where laid; and the proceedings and pleadings in them.

By the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. "All offences againſt penal ſtatutes, for which any common informer may ground any popular action, bill, plaint, ſuit or information, before juſtices of aſſiſe, or niſi prius, or of general goal-delivery, or of oyer, &c. or of peace, &c. (except offences concerning recuſancy, or maintenance, or the King's cuſtoms, or tranſporting gold or ſilver, or munition or wooll or leather, &c.) ſhall be commenced, ſued, tried, recovered and determined by action, plaint, bill, information or indictment before the juſtices of aſſiſe, of niſi prius, of oyer, &c. or goal-delivery, or before juſtices of the peace of every county, city, borough or town corporate or liberty, having power to inquire of, hear and determine the ſame, wherein ſuch offences ſhall be committed in any of the courts, places of judicature, or liberties aforeſaid reſpectively, only at the choice of the parties which ſhall or will commence ſuit or proſecute for the ſame, and not elſewhere, ſave only in the ſaid counties or places, or places uſual for theſe counties or any of them; and the like proceſs in every popular action, bill, plaint, information or ſuit, ſhall be as in actions of treſpaſs vi et armis at Common law; and all informations, actions, bills, plaints and ſuits whatſoever, either by the attorney general, or by any officer whatſoever, in any of the courts of Weſtminſter, for or concerning any the offences aforeſaid, ſhall be void."

"And in all ſuits on penal ſtatutes, the offence ſhall be in the proper county; and if on the general iſſue the offence be not proved in the ſame county in which it is laid, the defendant ſhall be found not guilty."

"And no officer ſhall receive, file, or enter of record, any information, bill, plaint, count or declaration on the ſaid ſtatutes, which by this act are appointed to be heard and determined in their proper counties, till the informer or relator hath taken an oath before a judge of the court, that the offence was not committed in any other county, than where by the information, &c. the ſame is ſuppoſed to have been committed, &c. the ſame oath to be there entred of record."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it has been holden, that no action of debt or information, or other ſuit whatever, can be brought on any penal ſtatute made before 21 Jac. 1. in any of the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, for any offence not excepted by the ſtatute, and for which the offender may be proſecuted in the county, unleſs ſuch offence ſhall be committed in the ſame county in which ſuch court ſhall ſit; and as to the objection, that by this reſtraint of ſuits on penal ſtatutes to the ſaid courts, the offence would become diſpuniſhable by the offender's removing from the county; it may be anſwered, that he may be ſued to an outlawry in the ſame manner as in an action of treſpaſs. 1 Salk. 372. 5 Mod. 425. 2 Lev. 204. 3 Inſt. 192. 1 Jon. 193.

That where a ſubſequent ſtatute gives an action of debt, or any other remedy for the recovery of a penalty in any court of record generally, it ſo far impliedly repeals the reſtraint of 21 Jac. 1. and conſequently leaves the informer at his liberty to ſue in the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall. 1 Salk. 372.

That the ſtatute gives no juriſdiction to the courts therein mentioned, over any offences, in relation to which they had none before; and therefore that ſuits for ſuch offences muſt be brought in the courts of Weſtminſter, in the ſame manner as before. Cro. Car. 119. Lite. Rep. 163. Hutt. 98. 1 Vent. 8.

That the ſaid ſtatute hinders not the removal of any cauſe in the King's Bench by a certiorari, after which it may be either tried there or in the county by a niſi prius. 1 Jones 193. 2 Hawk. P. C. 271.

Alſo where a ſtatute limits ſuits by an informer qui tam to other courts, yet any one may, by conſtruction of law, exhibit an information in the Exchequer for the whole penalty, for the uſe of the King. 1 And. 127. Cro. Jac. 178. 2 Hawk. P. C. 267.

That on the laſt clauſe of the ſtatute it cannot be aſſigned for error, that it did not appear upon the record, that an information, &c. was filed with ſuch previous oath as the ſtatute requires, for it is no parcel of the record, but is only directory to the officer, that no information ſhall be received, unleſs the informer be firſt ſworn. Cro. Car. 316.

By the 18 Eliz. cap. 5. "Every informer on any penal ſtatute, ſhall exhibit his ſuit in his proper perſon, and purſue the ſame either by himſelf or by his attorney in court, and ſhall not uſe any deputy."

Any informer qui tam, or plaintiff in a popular action may be nonſuit, and thereby determine the ſuit as to himſelf at the leaſt; and though the king cannot be nonſuit, the attorney general may enter a nolle proſequi to an information by the king only. Co. Lit. 139. Bro. Nonſuit 68. See 1 Sid. 420. 1 Salk. 21.

By the ſtat. 29 Eliz. cap. 5. and 31 Eliz. cap. 10. "If any natural-born ſubject or denizen, ſhall be ſued on any penal law in the King's Bench, Common Pleas, or the Exchequer, where he is bailable, or by form of the court may appear by attorney; in every ſuch caſe he may, at the time contained in the firſt proceſs, appear by attorney, and not be urged to perſonal appearance, or to put in bail."

If the defendant plead a ſpecial plea, he muſt take care to ſet it forth with all convenient certainty, and to anſwer the whole time laid in the information; and if he plead the general iſſue, he muſt depend upon it, for he cannot plead together with it a ſpecial plea, either to the whole or to part of the charge. 1 Roll. Rep. 49, 134. Bridg. 115.

If the defendant plead Nil debet, it is ſafeſt to ſay expreſsly that he owes nothing to the informer, nor to the King; for if he only plead that he owes nothing to the informer, it may be objected that the whole declaration is not anſwered. Co. Ent. 165. Hob. 327. 1 Vent. 122. 3 Lev. 375.

If there be more than one defendant, they ought not to plead jointly that they are not guilty, but ſeverally, that neither they nor any of them are guilty, &c. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 276.

If the ſuit be grounded on the breach of a ſtatute appearing by matter of record, nil debet is no good plea. 2 Hawk. P. C. 277.

Wherever a ſuit on a penal ſtatute may be ſaid to be depending, it may be pleaded in bar of a ſubſequent proſecution, being expreſly averred to be for the ſame offence, as it may, though it be laid on a day different from that in the former; and it is ſaid, that a miſtake in ſuch a plea, of the day whereon ſuch prior ſuit was commenced, will not be fatal on the iſſue of nul tiel record, if it appears in truth to have been prior, &c. and if two informations be exhibited on the ſame day, they may mutually abate one another; becauſe there is no priority to attach the right of ſuit in one informer, more than in the other. Cro. Eliz. 261. 1 Roll. Rep. 49, 134.

If the defendant be within the proviſo of a penal ſtatute, he may take advantage of ſuch proviſo on the general iſſue, in a ſuit on ſuch ſtatute; but it hath been holden (even ſince the ſtatute of 21 Jac. 1.) that if he have matter in his diſcharge depending on a ſubſequent ſtatute, he muſt plead ſpecially. 2 Roll. Abr. 683. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 277.

As to replications to ſpecial pleas to informations qui tam, in the courts of Weſtminſter Hall, they are properly made in the name of the attorney general only; and ſuch replications in ſuits at aſſizes, are proper in the name of the clerk of aſſizes only; alſo replications to general iſſues, on ſuch informations in the King's Bench or Exchequer, may be in the name of the attorney general only; but generally the plaintiff only replies in actions qui tam; and in the Common pleas a demurrer to an information qui tam in the defendant's name only has been received. 2 Hawk. P. C. 277.

Wherever a plaintiff may declare tam pro domino rege quam pro ſe ipſo, he may continue the ſame form of words both in the joining of iſſue and in the venire; but is not bound to do it unleſs the King be intitled to part of the penalty. 2 Hawk. P. C. 278.

Where ſeveral perſons are jointly charged for an offence againſt a ſtatute, which in it's own nature may be committed by a ſingle perſon, without the concurrence of any other, ſome of them may be acquitted and others found guilty; for though the words of the information be joint, yet in judgment of law the charge is ſeveral againſt each defendant; alſo if one be informed againſt, as having offended oftner, or in a higher degree than is proved, as for having been abſent from church ten months, where he has been abſent but eight, or for having ingroſſed 1000 quarters of wheat, where he has ingroſſed but 100; he may be found guilty as to what is proved, and not guilty as to the reſidue, for ſuch offences are in the nature of treſpaſſes, which it is ſufficient to prove for any part; but if the offence conſiſts in making a contract contrary to the purview of a ſtatute, as in the caſe of uſury, it muſt be proved as it is laid. 2 Roll. Abr. 707. Lane 19, 59.

3. Of the judgment, coſts, and compounding the penalty in ſuch actions.

Where by a ſtatute the offender is to forfeit ſuch a ſum, to be divided into three parts, whereof one ſhall go to the King, one to the informer, and the other to the poor, and to be committed if he do not pay within ſuch a time, the judgment may be general that the King and informer ſhall recover the whole, without mentioning how it ſhall be diſtributed, or that the party be committed for non-payment; but if it mention only that the informer only ſhall recover, without ſaying any thing of the King, it is erroneous; yet if on ſuch information, as it is laid, the informer appears to have no right to any part, but the King ought to have the whole, and the judgment be that the defendant forfeit the whole, and that the King ſhall have one part, and the informer another, &c. it is erroneous only as to ſuch laſt clauſe, which diſtributes the forfeiture, but may ſtand for the firſt clauſe, that the defendant ſhall forfeit the whole; alſo if there be no clauſe at all concerning the forfeiture, in a conviction on a penal ſtatute, but only judgment quod convictus, it is ſufficient, for the forfeiture is implied. 1 And. 139. Style 329. 2 Roll. Abr. 102. 2 Keb. 820. 2 And. 128. 2 Hawk. P. C. 279

An informer on a popular ſtatute ſhall in no caſe whatſoever have his coſts, unleſs they be expreſly given by ſuch ſtatute, for the Common law gives coſts in no caſe; and the ſtatute of Glouceſter gives the demandant coſts only in caſes wherein he ſhall recover his damages, which ſuppoſes ſome damage to have been done to the demandant in particular, which cannot be ſaid in any popular action. 2 Keb. 781. 1 Roll. Abr. 574. 1 Lutw. 200. 1 Vent. 133. 1 Salk. 206. Cont. Moor 65. 3 Lev. 374. 2 Inſt. 288.

But wherever a ſtatute gives a certain penalty to the party grieved, he is intitled to his coſts by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, which gives the demandant his coſt sin all caſes wherein he ſhall recover his damages; for otherwiſe it would be in vain for him to ſue, ſince in many caſes the coſts would exceed the penalty. 2 Hawk. P. C. 274.

By the ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 5. (made perpetual by 27 Eliz. c. 10) "If any informer or plaintiff, on a penal ſtatute, ſhall willingly, delay his ſuit, or diſcontinue, or be nonſuit, or ſhall have the trial or matter paſſed againſt himſelf therein, by verdict or judgment of law, he ſhall pay to the defendant his coſts, charges and damages, to be aſſigned by the court, in which the ſuit ſhall be attempted, &c."

This ſtatute extends only to a common informer, and not to a party grieved; yet if a party grieved brings his action, and ſuch action be for any offence or wrong perſonal, immediately ſuppoſed to be done to the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or whatſoever the nature of the action may be; if the plaintiff might have coſts in caſe judgment ſhould be given for him, he ſhall pay them on a nonſuit, or verdict againſt him, by virtue of 23 Hen. 8. c. 15. and 4 Jac. 1. c. 3. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 274.

By the 18 Eliz. cap. 5. "No informer or plaintiff ſhall compound or agree with any that ſhall offend, or ſhall be ſurmiſed to offend againſt any penal ſtatute, for an offence committed, or pretended to be committed, but after anſwer made in court to the ſuit, nor after anſwer, but by conſent of the court in which the ſuit ſhall be depending; on pain that whoever ſhall offend, contrary to the true intent of this ſtatute, or ſhall by colour or pretence of proceſs, or without proceſs on colour of any offence againſt any penal law, make any compoſition or take any reward, or promiſe of reward, for himſelf, or to the uſe of any other, without conſent of ſome of his Majeſty's courts at Weſtminſter, and ſhall be thereof convict, ſhall ſtand in the pillory, &c. and ſhall be diſabled to ſue on any popular or penal ſtatute, and ſhall forfeit 10*l. &c.*"

This ſtatute extends only to common informers. 2 Hawk. P. C. 279.

This ſtatute extends as well to ſubſequent penal ſtatutes, as to thoſe which were in being when it was made. Hutt. 35. Alſo it extends to the compounding of ſuits commenced in courts which have no juriſdiction, as much as if they had juriſdiction. 1 Keb. 106. 1 Sid. 311.

By the ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 3. "It is declared, that all commiſſions, grants, licences, charters, or letters patent, of power, liberty, or faculty, to diſpenſe with, or to give licence or toleration to do any thing againſt the tenor or purport of any law, or to give or to make any warrant for any ſuch diſpenſation, &c. or to agree or compound for any forfeiture limited by any ſtatute; or of any grant or promiſe of the benefit of any ſuch forfeiture, before judgment thereupon, and all proclamations, &c. tending to the furthering of the ſame, are contrary to law, and void; and it is enacted, that all ſuch commiſſions, &c. ſhall be examined, heard, tried and determined by and according to the Common laws of this realm, and not otherwiſe; but it is provided that this act ſhall not extend to any warrant or privy ſeal from the King, to the juſtices of either bench, or the Exchequer, or of aſſize, or of oyer and terminer, and goal delivery; or of peace, or other juſtices, having power to hear and determine offences againſt any penal ſtatute, to compound for the forfeitures of any penal ſtatutes depending in ſuit before them, after plea pleaded. Alſo it is further provided, that the ſaid act ſhall not extend to any grants, &c. that had been granted concerning the licenſing of taverns, or ſelling, uttering, or retailing wines, or to be ſpent in the houſe of the party ſelling the ſame; or concerning the making of compoſitions for ſuch licences; ſo as the benefit thereof be reſerved to the uſe of the King, &c."

This ſtatute is in affirmance of the Common law. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 280.

Action upon a ſtatute, Is brought upon the breach of a ſtatute, whereby an action is given that lay not before; as where one commits perjury, to the prejudice of another, he who is damaged, ſhall have a writ upon the ſtatute, that is, where the ſtatute gives the ſuit or action to the party grieved, or otherwiſe to one perſon certain. Cowel.

Action prejudicial, (otherwiſe called preparatory, or principal) Is an action which ariſes from ſome doubt in the principal; as in caſe a man ſues his younger brother for lands deſcended from his father, and it is objected againſt him that he is a baſtard: Now this point of baſtardy is to be tried before the cauſe can any further proceed: And therefore it is termed *prejudicialis, quia prius judicanda. Action of a writ, Is a phraſe of ſpeech uſed, when one pleads ſome matter, by which he ſhews the plaintiff had no cauſe to have the writ he brought, yet it may be that he may have another writ or action for the ſame matter. Acts done, Are diſtinguiſhed into acts of God, the acts of the law, and acts of men. The act of God ſhall prejudice no man: As where the law preſcribeth a means to perfect or ſettle any right or eſtate; if by the act of God this means in ſome circumſtance becomes impoſſible, no party ſhall receive any damage thereby. *Co. Debt upon bond conditioned, that if W. R. performed the award of J. R. died before Whitſontide, but ſaid nothing as to the reſt of the condition, and yet adjudged a good plea, becauſe he was hindered from appearing at Guild-hall by the act of God, and ſo the obligation is ſaved, tho' he did not pay the 10*l.* for he had his election, either to do one or the other. *Cro. Caſe againſt a bargeman, who juſtified, for that there were ſeveral paſſengers in his barge, and a ſudden tempeſt ariſing, all the goods in the barge were thrown over-board to ſave the lives of the paſſengers, amongſt which the goods of the plaintiff were thrown over, and that he had not any notice that there was money in the pack; adjudged, that the action would not lie, becauſe what the owner of the barge did in this caſe, was occaſioned by the act of God, and in defence of their lives. 1 *Roll. If any of the circumſtances, which are required by law to perfect an eſtate, become impoſſible to be performed by the act of God, no perſon ſhall be prejudiced thereby; as where leſſee for another man's life is diſſeiſed, the means which the law requires to recover the profits is, that the leſſee re-enter and bring an action of treſpaſs; but if the ceſtui que vie die before re-entry, in ſuch caſe the leſſee ſhall have an action of treſpaſs without re-entry. 1 Rep. 97. Shelley's caſe.

Eliz.* 716.

Debt upon bond, conditioned, that if the plaintiff did bring ſuch a ſhip to a port in Greece, there to remain for forty days, or ſo long of the forty days as the defendant pleaſed, ſo as he might freight the ſaid ſhip, that then the defendant would freight it within forty days, and bring it to ſuch a port in England; there was a frivolous plea, to which the plaintiff demurred, and it was inſiſted for the defendant, that the firſt act was to be done by the plaintiff, (viz) to bring the ſhip to ſuch a port, there to remain by the ſpace of forty days, and he had not averred, that the ſhip was at that port by the ſpace of forty days, and for that reaſon the court inclined that the condition was not broken. Godb. 74.

Leaſe for years, in which the leſſor covenanted with the leſſee, that upon ſurrender of his ſaid leaſe at any time within the term, he would grant a new leaſe, afterwards the leſſor levied a fine ſur cognizance de droit of the lands, and granted and rendered the ſame to the cogniſee for 80 years; adjudged, that by this means the cogniſor had diſabled himſelf either to take the ſurrender or to make a new leaſe, and altho' the leſſee was to do the firſt act, (viz) to make the ſurrender, yet when the leſſor had diſabled himſelf to take it, the law will not compel him to do that which will be in vain; eſpecially in this caſe, for if he ſhould make a ſurrender, then he would loſe his old term without any poſſibility of having a new leaſe. 5 Rep. 20.

The condition of a bond was, that the obligor and his wife ſhould before Eaſter term, &c. levy a fine of ſuch lands to the plaintiff; the defendant pleaded, that before that term the plaintiff did not ſue for a writ of covenant to make himſelf capable of the fine, and Hobart, chief juſtice, was of opinion it was a good plea. Hutt. 48.

Debt upon bond, for performance of covenants, &c. the covenant was, that the obligor before ſuch a day ſhould make a further aſſurance of lands to the obligee, but at the coſts and charges of the obligee; the queſtion was, whether the obligee was firſt to offer the coſts, or whether the obligor was firſt to declare what manner of aſſurance he would make? and adjudged, that it being purely in the choice of the obligor, what manner of aſſurance he would make, he ought to do the firſt act, (viz) to give notice to the obligee what aſſurance he intended to make, and then the obligee is to ſupply the coſts. Moor 454.

The huſband ſettled an eſtate to the uſe of himſelf for life, and afterwards, to the uſe of Dorothy his wife for life, ſo long as ſhe would be effectually ready to demiſe it to his heir at law at 50*l.* yearly rent, when ſhe ſhould not dwell in it her ſelf; the huſband died, the widow married again, and lived with her huſband in another place, and having made no leaſe to the heir, he entred; adjudged, that ſhe ought to make none unleſs it had been demanded, and that the heir ought to tender a leaſe to her to ſign, with a reſervation of 50*l.* rent. Moor 626.

Debt by the mayor, &c. of London, for rent of a mill, which went by the labour of priſoners in Bridewell; the defendant pleaded a proviſo in the leaſe, that if the leſſors did not find eight men to work in the mill every day, that the leſſee might retain 8*d.* of the rent for every man wanting in that day, and ſo toties quoties; and that there had been ſo many men wanting for ſo many days, and the money retained for that defect amounted to more than the rent; the plaintiffs replied, that the defendant had ſo altered the mill, that he made it go with one horſe inſtead of eight men, for which reaſon they did not provide the men; and upon demurrer the plaintiffs had judgment, becauſe the alteration was made in the mill by the defendant's own act. Moor 877.

The condition of a bond was to deliver 200 weight of hops, &c. and the obligee was to chooſe them out of twenty-four bags of the obligor's own growing; in an action of debt brought on this bond for not delivering the hops, the defendant pleaded, that he was ready to deliver them, but the plaintiff had not choſe them; adjudged, that the plaintiff ought to do the firſt act, (viz.) to require the defendant to ſhew the twenty-four bags that he might make his choice. March 24.

Debt upon bond, conditioned, that whereas there was a ſuit in Chancery depending between the now plaintiff and ſeveral infants, by their guardian, and that it was decreed, that the plaintiff ſhould pay the ſaid guardian to the uſe of the infants 840*l.* in full ſatisfaction of their right and title to a leaſe of the manor of Martley-Hall, and other lands in Suffolk, if therefore the ſaid guardian ſhall procure the ſaid infants, when they come of age, to releaſe all their right and intereſt in and to the ſaid leaſe, then to be void; the defendant pleaded in bar, that the ſaid infants never had or pretended to have any right, title, or intereſt to the leaſe of the ſaid manor, which they might releaſe; and upon demurrer to this plea, the plaintiff had judgment; for, whether the infants had a title or not, the defendant had obliged himſelf to procure a releaſe from them de facto, and 'tis not material whether it was de jure or not; and the rather, becauſe by their bill in equity they pretended to have a title. 1 Saund. 215.

Aſſumpſit, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant (as he affirmed) was poſſeſſed of a ſixth part of a ſhip, which he offered to ſale; whereupon it was agreed between the plaintiff and him, that the defendant ſhould ſell all his intereſt to the plaintiff, and that the ſale ſhould be in writing, and the plaintiff ſhould pay the defendant 600*l.* &c. (viz.) 20*l.* in hand, and the reſt upon executing the writing, and in conſideration, that the plaintiff had paid the ſaid 20*l.* and had promiſed to perform the agreement on his part, the defendant promiſed to perform it on his part, but that the defendant had not performed the agreement on his part: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected that the breach was not well aſſigned, it being too general to ſay, that he had not performed the agreement on his part, for he ought to ſhew ſome particular in which he had not performed it; as, that he tendred the defendant a writing, which he refuſed to execute, or that he had not delivered to the plaintiff the ſixth part of a ſhip, &c. but adjudged, that 'tis not the plaintiff, but the defendant, who is to do the firſt act; 'tis he who is to tender the writing, becauſe

he had undertaken to sell his part by a writing; as where a covenant is to enter into a bond, the covenanter is to prepare it and tender it: Judgment for the plaintiff in C. B. and affirmed in error in B. R. 3 Lev. 319.

Covenant to seal and deliver a lease for years, to commence from Michaelmas next, and bond for performance of covenants; and on action of debt brought on that bond, the breach assigned was, that the obligor had not made one part of such lease, whereupon the obligee put one part in writing, and tendered it to the obligor to seal, which he refused. Et per curiam, Where a man covenants to seal and deliver a deed, he is bound to put it in writing; but if he refuses, the covenantee may do it, and 'tis warranted by law. 2 Roll. Rep. 177.

Det upon bond, conditioned to perform an award: Upon the pleadings in this case, the question did arise upon one part of the award, which was, that the defendant should seal and execute within seven days, such a release to the plaintiff as should be to the satisfaction of his (the plaintiff's) counsel; and the question was, which of the parties was to tender it? for the defendant was to execute it; but it was to be to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's counsel, and adjudged, that the defendant was to tender it; for 'tis not like the case where a deed is to be made by T. P. as the counsel of R. W. shall advise, for there the deed must be tendered as the counsel doth advise, and R. W. to whom 'tis to be made, must do the first act, (i. e.) he must tender the deed to T. P. by advise of his counsel. 1 Vent. 255.

Debt upon articles of agreement, wherein the plaintiff covenanted to execute a good conveyance of certain lands to the use of the defendant, at or before the 17th of November, and the defendant, in consideration thereof, agreed to pay the plaintiff 503*l. &c.* at such a place, tempore executionis of such conveyance, &c. for which the action was now brought; and upon a demurrer to this declaration, it was objected, that the plaintiff ought to execute the conveyance before the defendant was obliged to pay the money, because where no certain day is appointed for the payment, it must be reduced to a certainty by the act of the plaintiff, which in this case was by executing the conveyance; but the law had been the same, if a certain day had been appointed for the payment of the money, because the payment must necessarily relate to the execution of the deed, and not to the very day in which it was appointed to be executed, and so it was adjudged. 1 Lutw. 565.

Acts of parliament, Are positive laws, which consist of two parts, that is, the words of the act, and the sense and meaning, which both joined together make the law. Cowel. See titles Parliament, Statutes.

Actuary, (actuarius) Is the clerk or scribe, that registers the canons and constitutions of the convocation; also an officer in the Court Christian, who is in nature of a register. Cowel.

Adcredulitare, To purge himself by oath: Qui in collegio fuerit, ubi aliquis occisus est, adcredulitet se quod eum non percussit. Leges Inæ, cap. 36. Apud Bromptonum, cap. 34. apud Wilkins, who interprets it justificet se. Cowel. Du Fresne.

Addition, (additio) Signifieth a title given to a man besides his christian and surname, shewing his estate, degree, mistery, trade, place of dwelling, &c. As for example; additions of estate are yeoman, gentleman, esquire, and such like; additions of degree are names of dignity, as knight, earl, marquis, duke: And additions of mistery are scrivener, painter, mason, carpenter, and all others of like nature; for mistery is the craft or trade whereby a man gets his living: Additions of towns, as London, Kingston, Chester, &c. and where a man hath a household in two places, he shall be said to dwell in both of them; so that his addition in either shall suffice. It is provided by the following statute, viz. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. that in suits or actions, where process of outlawry lies, such additions should be to the name of the defendant, to shew his estate, mistery, and place where he dwells; and that writs, not having such additions, shall abate, if the defendant take exception thereto, but not by the office of the court; and this was ordained by that statute, that one man might not be vexed or troubled by the outlawry of another, but that by reason of the certain addition, every person may be known, and bear his own burden. Cowel.

Stat. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. A. D. 1413. intitled, In which original writs additions of the defendants names shall be put. "Item, it is ordained and established, that in every original writ of actions personals, appeals, and indictmets, and in which the exigent shall be awarded, to the names of the defendants in such writs original, appeals, and indictments, additions shall be made of their estate or degree, or mistery, and of the towns, or hamlets, or places, and counties, of the which they were, or be, or in which they be or were conversant; and if by process upon said original writs, appeals, or indictments, in the which the addition be omitted, any utlagaries be pronounced, that they be void, frustrate, and holden for none; and that before the utlagaries pronounced, the said writs and indictments shall be abated by the exception of the party, where in the same the said additions be omitted. Provided always, that though the said writs of additions personals be not according to the records and deeds, by the surplusage of the additions aforesaid, that for that cause they be not abated; and that the clerks of the Chancery, under whose names such writs shall go forth written, shall not leave out, or make omission of the said additions as is aforesaid; upon pain to be punished, and to make a fine to the King, by the discretion of the Chancellor."

Regularity by the Common law, every natural man, having no name of dignity, ought to be named in all originals and other suits by his christian name and surname; and that, before this act, sufficed; but if he had a name of inferior dignity (as knight, or banneret) he ought to be named by his christian name and surname, and by the addition of his name of dignity. 2 Inst. 666.

If there be a corporation of one sole person, that hath a fee simple, and may have a writ of right, he may be named by the common law by his christian name without any surname, as John bishop of P. 2 Inst. 666. If it be a corporation aggregate of many able persons, as mayor and commonalty, dean and chapter, the mayor or dean need not be named by his christian name, because such a corporation standeth in lieu both of the christian name and surname. 2 Inst. ib.

The addition as well of the estate, degree, or mistery, as of the town, hamlet, or place, ought by force of this act to be alledged in the first name; for an addition after the alias dictus is ill: As for instance, where the indictment was against W. R. otherwise called W. R. of H. for without the alias dictus there is no addition of the vill; and if the party is not sufficiently named in the first part the alias dictus cannot aid or help it. 2 Inst. 669. 3 Salk. 20. No addition is necessary where process of outlawry doth not lie. 1 Salk. 5.

Where there are several defendants of different names, and the same addition, it is safest to repeat the addition of each of their names, applying it particularly to every one of them. 2 Hawk. 87.

And where a father hath the same name and the same addition with a defendant being his son, the action is abateable, unless it add the addition of the younger to the other additions; but where the father is the defendant, it is said that there is no need of addition of the elder. 2 Hawk. 187.

Esquire is a good addition; and the sons of all peers and lords of parliament in the life of their fathers, are in law esquires, and so to be named; also the eldest son of a knight is an esquire. 2 Inst. 667.

Gentlemen and gentlewomen are good additions; and if a gentlewoman be named spinster, she may abate and quash the writ or indictment. 2 Inst. 668.

Lord Coke says, he that hath taken any degree in either of the universities, may be named by that degree without question. 2 Inst. 668. But this is doubted by others. 2 Hawk. 187.

A gentleman by reputation, that is neither gentle by birth, nor by office, nor by creation, but commonly called gentleman, and known by that name, is a sufficient addition; but if he be named yeoman, he cannot quash the indictment. 2 Inst. 668.

cover, becauſe the defendant, tho' not bound in law, yet is bound by expreſs agreement to re-deliver eundem ſpadonem; but adjudged, that where an agreement is poſſible to be performed, at the time when it was made, and afterwards becomes impoſſible by the act of God, and without any default in the party, he is for ever diſcharged. Palm. 548.

The act of the law doth injury to none; Actus legis nemini eſt damnoſus. 2 Inſt. 287. If land, out of which a rent-charge is granted, be recovered by elder title, and thereby the rent-charge becomes avoided; yet the grantee ſhall have a writ of annuity. Dyer. This is becauſe the rent-charge is made void by courſe or act of law.

As to acts of men; that which a man doth by another, ſhall be ſaid to be done by himſelf; but perſonal things cannot be done by another. Co. Lit. 158. A man cannot do an act to himſelf, unleſs it be where he hath a double capacity: No perſon ſhall be ſuffered to do any thing againſt his own act, and every man's acts ſhall be conſtrued moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf that doth them. Plowd. 140. But if many join in an act, and ſome may not lawfully do it; it ſhall be adjudged the act of him who might lawfully do the ſame. Dyer 192. Acts that men are forced by neceſſity and compulſion to do, are not regarded: And an act done between perſons, ſhall not injure a ſtranger not party or privy thereto. Plowd. 19. 6 Rep. 16.

Who is to do the firſt act, and of diſability by a perſon's own act.

Debt on a bond conditioned to give ſuch a releaſe in Michaelmas-term, as the judge of the prerogative court ſhould think proper; the defendant pleaded, that in that term B. B. was judge of that court, and that he did not appoint any releaſe; and upon demurrer it was held an ill plea, becauſe the defendant did not alledge, that he had prepared a releaſe, and tendered it to the judge to be allowed, for 'tis on his part to draw the releaſe. Cro. Eliz. 716.

Debt upon bond, conditioned, that if the plaintiff did bring ſuch a ſhip to a port in Greece, there to remain for forty days, or ſo long of the forty days as the defendant pleaſed, ſo as he might freight the ſaid ſhip, that then the defendant would freight it within forty days, and bring it to ſuch a port in England; there was a frivolous plea, to which the plaintiff demurred, and it was inſiſted for the defendant, that the firſt act was to be done by the plaintiff, (viz) to bring the ſhip to ſuch a port, there to remain by the ſpace of forty days, and he had not averred, that the ſhip was at that port by the ſpace of forty days, and for that reaſon the court inclined that the condition was not broken. Godb. 74.

Leaſe for years, in which the leſſor covenanted with the leſſee, that upon ſurrender of his ſaid leaſe at any time within the term, he would grant a new leaſe, afterwards the leſſor levied a fine ſur cognizance de droit of the lands, and granted and rendered the ſame to the cogniſee for 80 years; adjudged, that by this means the cogniſor had diſabled himſelf either to take the ſurrender or to make a new leaſe, and altho' the leſſee was to do the firſt act, (viz) to make the ſurrender, yet when the leſſor had diſabled himſelf to take it, the law will not compel him to do that which will be in vain; eſpecially in this caſe, for if he ſhould make a ſurrender, then he would loſe his old term without any poſſibility of having a new leaſe. 5 Rep. 20.

The condition of a bond was, that the obligor and his wife ſhould before Eaſter term, &c. levy a fine of ſuch lands to the plaintiff; the defendant pleaded, that before that term the plaintiff did not ſue for a writ of covenant to make himſelf capable of the fine, and Hobart, chief juſtice, was of opinion it was a good plea. Hutt. 48.

Debt upon bond, for performance of covenants, &c. the covenant was, that the obligor before ſuch a day ſhould make a further aſſurance of lands to the obligee, but at the coſts and charges of the obligee; the queſtion was, whether the obligee was firſt to offer the coſts, or whether the obligor was firſt to declare what manner of aſſurance he would make? and adjudged, that it being purely in the choice of the obligor, what manner of aſſurance he would make, he ought to do the firſt act, (viz) to give notice to the obligee what aſſurance he intended to make, and then the obligee is to ſupply the coſts. Moor 454.

The huſband ſettled an eſtate to the uſe of himſelf for life, and afterwards, to the uſe of Dorothy his wife for life, ſo long as ſhe would be effectually ready to demiſe it to his heir at law at 50*l.* yearly rent, when ſhe ſhould not dwell in it her ſelf; the huſband died, the widow married again, and lived with her huſband in another place, and having made no leaſe to the heir, he entred; adjudged, that ſhe ought to make none unleſs it had been demanded, and that the heir ought to tender a leaſe to her to ſign, with a reſervation of 50*l.* rent. Moor 626.

Debt by the mayor, &c. of London, for rent of a mill, which went by the labour of priſoners in Bridewell; the defendant pleaded a proviſo in the leaſe, that if the leſſors did not find eight men to work in the mill every day, that the leſſee might retain 8*d.* of the rent for every man wanting in that day, and ſo toties quoties; and that there had been ſo many men wanting for ſo many days, and the money retained for that defect amounted to more than the rent; the plaintiffs replied, that the defendant had ſo altered the mill, that he made it go with one horſe inſtead of eight men, for which reaſon they did not provide the men; and upon demurrer the plaintiffs had judgment, becauſe the alteration was made in the mill by the defendant's own act. Moor 877.

The condition of a bond was to deliver 200 weight of hops, &c. and the obligee was to chooſe them out of twenty-four bags of the obligor's own growing; in an action of debt brought on this bond for not delivering the hops, the defendant pleaded, that he was ready to deliver them, but the plaintiff had not choſe them; adjudged, that the plaintiff ought to do the firſt act, (viz.) to require the defendant to ſhew the twenty-four bags that he might make his choice. March 24.

Debt upon bond, conditioned, that whereas there was a ſuit in Chancery depending between the now plaintiff and ſeveral infants, by their guardian, and that it was decreed, that the plaintiff ſhould pay the ſaid guardian to the uſe of the infants 840*l.* in full ſatisfaction of their right and title to a leaſe of the manor of Martley-Hall, and other lands in Suffolk, if therefore the ſaid guardian ſhall procure the ſaid infants, when they come of age, to releaſe all their right and intereſt in and to the ſaid leaſe, then to be void; the defendant pleaded in bar, that the ſaid infants never had or pretended to have any right, title, or intereſt to the leaſe of the ſaid manor, which they might releaſe; and upon demurrer to this plea, the plaintiff had judgment; for, whether the infants had a title or not, the defendant had obliged himſelf to procure a releaſe from them de facto, and 'tis not material whether it was de jure or not; and the rather, becauſe by their bill in equity they pretended to have a title. 1 Saund. 215.

Aſſumpſit, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant (as he affirmed) was poſſeſſed of a ſixth part of a ſhip, which he offered to ſale; whereupon it was agreed between the plaintiff and him, that the defendant ſhould ſell all his intereſt to the plaintiff, and that the ſale ſhould be in writing, and the plaintiff ſhould pay the defendant 600*l.* &c. (viz.) 20*l.* in hand, and the reſt upon executing the writing, and in conſideration, that the plaintiff had paid the ſaid 20*l.* and had promiſed to perform the agreement on his part, the defendant promiſed to perform it on his part, but that the defendant had not performed the agreement on his part: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected that the breach was not well aſſigned, it being too general to ſay, that he had not performed the agreement on his part, for he ought to ſhew ſome particular in which he had not performed it; as, that he tendred the defendant a writing, which he refuſed to execute, or that he had not delivered to the plaintiff the ſixth part of a ſhip, &c. but adjudged, that 'tis not the plaintiff, but the defendant, who is to do the firſt act; 'tis he who is to tender the writing, becauſe

he had undertaken to ſell his part by a writing; as where a covenant is to enter into a bond, the covenanter is to prepare it and tender it: Judgment for the plaintiff in C. B. and affirmed in error in B. R. 3 Lev. 319.

Covenant to ſeal and deliver a leaſe for years, to commence from Michaelmas next, and bond for performance of covenants; and on action of debt brought on that bond, the breach aſſigned was, that the obligor had not made one part of ſuch leaſe, whereupon the obligee put one part in writing, and tendered it to the obligor to ſeal, which he refuſed. Et per curiam, Where a man covenants to ſeal and deliver a deed, he is bound to put it in writing; but if he refuſes, the covenantee may do it, and 'tis warranted by law. 2 Roll. Rep. 177.

Det upon bond, conditioned to perform an award: Upon the pleadings in this caſe, the queſtion did ariſe upon one part of the award, which was, that the defendant ſhould ſeal and execute within ſeven days, ſuch a releaſe to the plaintiff as ſhould be to the ſatisfaction of his (the plaintiff's) counſel; and the queſtion was, which of the parties was to tender it? for the defendant was to execute it; but it was to be to the ſatisfaction of the plaintiff's counſel, and adjudged, that the defendant was to tender it; for 'tis not like the caſe where a deed is to be made by T. P. as the counſel of R. W. ſhall adviſe, for there the deed muſt be tendered as the counſel doth adviſe, and R. W. to whom 'tis to be made, muſt do the firſt act, (i. e.) he muſt tender the deed to T. P. by adviſe of his counſel. 1 Vent. 255.

Debt upon articles of agreement, wherein the plaintiff covenanted to execute a good conveyance of certain lands to the uſe of the defendant, at or before the 17th of November, and the defendant, in conſideration thereof, agreed to pay the plaintiff 503*l. &c.* at ſuch a place, tempore executionis of ſuch conveyance, &c. for which the action was now brought; and upon a demurrer to this declaration, it was objected, that the plaintiff ought to execute the conveyance before the defendant was obliged to pay the money, becauſe where no certain day is appointed for the payment, it muſt be reduced to a certainty by the act of the plaintiff, which in this caſe was by executing the conveyance; but the law had been the ſame, if a certain day had been appointed for the payment of the money, becauſe the payment muſt neceſſarily relate to the execution of the deed, and not to the very day in which it was appointed to be executed; and ſo it was adjudged. 1 Lutw. 565.

Addition, (additio) Signifieth a title given to a man beſides his chriſtian and ſurname, ſhewing his eſtate, degree, miſtery, trade, place of dwelling, &c. As for example; additions of eſtate are yeoman, gentleman, eſquire, and ſuch like; additions of degree are names of dignity, as knight, earl, marquis, duke: And additions of miſtery are ſcrivener, painter, maſon, carpenter, and all others of like nature; for miſtery is the craft or trade whereby a man gets his living: Additions of towns, as London, Kingſton, Cheſter, &c. and where a man hath a houſhold in two places, he ſhall be ſaid to dwell in both of them; ſo that his addition in either ſhall ſuffice. It is provided by the following ſtatute, viz. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. that in ſuits or actions, where proceſs of outlawry lies, ſuch additions ſhould be to the name of the defendant, to ſhew his eſtate, miſtery, and place where he dwells; and that writs, not having ſuch additions, ſhall abate, if the defendant take exception thereto, but not by the office of the court; and this was ordained by that ſtatute, that one man might not be vexed or troubled by the outlawry of another, but that by reaſon of the certain addition, every perſon may be known, and bear his own burden. Cowel.

Stat. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. A. D. 1413. intitled; In which original writs additions of the defendants names ſhall be put. "Item, it is ordained and eſtabliſhed, that in every original writ of actions perſonals, appeals, and indictmets, and in which the exigent ſhall be awarded, to the names of the defendants in ſuch writs original, appeals, and indictments, additions ſhall be made of their eſtate or degree, or miſtery, and of the towns, or hamlets, or places, and counties, of the which they were, or be, or in which they be or were converſant; and if by proceſs upon ſaid original writs, appeals, or indictments, in the which the addition be omitted, any utlagaries be pronounced, that they be void, fruſtrate, and holden for none; and that before the utlagaries pronounced, the ſaid writs and indictments ſhall be abated by the exception of the party, where in the ſame the ſaid additions be omitted. Provided always, that though the ſaid writs of additions perſonals be not according to the records and deeds, by the ſurpluſage of the additions aforeſaid, that for that cauſe they be not abated; and that the clerks of the Chancery, under whoſe names ſuch writs ſhall go forth written, ſhall not leave out, or make omiſſion of the ſaid additions as is aforeſaid; upon pain to be puniſhed, and to make a fine to the King, by the diſcretion of the Chancellor."

If there be a corporation of one ſole perſon, that hath a fee ſimple, and may have a writ of right, he may be named by the common law by his chriſtian name without any ſurname, as John biſhop of P. 2 Inſt. 666. If it be a corporation aggregate of many able perſons, as mayor and commonalty, dean and chapter, the mayor or dean need not be named by his chriſtian name, becauſe ſuch a corporation ſtandeth in lieu both of the chriſtian name and ſurname. 2 Inſt. ib.

The addition as well of the eſtate, degree, or miſtery, as of the town, hamlet, or place, ought by force of this act to be alledged in the firſt name; for an addition after the alias dictus is ill: As for inſtance, where the indictment was againſt W. R. otherwiſe called W. R. of H. for without the alias dictus there is no addition of the vill; and if the party is not ſufficiently named in the firſt part the alias dictus cannot aid or help it. 2 Inſt. 669. 3 Salk. 20. No addition is neceſſary where proceſs of outlawry doth not lie. 1 Salk. 5.

Where there are ſeveral defendants of different names, and the ſame addition, it is ſafeſt to repeat the addition of each of their names, applying it particularly to every one of them. 2 Hawk. 87.

And where a father hath the ſame name and the ſame addition with a defendant being his ſon, the action is abateable, unleſs it add the addition of the younger to the other additions; but where the father is the defendant, it is ſaid that there is no need of addition of the elder. 2 Hawk. 187.

Eſquire is a good addition; and the ſons of all peers and lords of parliament in the life of their fathers, are in law eſquires, and ſo to be named; alſo the eldeſt ſon of a knight is an eſquire. 2 Inſt. 667.

Gentlemen and gentlewomen are good additions; and if a gentlewoman be named ſpinſter, ſhe may abate and quaſh the writ or indictment. 2 Inſt. 668.

Lord Coke ſays, he that hath taken any degree in either of the univerſities, may be named by that degree without queſtion. 2 Inſt. 668. But this is doubted by others. 2 Hawk. 187.

A gentleman by reputation, that is neither gentle by birth, nor by office, nor by creation, but commonly called gentleman, and known by that name, is a ſufficient addition; but if he be named yeoman, he cannot quaſh the indictment. 2 Inſt. 668.

Clerk is a good addition of a clergyman. 2 Inſt. 668.

Yeoman and labourer are good additions, and are applied only to the man, and not to the woman. 2 Hawk. 188.

Widow or ſinglewoman, or (as ſome ſay) wife of ſuch a one, are all of them good additions of the eſtate and degree of a woman; but no ſuch like addition is good for the eſtate and degree of a man; and ſpinſter is a good addition for the eſtate and degree of a woman, and perhaps alſo for that of a man. 2 Hawk. 188.

The word miſtery in this ſtatute includeth all lawful arts, trades and occupations, as taylor, merchant, mercer, pariſh clerk, ſchoolmaſter, huſbandman, labourer, and the like. 2 Haw. 188.

But ſervant, groom, or farmer, are not additions within this act, becauſe they are not of any miſtery; and chamberer, butler, pantler, or the like, are additions of offices, and not of any miſtery or occupation. 2 Inſt. 668.

Neither doth this act extend to unlawful practices, as extortioner, maintainer, thief, vagabond, heretick, and ſuch like. 2 Hawk. 188.

If a man have divers arts, trades, or occupations, he may be named by any of them; but if a gentleman by birth be a tradeſman, he ſhall not be named by his trade, but by the degree of gentleman, becauſe it is worthier than the addition of any miſtery. And in general, a man ſhall be named by his worthieſt title of addition. 2 Inſt. 668, 669.

If there be two towns in a county of the ſame principal name, with different additions to diſtinguiſh them from one another, as Great Dale, and Little Dale, or Upper Dale and Lower Dale, and the defendant be named only of the principal town without any addition, as of Dale only, the defendant may plead that there are two Dales in the ſame county, and none without an addition. But if there be two towns of the ſame name in a county, without any addition to diſtinguiſh them, it may be ſufficient in ſuch caſe to name the defendant generally of either of ſuch towns, without adding any thing to diſtinguiſh it from the other. 2 Hawk. 189.

If the defendant live in a hamlet of a town, it is ſaid to be in the election of the party to name him either of the hamlet or of the town. 2 Hawk. 189.

But the addition of a pariſh, if there be two or more towns in it, is not good; but if there be but one town, the addition of pariſh is good. 2 Inſt. 669.

The addition of the place of habitation of a wife, is ſufficiently ſhewn, by ſhewing that of the huſband; becauſe it ſhall be intended that the wife lives where the huſband does. 2 Hawk. 190.

If the defendant lives in a place known by a ſpecial name, and lying out of any town or hamlet, he may be well named of ſuch place; but if he lives in any place known within a town or hamlet, it is ſaid to be ſafeſt to name him of the town or hamlet. 2 Hawk. 189, 190.

The addition of the eſtate, degree, or miſtery, ought to be as the defendant was of at the day of the indictment brought, and not late of ſuch a degree or miſtery; but it is a good addition to name the defendant late of ſuch a town or place, becauſe men do often remove their habitations. 2 Inſt. 670.

Addoubors. See Redoubors.

Adeling, or Etheling, from the Saxon Ædelan, Signifying noble, excellent, was a title of honour among the Angles, properly belonging to the King's children, and ſucceſſors of the crown. King Edward the Confeſſor being himſelf without iſſue, and intending to make Edgar (to whom he was great uncle by the mother's ſide) the heir of his kingdom, gave him the ſtile and title of Adeling. It was uſual with the Saxons to join the word ling; which ſignified a ſon, or the younger, to the chriſtian name, as Edmundeling for the ſon of Edmund; ſo that Adeling ſignified the ſon of a king. Cowel. See more of this word in Spelman and Du Freſne's Gloſſaries.

Ademption, or taking away of a legacy: This ariſes from a ſuppoſed alteration of a teſtator's intent, by calling in money due to him on bond, &c. that he had expreſly deviſed by will to another perſon. Jacob. See title Legacy.

Ad inquirendum, Is a writ judicial, commanding inquiry to be made of any thing touching a cauſe depending in the King's Court for the better execution of juſtice; as of baſtardy, and the like. Cowel.

Adjournment, (Adjournamentum) The ſame with the French adjournement, and ſignifies denunciatio, or diei dictio, that is, an aſſignment of a day, or a putting off until another day and place. So adjournment in eyre in ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 18. is an appointment of a day, when the juſtices in eyre mean to ſit again; and adjournment hath the ſame ſignification in 2 Ed. 3. c. 11.

The terms may be adjourned to ſome other place, and there the King's Bench and other courts at Weſtminſter be held: And if the King puts out a proclamation for the adjournment of the term, this is a ſufficient warrant to the keeper of the Great ſeal to make out writs accordingly; and proclamation is to be made, appointing all perſons to keep their day, at the time and place to which, &c. 1 And. 279. 1 Lev. 176.

In the firſt year of King Car. 1. a writ of adjournment was delivered to all the juſtices, to adjourn two returns of Trinity term: And in the ſame year Michaelmas term was adjourned until Craſtino animarum to Reading; and the King by proclamation ſignified his pleaſure, that his courts ſhould be there held. Cro. Car. 13, 27.

The court of King's Bench was adjourned to Oxford on account of the plague; and from thence to Windſor; and afterwards to Weſtminſter again. 1 Lev. 176, 178.

A term was adjourned, except only the two laſt returns, to Windſor; thoſe two laſt terms cannot be held at Weſtminſter by re-adjournment, becauſe by the firſt adjournment the day in court is the quarto die poſt, and ſo only part of the return would be adjourned, which muſt not be; and it was held that it could not. And therefore upon the quarto die poſt craſt' Pur' which was 6 Feb. the courts ſat at Windſor, and heard ſome motions, and then read writs of adjournment of the laſt return to Weſtminſter; and accordingly the courts ſat at Weſtminſter Octab. Pur. for it was ſaid that it is not requiſite to wait till the quarto die poſt upon the ſecond adjournment; and ſhould it be ſo in this caſe, the term would be ended before that day. Sid. 276. Pl. 2. Hill. 17 & 18 Car. 2.

In real actions in London, if a foreign plea be pleaded, it ſhall be adjourned to the Common Pleas to be tried. But otherwiſe it is in perſonal actions. 4 Hen. 4. 12. See Bro. tit. Adjournment.

If the judges of the court of King's Bench, &c. are divided in opinion, two againſt two, upon a demurrer or ſpecial verdict, (not on a motion) the cauſe muſt be adjourned into the Exchequer Chamber, to be determined by all the judges of England. 3 Mod. 156. 5 Mod. 335.

Adjudication, (Adjudicatio) A ſettlement by judgment, decree or ſentence; the act of giving or pronouncing judgment; a judgment, decree or ſentence. This word is uſed in ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 10. Cowel.

Admeaſurement, (Admenſuratio) Is a writ brought for remedy againſt ſuch perſons as uſurp more than their ſhare, to bring them to reaſon. It lies in two caſes; one one is termed admeaſurement of dower, admenſuratio dotis, where the widow of the deceaſed holdeth from the heir or his guardian, more in the name of her dower, than of right is belonging to her. Regiſt. Orig. 171. a. F. N. B. 148. The other is, admeaſurement of paſture, admenſuratio paſturæ, which lieth between thoſe that have common of paſture appendant to their freeholds, or common by vicinage, in caſe any one or more of them do ſurcharge the common with more cattle than they ought. Reg. Orig. 156. F. N. B. 125. In the firſt caſe, the heir ſhall have this writ againſt the widow, whereby ſhe ſhall be admeaſured, and the heir reſtored to the overplus; and in the laſt caſe, it may be brought againſt all the other commoners, and him that ſurcharged; for all the commoners ſhall be admeaſured. Termes de la ley. F. N. B. 125.

The heir ſhall have a writ of admeaſurement of dower, for dower aſſigned in the time of his anceſtor: And if an heir within age aſſign unto the wife more in dower than ſhe ought to have, &c. the guardian in right may have a writ of admeaſurement. But if the guardian aſſigns dower more than ſhe ought to have, the heir, during his non-age, ſhall not have a writ of admeaſurement of dower. F. N. B. 149.

If the wife after aſſignment of dower do improve the land, and make it better than it was at the time of the aſſignment; an admeaſurement doth not lie of that improvement. But if the improvement be by caſualty of a mine of coals or of lead, which are in the land, &c. which had been occupied in the huſband's time, the doubt is the more; but ſhe cannot dig new mines; for that ſhall be waſte if ſhe ſo do. F. N. B. 149.

The writ of admeaſurement of paſture is vicontiel, and ſhall be directed to the ſheriff, and not be returnable; and is thus:

A writ of admeaſurement of paſture.

George the Third, &c. to the ſheriff of, &c. greeting. A. B. hath complained to us, that C. D. and E. F. have unjuſtly ſurcharged their common of paſture in, &c. ſo that they have in it more beaſts and cattle, than they ought to have, and to them belongeth to have; and therefore we command you, that juſtly and without delay, you cauſe to be admeaſured that paſture, ſo that the ſaid C. D. and E. F. may not have therein more beaſts and cattle than they ought, and to them it belongs to have, according to their freehold which they have in the ſame town; and that the ſaid A. B. may have in that paſture ſo many beaſt and cattle as he ought to have, and belongs to him to have; that we may hear no more clamour thereof, &c.

The writ of admeaſurement of dower is alſo vicontiel, and ſhall be directed unto the ſheriff, and ſhall not be returnable; and the form of it is thus:

A writ of admeaſurement of dower.

George the Third, &c. to the ſheriff of, &c. A. the ſon [or couſin] and heir of B. hath complained unto us, that C. who was the wife of the aforeſaid B. hath for dower more of the freehold which was of the aforeſaid B.'s ſometime her huſband, in N. than ſhe ought to have, and than belongs to her to have; and therefore we command you that juſtly and without delay you cauſe that dower to be admeaſured, ſo that the aforeſaid C. may not have more for dower of the inheritance of the aforeſaid A. than ſhe ought to have, and than belongs to her to have, according to her reaſonable dower; and let the aforeſaid A. have of that dower that which he ought to have and belongs to him to have, that we may hear no more clamour thereof for want of right, &c.

By ſtat. Weſtm. 2. 13 Edw. 1. cap. 7. A writ of admeaſurement of dower ſhall be granted to a guardian; neither ſhall the heir when he cometh to full age be barred by the ſuit of the guardian, if he ſueth againſt the tenant in dower feignedly and by colluſion, but that he may admeaſure the dower after; and as well in this writ as in a writ of admeaſurement of paſture, more ſpeedy proceſs ſhall be than hath been uſed hitherto; ſo that when it is come unto the great diſtreſs, days ſhall be given, within which two counties may be holden, at which open proclamation ſhall be made, that the defendant come in at the day; at the which day, if he comes in, the plea ſhall go forward; and if he do not come, and the proclamation be teſtified by the ſheriff, upon the default they ſhall proceed to make admeaſurement.

Before this act, if the heir within age, before the guardian in chivalry enters into the land, had aſſigned dower to the wife more than ſhe ought to have, the guardian had been without remedy; for no writ of admeaſurement of dower (being a real action) lay for the guardian at the Common law. 2 Inſt. 367.

Stat. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 8. Upon the ſecond overcharge of paſture, the plaintiff ſhall have remedy in this manner: If the admeaſurement were before the juſtices, the plaintiff ſhall have a writ judicial, that the ſheriff, the parties being ſummoned, ſhall inquire of the ſecond overcharge, which if it be found, it ſhall be returned before the juſtices under the ſeals of the ſheriff and of the jurors; and the juſtices ſhall award to the plaintiff damages, and they ſhall put into their eſtreat the value of the beaſts which were put into the paſture after ſuch admeaſurement above the due number, and ſhall deliver the eſtreats unto the barons of the Exchequer, that they may thereof anſwer unto the King. If ſuch admeaſurement be made in the county, a writ ſhall go out of the Chancery, that the ſheriff ſhall inquire of ſuch overcharge, and that of the beaſts put in above the due number, or of the value of them, he anſwer to the King at the Exchequer. And all writs de ſecunda ſuperoneratione, that paſs out of the Chancery, ſhall be inrolled, and at the year's end the tranſcripts ſhall be ſent into the Exchequer under the Chancellor's ſeal.

Adminiſtration. See Adminiſtrator.

Adminiſtrator, (Adminiſtrator in Lat.) Is, in the ſenſe of our Common law, taken for one that hath the goods of a man dying inteſtate, committed to his charge by the ordinary, and is accountable for the ſame, whenever it ſhall pleaſe the ordinary to call him thereto. Cowel.

Under this head is conſidered,

1. Statutes concerning adminiſtrators.
2. Who are intitled to adminiſtration.
3. By whom adminiſtration may be granted.
4. Of diſtribution among lineal and collateral relations.
5. Of bona notabilia.
6. Pleadings in ſuits by and againſt adminiſtrators.

1. Statutes concerning adminiſtrators.

Stat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 19. A. D. 1285. Whereas after the death of a perſon dying inteſtate, which is bounden to ſome other for debt, the goods come to the ordinary to be diſpoſed; the ordinary from henceforth ſhall be bound to anſwer the debts as far forth as the goods of the dead will extend, in ſuch ſort as the executors of the ſame party would have been bounden, if he had made a teſtament.

Stat. 31 Edw. 3. cap. 11. (A. D. 1357*)* Where a man dieth inteſtate, the ordinaries ſhall depute the next and moſt lawful friends to adminiſter his goods, which deputies ſhall have action to demand and recover as executors the debts due to the inteſtate, and ſhall anſwer alſo to other to whom the ſaid dead perſon was holden and bound, in the ſame manner as executors, and ſhall be accountable to the ordinaries as executors.

Sat. 21 Hen. 8. cap. 5. ſect. 13. In caſe any perſon die inteſtate, or the executors refuſe to prove the teſtament, then the ordinary ſhall grant adminiſtration to the widow or next akin, or to both, by diſcretion of the ordinary, taking ſurety for true adminiſtration.

Sect. 4. Where divers perſons be in equality of kindred, the ordinary is to be at liberty to accept one or more, taking nothing for the ſame, as in probate of teſta-ments,

ments, unleſs the goods of the deceaſed amount above the value of an hundred ſhillings.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 10. ſect. 1. All ordinaries and eccleſiaſtical judges, having power to commit adminiſtration, ſhall upon their granting adminiſtration of inteſtates goods, take bonds with ſureties, two or more, in the name of the ordinary, with this condition, viz.

The condition of this obligation is ſuch, that if the within-bounden A. B. adminiſtrator of all and ſingular the goods, chattels and credits of C. D. deceaſed, do make, or cauſe to be made, a true and perfect inventory of all and ſingular the goods, chattels and credits of the ſaid deceaſed, which have or ſhall come to the hands, poſſeſſion, or knowledge of him the ſaid A. B. or into the hands and poſſeſſion of any other perſon, or perſons for him; and the ſame ſo made, do exhibit, or cauſe to be exhibited, into the regiſtry of court, at or before the day of next enſuing; and the ſame goods, chattles and credits, and all other the goods, chattles and credits of the ſaid deceaſed, at the time of his death, which at any time after ſhall come to the hands or poſſeſſion of the ſaid A. B. or into the hands and poſſeſſion of any other perſon or perſons for him, do well and truly adminiſter according to law; and further do make, or cauſe to be made, a true and juſt account of his ſaid adminiſtration, at or before the day of and all the reſt and reſidue of the ſaid goods, chattels and credits, which ſhall be found remaining upon the ſaid adminiſtrators account, the ſame being firſt examined and allowed of by the judge or judges for the time being, of the ſaid court, ſhall deliver and pay unto ſuch perſon or perſons reſpectively, as the ſaid judge or judges, by his or their decree or ſentence, purſuant to the true intent and meaning of this act, ſhall limit and appoint: And if it ſhall hereafter appear, that any laſt will and teſtament was made by the ſaid deceaſed, and the executor or executors therein named do exhibit the ſame into the ſaid court, making requeſt to have it allowed and approved accordingly, if the ſaid A. B. within bounden, being thereunto required, do render and deliver the ſaid letters of adminiſtration (approbation of ſuch teſtament being firſt had and made) in the ſaid court; then this obligation to be void and of none effect, or elſe to remain in full force and virtue.

Sect. 2. The ordinaries, &c. may call ſuch adminiſtrators to account, and order diſtribution of what remaineth after debts, funerals, and juſt expences of all ſorts allowed, according to the laws in ſuch caſes, and the rules hereafter ſet down; ſaving to perſons aggrieved the right of appeal.

Sect. 3. The cuſtoms of the city of London, and province of York, and other places, ſaved.

Sect. 4. The ſurpluſage ſhall be diſtributed as follows, viz. one third to the wife of the inteſtate, the reſidue among his children, and ſuch as legally repreſent them, if any of them be dead, other than ſuch children (not heirs at law) who ſhall have any eſtate by ſettlement of the inteſtate in his life-time, equal to the other ſhares. Children, other then heirs at law, advanced by ſettlements or portions not equal to other ſhares, ſhall have ſo much of the ſurpluſage as ſhall make the eſtate of all to be equal. But the heir at law ſhall have an equal part in the diſtribution with the other children, without any conſideration of the value of the land which he hath by deſcent or otherwiſe from the inteſtate.

Sect. 5. If there be no children, nor legal repreſentatives of them, one moiety ſhall be allotted to the wife, the reſidue equally to the next of kindred to the inteſtate, in equal degree, and thoſe who repreſent them.

Sect. 6. No repreſentation ſhall be admitted among collaterals after brothers and ſiſters children. And if there be no wife, all ſhall be diſtributed among the children; and if no child, to the next of kin to the inteſtate in equal degree, and their repreſentatives.

Sect. 7. No ſuch diſtribution ſhall be made till one year after the inteſtate's death; and every one, to whom any ſhares ſhall be allotted, ſhall give bond with ſureties in the ſaid courts, that if debts afterwards appear, he ſhall refund his ratable part thereof, and of the adminiſtrator's charges.

Sect. 8. In all caſes where the ordinary hath uſed to grant adminiſtration cum teſtamento annexo, he ſhall continue ſo to do. Made perpetual, 1 Jac. 2. cap. 17.

Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. ſect. 25. The act of 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 10. ſhall not extend to the eſtates of feme coverts that die inteſtate, but that their huſbands may have adminiſtration of their perſonal eſtates, and recover and enjoy the ſame as they might have done before the making of the ſaid act. Made perpetual, 1 Jac. 2. c. 17.

Stat. 1 Jac. 2. cap. 17. ſ. 6. No adminiſtrator ſhall be cited into court to render an account of the perſonal eſtate of his inteſtate, otherwiſe than by an inventory thereof, unleſs at the inſtance of ſome perſon in behalf of a minor, or having a demand out of ſuch eſtate as a creditor, or next of kin; nor ſhall be compellable to account before any ordinary or judge empowered by the act of 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 10. otherwiſe than as aforeſaid.

Sect. 7. If after the death of a father, any of his children ſhall die inteſtate, without wife or children, in the life-time of the mother, every brother and ſiſter, and their repreſentatives, ſhall have equal ſhare with her.

Sect. 8. The clauſe in the ſaid act of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. by which is provided, that that act ſhall not prejudice the cuſtoms of the city of London and province of York, ſhall not extend to ſuch part of any inteſtate's eſtate, as an adminiſtrator, by virtue of his being ſo, by pretence of any cuſtom may claim, to exempt the ſame from diſtribution.

2. Who are intitled to adminiſtration.

Before the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 19. [See the preceding ſection] The ordinary had the abſolute diſpoſal of inteſtates eſtates; and as that ſtatute firſt ſubjected them to an action at the ſuit of creditors; ſo from thence they found, as Lord North obſerves, that what was before very beneficial to them, began to be very troubleſome, which obliged them to put the adminiſtration into other hands, taking ſecurity to ſave them harmleſs from ſuits. Raym. 497.

But this method did not intirely free them from the trouble they had before; for ſuch perſons, being looked upon as ſervants or attornies to the ordinaries, could not ſue for, nor gather in the inteſtate's eſtate. 2 Inſt. 397. Co. Lit. 133. 1 Roll. Abr. 906.

But they were eaſed from this trouble by the ſtatute of 31 E. 3. cap. 11. which ſee in the preceding ſection.

But notwithſtanding this ſtatute, the widows of inteſtates were often excluded, upon pretence that they had no right to adminiſter; and therefore the ſtatute 21 Hen. 8. c. 5. was made. See this act in the preceding ſection.

Hereupon the Common law was to judge who were the beſt friends; and therefore if there were huſband or wife; in default of them, ſon or daughter; in default of them, or their children, father or mother; in default of them, brothers or ſiſters; in default of them, or their children, uncles or aunts, the ordinary was compellable to grant adminiſtration to them in their ſeveral orders. Raym. 498.

But as they had a liberty by the ſtatute of granting adminiſtration to the wife or next of kin, ſo alſo had they a liberty where there were ſeveral in an equal degree of kindred, to prefer whom they pleaſed; which liberty they made uſe of on pretence of avoiding confuſion, and was a matter of great advantage to their juriſdiction; for hereby they choſe him that was moſt obſequious to them; and when they called him to account, upon pretence of beſtowing the overplus for the good of the deceaſed's ſoul (a device in thoſe popiſh times to make profit for the clergy) they diſpoſed of the overplus as their own. Raym. 498.

But it came afterwards to be ſolemnly reſolved, that the ordinary, after adminiſtration granted by him, could not compel the adminiſtrator to make diſtribution; but it being very unreaſonable, that one perſon ſhould run away with the whole perſonal eſtate, tho' there were ſeveral others in equal degree of kindred with him; this miſchief was remedied by the 22 & 23 Car. 2. [ſee the preceding ſection] which allows all thoſe who are in equal equal degree, to come in for a diſtributive ſhare, tho' one only, or tho' a creditor or ſtranger takes out adminiſtration. Hob. 191. Cro. Car. 62. Hob. 83. 1 Sid. 179.

It ſeems to have been always holden, that the huſband was intitled to adminiſtration as beſt friend to his wife, within the words of the ſtatute 31 E. 3. but there being ſome doubt, whether ſince the ſtatute of 22 & 23 Car. 2. he was not obliged to make diſtribution amongſt the reſt of her kindred, it was thought proper to ſettle this matter by a ſubſequent law, viz. ſtat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. ſect. 25. which ſee in the preceding ſection. See 4 Co. 51. b. 1 Roll Abr. 910. Cro. Car. 106. 1 Mod. 231. 1 Show. 351. Raym. 93. 1 Sid. 409.

Alſo ſince the ſtatute 22 Car. 2. the ordinary may grant adminiſtration to the wife or next a-kin, at his election; but then ſhe muſt have her diſtributive ſhare; alſo the ordinary may grant adminiſtration quoad part to the wife, and as to the other part, to the next of kin; in which caſe neither can complain, ſince the ordinary need not have granted any part of the adminiſtration to the party complaining. 1 Sid. 179. Raym. 93. 1 Show. 351. 1 Salk. 36.

If there be grandfather, father and ſon, and the father dies inteſtate, the ſon ſhall have the adminiſtration, and not the grandfather, tho' they be both in equal degree as to nearneſs of kindred. 2 Vern. 125. ſaid arguendo.

Sir Thomas Hinſon was poſſeſſed of lands for years under ſeveral leaſes, and having iſſue William and Thomas, he, by his laſt will, made William his executor and reſiduary legatee, after debts and legacies paid; William married and proved the will, but died inteſtate before the debts and legacies were paid; the judge of the prerogative court granted adminiſtration of the goods of Sir Thomas to his other ſon Thomas, which he afterwards revoked, and granted it to the widow of William the inteſtate, from which ſentence Thomas appealed, but was not relieved; for per curiam, The adminiſtration was rightly granted to the widow. 2 Roll. Rep. 158.

The inteſtate's eſtate conſiſted in leaſes for years, and other perſonal things, and after his deceaſe adminiſtration was granted to an alien, and adjudged good, becauſe he hath not the eſtate in his own right, but in the right of the inteſtate Cro. Car. 8.

Prohibition to the ſpiritual court upon a ſuggeſtion, that they refuſed to grant the adminiſtration to the next of kin to the inteſtate, but to another; but the prohibition was denied, becauſe they are judges who is next of kin. Palm. 416.

Prohibition was granted, for that the ſpiritual court would have granted adminiſtration of the goods of the wife to her brother, when her huſband was living, to whom of right it doth belong. Palm. 521.

The niece and the nephew are in equal degree to the inteſtate, but where the niece got adminiſtration, the nephew could not get it repealed; for when the ordinary hath executed his power according to the ſtatute, he cannot afterwards revoke it. Allen 56.

The teſtator made two executors, who both died in his life-time, then he died, leaving two ſiſters, and the eldeſt got adminiſtration; afterwards the youngeſt moved B. R. for a prohibition to repeal it, becauſe ſhe being in equal degree, ought to have an equal ſhare; but it was denied, becauſe if the adminiſtration was not duly granted, ſhe might bring an appeal. Style 147.

The plaintiff Davis, as adminiſtrator to a feme covert, brought an action of debt upon a bond due, &c. the defendant pleaded, that adminiſtration of the goods of the wife ought de jure to be granted to the huſband, who was then alive; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, for the plaintiff is rightful adminiſtrator till 'tis repealed. 1 Mod. 231.

Where adminiſtration is granted to a legatee, he may retain his legacy, tho' the adminiſtration is afterwards repealed upon a citation; but not upon an appeal, becauſe in ſuch caſe it was void ab initio. 1 Vent. 219.

The eldeſt ſon of Sir George Sands died inteſtate; adminiſtration was granted by the prerogative court to the father, as next of kin; his ſon's widow libelled to have it repealed, and Sir George moved for a prohibition, and it was granted; becauſe the ſtatute 21 Hen. 8. gives the ordinary power to grant it, as well to the next blood as to the widow; and here he hath executed that power, therefore he cannot repeal it, and grant it to another. Raym. 93.

Since the making this ſtatute 22 & 23 Car. 2. a man died inteſtate having one ſon, who likewiſe died inteſtate, and adminiſtration of goods was granted to the next of kin of the father, becauſe there being but one child, there can be no diſtribution; and ſo this is a caſe out of the ſtatute, and therefore the ſon is to have the whole at Common law; but it hath been otherwiſe adjudged ſince that time, (viz.) that by this ſtatute of diſtribution of inteſtates eſtates, a right is veſted in one child, where there is one and no more, (viz.) a right to ſue for the eſtate; and by conſequence, if he die, before the eſtate is recovered and actually in his poſſeſſion, it muſt go to his adminiſtrator, and not to the adminiſtrator of the father. Bunhill v. Newton, 35 Car. 2. Palmer v. Allcock. 3 Mod. 58.

So where a perſon died inteſtate, leaving two, who were next a-kin, in equal degree to him, one of them died inteſtate within the year, and before diſtribution; adjudged, that an intereſt was veſted in him, and his next of kin ſhall have adminiſtration, like the caſe of a reſiduary legatee dying before probate of the will, (viz.) his next of kin ſhall have the adminiſtration, and the next of the teſtator. Show. 25.

Adminiſtration was granted to the grandmother; and the aunt moved for a mandamus, but it was denied; for ſhe is as near of kin as the aunt, or rather nearer, becauſe ſhe is in the right line aſcending. 1 Salk. 38, 39.

So where 'tis granted to a wrong perſon, 'tis not void (as 'tis where 'tis granted in a wrong dioceſe) but voidable only; for if it was void, there would be a nullity in all the acts of the adminiſtrator; but the law is otherwiſe; ſo if 'tis granted to a creditor of the inteſtate, and afterwards repealed at the ſuit of the next of kin, and granted to him; in ſuch caſe the creditor may retain againſt the rightful adminiſtrator, and his diſpoſal of the goods, even after a citation, and till the ſentence of repeal, ſhall be good. 1 Salk. 38.

T. S. died inteſtate, without child or kindred, the plaintiff procured letters patent, and adminiſtration was committed to the patentee, which is the uſual courſe in ſuch caſes; the defendant entered caveats by reaſon thereof, putting the plaintiff to charges; he brought an action on the caſe againſt the defendant; and upon demurrer to the declaration it was adjudged, that till adminiſtration granted, the property of the goods was in the ordinary, and that the plaintiff had neither jus in re, nec ad rem, that the appointment by letters patent was but a recommendation, and that the granting adminiſtration to the patentee was rather of reſpect to the King, than of right; for notwithſtanding the opinion in Henſloe's caſe, adminiſtrations generally belonged to the biſhop, and the inſtances of ſome lords of manors granting them, is not a proof to the contrary. 1 Salk. 37.

An adminiſtrator, during the abſence of J. S. (who is executor) brought an action of debt on a bond, but did not aver in his declaration, that J. S. was abſent; 'tis true, he need not aver where he was abſent, for it ſhall be intended to be beyond ſea; but he muſt aver that he is abſent, which being omitted, the declaration was held ill. 1 Salk. 42. See 2 Salk. 751. the pleadings.

A feme ſole had divers debts owing to her by ſpecialty; ſhe marries, and the bonds not being put in ſuit during the coverture, ſhe died, and her huſband was ſued in the ſpiritual court by her brother, to make diſtribution by virtue of the ſtatute 29 Car. 2. cap. 35. and the queſtion was, whether a feme covert was intended by that act, which provides only where the huſband dies inteſtate, and a married woman can never die inteſtate within the meaning of this ſtatute, becauſe it provides, that the ordinary ſhall take a bond of the adminiſtrator, if it appear that the deceaſed made any will, which a feme covert cannot do without the conſent of her huſband, therefore adminiſtration of the wife's eſtate ſhall go to him. 2 Mod. 20.

In a prohibition the caſe was, the brother died inteſtate, leaving one ſiſter, an infant, whoſe great grandmother was aſſigned her guardian, and thereupon ſhe obtained adminiſtration durante minori ætate; and now the plaintiff in the prohibition, who was the grandfather to the infant, ſuggeſted, that the adminiſtration was granted by ſurprize, and that he being near of kin, adminiſtration ought to be granted to him: Sed per curiam, 'Tis not material who ſhall be adminiſtrator, for it being durante minori ætate, he hath no power over the eſtate; but ſince the ordinary hath an original power in this caſe, and this being a ſpecial adminiſtration, when he hath once executed that power, he ſhall not repeal it. 3 Mod. 23.

3. By whom adminiſtration may be granted.

A bond was made in Ireland to R. B. of London, who died inteſtate in London, and there the bond remained at his death; a biſhop of Ireland granted adminiſtration to the ſon of the inteſtate, who releaſed the debt; afterwards adminiſtration was granted by the prerogative court here to the widow, who brought an action of debt againſt the obligor and recovered the debt, becauſe the firſt was a wrong adminiſtration, for it ought to be committed by the ordinary where the bond was at the inteſtate's death, and not by the ordinary where the debt did at firſt ariſe. Dyer 303.

The granting adminiſtration is a power annexed to the perſon of a biſhop, and is not local; for a biſhop of Ireland being in England, may grant adminiſtration here of any thing within his dioceſe in Ireland. Godb. 33.

The plaintiff declared on an adminiſtration committed to him by the dean of Litchfield, and did not ſay by what authority, or that he was loci ordinarius; and this was held ill. Cro. Eliz. 791.

An adminiſtrator declared on an adminiſtration per Andrew Vane ſacræ theologiæ doctorem, and did not ſay, loci iſtius ordinarium, or cui de jure pertinuit, &c. this was held ill after a verdict. Cro. Eliz. 431.

An adminiſtrator declared on an adminiſtration de bonis non, granted to him by the ſteward of the manor of Manſfield, &c. cui commiſſio adminiſtrationis illius de jure pertinuit, and concludes with a profert hic in curia, and this was held good. Cro. Eliz. 102.

Leſſee for years died poſſeſſed of ſeveral leaſes of ſeveral lands in the dioceſe of York, and in a peculiar in the ſame dioceſe, having deviſed thoſe leaſes to his ſon, and made his daughter an infant executrix; the mother took out adminiſtration in the peculiar where her huſband died, and this was durante minori ætate of the infant executrix; adjudged, that there ought to be two adminiſtrations granted, one by the peculiar, and the other by the archbiſhop of York, and he ſhall not have a prerogative in both places, becauſe this peculiar was derived out of his juriſdiction, but hath now a proper juriſdiction by itſelf. Cro. Eliz. 718.

It hath been held, that adminiſtration may be granted by the delegates, in Godbolt; but later reſolutions are otherwiſe, for that court hath only authority corrigere & non exequi. 2 Bulſt. 2.

Adminiſtration was granted by the biſhop of Briſtol, when in truth the inteſtate had bona notabilia; and afterwards the prerogative court granted adminiſtration to another, who brought treſpaſs againſt the firſt adminiſtrator for taking the goods; it was objected, that it would be hard to make him a treſpaſſor, becauſe the granting adminiſtration doth belong to the ordinary mero jure, and 'tis probable, that neither he nor the party did know, that the inteſtate had bona notabilia; but the court held, that, becauſe the firſt adminiſtration was void, therefore the adminiſtrator was a treſpaſſor. 2 Leon. 155.

The commiſſary of the biſhop of Norwich being in London, granted adminiſtration there; and it was held good, becauſe the power is not local, but follows his perſon. Godb. 342.

Aſſumpſit by an adminiſtrator, and upon oyer of the letters of adminiſtration it appeared they were granted by Tho. Taylor, a bachelor of divinity, and commiſſary of the biſhop of London; the defendant pleaded, that adminiſtration was granted to him under the ſeal of the vicar general, and alſo pleaded the ſtatute 37 Hen. 8. by which 'tis enacted, that a doctor of law may be a commiſſary, but that Tho. Taylor was a mere layman, and not doctor legis civilis, &c. but adjudged, that the adminiſtration granted to the plaintiff was good, untill avoided by ſentence. Poph. 37.

Where an adminiſtration granted by the ſpiritual court is affirmed upon an appeal to the arches, the ſame is uſually remitted to the ſpiritual court; but if the adminiſtration is repealed upon the appeal, in ſuch caſe, that court where the repeal was, ſhall grant adminiſtration de novo, and not the ſpiritual court, becauſe by the repeal their juriſdiction is gone as to this caſe, ſo likewiſe upon an appeal to the delegates, if the adminiſtration is repealed, they may grant adminiſtration de novo. Latch 85.

An adminiſtrator declared on an adminiſtration granted by king Charles, without ſaying, debito modo, and held good. Allen 53.

It regularly muſt be granted by the biſhop of the dioceſe where the party dies, and in ſuch caſe 'tis ſufficient for the plaintiff to ſay, that it was granted to him by the biſhop loci iſtius ordinarium; if he doth not ſay by whom it was granted, but only, that debito modo commiſſa fuit, this is nought upon a demurrer, but good after a verdict. Style 282.

The authority of an archdeacon need not be ſet forth, becauſe he is oculus epiſcopi, and is to grant adminiſtration jure ordinario. Style 54.

An adminiſtrator declared on an adminiſtration committed to him by R. B. archdeacon of Norfolk, and did not ſay loci iſtius ordinarium; and held good. Sid. 302.

The defendant ſet forth, that adminiſtration was granted to her by the commiſſary of the biſhop of Litchfield, legitime conſtitutum; and held good. 1 Lutw. 9.

An adminiſtrator declared on an adminiſtration granted to him per W. Lewen, vicarum generalem in ſpiritualibus epiſcopi Roffen', without ſaying, loci iſtius ordinarium, and held well, for ſuch a vicar amounts to a chancellor. 1 Lutw. 408.

Covenant againſt Huſband and wife, adminiſtratrix of her firſt huſband, upon a leaſe made to him, wherein he covenanted not to aſſign it without leave of the leſſor; and the breach was, that he did aſſign it without leave, ſo that the inteſtate in his life time did break the covenant, and the defendant alſo after his deceaſe dum ſola fuit (to whom adminiſtration of her huſband's goods was committed) and likewiſe the huſband and wife did the like after their marriage; upon demurrer to this declaration it was objected, that the plaintiff ought to ſhew by whom adminiſtration was committed to the widow, and by what authority; 'tis true, if the adminiſtratrix had been plaintiff, this had been a reaſonable objection, but as ſhe was a defendant in this action, 'tis unreaſonable, that the plaintiff, who was a mere ſtranger to the proceedings, ſhould ſhew by whom, and by what authority it was granted. 1 Lutw. 297.

Ruled by the judges, that where a man dies inteſtate, having goods in ſeveral peculiars, the granting of adminiſtration is in the metropolitan, and not in the ordinary. 1 Lev. 78.

If granted by a peculiar, the plaintiff muſt ſhew by whom, and muſt add cui commiſſio adminiſtrationis præd' de jure pertinet. 1 Salk. 38.

An adminiſtrator declared on an adminiſtration by the official of the biſhop of Carliſle, without ſaying loci iſtius ordinarium; and upon a demurrer this was held good. 2 Mod. 65.

Adminiſtrator, durante minori ætate cum teſtamento annexo, was plaintiff, but did not ſet forth, that adminiſtration was committed to him, and yet he concluded with a profert hic in curia literas teſtamentarias; this was held ill, and not cured by a verdict. T. Jones 193.

Adminiſtration granted by an official of a peculiar debito modo commiſſa, without averring cui de jure commiſſio adminiſtrationis in hac parte pertinet, held good, and affirmed in error upon this difference, (viz.) where the power of granting adminiſtration is by ſpecial commiſſion from the ordinary, as by his chancellor, &c. there it muſt be averred, he had juriſdiction; but where the power is by by office or privilege, as by a commiſſary or official, it need not be averred, becauſe the office imports the power as incident to it, and the law takes notice of the office. 1 Salk. 41.

It ought to be granted by the biſhop of the dioceſe where the party dies, and therefore where the plaintiff declared on an adminiſtration granted by the biſhop of London, the defendant pleaded in bar, that the inteſtate at the time of his death, was reſident in the dioceſe of W. and this was held a good plea. 1 Salk. 37.

By the ſtatute 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. The omiſſion of ſetting forth by what authority the adminiſtration is granted, is cured by a verdict; as for inſtance, an adminiſtrator declared, that adminiſtration was granted to him by W. R. ſurrogate and official of D. D. prebendary of the prebend of C. and did not ſay, cui adminiſtratio de jure pertinet; this was aided by a verdict. 4 Mod. 113.

Debt by an adminiſtrator, &c. and in concluding his declaration, he alledged, that adminiſtration was granted to him by the archbiſhop of Canterbury apud caſtrum Eborum; upon non eſt factum pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the granting adminiſtration was a judicial act, and it appearing, that it was granted by the archbiſhop of Canterbury out of his province, it was therefore void; but adjudged, that 'tis only a miniſterial act, becauſe the ordinary is directed by the ſtatute, to grant it. 1 Lutw. 533.

Debt by an adminiſtrator on an adminiſtration granted to him by the biſhop of L. the defendant pleaded in bar, that the inteſtate at the time of his death, was reſident in another dioceſe; and upon a demurrer this was held a good plea. 1 Salk. 37.

Debt by an adminiſtrator, to whom adminiſtration was committed debito modo by T. C. maſter of arts, commiſſary or official of a peculiar legitime fulcit'; upon a demurrer to this declaration, it was objected, that the court could not take notice that every peculiar had a right to grant adminiſtration, and therefore the plaintiff ſhould have ſet forth the power, (viz.) cui de jure commiſſio adminiſtrationis in hac parte pertinet; but adjudged, that every peculiar hath a power of granting adminiſtration, for they have a ſpecial ordinary for that purpoſe, and all the caſes relating to this matter may be thus reconciled, (viz.) that wherever the power of him who grants adminiſtration is by commiſſion, his authority muſt be averred, (viz.) cui juriſdictio in ea parte pertinuit: thus adminiſtration granted by T. S. theologiæ profeſſorem, or per D. G. decanum de S. or per R. G. chancellor of Cheſter, is naught; becauſe all theſe are by ſpecial commiſſion under the biſhop; but where adminiſtration is granted virtute officii, there the plaintiff need not aver the authority of the perſon granting, becauſe the office itſelf imports a power to grant it; thus, where the plaintiff declared on an adminiſtration granted to him per abbatem de Weſtm' loci iſtius ordinarium; this is good, becauſe the word ordinary implies ſuch a power; the like of a commiſſary of a biſhop, becauſe the law knows every commiſſary muſt have that power; ſo likewiſe per R. W. officialem epiſcopi; ſo per M. R. archidiaconum, good. 1 Salk. 40.

The plaintiff, as adminiſtrator to Thomas Rider, brought an action of debt on a bond for 40*l.* and ſets forth, that the adminiſtration of all his goods, not exceeding 40*l.* was granted to him by Dr. Cartwright dean rural of Fradſham, within dioceſe of Cheſter, who had a peculiar juriſdiction; the defendant pleads, that the inteſtate, Thomas Rider, had goods above the value of 40*l.* (viz.) of the value of 50*l.* at Fradſham within the dioceſe of Cheſter, and that the official of the biſhop had granted adminiſtration to S. D. and traverſed, that the dean rural had any power to grant adminiſtration, &c. this plea was held ill upon a demurrer, becauſe the defendant had not alledged, that Fradſham was within the peculiar, for if it was, then the inteſtate having above 40*l.* there the dean rural had no power to grant adminiſtration; now it not appearing, whether Fradſham was within the peculiar or not, but only, that it was in the dioceſe of Cheſter, then the dean rural may grant adminiſtration in his peculiar, where the value doth not exceed 40*l.* and where it doth exceed that value out of the peculiar, the biſhop may grant another adminiſtration, and both may ſtand. 5 Mod. 423.

4. Of diſtribution among lineal and collateral relations.

By the ſtatute 21 Hen. 8. the ordinary upon granting adminiſtration, is to take ſecurity, that the adminiſtrator ſhall truly adminiſter the goods; and this was uſually done by a bond, in which this clauſe was inſerted, (viz.) that after debts paid, the ſurplus ſhould be diſtributed as the ordinary ſhould direct; and accordingly they directed the diſtribution according to the courſe of the Imperial law, with which the Common law agreeth in this matter (i. e.) to the wife and children, and where there were none, then to the next of kin in a natural order of ſucceſſion; and when they began to break that order, then this clauſe was conteſted, firſt in the caſe of Tooker and Lean, where Lord Hobart was of opinion, that after adminiſtration was granted, the adminiſtrator had a property in the ſurplus, after debts paid. Hob. 83.

But in Levan's caſe it was adjudged, that after adminiſtration granted, the adminiſtrator had an abſolute property in the goods, and that the ordinary having executed his power, he had nothing farther to do. Cro. Car. 201.

But now by the ſtatute 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. the ordinary is to take a bond, with ſureties, in his own name, with a condition particularly mentioned in this ſtatute, the ſubſtance whereof is, to exhibit a true inventory of the goods, and truly to adminiſter the ſame according to law; to account before the ordinary, and to pay the reſidue as he ſhall direct, but purſuant to the true meaning of the ſtatute, viz. after debts, funerals, and juſt expences allowed, then to diſtribute the ſurplus, as the ſtatute directs. See ſect 1. of this title.

Since this ſtatute a man died inteſtate, without any wife or child, and the queſtion was, whether his ſiſter of the half blood ſhould have a diſtributive part with the brother of the whole blood? It was adjudged that ſhe ſhould; for the ſtatute made no alteration in ſuch caſes, and before the ſtatute was made, the Common law made no difference between the whole blood and the half blood as to this matter; 'tis true, the ſurplus is to be divided amongſt the next of kin in equal degree; now, ſhe who is of the half blood, is next of kin to the inteſtate, as well as he who is of the whole blood, for tho' 'tis only the half, 'tis the ſame blood with the whole, but not ſo much of it. 1 Mod. 209.

Repreſentatives amongſt collaterals, even before the making the ſtatute of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. were always rejected in thoſe of remote degrees, becauſe the kindred might be branched out amongſt ſo many perſons, and the eſtate divided into ſo many parts, that very little benefit would accrue to them; and tho' repreſentations amongſt lineals are allowed in remote degrees, yet, even in ſuch caſe the diſtribution is to be made per ſtirpes, and not per capita, for the reaſon before mentioned. But now by the ſaid ſtatute 'tis expreſly enacted, that there ſhall be no repreſentation amongſt collaterals after brothers and ſiſters children, that is, the brothers and ſiſters of the inteſtate, and not brothers and ſiſters of children of any collaterals. It is true, it hath been otherwiſe adjudged; as for inſtance, a man died inteſtate, and his next of kin were two aunts, but one of them died before him, and left two children, and adminiſtration being granted to the ſurviving aunt, ſhe was ordered to diſtribute a ſhare to them, and ſuch a ſhare as their mother would have, if ſhe had been living; but this was contrary to the opinion of the chief juſtice North, who would not allow repreſentations amongſt collaterals ſo remote. Raym. 496.

5. Of bona notabilia.

If a man hath goods to the value of 5*l.* in one dioceſe, and a leaſe in another, this is a chattel; and tho' 'tis not properly movables or goods, yet it ſhall make bona notabilia. 1 Roll. Abr. 909.

If a man die inteſtate in one dioceſe, and have a bond in another, in ſuch caſe adminiſtration muſt be in the prerogative court, becauſe the debt doth not follow the perſon, but but 'tis a debt where the bond was at his deceaſe. Cro. Eliz. 472.

If a man dies in one dioceſe without any goods there, but hath bona notabilia in another dioceſe, in ſuch caſe the right to grant adminiſtration is in the archbiſhop, becauſe he hath a general juriſdiction. Cro. Eliz. 457.

If the archbiſhop grants adminiſtration on a pretence of bona notabilia, when in truth the inteſtate had none, this is not void, becauſe of his general juriſdiction, but 'tis voidable; but if a biſhop grant adminiſtration when the inteſtate had bona notabilia, 'tis void, becauſe he hath no juriſdiction out of his dioceſe. 5 Rep. 30.

But it hath been held, that ſuch an adminiſtration is not void, becauſe of common right the ordinary is to grant adminiſtration, and that neither he or the perſon to whom 'tis granted may know that there were bona notabilia. 2 Leon. 155.

If there are two adminiſtrations, one by the metropolitan and the other by the biſhop, if there were not bona notabilia, the prerogative adminiſtration ought to be repealed. Cro. Eliz. 283, 315, 457.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit, &c. againſt an executrix, who pleaded in abatement, that her huſband died inteſtate, but did not ſay, in what dioceſe, and that he had bona notabilia in ſeveral dioceſſes, but did not ſet forth where, and that adminiſtration was granted to her by the prerogative court, ſo that ſhe ought to be ſued as adminiſtratrix, and not as executrix, and averred her plea; upon a ſpecial demurrer this plea in abatement was held ill; for where a defendant adminiſtratrix pleads either in bar or abatement, ſhe muſt ſet forth in what dioceſe her huſband died, and where he had bona notabilia, that it may appear the prerogative adminiſtration was well granted. 5 Rep. 33.

Debt by huſband and wife as adminiſtratrix, ſetting forth, that adminiſtration was granted to her by the biſhop of Rocheſter; the defendant pleaded, that adminiſtration was granted to her by the dean and chapter of Canterbury, ſede vacante, for that the inteſtate, at the time of his death had bona notabilia in diverſis diœceſibus provinciæ Cantuar. now in the firſt reſolution in this caſe it was held, that becauſe the defendant did not ſet forth any certainty where the inteſtate had bona notabilia, but only in diverſis diœceſibus provinciæ; therefore it ſhall be taken, that adminiſtration was granted by that ordinary where he had not bona notabilia, becauſe every plea ſhall be taken in the ſtricteſt ſenſe againſt the pleader; however, if the inteſtate had bona notabilia, &c. the adminiſtration in an inferior dioceſe, is not void, but voidable. 8 Rep. 135.

If a man dies, leaving bona notabilia in both provinces, there muſt be ſeveral adminiſtrations. Hard. 216.

If the inteſtate leaves goods in ſeveral peculiars, the archbiſhop of the province hath the right to grant adminiſtration. 2 Lev. 86.

Debt upon a bond to ſave the plaintiff harmleſs, &c. the defendant pleads, non damnificatus; the plaintiff replies, that one Wynn had obtained a judgment againſt him in London, and that he died inteſtate, and that adminiſtration of his goods was granted by the biſhop of Lincoln to one W. G. and that he paid the money to the adminiſtrator; and upon a demurrer to this replication the defendant had judgment, becauſe plaintiff alledged he paid the money to the adminiſtrator, when in truth he had no authority to receive it, for the adminiſtration granted by the biſhop of Lincoln was void, becauſe the inteſtate obtained the judgment in Weſtminſter. 1 Lutw. 399.

It is more certain to plead, that the inteſtate had bona notabilia in diverſis diœceſibus within the province of Canterbury, (viz.) at Weſtminſter in the county of Middleſex and dioceſe of London, and at St. Edmundſbury within the dioceſe of Norwich; in this caſe the adminiſtration was granted by the archdeacon of Sudbury. 2 Lutw. 985.

Debt againſt the defendant as executor to John White; who pleaded, that John White did make a will, but did not make him (the defendant) executor, but that he had bona notabilia in ſeveral dioceſes, and that the archbiſhop of Canterbury granted adminiſtration to him, and concluded in bar; to which there was a demurrer, and the plea was adjudged ill, becauſe this was a plea only in abatement, and the concluding it in bar made it ill; beſides, he did not expreſsly alledge, that John White died inteſtate; he only ſays, he made a will, but did not make him (the defendant) executor by that will; which may be true, and yet he might be made executor by a codicil; ſo the plaintiff had judgment. 1 Mod. 239.

Where there are bona notabilia in ſeveral dioceſes both in the ſame province, the prerogative hath the right of granting adminiſtration. Salk. 39.

Adjudged, that debts upon ſimple contract are perſonal, and adminiſtration thereof muſt be granted by the ordinary where the inteſtate dies; ſo if he have two houſes in ſeveral dioceſes, and uſually lives in one, but ſometimes in the other, and being there for a few days, he dies, adminiſtration of his perſonal eſtate ſhall be granted by the biſhop of that dioceſe where he died. 1 Salk. 37.

Adjudged, that where there are bona notabilia in two dioceſes in the ſame province, there muſt be a prerogative adminiſtration; and where there are bona notabilia in one dioceſe in one province, and in another dioceſe in another province, there muſt be two prerogative adminiſtrations. 1 Salk. 39.

6. Pleadings in ſuits againſt adminiſtrators.

Debt againſt an adminiſtratrix, who pleaded that J. S. had obtained a judgment againſt her for 100 l. and that ſhe plene adminiſtravit, and had not goods of the inteſtate in her hands at the time of the original writ brought, nor at the time of judgment, nec unquam poſtea, præterquam bona & catalla non attingentia ad 5 l. It was objected againſt this plea, that it did not ſet forth the certain value of the goods, and that it was repugnant, becauſe the defendant, after he had pleaded plene adminiſtravit, confeſſed that there was 5 l. not adminiſtred; but it was anſwered and adjudged, that it was only matter of form to aſcertain the value of the goods, and that the ſubſtance of the plea was, that the defendant had not above 5 l. to ſatisfy the demand of 100 l. neither is this plea repugnant; for the three firſt adverbs, nec unquam poſtea, relate as well to the time of the original writ brought, as to the time of the judgment, and the next adverb, præterquam, explains the whole; ſo that the ſenſe is, that the defendant, after the writ brought, and judgment obtained againſt her, had never any of the inteſtate's goods, except goods not of the value of 5 l. and if ſo, then plene adminiſtravit before that time, excepting thoſe goods. Hob. 133, 218.

The teſtator owed 500 l. on ſpecialities, and 500 l. more on ſimple contract, and having deviſed 400 l. in legacies, and made an executor durante minori ætate of his ſon, he died, leaving a perſonal eſtate to the value of 2000 l. the executor paid 1400 l. in diſcharge of the ſaid debts and legacies, and accounted with the infant, when he came of age, and upon payment of 91 l. reſiduum to him, had a releaſe, afterwards an action was brought againſt him by one of the creditors of his teſtator, and upon pleading plene adminiſtravit the jury found, that he paid the debts and legacies as aforeſaid, and that he delivered up all the reſidue of the perſonal eſtate of the teſtator to his executor, when he came of age: It was objected againſt this verdict, that it did not maintain the plea of plene adminiſtravit, becauſe here were aſſets delivered over to the executor, and this plea is never proper, but where all debts are paid as far as there are aſſets; but it was adjudged good, for where-ever the executor lawfully diſcharges himſelf of the teſtator's eſtate, he may plead this plea. 1 Mod. 174.

Where the defendant pleads plene adminiſtravit, to an action of debt on a bond, the debt is admitted by that plea; and if the defendant give evidence, that he paid a debt on another bond, owing by the teſtator, he muſt prove that the bond was ſealed and delivered; but ſuch a plea to an action of debt upon ſimple contract is good, if the defendant prove the payment of the debt, for where there is no bond, 'tis good adminiſtration to pay any debt. Show. 81.

Aſſumpſit againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded, that on ſuch a day the inteſtate entered into bond to J. S. to pay 40 l. at Michaelmas next enſuing, and that plene adminiſtravit all the goods of the ſaid inteſtate's præterquam to ſatisfy that 40 l. and upon a demurrer it was adjudged a good a good plea; for tho' the debt on the bond is not due till the day of payment, yet a debt upon a contract ſhall not be paid before it. Cro. Eliz. 315.

Debt upon a bond of the inteſtate was brought againſt the adminiſtrator, who pleaded, that his inteſtate being a citizen of London, contracted with another citizen to pay money to him, and that by the cuſtom of London he is chargeable with ſuch contract, as if it had been a debt due on bond, and that he had not aſſets ultra, to pay the debt upon contract; and upon a demurrer, this was adjudged a good plea; for a debt upon ſimple contract is as much a debt as a debt on bond, only the law hath made the bond debt payable before the other; but this being a reaſonable cuſtom, by conſequence 'tis a law, and hath made the debt on a contract equal to that on the bond. Cro. Eliz. 409.

Debt againſt the adminiſtrator of J. S. who pleaded, that W. P. had obtained a judgment againſt him as executor to J. S. prout patet per recordum, and this was held a good plea, tho' it was objected in the like caſe, that the defendant ought to have pleaded in abatement to the action, that he was executor and not adminiſtrator; but adjudged, that he need not plead it in abatement, eſpecially ſince the judgment was obtained for a true debt. Cro. Eliz. 646.

Caſe againſt an adminiſtrator, upon a promiſe of the inteſtate; the defendant pleaded in bar, two judgments had againſt him, one in debt upon ſimple contract, and the other upon an inſimul computaſſet prout per ſeparalia recorda inde plenius apparet, beyond which he had not aſſets; and upon demurrer to this plea, for that he did not ſay the judgments were had pro veris & juſtis debitis, and for that he did not conclude to each record, but only prout per ſeparalia recorda, &c. yet the plea was adjudged good, for 'tis not neceſſary to aver, that the judgments were obtained pro veris & juſtis debitis; for if they were not ſo obtained, the plaintiff ought to ſhew it in his replication, and ſo is 3 Cro. 471. Further's caſe; then, as to the concluſion, prout patet per ſeparalia recorda, 'tis well enough, for it ſhall be taken diſtributively; then, as to the matter of the plea in bar it was adjudged, that judgments in debt upon ſimple contract are pleadable to this action; for the debt is not loſt by the death of the inteſtate, but his adminiſtrator is ſtill liable, becauſe an action on the caſe lies againſt him for ſuch things, for which debts upon ſimple contract are brought, and upon which the plaintiff may recover againſt him, and he ought not to uſe dilatories, but to let judgment paſs againſt him by non ſum informatus, as he did in this caſe; 'tis true, debt upon ſimple contract cannot be maintained againſt an executor, if he had demurred to the declaration; but if he plead to it, 'tis good, and the judgment ſhall not be reverſed for that reaſon, and thoſe caſes in 1 And. 182. and 3 Cro. 121. which are to the contrary, are not law; now, if this plea is not good, then the debts, which the defendant paid in ſatisfaction of theſe judgments will be a devaſtavit, which no man will affirm, becauſe, if an action is brought on a contract, and the defendant pleads plene adminiſtravit, he may give payment on another contract in evidence, and by the ſame reaſon he may ſuffer judgment to paſs againſt himſelf. Sid. 333.

Debt upon bond of 40*l.* againſt an adminiſtratrix, who pleaded, that the inteſtate was indebted to W. R. in 250*l.* on a ſtatute merchant, yet in force, &c. and that ſhe had not above 40*s.* aſſets, beſides what will ſatisfy that ſtatute; the plaintiff replied, that the ſtatute was burnt with fire; and upon a demurrer to this replication, three judges were of opinion for the plaintiff, becauſe by the demurrer the defendant had admitted, that the ſtatute was burnt, and if ſo, then it would never riſe up in judgment againſt him, becauſe, by the ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. cap. 6. execution is to be made on ſtatutes ſtaple, in ſuch manner as therein is provided, and the ſtatute ſtaple refers to the ſtatute merchant, and that to the ſtatute of Acton Burnell made 13 Ed. 1. which provides, that if it be found by the roll, that the debt was acknowledged, and the day of payment paſt, that then, &c. now if the roll is burnt, it cannot appear that the day of payment is paſt, and conſequently there cannot be any execution; beſides, the cogniſee in pleading muſt ſay hic in curia prolat', which is now impoſſible: But Vaughan Ch. Juſt. held the plea good and the replication ill; for admitting the record was burnt, the plaintiff cannot avoid it by ſuch a replication, becauſe 'tis againſt a rule in law, that a matter of record ſhould be avoided by matter of fact: this is proper for a caſe in equity. 1 Mod. 186.

Aſſumpſit againſt an adminiſtrator, upon a promiſe made by the inteſtate to pay 418*l.* to the plaintiff, for goods ſold and delivered; the defendant pleads ſeveral judgments obtained againſt him as adminiſtrator upon ſimple contracts, and avers, that the ſeveral debts, at the time of the death of the inteſtate and at the time of the judgments obtained, were juſt and true debts; and that the judgments were in force and not ſatisfied; and that he had not aſſets beyond thoſe judgments; the plaintiff replied, that the ſaid judgments were obtained by fraud, and traverſed, that they were had for juſt and true debts; and upon a ſpecial demurrer to this replication it was objected, that it was double; for the plaintiff having avoided the judgments by pleading, that they were obtained by fraud, ought to have relied upon that, and then the judgment would have been de bonis inteſtati; and therefore he ought not to have perplexed it with a traverſe, that they were obtained for juſt and true debts; and ſo is Beaumont's caſe, in Latch 111. but adjudged, that the plaintiff ſhall have liberty to traverſe the ſpecial matter, or to rely upon the fraud, which he will, and that either way the replication is good. 2 Saund. 49.

Aſſumpſit againſt the defendant as adminiſtratrix of her huſband, ſhe pleaded, that he was bound in a ſtatute to one Cordell for 2000*l. pro vero & juſto debito minime ſoluto*; the plaintiff replied, that Cordell the cogniſee had ſued out an extent, and upon a liberate had got the poſſeſſion of the lands of the cogniſor, which he the ſaid Cordell had accepted in ſatisfaction of the recognizance, prout patet per recordum; adjudged, this was a good replication, becauſe the cogniſor was concluded by this acceptance of the lands to have any other execution upon the goods of the inteſtate, and therefore thoſe goods are liable in the hands of the adminiſtratrix, and ſhe is chargeable. 3 Lev. 269.

Debt upon a bond againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded a judgment recovered againſt his inteſtate in Hilary term 26 Car. 2. and that he had not aſſets ultra, &c. The plaintiff replied, and confeſſed, that an action was then brought againſt the inteſtate, but that he died before judgment was had in that action, and that it was obtained after his death, and kept on foot by fraud; the defendant rejoined and traverſed the fraud, but did not anſwer the death of the inteſtate; and upon a demurrer to the rejoinder, it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that he being a ſtranger to this judgment, might well avoid it by a plea, as he had done in this caſe, and that he had no other way to avoid it; becauſe being a ſtranger to it, he could neither bring a writ of error or writ of deceit; and of that opinion was the court. 2 Mod. 308.

Action againſt an adminiſtrator, who, pending that ſuit, let judgment be had againſt him by another, and did not plead that judgment in bar to the firſt action, but ſold part of the goods of the inteſtate to ſatisfy that judgment; however, the plaintiff in the firſt action proceeded, and he likewiſe got judgment and brought a fi. fa. to take the goods in execution, and the ſheriff levied part, and as to the reſt he returned a devaſtavit, and an action was brought againſt him for a falſe return; it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that ſuffering judgment to go by default pending the action, was no confeſſion of aſſets, and that the ſheriff ought not to have returned a devaſtavit, but nulla bona, and ſo there ſhould be a ſcire fieri inquiry; but adjudged, that he may return a devaſtavit, that the ſcire fieri inquiry is only for his ſafety, that if an executor ſuffers judgment to go by default, or confeſſes it, he admits aſſets; 'tis true, he might have pleaded that judgment and riens ultra; but not pleading it when he might, is an admiſſion of aſſets, as to the ſecond judgment, and he is eſtopped to ſay the contrary upon a devaſtavit returned. 1 Salk. 310.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded, that before the action brought, the adminiſtration was revoked and granted to another, he having then aſſets in his hands to the value of 200*l.* which he had delivered over to the new adminiſtrator; the plaintiff replied, that it was done by fraud and covin, upon which they were at iſſue, and ſo it was found, and thereupon the plaintiff had judgment to recover the debt de bonis teſtatoris; and upon a writ of error brought it was objected, that the judgment ought not to be abſolute de bonis teſtatoris only, but conditional, ſi tantum habuit in manibus; but adjudged, that it was well enough. Yelv. 219.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded, that a judgment was obtained againſt him in London in an action of debt due and owing by his inteſtate; and that he had not aſſets præterquam to ſatisfy that judgment; the plaintiff in his replication confeſſed, that ſuch judgment was had againſt the defendant, but that before the plaintiff brought his action, the judgment creditor had acknowledged ſatisfaction on record; and upon demurrer to this replication it was adjudged againſt the defendant, becauſe ſatisfaction being acknowledged on that judgment, he cannot plead that he had not aſſets præterquam to ſatisfy it, when that was done already. Cro. Eliz. 726.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded ſeveral judgments had againſt him amounting to 514*l.* and that he had not goods of the inteſtate to adminiſter præterquam bona & catalla quæ non attingunt ad valenciam præd' 514*l. verſus ipſum in forma præd' recuperat'*; the plaintiff replied, that one of the judgments was obtained by covin, and that the other judgment creditor had accepted a compoſition of part for the whole debt, and the defendant delayed to take a releaſe from him; and upon a demurrer to this replication the plea was adjudged ill, for theſe reaſons; firſt, for that it was uncertain, becauſe every leſs ſum than 514*l. non attingit* to pay that ſum; beſides, nothing ſhall be accompted to be adminiſtered but what was really paid purſuant to the compoſition; and that the converſion of any part of the inteſtate's eſtate to the uſe of the defendant, and his neglecting to take a releaſe of the judgment, is plainly againſt the duty of an adminiſtrator. 8 Rep. 132.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded two recognizances acknowledged by the inteſtate, which were not ſatisfied, and that he had not goods, &c. præterquam bona & catalla, which did not amount to what was due on the ſaid recognizances; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was adjudged againſt the defendant, for he ought to have pleaded, that he had not goods præterquam bona, to ſatisfy the ſaid recognizances, or no goods beyond ſuch value, which did not amount to the ſums due on the ſame 2 Brown. 118, 153.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded a recognizance acknowledged by his inteſtate, and not ſatisfied; as alſo a judgment in debt for 5000*l.* on a note payble upon demand, with intereſt, and that the money being not paid on ſuch a day, the intereſt amounted to 700*l.* and ſo there was a judgment againſt him for the principal and intereſt, for ſuch a certain ſum, and that he had not aſſets ultra 40*l.* chargeable to this recognizance and judgment; and upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged againſt the defendant; for his pleading the judgment obtained againſt him for intereſt on the note, is not good, becauſe 'tis a devaſtavit in him to ſuffer ſo much intereſt to incur; beſides he ought to have pleaded, that there was not aſſets to ſatisfy the principal ſum before any intereſt became due, 2 Lev. 39.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator upon a bill penal of the inteſtate, &c. the defendant pleaded in bar ſeveral judgments obtained againſt him as an adminiſtrator, upon bonds of the inteſtate, amounting to 115*l.* and that he had fully adminiſtred præterquam 10*l.* which was not ſufficient to diſcharge the ſaid judgments: The plaintiff replied, and confeſſed the bonds, but that at the time of the judgments obtained there was but 48*l.* 10*s.* due on the ſaid bonds, and ſhews to whom, and that it was more than was really due for all the debts and damages on the ſaid judgments: and that it would be accepted in full diſcharge thereof, and that the defendant had aſſets ultra the ſaid 48*l.* 10*s.* to ſatisfy the plaintiff's debts; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was held ill, becauſe nothing was put in iſſue, for the allegation, that 48*l.* 10*s. would be accepted in full diſcharge of the judgments*, is matter which might be given in evidence to prove the fraud; he ſhould have ſaid that the creditors would have accepted leſs than the debts due to them, and that the defendant would not pay it, but kept the judgments on foot by fraud. 1 Lutw. 445.

Adminiſtratrix, (Lat.) She that hath goods and chattels of an inteſtate committed to her charge, as an adminiſtrator.

Admiral and Admiralty, (Admiralius, Admiral'us, Admiralis, Capitaneus, or Cuſtos maris) Signifieth a high officer or magiſtrate, who hath the government of the King's navy, and the hearing of all cauſes belonging to the ſea. Cromp. Jur. fol. 88. This officer is in all kingdoms of Europe that border upon the ſea. This magiſtrate among the Romans was called præfectus claſſis, as appeareth by Tully, in Verrem. Mr. Guin, in his Preface to his Reading, believes this office was firſt created in the time of Ed. 3. his reaſon is this; becauſe Britton who wrote in the time of Ed. 1. in the beginning of his book, taking upon him to name all the courts of juſtice, maketh no mention of this court, or magiſtrate, and Richard the ſecond, in the tenth year of his reign, limited his juriſdiction to the power he had in the days of his grandfather Ed. 3. but contrary to this, it appears by ſome antient records, that not only in the days of Ed. 1. but alſo of King John, all cauſes of merchants and mariners, and things happening within the main ſea, were ever tried before the lord admiral: to this purpoſe he hath his court called the Admiralty. Cowel.

The firſt title of Admiral of England expreſly conferred upon a ſubject, was given by patent of Ric. 2. to Richard Fitz Alen, jun. Earl of Arundel and Surry, 10 Sep. ann. 10 Rich. 2. for thoſe who before enjoyed the office were ſimply termed admirals, tho' their juriſdiction ſeems to have been as large, eſpecially in the reign of Ed. 3. when the court of admiralty was firſt erected. See Spelman, who gives a catalogue of the admirals from 8 Hen. 3. to 16 Jac. 1.

The court of admiralty is a court for all maritime cauſes or matters ariſing upon the high ſea, and its juriſdiction is derived from the King, who protects his ſubjects from pirates, &c. and who has dominion over all the Britiſh ſeas. This juriſdiction he exerciſes by the lord high admiral, or thoſe lawfully deputed for that purpoſe. 1 New. Abr. 622. 4 Inſt. 142. Molloy 66. Seld. Ma. Clauſ.

The juriſdiction of the lord admiral is very ancient, and long before the reign of Ed. 3. as ſome have ſuppoſed; as may appear by the laws of Oleron, (ſo called, for that they were made by King Richard the firſt, when he was there) and by many other ancient records in the reigns of Hen. 3. Ed. 1. and Ed. 2. This great officer in the Saxon language is called aen mere, i. e. over all the ſea, præfectus maris ſive claſſis, archithalaſſus: And in ancient time the office of the admiralty was called cuſtodia marinæ Angliæ, or maritimæ Angliæ. *Co. 2. To what contracts and crimes its juriſdiction extends.

1. To what places and things the juriſdiction of the Admiralty extends.

It is laid down as a general rule in our Common law books, that the admiral's juriſdiction is confined to matters ariſing on the high ſeas only, and that he cannot take conuſance of contracts, &c. made or done in any river, haven or creek within any county; and that all matters ariſing within theſe are triable by the Common law. See 4 Inſt. 137, 138, 139, 140. 12 Co. 129. Moor 122, 892. Godb. 261. 2 Sid. 81. Hob. 79, 212.

212. 13 Co. 52. 2 Brownl. 10, 37. 2 Bulſt. 322. 1 Rol. Rep. 133.

But our books ſeem not to be agreed what ſhall be counted the high ſea, or altum mare. By ſome it is no part of the ſea where one may ſee what is done on the other ſide of the water. 4 Inſt. 140, 141. 12 Co. 80. Moor 892.

What is within the body of the county is no part of the ſea; and the court of admiralty cannot hold plea of a thing done upon the river Thames, becauſe within the body of the county. 4 Inſt. 140. 1 Roll. Abr. 531. Owen 122. 2 Brownl. 37. S. C. adjudged. 1 Leon. 106. Moor 916. 2 Roll. Rep. 413. S. P. adjudged. Nor can the court of admiralty hold plea of a matter ariſing at Limehouſe. Cro. Jac. 514. 2 Roll. Rep. 49. Moor 891. S. P. adjudged. But by Owen 123. ſuch place as is covered with ſalt water is altum mare: And 1 Roll. Rep. 250. by Coke, the court of admiralty hath conuſance of a matter done in a ſhip, riding in a port that is not within the body of a county.

But it ſeems agreed, that tho' in a libel in the court of admiralty the fact is laid to be done ſuper altum mare; yet it may be ſurmiſed that it was done in corpore com', &c. and thereupon a prohibition will be granted, for the ſurmiſe is traverſable. Moor 891. pl. 1255. Latch. 11.

It hath been reſolved, that between the high and low water mark, the Common law and admiralty have imperium diviſum, that is, the one when it is not, and the other when it is, covered with water; and that the ſoil upon which the ſea flows and reflows, may be parcel of a manor. 5 Co. 107. Sir Henry Conſtable's caſe. 1 And. 89. S. C. 3 Inſt. 113. S. P.

If a man's lands lie to the ſea, and if they are increaſed by inſenſible degrees, they belong to the ſoil adjoining; but if the ſea leaves any ſhore by a ſudden falling off of the water, then ſuch derelict lands belong to the King. Dyer 326. 2 Roll. Abr. 170.

By the ſtatute 13 Rich. 2. c. 5. it is enacted that, upon complaint of incroachments made by the admirals and their deputies, the admirals and their deputies ſhall meddle with nothing done within the realm, but only with things done upon the ſea. For the conſtruction of this ſtatute, ſee 2 Bulſtr. 323. 3 Bulſtr. 205. 13 Co. 52.

By ſtat. 15 Ric. 2. c. 3. it is declared that, all contracts, pleas and quarrels, and other things done within the bodies of counties by land or water, and of wreck, the admiral ſhall have no conuzance, but they ſhall be tried, &c. by the law of the land; but of the death of a man, and of mayhem done in great ſhips, being in the main ſtream of great rivers beneath the points near the ſea, and in no other place of the ſame river, the admiral ſhall have conuzance; and alſo to arreſt ſhips in great flotes, for the great voyages of the King and the realm, ſaving to the King his forfeitures; and ſhall have juriſdiction in ſuch fleets during ſuch voyages, only ſaving to lords, &c. their liberties.

By the ſtatute 2 Hen. 4. c. 11. reciting the 13 R. 2. c. 13. it is enacted, that he that finds himſelf aggrieved againſt the form of the ſtatute, ſhall have his action by writ grounded upon the caſe againſt him that ſo purſues in the admiralty, and recover double damages againſt him, and he ſhall incur the pain of 10*l. if he be attainted.*

The admiralty court has juriſdiction where a ſhip founders, or is ſplit at ſea, over the goods which become flotſam, jetſam, or lagan; and a ſuit for theſe muſt be in that court; but for goods wrecked they muſt be claimed by action at Common law. 5 Co. 107. 2 Inſt. 167. 4 Inſt. 154. Palm. 96. 1 Sid. 178. 1 Roll. Abr. 531.

And although the admiralty court has juriſdiction of flotſam, &c. and ſhall determine what it is by the rules of the Civil law, yet that muſt be underſtood where the thing is ſuper altum mare; and therefore if a ſhip, which becomes flotſam and derelict, comes into the body of a county, they have no juriſdiction.

So if flotſam comes to land, and is taken by one that hath no title, an action lies at Common law, but there ſhall be no proceedings thereon in the Admiralty; for it need not be condemned as a prize. 2 Mod. 294.

At Common law, none but the King only could erect beacons, light-houſes, and ſea-marks, but of later times, by letters patents granted to the lord admiral, he hath power to erect beacons, ſea-marks, and ſigns for the ſea. 4 Inſt. 148.

If the original cauſe ariſes upon the ſea, and other matters happen upon the land depending thereupon, yet the trial ſhall be in the court of admiralty. 1 Vent. 173. 2 Lev. 25. 1 Sid. 320.

As if a man takes a thing upon the ſea and brings it to land, and afterwards carries it away, the ſuit for this ſhall be in the admiralty court, for this is a continued act. 1 Roll. Abr. 533. 4 Inſt. 130. 12 Co. 97.

So if goods are taken piratically out of a ſhip, and afterwards ſold upon land, a ſuit may be commenced in this caſe in the admiralty court againſt the vendee. March 110. 2 Saund. 259. 1 Vent. 173. Cro. Eliz. 685.

So if a ſhip be taken by pirates, and carried to Tunis and there ſold, it being originally within the juriſdiction of the admiral, it ſo continues, notwithſtanding the ſale afterwards upon the land. 1 Vent. 308.

But if the owner of a ſhip ſends her to the Indies to merchandize, and the crew commit piracy, by which, according to the Admiral law, the ſhip becomes forfeited, and the admiral ſeizes her accordingly, if afterwards the owner takes the ſails and tackling out of the ſhip, lying infra corpus com', no ſuit for this can be in the admiralty court; for the admiral hath his remedy by action at Common law. 1 Roll. Abr. 532. 1 Roll. Rep. 285.

If a ſhip is taken by pirates upon the ſea, and the maſter, to redeem the ſhip, contracts with the pirates to pay them 50*l.* and pawns his perſon for it, and the pirates carry him to the iſle of S. and there he pays it with money borrowed, and gives bond for the money, he may ſue in the admiralty for the 50*l.* becauſe the original cauſe aroſe upon the ſea, and what followeth was but acceſſory and conſequential. Hard. 183.

If there be a war with the Dutch, and an Engliſhman having letters of mark, takes an Oſtender for a Dutch ſhip, and brings it into a haven, and libels againſt it to have it condemned as a prize; but ſentence is given that it was no prize; the Oſtender may libel in the admiralty againſt the captain, for the damage the ſhip received while it lay in the port; for the original taking being at ſea, the bringing it into the port, in order to have it condemned, is but a conſequence thereof. 1 Lev. 243. 1 Sid. 367.

If an Engliſh ſhip takes a French ſhip richly laden, the French being in enmity with us, and ſuch ſhip is libelled againſt, and after due notice on the Exchange, &c. declared a lawful prize, the King's proctor may exhibit a libel in the admiralty court, to compel the taker (who ſent the ſhip to Barbadoes, and converted the lading to his own uſe) to anſwer the value of the prize to the King; although it was objected, that by the firſt ſentence the property was veſted in the King, and that this ſecond libel was in nature of an action of trover, of which the court of admiralty cannot hold plea. Carth. 399.

2. To what contracts and crimes its juriſdiction extends.

The court of admiralty hath no juriſdiction as to contracts made at land, whether ſuch contract be made here or in foreign parts. 4 Inſt. 134, 139. 12 Co. 103. Hob. 79, 212.

If a ſhip lying at anchor wants victuals, and ſends to land to J. S. to bring victuals, and ſo the contract is made in the ſhip, the admiralty can have conuſance; ſecus if the contract is made intirely at land, and the victuals after ſent to the ſhip. Latch 11.

If a contract or obligation be made upon the ſea, yet if it be not for a marine cauſe, the ſuit upon this contract or obligation ſhall be at Common law, and not in the admiralty court; for if a man makes an obligation for the ſecurity of a debt growing before upon the land, or if he makes a promiſe to pay it, this cannot be ſued in the court of admiralty, but at Common law. Hob. 12. 1 Roll. Abr. 532.

If

If a man contracts with me in London, in conſideration of 100*l.* to tranſport certain commodities into Turkey, if he does not perform it I cannot ſue him in the court of admiralty, becauſe the contract was here, and nothing done upon ſea. 1 Roll. Abr. 532. 4 Inſt. 139.

If a charter-party be made in England, to do certain things in ſeveral places upon the ſea, though no act is to be done in England, but all upon the ſea, yet no ſuit can be in the admiralty court for the non-performance of the agreement; for the contract is the original, without which no cauſe of ſuit can be, and this contract is out of their juriſdiction; and where part is triable by the Common law, and part by the Admiral law, the Common law ſhall be preferred. 1 Roll. Abr. 532, 533. 1 Roll. Rep. 486. S. C. 4 Inſt. 135, 139, 142.

In caſes of neceſſity, the maſter may hypothecate or pledge the ſhip or goods, and ſuch contract is cognizable in the admiralty court. 1 Roll. Abr. 530. Hob. 11. Moor 913.

The mariners may ſue in the Admiralty court for their wages, although the hiring was by the maſter on land; and this is allowed of in favour of navigation, for here they may all join in the ſame libel; alſo by the Admiral law they have remedy againſt the ſhip and owners, as well as againſt the maſter; and it would be a great diſcouragement to ſeafaringmen, to oblige them to bring ſeparate actions, and thoſe againſt a maſter who may happen to be inſolvent. Winch. 8. 4 Inſt. 141. 1 Vent. 146, 343. 3 Mod. 244, 245. 1 Salk. 33, 31. and ſee 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16.

So of the other officers under the maſter, as the mate, purſer, boatſwain, &c. for they contract with the maſter, yet it is on the credit of the ſhip, &c. 1 Salk. 33. Raym. 3.

So a ſhipwright may ſue in the admiralty court, for the making a ſhip for navigation upon the ſea. 1 Roll. Abr. 533.

But if there be any ſpecial agreement, by which the mariners are to receive their wages in any other manner than is uſual, or if the agreement is under ſeal, the mariners cannot ſue in the admiralty court. 1 Salk. 31.

Nor can the maſter ſue in the admiralty court; for his contract is on the credit of the owners, and not like that of the mariners, which is on the credit of the ſhip. 4 Inſt. 141. Raym. 3. 1 Salk. 33.

If a contract is made at Malaga, concerning the lading of a ſhip, and for breach thereof upon the ſea, (viz.) that he would not receive forty buts of wine into the ſhip, according to agreement, there is a libel in a foreign admiralty, and ſentence that the wine ſhall be received into the ſhip, which is refuſed; yet there can be no ſuit in the admiralty here, reciting the former ſentence, and charging the defendant with the breach thereof; for though one may libel here upon a ſentence, in a foreign admiralty, for the execution of it; yet there being no complete ſentence in the foreign admiralty, but an award only, that the wine ſhould be received; this ſuit for the breach thereof is in nature of an original ſuit, which ought not to be, though the breach was at ſea, becauſe upon a contract made at land. 1 Vent. 32. 1 Sid. 418.

If there are ſeveral partners of a ſhip, and the major part of them are for ſending her a voyage to ſea, to which the reſt diſagree; whereupon, according to common uſage in ſuch caſes, the greater number ſuggeſt in the admiralty court the diſagreement of their partners; and then, according to their uſage there, they order certain perſons to appraiſe the ſhip, who accordingly ſet a value thereon; and the major part, who agreed to the voyage, enter into a recognizance, wherein they bind themſelves jointly and ſeverally to the diſagreeing parties, in a ſum proportionable to their ſhares, according to the value ſet by the appraiſers, to ſecure the ſhares in the ſhip of thoſe who diſagree to the voyage againſt all adventures; there can be no ſuit on this agreement for ſtipulation in the admiralty court; for the contract was made on land, and therefore the temporal courts muſt have conuſance of it. Carth. 26.

By the ſtatute 28 Hen. 8. cap. 15. it is enacted, that "all felonies and robberies, &c. upon the ſea, or in any haven, river, creek or place, where the admiral or admirals have, or pretend to have power, authority or juriſdiction, ſhall be inquired, tried, heard, determined and adjudged in ſuch ſhires and places in the realm, as ſhall be limitted by the King's commiſſion or commiſſions to be directed for the ſame, in like form and condition as if any ſuch offence or offences had been committed or done in or upon the land; and ſuch commiſſions ſhall be had under the King's great ſeal, directed to the admiral or admirals, or to his or their lieutenant, deputy or deputies, and to three or four ſuch other ſubſtantial perſons as ſhall be named or appointed by the lord chancellor of England for the time being, from time to time, and as oft as need ſhall require, to hear and determine ſuch offences after the common courſe of the laws of this land, uſed for felonies and robberies, &c. done and committed upon the land within this realm": And it is further Enacted, "that if any perſon or perſons happen to be indicted for any ſuch offence done, or hereafter to be done upon the ſeas, or in any other place above limitted, that then ſuch order, proceſs, judgment and execution, ſhall be uſed, had, and done, and made to and againſt every ſuch perſon or perſons ſo being indicted, as againſt felons, &c. for any felony, &c. upon the land, by the laws of the land is accuſtomed; and ſuch as ſhall be convict of any ſuch offence, by verdict, confeſſion or proceſs, by authority of any ſuch commiſſion, ſhall have and ſuffer ſuch pains of death, loſſes of lands, goods and chattels, as if they had been attainted and convicted of ſuch offence done upon the land; and alſo, that they ſhall be excluded from the benefit of the clergy."

It was held (Yelv. 134.) that by force of this ſtatute, acceſſaries to this offence could not be tried; but this is remedied by 11 & 12 W. 3. cap. 5. by which their aiders and comforters, and the receivers of their goods, are made acceſſaries, and to be tried as pirates by 28 Hen. 8. cap. 15. alſo the ſaid ſtatute 11 & 12 W. 3. directs how pirates may be tried beyond ſea, according to the Civil law, by commiſſion under the great ſeal of England.

By ſtat. 2 W. & M. ſt. c. 2. The office of lord admiral may be executed by commiſſioners.

By the ſtatute 5 Eliz. cap. 5. ſeveral offences in the act mentioned, if done on the main ſea, or coaſts of the ſea, being no part of the body of any county, and out of any haven and pier, ſhall be tried before the admiral or his deputy, and other juſtices of oyer and terminer, according to the ſtatute of 28 H. 8.

By the ſtatute 1 Ann. cap. 9. captains and mariners belonging to ſhips, and deſtroying the ſame at ſea, ſhall be tried in ſuch places as ſhall be limitted by the King's commiſſion, and according to 28 H. 8.

The ſtatute 10 Ann. cap. 10. directs how the trial of officers and ſoldiers, that either upon land out of Great Britain, or at ſea hold correſpondence with a rebel enemy.

And by the ſtatute 4 Geo. 1. cap. 11. all perſons who ſhall commit any offence for which they ought to be adjudged pirates, felons, or robbers by 11 & 12 W. 3. may be tried, and judged for every ſuch offence according to the form of 28 H. 8. and ſhall be excluded from the benefit of clergy.

All maritime affairs are regulated chiefly by the Civil law and Rhodian laws, the laws of Oleron, or by certain peculiar and municipal laws and conſtitutions, appropriated to certain cities, towns and countries bordering on the ſea.

If the owner of a ſhip victuals it and furniſhes it to ſea, with letters of repriſal, and the maſter and mariners when they are at ſea commit piracy upon a friend of the King, without the notice or aſſent of the owner, yet by this the owner ſhall loſe his ſhip by the admiral law, and our law ought to take notice thereof. 1 Roll. Abr. 530. But ſee 1 Roll. Rep. 285.

By the Civil law and cuſtom of merchants, if the ſhip be caſt away, or periſh through the mariners defaults, they loſe their wages; ſo if taken by pirates, or if they run away; for if it were not for this policy, they would forſake the ſhip in a ſtorm, and yield her up to enemies in any danger. 1 Sid. 179. 1 Mod. 93. 1 Vent. 146.

If a man of Frieſland ſues an Engliſhman in Frieſland before the governor there, and there recovers againſt him a certain ſum, upon which the Engliſhman not having ſufficient ſufficient to ſatisfy it, comes into England; upon which the governor ſends his letters miſſive into England omnes magiſtratus infra regnum Angliæ rogans to make execution of the ſaid judgment; the judge of the admiralty may execute this judgment by impriſonment of the party, and he ſhall not be delivered by the Common law; for this is by the law of nations, that the juſtice of one nation ſhall be aiding to the juſtice of another nation, and for one to execute the judgment of the other; and the law of England takes notice of this law, and the judge of the admiralty is the proper magiſtrate for this purpoſe, for he only hath the execution of the Civil law within this realm.

The maſter of a ſhip may hypothecate or pledge the ſhip without the conſent of the owner for tackling and victuals, or he may borrow money for the neceſſaries of the ſhip; and in ſuch caſes the party may in the admiralty court (of which our law takes notice) either proceed againſt the owner or againſt the ſhip. Hob. 11. Moor 918. 1 Rol. Abr. 530.

But the maſter cannot ſell the ſhip and broken tackle, tho' there is no probability of its being ſaved, partly in reſpect of the tempeſt, and partly in reſpect of the barbarity of the inhabitants, who took away every thing that was caſt upon the ſhore. 1 Sid. 453.

If a merchant's ſhip is taken by an enemy, and a month after is retaken by an Engliſh ſhip, the firſt owner ſhall not have reſtitution, for the ſhip was gained by a battle with the enemy. 2 Brownl. 11.

If two ſhips meet at ſea together, tho' they went not forth conſorts, and one of the ſhips in the preſence of the other takes a prize, the other ſhip which was preſent ſhall have the moiety; for the preſence of this ſhip was a terror to the ſhip taken. 2 Leon. 182.

If an infant being maſter of a ſhip at St. Chriſtopher's beyond ſea, by contract with another, undertakes to carry certain goods from St. Chriſtopher's to England, and there to deliver them according to the agreement, but waſtes and conſumes them; he may be ſued for the goods in the court of Admiralty, tho' he be an infant; for this ſuit is but in nature of a detinue, or trover and converſion at the Common law. 1 Rol. Abr. 530.

If goods are thrown over-board in ſtreſs of weather, in danger or juſt fear of enemies, in order to ſave the ſhip, and the reſt of the cargo, that which is ſaved ſhall contribute to a proportion of that which is loſt; and this average, which by the Civil law and cuſtoms of merchants binds the owners, may be pleaded to an action at Common law. Molloy 246. 2 Bulſt. 290.

But average is not due, unleſs the goods are loſt in ſuch a manner that thereby the reſidue in the ſhip is ſaved; as if goods are thrown overboard to lighten the ſhip, or by compoſition part is given to a pirate to ſave the reſt; but if a pirate takes part by violence, average ſhall not be paid for them. Moor 297.

So where A. being one of the owners of a ſhip, loaded on board her 210 tuns of oil, and B. loaded on board her 80 bales of ſilk upon a freight, by contract both to be delivered at London; the ſhip was purſued by enemies, and forced into an harbour, &c. and the maſter ordered the ſilk on ſhore, being the moſt valuable commodity (tho' they lay under the oils, and took up a great deal of time to get at them); the ſhip and oils were afterwards taken, and the owner of the oils brought his bill in equity to have contribution from the owner of the ſilk; but in this caſe, as the loſs of the oils did not ſave the ſilks, nor the ſaving of the ſilks loſe the oil, the bill was diſmiſſed. Show. Par. Ca. 18, 19.

By the Civil law the Admiralty court may take a recognizance in nature of a ſtipulation from the defendant to anſwer the action; and if he does not obey, they may take his body; for it is neceſſary that every court ſhould have a compulſory power of enforcing obedience to its decrees; and this courſe having prevailed there time out of mind, cannot be altered without an act of parliament. 1 Rol. Abr. 531. Cro. Eliz. 685. Noy 24. Hard. 473. 13 Co. 52. 2 Brownl. 26. 2 Inſt. 51. Yelv. 135. Godb. 193, 260.

Though the court of Admiralty is no court of record, becauſe they proceed there according to the Civil law, yet by the cuſtom of the court, they may amerce the defendant for his default by their diſcretion, and may make execution for the ſame of the goods of the defendant in corpore com. and if he hath no goods take his body. 13 Co. 53.

By the ſtatute 8 Eliz. cap. 5. a definitive ſentence in a civil or maritime cauſe, by delegates by commiſſion upon an appeal in Chancery, ſhall be final.

Admiſſion, (admiſſio) Is when a patron of a church hath preſented to it, and the biſhop upon examination, admits the clerk by ſaying admitto te habilem. It is properly the ordinary's declaration that he approves of the preſentee, to ſerve the cure of the church to which he is preſented. Co. Lit. 344. In a larger ſenſe, admiſſion is ſometimes uſed to include alſo inſtitution; but more frequently and properly, admiſſion is taken to be, when the biſhop upon examination doth approve of the preſentee as a fit perſon to ſerve the cure of the church to which he is preſented. Watſon's Complete Incumbent, c. 15.

Admittendo clerico, A writ where a man has recovered his right of preſentation againſt the biſhop. Reg. Orig. 3. If a man do recover his preſentation in the Common pleas againſt the biſhop, then he may have a writ to the ſame biſhop to admit his clerk, or unto the metropolitan. F. N. B. 38. 7 Hen. 8. 32. 8 Hen. 4. 22.

But if the King do recover in the Common pleas any prebendary or ſubdeanry, or dignity againſt the biſhop, and giveth the ſame by his letters patent unto another clerk; the clerk ſhall ſhew the letters patent in the Common pleas, and thereupon ſhall have a writ unto the biſhop to admit him and to induct him. And if the clerk die before he be admitted and inducted, and the King giveth the ſame by other letters patent unto another clerk; that clerk ſhall have a writ out of the Chancery directed unto the juſtices of the Common pleas, reciting the recovery, and how the other clerk died before he was admitted, and how he hath granted the ſame to this clerk by his letters patent, commanding the juſtices to ſend another writ to the biſhop, to admit this clerk, notwithſtanding the King's collation before made unto the other clerk. F. N. B. 38.

In a quare impedit betwixt two ſtrangers, if there doth appear to the court a title for the King, they ſhall award a writ unto the biſhop for the King. F. N. B. 38.

If a man do recover an advowſon, and the ſix months paſs, yet if the church be void, the patron may pray a writ unto the biſhop, and ſhall have it; and if the church be void when the writ cometh to the biſhop, the biſhop is bound to admit his clerk, and in reaſon the ſame law is, if the patron after the ſix months preſent unto the biſhop, if the church be then void, the biſhop is bound to admit his clerk. F. N. B. 38.

Admittendo in ſocium, A writ for aſſociating certain perſons to juſtices of aſſize. Reg. Orig. 106.

Adnichiled, (from the Latin nihil, or as it was written of old, nichil) Signifies annulled, made void, or brought to nothing. It is uſed in ſtat. 28 Hen. 8. c. 7. Cowel.

Adquietare, Is the ſame as acquietare, i. e. to pay, Petitum eſt ut clerus adquietaret novem millia marcarum. Mat. Par. Ann. 1287. Cowel.

Ad quod damnum, Is a writ that lies to the ſheriff, to inquire what damage it may be to others for the King to grant a fair or market; or for the King, or any other perſon to give any lands holden in fee-ſimple, in mortmain, to any houſe of religion, or other body politick; for in that caſe the land is ſaid to fall in manum mortuam, into a dead hand; that is, it is in ſuch an eſtate and condition, that the chief lords loſe all hope of heriots, ſervice of courts and eſcheats upon any traiterous or felonious offence committed by the tenant; for a body politick dieth not, neither can perform perſonal ſervice, or commit treaſon, or felony, as a ſingle perſon may. And therefore it ſeems convenient, that, before any ſuch grant be made, it be known what prejudice it is like to work either to the grantor or others. F. N. B. fo. 221. Termes de lay ley.

Stat. 27 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. ſect. 1. ordains, that ſuch as would purchaſe new parks ſhall have writs out of Chancery to inquire concerning the ſame.

Sect. 3. And perſons dwelling beyond ſea that have lands or rents in England, and will purchaſe letters of protection, or to make general attornies, they ſhall be ſent into the Exchequer, and there make fines, and from thence ſhall be ſent unto his chancellor or lieutenant.

Sect. 4. In like manner they ſhall do that will purchaſe any fair, market, warren, or other liberty.

If there be an ancient trench or ditch coming from the ſea, by which boats and veſſels uſed to paſs to the town, if the ſame be ſtopped in any part by outragiouſneſs of the ſea, and a man will ſue the King to make a new trench, and to ſtop the ancient trench, &c. they ought firſt to ſue a writ of ad quod damnum, to enquire what damage it will be to the King or others. F. N. B. 225.

And if the King will grant to any city the aſſiſe of bread and beer, and the keeping of weights and meaſures, an ad quod damnum, ſhall be firſt awarded, and when the ſame is certified, &c. then to make the grant. F. N. B. 225.

The river Thames is an highway, and cannot be diverted without an ad quod damnum, and to do ſuch a thing ought to be by patent of the King. Noy 105.

If upon the return of an ad quod damnum it appears to be ad damnum vel præjudicium of no man, the King may then licenſe the ſtopping up of an anctent highway, or diverting a water-courſe, or part of it, for the concern is then wholly his own; but without his licence it can never be done, tho' a better way be ſet out, and ſo returned upon an ad quod damnum. Vaugh. 341.

If an ad quod damnum iſſues to enquire ad quod damnum vel præjudicium a licence for a mortmain will be; one inquiry is, ſi patria per donationem illam magis ſolito non oneretur, &c. tho' the return be that by ſuch licence patria magis ſolito oneretur, yet the licence if granted will be good; which ſhews that clauſe is for information of the King, that he may not licenſe that which he would not, and not for reſtraint to hinder him to licenſe what he would. For by F. N. B. 222. the uſual licence is now with, et hoc abſque aliquo brevi de ad quod damnum. And when the King can licenſe without any writ of ad quod damnum, he may, if he will, licenſe, whatever the return of the writ be. Tho' it be ſaid in the caſe of monopolies, that in the King's grant it is always a condition expreſſed or implied, quod patria plus ſolito non oneretur, but that ſeems but gratis dictum. Vaugh. 345.

An ad quod damnum fraudulently executed (as where it was for a market, and tho' the next market town was within a mile and an half of the place where the new market was to be, yet the writ was executed many miles diſtant) is a ground for a ſcire facias to repeal the grant. 2 Vent. 344.

By ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 16. ſ. 6. (for enlarging common highways) it is enacted, that where any common highway ſhall be encloſed after a writ of ad quod damnum iſſued and executed, any perſon injured or aggrieved by ſuch incloſure may complain to the juſtices at the quarter ſeſſions next after ſuch inquiſition, who may hear and finally determine the ſame, &c. but if no ſuch appeal be made, then the ſaid inquiſition and return, recorded by the clerk of the peace, to be for ever binding.

An ad quod damnum was ſued out, and an ad nullius damnum returned; and an order thereupon made for the incloſing ſuch an ancient highway, and ſetting out a place for another in ſuch a place. On appeal from this order to the ſeſſions, the incloſure is declared to be a great nuſance to the whole country. Several exceptions were taken to this order: 1. That it did not appear to have been made at the next quarter ſeſſion after the order made. 2. An exception was taken to the whole purport of the order; that it did not appear by it, what the way to be incloſed was, or what the new way. So that there was no certainty what the ſubject matter of appeal was; for this being a method ordained by the ſtatute for making a final end of the matter, it ought to appear very certain. It was held that this clauſe does not alter the nature of the writ of ad quod damnum, nor the proceedings thereupon; that the writ when executed is to be returned into Chancery, and the ſheriff is to return the inquiſition without delay, and if the Queen thereby ſees that there is no harm in the incloſing, ſhe may grant licence to do ſo, and in order thereto the inquiſition muſt find it ad damnum nullius, and there can be no foundation of incloſing without ſuch return; and that tho' it be found and returned ad damnum nullius, yet none can lawfully incloſe without licence or grant to incloſe the old way; for the authority is not from the inquiſition, but from the licence; and the appeal muſt be brought at the next ſeſſions after the inquiſition taken, and it muſt be by ſome perſon grieved; that in the preſent caſe, there being no licence, it is not by the authority of the ſtatute, and therefore not ſuch as obliges the party to appeal; therefore per tot cur. the inquiſition was quaſhed. 7 Mod. 45.

Advent, (Adventus) A ſpace of time containing about a month preceding the feaſt of the nativity of our ſaviour Chriſt. It begins from the Sunday that falls either upon St. Andrew's day, being the 30th of November, or next to it, and continues to the feaſt of Chriſt's nativity, commonly called Chriſtmas. Durandus tells us it was inſtituted by St. Peter. Our anceſtors ſhewed great reverence and devotion to this time, in regard to the approach of the ſolemn feſtival; ſo that in Adventu domini nulla aſſiſa debet capi. Inter placita de temp. Regis Johan. Ebor. 126. But the ſtatute Weſt. 1. cap. 48. ordained that notwithſtanding the uſual ſolemnity and times of reſt, it ſhould be lawful (in reſpect of juſtice and charity, which ought at all times to be regarded) to take aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, mortdanceſtor, and darrein preſentment in the time of Advent, Septuageſima and Lent. Adultery, (in ſtat. 1 H. 7. cap. 4. and in divers other places and authors termed Advowtry) in Latin adulterium, as it were, ad alteriuſt horum aſcendere, is properly the ſin of incontinence between two married perſons; and if one of the perſons be married it is nevertheleſs adultery. But in this laſt caſe, it is called ſingle adultery, to diſtinguiſh it from the other, which is double. This crime is ſeverely puniſhed by the laws of God, and the antient laws of the land; the Julian law, among the old Romans, made it death: But in moſt countries at this time the puniſhment is by fine, and ſometimes baniſhment: In England it is puniſhed by fine, penance, &c. King Edmund a Saxon, cap. 4. leg. ſuar. Adulterium affici juſſit inſtar homicidii. And Canute the Dane, hominem adulterum *in exilium relegari juſſit, fœminam naſum et aures præcidi. Advocate, Is the patron of a cauſe, aſſiſting his client with advice, and who pleads for him: He is the ſame with reſpect to the Civil or Eccleſiaſtical laws, as a counſellor is with reſpect to the Common law. The eccleſiaſtical or church advocate was of two ſorts; either an advocate of the cauſes and intereſt of the church, retain'd as a counſellor and pleader, to maintain its properties and rights; or an advocate, or patron of the preſentation and advowſon. Both theſe offices did originally belong to the founders of churches or convents, and their heirs, who were bound to protect and defend their churches, as well as to nominate or preſent to them; as Ailwin, founder of Ramſey abby, proruit in medium, ſe Rameſienſis eccleſiæ advocatum, ſe poſſeſſionum ejus tutorem allegans. Lib. Rameſ. ſect. 49. Advocati, Were thoſe whom we now call patrons of churches, and who reſerved to them and their heirs a liberty to preſent on any avoidance.

Advow, or Avow, Advocare, cometh of the French word avouer, and ſignifieth to juſtify or maintain an act formerly done. For example, one takes a diſtreſs for rent, or other thing, and he that is diſtrained ſueth a replevin; now he that took the diſtreſs, or to whoſe uſe the diſtreſs was taken by another, juſtifying or maintaining the act, is ſaid to avow. Termes de la ley. Hence comes advowant and advowry. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 43. Bracton uſes the Latin word in the ſame ſignification (as advocatio diſſeiſinæ) lib. 4. cap. 26. and Caſſanæus, de conſuet. Burg. pag. 1210. uſes advocare in the ſame ſignification; and page 1213, the ſubſtantive deſavohamentum for a diſavowing, or refuſal to avow. This word alſo ſignifies to bring forth any thing: Anciently when ſtolen goods were bought by one, and ſold to another, it was lawful for the right owner to take them wherever they were found; and he in whoſe poſſeſſion they were found, was bound advocare, i. e. to produce the ſeller to juſtify the ſale; and ſo on till they found the thief. Afterwards the word was taken for any thing which a man acknowledged to be his own, or done by him, and in this ſenſe it is mentioned in Fleta, lib. 1. c. 5. par. 4. Si vir ipſum in domo ſua ſuſceperit, nutrierit et advocaverit *filium ſuum. Advowee, or Avowee, (Advocatus) Is uſed for him that hath right to preſent to a benefice: And in ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. we find advowee paramount is taken for the King, the higheſt patron.——Advocatus eſt ad quem pertinet jus advocationis alicujus eccleſiæ, ut ad eccleſiam, nomine proprio non alieno, poſſit præſentare. Fleta, lib. 5. c. 14.

Advowſon, (Advocatio) Signifies the right of preſentation to a church or benefice: And he who hath this right to preſent is ſtiled patron, becauſe they who originally maintained the right of preſentation to any church, were maintainers of, or benefactors to, the ſame church, either by building or increaſing it; and they are therefore ſometimes termed patroni, ſometimes advocati, and ſometimes defenſores. Decretal. cap. 4 ſect. 2. De jure patronatus. Cowel.

When the Chriſtian religion was firſt eſtabliſhed in England, Kings began to build cathedral churches, and to make biſhops; and afterwards in imitation of them, ſeveral lords of manors founded particular churches on ſome part of their own lands, and endowed them with glebe, reſerving to themſelves and their heirs, a right to preſent a fit perſon to the biſhop when the ſame ſhould become void: And this right is called an advowſon, and he that hath this right of preſentation is termed the patron, it being preſumed that he who founded the church, will avow and take it into his protection, and be a patron to defend it in its juſt rights. By the Common law, therefore, the right of patronage is a real right, fixed in the founder of the church, and his heirs and ſucceſſors, wherein they have as abſolute a property as any other man hath in his lands and tenements; and when manors were firſt created, and lands ſet apart to build a church on ſome part of the manor, the advowſon or right of preſentation to that church became appendant to the manor; and by a grant thereof cum pertinentiis the advowſon paſſed. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 184.

1. The ſeveral kinds of advowſons; and how they may be granted, deviſed, and inherited.

The right of advowſon, or of preſenting a clerk to the biſhop, as often as a church becomes vacant, was firſt granted by ſuch as were founders, benefactors, or maintainers of the church; either by reaſon of the foundation, as where the anceſtor was founder of the church; or by donation, where he endowed the church; or by reaſon of the ground, as where he gave the ſoil whereupon the church was built. 1 Inſt. 119.

For altho' the nomination of fit perſons to officiate throughout the dioceſe was originally in the biſhop, and in no other, yet when lords of manors were willing to build churches, and to endow them with manſe and glebe, for the accommodation of fixed and reſiding miniſters, the biſhops on their part (for the encouragement of ſuch pious undertakings) were content to let thoſe lords have the nomination of perſons to the churches ſo built and endowed by them; with reſervation to themſelves of an intire right to judge of the fitneſs of the perſons ſo nominated. And what was the practice, became in proceſs of time the law of the church. Gibſ. Codex, 756. ſecond Ed.

They were called advocati and patroni, becauſe they were bound to protect and defend the rights of the church, and their clerks, from oppreſſion and violence.

The right of nominating, which was firſt annexed to the perſon building or endowing the church, became by degrees appendant to the manor in which it was built; for the endowment was ſuppoſed to be parcel of the manor, and the church was built by ſuch lord for the uſe of the inhabitants of his manor; and the tithes of the manor were alſo annexed to the church. Upon all which accounts, it was moſt natural for the right of advowſon (which was now become hereditary) to paſs with the manor, or with ſuch part of it, as might at any time be granted or aliened together with the advowſon: to which (whether to the whole, or part, it is therefore ſaid to be appendant; that is, to the demeſnes, which are of perpetual ſubſiſtence, but not to rents or ſervices, which (tho' parcel of the manor) may be extinguiſhed, and cannot therefore ſupport ſuch appendency. Gib. 757. Watſ. c. 7.

If he that is ſeiſed of a manor, to which an advowſon is appendant, grants one or two acres of the manor, together with the advowſon; the advowſon is appendant to ſuch acre; eſpecially after the grantee hath preſented. Watſon's Complete Incumbent, c. 7.

But this feoffment of the acre with the advowſon ought to be by deed, to make the advowſon appendant; and the acre of land and the advowſon ought to be granted by the ſame clauſe in the deed; for if one having a manor with an advowſon appendant, grant an acre parcel of the ſaid manor, and by another clauſe in the ſame deed grants the advowſon; the advowſon in ſuch caſe ſhall not paſs as appendant to the acre: but if the grant had been of the intire manor, the advowſon would paſs as appendant. So if a huſband, ſeiſed in right of his wife of a manor to which an advowſon is appendant, doth alien the manor by acres to divers perſons, ſaving one acre; the advowſon ſhall be appendant to that acre. Or if a leſſee for life of a manor to which an advowſon belongs, alien one acre, with the advowſon appendant, the advowſon is thereby appendant to that acre. Watſ. c. 7.

An advowſon of a vicarage may be appendant to a parſonage, as being derived and endowed out of the ſame; upon which account it is, that if a parſon be patron of a vicarage, and doth leaſe the parſonage to another, the patronage of the vicarage ſhall paſs as incident thereunto; and upon the ſame account, the rector of common right is ever eſteemed patron of the vicarage, tho' by ſome ordinance or compoſition, or by the King's grant, it may be appointed and ſettled otherwiſe; and ſo may even an advowſon of a vicarage be appendant unto other things, as to a manor, by reſervation upon the appropriation, becauſe the advowſon of the rectory was appendant thereunto; as alſo by the grant of the parſon, before the time of memory; and in this caſe, altho' the act of appropriation be not extant, yet the uſe of preſenting time out of mind is a ſufficient evidence of the appendancy to the manor, contrary to the common right. Watſ. c. 7.

The right of advowſon, tho' appendant to a manor, caſtle, or the like, may be ſevered from it; and being ſevered, is become an advowſon in groſs; and this may be effected divers ways: as, 1. If a manor or other thing to which it is appendant is granted, and the advowſon excepted. 2. If the advowſon is granted alone, without the thing to which it was appendant. 3. If an advowſon appendant is preſented to by the patron, as an advowſon in groſs. Gibſ. 757.

A diſappendancy may alſo be temporary; that is, the appendancy, tho' turned into groſs, may return: as, 1. If the advowſon is excepted in a leaſe of a manor for life; during the leaſe, it is in groſs, but when the leaſe expires it is appendant again. 2. If the advowſon is granted for life, and another enfeoffed of the manor with the appurtenances; in ſuch caſe the reverſion of the advowſon paſſeth, and at the expiration of the grant it ſhall be appendant. 3. If the advowſon is allotted to one coparcener, and the manor to another, and ſhe who had the advowſon dies without iſſue, it is appendant again: and ſo, if the demeſnes are allotted to the one, and the ſervices to the other, the advowſon becomes in groſs; but if the one die without iſſue, and the manor deſcend to her who had the ſervices, the advowſon becomes appendant as it was before. 4. If tenant in tail aliens ſome part of the manor with the advowſon, and the alienee grants the advowſon to a ſtranger; or if a common perſon hath an advowſon appendant, and a ſtranger preſents his clerk, who is in by ſix months; in both theſe caſes, the advowſon is made diſappendant; but yet, if in the firſt caſe, the land aliened is recovered by tenant in tail, and in the ſecond caſe the rightful patron recovers, the appendancy returns. 5. Where an advowſon is appendant to a manor, and the owner mortgages the manor in fee excepting the advowſon, by this means it is become in groſs; but if the money be paid punctually at the day, then it is become appendant again, and if it is paid after the day it is appendant in reputation, and may paſs by the name of an advowſon appendant, in a grant or other conveyance, tho' in reality the appendancy is deſtroyed; for if it is ſevered one inſtant from the manor by the act of the party, it is then in groſs, and not appendant. 6. So where the owner of a manor, to which an advowſon was appendant, accepts a fine of the advowſon, with a grant and render back of every ſecond turn; now, for ſuch turn the advowſon is in groſs, but for other turns the appendancy ſtill continues; but if a man levy a fine of the advowſon, and accepts a grant and render, the appendancy is quite gone, becauſe there was an inſtant of time, in which it became ſevered. 7. So where there are two coparceners of a manor to which an advowſon is appendant, and they make partition of the manor, without taking notice of the advowſon; at every other turn it is ſtill appendant: but if there had been any expreſs exception of the advowſon, it would then be in groſs. Gibſ. 757.

But in caſe of the King, by the ſtatute of prærogativa regis, 17 Ed. 2. c. 15. When the King giveth or granteth land or a manor with appurtenances; without he make expreſs mention in his deed or writing, of advowſons of churches when they fall, belonging to ſuch manor or land, at this day the King reſerveth to himſelf ſuch advowſons, albeit that among other perſons it hath been obſerved otherwiſe.

Giveth or granteth] But when he reſtoreth, as in caſe of the reſtitution of a biſhop's temporalities; then advowſons paſs without expreſs mention, or any words equivalent thereto. 10 Co. 64.

Without he make expreſs mention] Either by name, or with the appurtenances, or as fully and perfectly, or in as ample manner and form; or the like; which have been adjudged equivalent to an expreſs mention; becauſe the grantee may inquire what the appurtenances were, and in what manner and form it was held; and forasmuch as the uncertainty may be reduced to a certainty by inquiry or circumſtance, the grant is good. 10 Co. 64.

Other

Other perſons] the law, in the caſe of a common perſon, is thus ſet down by Rolle, out of the ancient books: If a man ſeiſed of a manor to which an advowſon is appendant, aliens that manor, without ſaying with the appurtenances (and much more without naming the advowſon) yet the advowſon ſhall paſs; for 'tis parcel of the manor. 2 Rol. Abr. 60.

The right or property which a patron hath in an advowſon, will not warrant a plea (as it is in temporal property) that he is ſeiſed in his demeſne as of fee, but only ſeiſed in fee; the reaſon of which is, becauſe that inheritance, ſavouring not de domo, cannot either ſerve for the ſuſtentation of him and his houſhold, nor can any thing be received for the ſame, for defraying of charges. And in the caſe of John London and the church of Southwell, where the words of the leaſe were, commodities, emoluments, profits and advantages to the prebend belonging; it was adjudged, that the advowſon could not paſs by the ſaid words, becauſe all of them implied things gainful; and (as was added) is contrary to the nature of an advowſon, regularly. 1 Inſt. 17.

And hereby it appeareth, how the Common law doth deteſt ſimony and all corrupt bargains for preſentations to any benefice; but that a fit perſon for the diſcharge of the cure, ſhould be preſented freely without expectation of any thing; nay, ſo cautious is the Common law in this point, that the plaintiff in a quare impedit could recover no damages for the loſs of his preſentation, untill the ſtatute 13 Ed. 1. c. 5. and that is the reaſon that guardian in ſocage ſhall not preſent to an advowſon, becauſe he can take nothing for it, and by conſequence he cannot account for it; and by the law he can meddle with nothing that he cannot account for. 1 Inſt. 17.

Which ſaid doctrine, and the plain tendency thereof, are exactly agreeable, not only to the nature of advowſons, which are merely a truſt veſted in the hands of patrons by conſent of the biſhop, for the good of the church and religion; but alſo to the expreſs letter of the Common law, the rule of which is, that the right of patronage, being annexed to the ſpiritualty, cannot be bought or ſold: So that the notion and practice of making merchandiſe of advowſons and next avoidances, is not eaſily reconciled, either to the laws of the church, or to the ancient laws of the land, or to the nature of advowſons, conſidered as truſts for the benefit of mens ſouls. Nor doth it follow, either from the patron's being now veſted with that right by the Common law, or from its being annexed to a temporal inheritance, that it is itſelf a temporal inheritance, or ought (legally ſpeaking) to be conſidered otherwiſe than as a ſpiritual truſt; ſince it is certain, that the foundation of the right was the conſent of the biſhop; and as to what is called appendancy, it amounteth to no more than this, that a truſt of a ſpiritual nature, and for ſpiritual ends, ſhall reſt in the ſame perſon to whom the temporal inheritance doth belong; for the ſeparation of advowſon from the manors, and the grant of next avoidances, and the like, were ſteps taken afterwards, and what undoubtedly were never thought of by the biſhop upon the firſt conceſſion; who had nothing in his eye, but the encouragement of ſuch pious foundations, and a reaſonable reſpect to the founder (who was ſuppoſed to dwell there) in the nomination of ſuch a clerk as might be acceptable to himſelf; under the reſtraint, of being admitted, or not admitted by the biſhop. Gibſ. 758.

The equity of which union of the advowſon to the manor, ſeems to be the foundation of that maxim of the Canon law, jus patronatus tranſit cum univerſitate niſi ſpecialiter excipiatur; and of the Common law, that the advowſon paſſeth with the manor of courſe, without any expreſs words to convey it; for tho' it be otherwiſe in the caſe of the King, yet that is upon the foot of the ſtatute of prærogativa regis, and not of the Common law. Gibſ. 758.

To this purpoſe it is material, that the Canon law expreſly forbad the obtaining and procuring of next preſentations; as we find in a decretal epiſtle of pope Alexander, the third biſhop of Exeter; upon which the rule of the law is, that he who purchaſeth an advowſon ought to be deprived thereof. Gibſ. 758.

Advowſon being an inheritance incorporeal, and lying in manual occupation, cannot paſs by livery; but may be granted by deed, or by will, either for the inheritance, or for the right of one or more turns, or for as many as ſhall happen within a time limited.

But this general rule, with regard to advowſons in groſs, next avoidances, and the like, is to be underſtood with two limitations.

Firſt, That it extends not to eccleſiaſtical perſons of any kind or degree, who are ſeiſed of advowſons in the right of their churches; nor to maſters and fellows of colleges, nor to guardians of hoſpitals, who are ſeiſed in right of their houſes; all theſe being reſtrained (the biſhops by the 1 Eliz. cap. 19. and the reſt by the 13 Eliz. cap. 10.) from making any grants but of things corporeal, of which a rent or annual profit may be reſerved; and of that ſort, advowſons and next avoidances, which are incorporeal and lie in grant, cannot be; and therefore ſuch grants, however confirmed, are void againſt the ſucceſſor; tho' they have been adjudged to be good againſt the grantors (as biſhop, dean, maſter, or guardian) during their own times.

Secondly, Where the right of granting is abſolute and indiſputable; yet a grant cannot be made by a common perſon, whilſt the church is void, ſo as to be intitled thereby to ſuch void turn; for however the avoidance that ſhall happen next after, or the inheritance of the advowſon, may be granted when the church is void; the void turn itſelf (being a mere ſpiritual thing and annexed to the perſon of the patron) is not grantable: it is then (as the law books ſpeak) a thing in power and authority, a thing in action and effect; the execution of the advowſon, and not the advowſon. This is the doctrine and language of all the books; which alſo ſay, that if two have a grant of the next avoidance, and one releaſeth all right and title to the other while the church is void; ſuch releaſe for the ſame reaſon is void. But all this is to be underſtood of common perſons only, and not of the King, whoſe grant of a void turn hath been adjudged to be good. Gibſ. 758. Watſ. c. 10.

And with reſpect to clergymen in particular, it is enacted by the 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 12. as follows: Whereas ſome of the clergy have procured preferments for themſelves, by buying eccleſiaſtical livings, and others have been thereby diſcouraged; it is enacted, that if any perſon ſhall for any ſum of money, reward, gift, profit or advantage, directly or indirectly, or for or by reaſon of any promiſe, agreement, grant, bond, covenant or other aſſurance, for, or for any ſum of money, reward, gift, or benefit whatſoever, directly or indirectly, in his own name or in the name of any other perſon, take, procure or accept the next avoidance of, or preſentation to, any benefice with cure of ſouls, dignity, prebend, or living eccleſiaſtical, and ſhall be preſented or collated thereupon; every ſuch preſentation or collation; and every admiſſion, inſtitution, inveſtiture and induction upon the ſame, ſhall be utterly void, fruſtrate and of no effect in law; and ſuch agreement ſhall be deemed a ſimoniacal contract; and it ſhall be lawful for the queen, her heirs and ſucceſſors, to preſent or collate unto, or to give or beſtow every ſuch benefice, dignity, prebend and living eccleſiaſtical for that one time or turn only; and the perſon ſo corruptly taking, procuring or accepting any ſuch benefice, dignity, prebend or living, ſhall thereupon and thenceforth be adjudged a diſabled perſon in law to have and enjoy the ſame, and ſhall alſo be ſubject to any puniſhment, pain or penalty limited, preſcribed or inflicted by the laws eccleſiaſtical, in like manner as if ſuch corrupt agreement had been made after ſuch benefice, dignity, prebend or living eccleſiaſtical had become vacant; any law or ſtatute to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

But this act being only reſtrictive upon clergymen, all other perſons continue to purchaſe next avoidances as they did before, and preſent thereunto as they think proper.

As to advowſons in groſs, there cannot be any deſcent thereof from the brother to the ſiſter of the intire blood, but the ſame ſhall deſcend to the brother of the half blood, unleſs the firſt had preſented to it in his life time, and then it ſhall deſcend to the ſiſter, ſhe being the next heir of the intire blood. Watſ. c. 8.

So if one be ſeiſed of an advowſon in fee, and the church doth become void, the void turn is a chattle; and if the patron dieth before he doth preſent, the avoidance doth not go to his heir, but to his executor. Watſ. c. 9.

But if the incumbent of a church be alſo ſeiſed in fee of the advowſon of the ſame church, and die, his heir, and not his executors, ſhall preſent; for altho' the advowſon doth not deſcend to the heir at the death of the anceſtor, and by his death the church become void, ſo that the avoidance may be ſaid in this caſe to be ſevered from the advowſon before it deſcend to the heir, and veſted in the executor; yet both the avoidance and deſcent to the heir happening at the ſame inſtant, the title of the heir ſhall be preferred as the more ancient and worthy. Watſ. c. 9.

By laſt will and teſtament, the right of preſenting to the next avoidance, or the inheritance of an advowſon, may be deviſed to any perſon; and if ſuch deviſe be made by the incumbent of the church, the inheritance of the advowſon being in him, it is good tho' he die incumbent; for altho' the teſtament hath no effect but by the death of the teſtator, yet it hath an inception in his life time. And ſo it is, tho' he appoint by his will who ſhall be preſented by the executors, or that one executor ſhall preſent the other, or doth deviſe that his executors ſhall grant the advowſon to ſuch a man. Watſ. c. 10.

Where there are divers patrons, and they vary in their preſentment; if they be jointenants or tenants in common of the patronage, the ordinary is not bound to admit any of their clerks, and if the ſix months paſs then he may preſent by the lapſe; but he may not within the ſix months, for if he do, they may agree and bring a quare impedit againſt him, and remove his clerk, and ſo the ordinary ſhall be a diſturber. Dr. & Student, b. 2. c. 30.

And by the Canon law, where divers did preſent, being either coparceners, jointenants, or tenants in common, the biſhop, if he pleaſed, might judge of the fitneſs of the clerks, and chooſe which of them he would. Gibſ. 765.

By the Common law, if the patrons have the patronage by deſcent, as coparceners; then is the ordinary bound to admit the clerk of the eldeſt ſiſter; for the eldeſt ſhall have the preference in the law, if ſhe will; and then at the next avoidance, the next ſiſter ſhall preſent, and ſo by turns one ſiſter after another, till all the ſiſters or their heirs have preſented; and then the eldeſt ſiſter ſhall begin again. And this is called a preſenting by turn; and it holdeth always between coparceners of an advowſon, except they agree to preſent together, or that they agree by compoſition to preſent in ſome other manner; and if they do ſo, the agreement ſtands. But if after the death of the common anceſtor the church voideth, and the eldeſt ſiſter preſenteth together with another of the ſiſters, and the other ſiſters every one in their own name or together; in that caſe the ordinary is not bound to receive any of their clerks, but may ſuffer the church to lapſe: For he ſhall not be bound to receive the clerk of the eldeſt ſiſter, but where ſhe preſenteth in her own name. 1 Inſt. 186, 243. 2 Inſt. 364.

And in this caſe, where the patrons vary in preſentment, the church is properly ſaid to be litigious, ſo that the ordinary ſhall be bound at his peril to direct a writ to inquire of the right of patronage, for that writ lieth, where two preſent by ſeveral titles: But theſe patrons preſent all in one title, and therefore the ordinary may ſuffer it to paſs, if he will, into the lapſe. Dr. & Student, b. 2. c. 30.

2. Statutes concerning advowſons.

Stat. Weſtm. 2. 13 Edw. 1. cap. 5. ſect. 1. "Whereas when any, having no right, had preſented to any church, whoſe clerk was admitted, the true patron could not recover his advowſon, but by writ of right, whereby heirs within age, by fraud or negligence of their guardians, and heirs both of full age and within age, by negligence or fraud of tenants by the curteſy, tenants in dower, for term of life, or for years, or in fee tail, were many times diſherited, or driven to their writ of right: It is provided, that ſuch preſentments ſhall not be ſo prejudicial to the right heirs, but that at the next advoidance after that the heir ſhall become to full age, or that the advowſon ſhall revert unto the heir being of full age, he ſhall have the ſame action by a poſſeſſory writ of advowſon which the laſt anceſtor of that heir, being of full age, ſhould have had at the laſt avoidance happening in his time, or before the demiſe was made for term of life or in fee-tail. The ſame ſhall be obſerved in preſentments made unto churches, being of the inheritance of women under the power of their huſbands. Alſo biſhops, and other eccleſiaſtical men, ſhall be aided by this ſtatute, in caſe any having no right, preſent unto the churches belonging to their prelacies, dignities, or parſonages, what time ſuch prelacies, &c. be vacant."

Sect. 2. "Yet ſhall not ſuch perſons have the recovery aforeſaid, ſaving that the guardians, tenants by the curteſy, &c. did faintly defend the pleas; becauſe that the judgment given in the King's courts ſhall not be adnulled; but ſhall ſtand in force, until it be reverſed as erroneous, or the aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, or the inqueſt in the quare impedit, adnulled by attaint, or by certification, which ſhall be freely granted. And from henceforth in writs of darrein preſentment, or quare impedit, if the defendant alledge plenarty of his own preſentation, the plea ſhall not ſtay, ſo as the writ be purchaſed within ſix months, tho' he cannot recover his preſentation within ſix months. And ſometimes, where a fine is levied between many claiming one advowſon, that one of them ſhall preſent the firſt time, and at the next avoidance another: And when one hath had his preſentment, and at the next avoidance, he to whom the ſecond preſentation belongeth, is diſturbed by any that was party to the ſaid fine, or in his ſtead: It is provided, that he that is ſo diſturbed, ſhall have no need to ſue a quare impedit, but ſhall reſort to the fine. And if the ſaid agreement be found in the roll, then the ſheriff ſhall be commanded, that he give knowledge unto the diſturber, that he be ready at ſome ſhort day, containing the ſpace of fifteen days, or three weeks (as the place happeneth to be near or far) to ſhew if he can alledge any thing, wherefore the party diſturbed ought not to preſent: And if he come not, or can nothing alledge to bar the party of his preſentation, by reaſon of any deed made ſince the fine levied, he ſhall recover his preſentation with damages. And where, after the death of the anceſtor that preſented, the ſame advowſon is aſſigned in dower, or to tenant by the curteſy, which do preſent, and after the death of ſuch tenants, the true heir is diſturbed to preſent when the church is void: It is provided, that it ſhall be in the election of the party diſturbed, whether he will ſue by quare impedit, or darrein preſentment. The ſame ſhall be obſerved in advowſons demiſed for term of life, or years, or in fee-tail."

Sect. 3. "In quare impedit, and darrein preſentment, damages ſhall be awarded, to wit, if ſix months paſs by ſuch let, ſo that the biſhop do preſent, and the true patron loſeth his preſentation for that time, damages ſhall be awarded for two years value of the church. And if the ſix months be not paſſed, but that the preſentment be recovered, then damages ſhall be awarded to the half year's value of the church. And if the diſturber have not whereof he can recompence the damages (in caſe where the biſhop preſenteth by lapſe) he ſhall be puniſhed by two years impriſonment; and if the advowſon be recovered within the half year, the diſturber ſhall be puniſhed by impriſonment of half a year."

Sect. 4. "Writs ſhall be granted for chapels, prebends, vicarages, hoſpitals, and other houſes, which be of the advowſons of other men, that have not been uſed to be granted before. And when the parſon of any church is diſturbed to demand tithes in the next pariſh by writ of indicavit, the patron of the parſon ſo diſturbed ſhall have a writ to demand the advowſon of the tithes in demand, and and when that is tried, then ſhall the plea paſs in the court chriſtian, ſo far as it was tried in the King's court."

Sect. 5. "When an advowſon deſcendeth unto parceners, tho' one preſent twice, yet he that was negligent ſhall not be barred, but another time ſhall have his turn to preſent."

Stat. Praerog. Reg. 17 Edw. 2. cap. 8. "Of churches vacant, the advowſons whereof belong to the King, and others preſent, if the King recover his preſentation, tho' it be after the ſix months from the time of the avoidance, no time ſhall prejudice him, ſo that he do preſent within ſix months."

Stat. 25. Edw. 3. ſtat. 3. cap. 3. "When the King ſhall make collation or preſentment to any benefice in any other's right, the title whereupon he groundeth himſelf ſhall be well examined. And at what time before judgment the title be found untrue or unjuſt, the collation or preſentment thereof made ſhall be repealed. And the patron or poſſeſſor, which ſhall prove the falſe title, ſhall have thereupon writs out of the Chancery, as many as ſhall be needful."

Stat. 25 Edw. 3. ſtat. 3. c. 7. "When ordinaries have given a benefice by lapſe, and the King taketh his ſuit againſt the patron, which percaſe will ſuffer that the King ſhall recover in deceit of the ordinary or the poſſeſſor; in ſuch caſe, and all other caſes like, where the King's right is not tried, the ordinary or poſſeſſor ſhall be received to counterplead the title taken for the King."

Stat. 13 Rich. 2. ſtat. 1. cap. 1. "If the King preſent to any benefice full of any incumbent, the preſentee of the King ſhall not be received by the ordinary till the King hath recovered his preſentment by proceſs of law; and if any preſentee of the King be otherwiſe received, and the incumbent put out, the ſaid incumbent ſhall begin his ſuit within a year after the induction of the King's preſentee."

Stat. 4 Hen. 4. cap. 22. "If any incumbent be put out of his benefice by the King's preſentee, without proceſs, the ſaid incumbent may ſue for his remedy by the ſtatute 13 Rich. 2. cap. 1. and begin his ſuit within the year, or after, at his will, notwithſtanding the term limited by the ſaid ſtatute."

Stat. 7. Ann. cap. 18. "No uſurpation upon any avoidance in any eccleſiaſtical promotion, ſhall diſplace the eſtate of the patron, or turn it to a right; but he may preſent upon any other avoidance, and maintain a quare impedit; and if coparceners, jointenants, or tenants in common, are ſeiſed of an eſtate of inheritance in any advowſon, and a partition is made to preſent by turns, each of them ſhall be ſeiſed of his ſeparate part, to preſent in his turn."

By Stat. 1 El. c. 4. ſect. 25. The King ſhall have the advowſon of vicarages belonging to rectories impropriate, renounced by Queen Mary.

By the ſtatutes 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 18. & 19. 1 W. & M. c. 26. and 12 Ann. c. 14. the preſentation to benefices belonging to papiſts, is given to the two univerſities.

By the ſtatute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 25. conveyances of advowſons, impropriations, &c. to truſtees appointed by the long parliament, by pretended delinquents are made void.

By the ſtatute 10 Ann. c. 12. the rights of advowſons in Scotland are reſtored. See titles Quare impedit, Preſentation, Simony.

Advowſon of the moiety of the church, (Advocatio medietatis eccleſiæ) Is where there are two ſeveral patrons and two ſeveral incumbents in one and the ſame church; the one of the one moiety, the other of the other moiety thereof. Co. Lit. 17.

Medietas advocationis, a moiety of the advowſon, is when two muſt join in the preſentation, and there is but one incumbent; as where there are two parceners: And though they agree to preſent by turns, yet each of them hath but the moiety of the church. Co. Lit. 17. But ſee ſtat. 7 Ann. c. 18. under the preceding title.

Advowſon of religious houſes, As they who built and endowed a pariſh church, were by that title made patrons of it; ſo thoſe who founded any houſe of religion had thereby the advowſon or patronage of it. Sometimes the patron had the ſole nomination of the prelate, abbot or prior; either by inveſtiture or delivery of a paſtoral ſtaff: As William Mareſhal, E. of Pembroke, to the abby of Nately, Com. Buc. A. D. 1200. or by direct preſentation to the dioceſan: As Reginald, E. of Bolein, in his charter to the priory of Cold Norton, Com. Oxon. 1201. Non hoc autem prætermittendum eſt quod domus illa de noſtra donatione eſt, et nos ibi priorem apponere debemus, &c. If a free election were left to the religious, yet a conge d' eſſire, or licence of electing, was firſt to be obtained of the patron; and the elect was confirmed by him. The patronage of a convent lapſed to the lord of the honour, if the family of the founder were extinct: So Edmund, Earl of Cornwall, became patron of the nunnery of Goring, Com. Oxon. by no other title than as that houſe was ſituate within the honour of *Wallingford. Aerie, or, Ayry of Goſhawks (Aeria accipitrum) Is the proper term for hawks, for that which of other birds we call a neſt. Thus it is uſed in ſtat. 9 Hen. 3. cap. 12. in the charter of the foreſt, and divers other places. Aerie comes from the French Aire, the proper term for a hawk's neſt. But Spelman derives it from the Saxon eghe, which the Germans and Normans melted into eye, an egg; whence eyerie was a common name for a bird's neſt, i. e. the place or repoſitory of eggs; hence to the eye, or brood of pheaſants. The liberty of keeping theſe ayeries of hawks, was granted as a privilege to ſome great perſons; as in the charter of Henry 3. to the church of York — In nemore de Blideward habebat archiepiſcopus & canonici de Ebor. proprios foreſtarios ſuos, & mel, & areas accipitrum & noiſorum.—— Regiſtr. Joh. Romani Arepi Ebor. MS. f. 91. the preſerving of aeries in the King's foreſts and woods, was one ſort of ſerjeanty, or tenure of land by ſervice. Æſtimatio capitis, Sax. were, i. e. pretium hominis. King Athelſtan in a great aſſembly held at Exeter, declared that mulcts were to be paid pro æſtimatione capitis, for offences committed againſt ſeveral perſons, according to their degrees; the eſtimation of the King's head to be 30,000 thuringæ, of an archbiſhop or ſatrapas or prince 15,000, of a biſhop or ſenator 3000, of a prieſt or a thane 2000, *&c. Ætate probanda, Is a writ that the King's tenant holding in chief, by chivalry, and being ward, by reaſon of nonage, obtaineth to the eſcheator of the county where he was born, or where the land lieth, to enquire whether he be of full age to receive his lands into his own hands. Reg. Orig. fo. 294, 295. F. N. B. fol. 253. & 257. He ſaith that this writ is ſometimes directed to the ſheriff, to impanel a jury againſt a day certain, before commiſſioners authorized under the great ſeal, to deal in ſuch caſe; now out of uſe. Cowel.

Affeerers, (Afferatores, alias affidati) May probably be derived from the French affier, that is, affirmare confirmare; and ſignifies in the Common law ſuch as are appointed in court leets, upon oath, to ſet the fines on ſuch as have committed faults arbitrarily puniſhable, and have no expreſs penalty appointed by the ſtatute. The form of their oath you may ſee in Kitchin, fo. 46. The reaſon of this denomination may ſeem to be, becauſe they that be appointed to that office, do affirm upon their oaths, what penalty they think in conſcience the offender hath deſerved. Another probable derivation may be from feere, an old Engliſh word ſignifying a companion, as gefera doth among the Saxons, by Mr. Lambard's teſtimony (verb. contubernalis,) in his explication of Saxon words; and ſo it may be gathered that Kitchin takes it, cap. Amercements, fol. 78. in theſe words, Mes tiel amerciament ſoit affire per pares; where pares is affeerers; and the reaſon hereof may be, for that in this buſineſs they are made companions or equals. We find this word uſed, 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 7. viz. The ſame juſtices before their riſing in every ſeſſions, ſhall cauſe to be affeered the amercements; and alſo to the ſame effect, 26 H. 6. c. 6. and Kitchin fol. 78. joins theſe three words together as ſynonymous, viz. affidati, amerciatores, affirors; affidare in the Canon law is uſed for fidem dare, ca. fina. de cognation ſpirit. in Decretal. & ca. ſuper eo de teſtibus. Bracton hath affidare' mulierem, to betroth to a woman, lib. 2. cap. 12.

But

But in the Cuſtumary of Normandy, cap. 20. this word affeerer the latin interpreter expreſſes by taxare, that is, to ſet the value of a thing; and the ſame with æſtimare, &c. which ſeems indeed the beſt etymology. Cowel. By Magna Charta, 9 Hen. 3. c. 14. it is ordained, that perſons are to be amerced after the manner of the fault; and the amerciaments ſhall be aſſeſſed by the oath of honeſt and lawful men of the vicinage. 9 Hen. 3. c. 14.

The oath of Affeerers.

YOU ſhall well and truly affeer and affirm the ſeveral amerciaments here made, and now to you read over; you ſhall ſpare no one out of love, fear or affection; nor raiſe or inhance any out of hatred or malice; but impartially ſhall do your duties herein.

So help you God.

Affiance, Is the plighting of troth betwixt a man and a woman, upon agreement of marriage to be had between them. The Latin word affidare, from whence this is derived, is as much as fidem ad alium dare, and the word affiance is uſed by Littleton, ſect. 39. Cowel.

Affidare, To plight one's faith, or give fealty, i. e. fidelity, by making oath, &c. Mulier accuſata de aſſiſa cereviſiæ fracta poteſt ſola manu facere legem ſi voluerit, id eſt, affidare in manu Ballivi et eſſe quieta, quod ſi noluerit affidare, amerciabitur per Ballivum. Conſuetudinar. Dom. de Farendon, MS. fo. 22. Cowel.

Affidatio dominorum, An oath taken by the lords in parliament, anno 3 Hen. 6. Rot. Parl. Cowel.

Affidatus, Signifies a tenant by fealty; as in this charter: Ego Rogerus, &c. dedi, &c. Willelmo Wallenſi pro ſuo ſervitio unam acram, &c. pro hac donatione et conceſſione devenit prædictus Will. affidatus meus, &c. Affidati non proprie vaſalli ſunt, ſed quaſi vaſalli, qui in alicujus fidem et clientelam ſunt recepti, &c. Affidatio accipitur pro mutua fidelitatis connexione tam in ſponſaliis quam inter dominum et vaſallum. Proles de affidata et non maritata, non eſt hæres. MS. Penes. Arth. Trevor. Arm. Affidatus ſignifies alſo a retainer. Cowel.

Affidavit, Signifies in law an oath in writing; and to make affidavit of a thing, is to teſtify it upon oath. Cowel. An affidavit, generally ſpeaking, is an oath in writing, ſworn before ſome perſon who hath authority to adminiſter ſuch oath: And the true place of habitation, and true addition of every perſon who ſhall make an affidavit, is to be inſerted in his affidavit. 1 Lill. Abr. 44, 46.

As moſt motions and orders of court are grounded on affidavits, it ſeems impracticable, and indeed unneceſſary to inſtance in what caſes they are to be made uſe of, or when they may be ſaid to be defective, ſhort or evaſive; this being a matter of practice, and few things relating thereto thought worth reporting. Affidavits were formerly only to be taken by ſome judges of that court in which they were made uſe of. Styl. Prac. Reg. 78. But now,

By the ſtat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 5. "The chief juſtice, and other the juſtices of the court of King's Bench, or any two of them, whereof the chief juſtice to be one for that court; the chief juſtice of the Common Pleas, and the reſt of the juſtices there, or two of them, whereof the chief juſtice to be one of that court; and the lord treaſurer, chancellor, and barons of the Exchequer, or two of them, whereof the lord treaſurer, chancellor, or chief baron, to be one for that court; may by commiſſion or commiſſions under the ſeal of the ſaid reſpective courts, from time to time, as need ſhall require, impower perſons in the ſeveral counties to take affidavits concerning any thing depending or concerning any proceeding in the ſaid courts, as maſters of chancery in extraordinary do uſe to do; and any judge of aſſize, in his circuit, may take affidavits concerning any thing depending, &c. as aforeſaid; which affidavits ſhall be filed in the ſeveral offices of the ſaid courts, and be made uſe of as other affidavits taken in the ſaid courts; and all perſons forſwearing themſelves in ſuch affidavits, ſhall incur the ſame penalties as if they had been taken in open court. The perſon taking ſuch affidavits ſhall receive only 1*s.* for ſo doing; beſides the King's duty; which duty ſhall be paid to the proper officer in the ſaid courts before ſuch affidavit be there filed or made uſe of."

If affidavits before commiſſioners in the country, according to the above ſtatute, be expreſſed to be in a cauſe depending between A. and B. and there is no ſuch cauſe in court, they cannot be read, becauſe the commiſſioners have no authority to take them, and there can be no perjury; otherwiſe, if there be a cauſe in court, and this concerns ſome collateral matter. 2 Salk. 461.

The law and practice of the courts require, that on all motions for an information, attachment, complaint, againſt any officer for any offence not committed in the face of the court, for a new trial, relating to the ſerving and returning of writs or proceſs, &c. oath or affidavit be made of what is affirmed, that the judges may be ſatisfied, as well of the truth thereof, as of the reaſonableneſs of granting relief when made out. 1 New Abr. 65.

Alſo by acts of parliament affidavits are made neceſſary; as the ſtatute 4 & 5 Ann. enacts, that "no dilatory plea ſhall be received unleſs on oath, and probable cauſe ſhewn to the court." By ſtat. 12 Geo. 2 cap. 29. affidavit muſt be made of the cauſe of action, and that the ſum exceeds 10*l.* otherwiſe the defendant is not to be held to ſpecial bail.

If a perſon exhibits a bill for the diſcovery of a deed, and prays relief thereupon, he muſt annex an affidavit to his bill, that he has not ſuch deed in his poſſeſſion, or that it is not in his power to come at it; for otherwiſe he takes away the juriſdiction of the Common law courts, without ſhewing any probable cauſe why he ſhould ſue in equity. 1 Chan. Ca. 11, 231. 1 Vern. 59, 180, 247.

But if he ſeeks diſcovery of the deed only, or that it may be produced at a trial at law, he need not annex ſuch affidavit to his bill; for it is not to be preſumed that in either of theſe caſes he would do ſo abſurd a thing, as exhibit a bill, if he had the deed in his poſſeſſion. 1 Vern. 180, 247.

Alſo, if he ſets forth the whole circumſtances of his caſe, and prays general relief, the prayer of relief ſhall be applied to the diſcovery only. Abr. Ca. in Eq. 14. Preced. in Eq. 536.

In bills of interpleader, the party who prefers it muſt make affidavit that he does not collude with either of the other parties. 1 New Ab. 66.

He, who moves for a ne exeat regno againſt another, muſt make affidavit of the loſs he is like to ſuſtain by the party's going out of the kingdom, and that thereby the debt may be loſt, and that the party is actually going out of the kingdom. 1 New. Ab. 66.

A peereſs by her anſwer owned that ſhe had ſeveral deeds in her power, but did not ſet them forth; and on motion ſhe was ordered to produce them on oath, but that order was changed, and ſhe to produce them on honour only, being in ſupplement to her anſwer, which was on honour. Preced. in Eq. 93.

An affidavit muſt ſet forth the matter poſitively, and all material circumſtances attending it, that the court may judge whether the deponent's concluſion be juſt or not. 1 New Abr. 66.

And therefore, on motion to put off a trial for want of a material witneſs, it muſt appear that ſufficient endeavours were made uſe of to have him at the time appointed, and that he cannot poſſibly be preſent, though he may on further time given. Fareſt. 121. Comb. 421, 422.

Upon a rule to ſhew cauſe, the plaintiff offered ſeveral new affidavits, and this diverſity was taken, viz. where they contain new matter, and where they tend only to confirm what was alledged and ſworn when the rule was made; in the latter caſe they may be read, not in the former. 1 Salk. 461.

If there be affidavit againſt affidavit, the proper method is to have it tried by an iſſue at law. Comb. 399. But this is matter diſcretionary in the court. See 3 Mod. 108. where an action on the caſe was brought for ſcandalous

Advowſon of the moiety of the church, (Advocatio medietatis eccleſiæ) Is where there are two ſeveral patrons and two ſeveral incumbents in one and the ſame church; the one of the one moiety, the other of the other moiety thereof. Co. Lit. 17.

Medietas advocationis, a moiety of the advowſon, is when two muſt join in the preſentation, and there is but one incumbent; as where there are two parceners: And though they agree to preſent by turns, yet each of them hath but the moiety of the church. Co. Lit. 17. But ſee ſtat. 7 Ann. c. 18. under the preceding title.

Advowſon of religious houſes, As they who built and endowed a pariſh church, were by that title made patrons of it; ſo thoſe who founded any houſe of religion had thereby the advowſon or patronage of it. Sometimes the patron had the ſole nomination of the prelate, abbot or prior; either by inveſtiture or delivery of a paſtoral ſtaff: As William Mareſhal, E. of Pembroke, to the abby of Nately, Com. Buc. A. D. 1200. or by direct preſentation to the dioceſan: As Reginald, E. of Bolein, in his charter to the priory of Cold Norton, Com. Oxon. 1201. Non hoc autem prætermittendum eſt quod domus illa de noſtra donatione eſt, et nos ibi priorem apponere debemus, &c. If a free election were left to the religious, yet a conge d' eſſire, or licence of electing, was firſt to be obtained of the patron; and the elect was confirmed by him. Aerie, or, Ayry of Goſhawks (Aeria accipitrum) Is the proper term for hawks, for that which of other birds we call a neſt. Thus it is uſed in ſtat. 9 Hen. 3. cap. 12. in the charter of the foreſt, and divers other places. Aerie comes from the French Aire, the proper term for a hawk's neſt. But Spelman derives it from the Saxon eghe, which the Germans and Normans melted into eye, an egg; whence eyerie was a common name for a bird's neſt, i. e. the place or repoſitory of eggs; hence to the eye, or brood of pheaſants. The liberty of keeping theſe ayeries of hawks, was granted as a privilege to ſome great perſons; as in the charter of Henry 3. to the church of *York — In nemore de Blideward habebat archiepiſcopus & canonici de Ebor. proprios foreſtarios ſuos, & mel, & areas accipitrum & noiſorum. —— Regiſtr. Aetate probanda, Is a writ that the King's tenant holding in chief, by chivalry, and being ward, by reaſon of nonage, obtaineth to the eſcheator of the county where he was born, or where the land lieth, to enquire whether he be of full age to receive his lands into his own hands. *Reg. Affeerers, (Afferatores, alias affidati) May probably be derived from the French affier, that is, affirmare confirmare; and ſignifies in the Common law ſuch as are appointed in court leets, upon oath, to ſet the fines on ſuch as have committed faults arbitrarily puniſhable, and have no expreſs penalty appointed by the ſtatute. The form of their oath you may ſee in Kitchin, fo. 46. The reaſon of this denomination may ſeem to be, becauſe they that be appointed to that office, do affirm upon their oaths, what penalty they think in conſcience the offender hath deſerved. Another probable derivation may be from feere, an old Engliſh word ſignifying a companion, as gefera doth among the Saxons, by Mr. Lambard's teſtimony (verb. contubernalis,) in his explication of Saxon words; and ſo it may be gathered that Kitchin takes it, cap. Amercements, fol. 78. in theſe words, Mes tiel amerciament ſoit affire per pares; where pares is affeerers; and the reaſon hereof may be, for that in this buſineſs they are made companions or equals. We find this word uſed, 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 7. viz. The ſame juſtices before their riſing in every ſeſſions, ſhall cauſe to be affeered the amercements; and alſo to the ſame effect, 26 H. 6. c. 6. and Kitchin fol. 78. joins theſe three words together as ſynonymous, viz. affidati, amerciatores, affirors; affidare in the Canon law is uſed for fidem dare, ca. fina. de cognation ſpirit. in Decretal. & ca. ſuper eo de teſtibus. Bracton hath affidare' mulierem, to betroth to a woman, lib. 2. cap. 12.

But in the Cuſtumary of Normandy, cap. 20. this word affeerer the latin interpreter expreſſes by taxare, that is, to ſet the value of a thing; and the ſame with æſtimare, &c. which ſeems indeed the beſt etymology. Cowel. By Magna Charta, 9 Hen. 3. c. 14. it is ordained, that perſons are to be amerced after the manner of the fault; and the amerciaments ſhall be aſſeſſed by the oath of honeſt and lawful men of the vicinage. 9 Hen. 3. c. 14.

So help you God.

Affiance, Is the plighting of troth betwixt a man and a woman, upon agreement of marriage to be had between them. The Latin word affidare, from whence this is derived, is as much as fidem ad alium dare, and the word affiance is uſed by Littleton, ſect. 39. Cowel.

Affidare, To plight one's faith, or give fealty, i. e. fidelity, by making oath, &c. Mulier accuſata de aſſiſa cereviſiæ fracta poteſt ſola manu facere legem ſi voluerit, id eſt, affidare in manu Ballivi et eſſe quieta, quod ſi noluerit affidare, amerciabitur per Ballivum. Conſuetudinar. Proles de affidata et non maritata, non eſt hæres. MS. Penes. Arth. Trevor. Arm. Affidatus ſignifies alſo a retainer. Cowel.

Affidavit, Signifies in law an oath in writing; and to make affidavit of a thing, is to teſtify it upon oath. Cowel. An affidavit, generally ſpeaking, is an oath in writing, ſworn before ſome perſon who hath authority to adminiſter ſuch oath: And the true place of habitation, and true addition of every perſon who ſhall make an affidavit, is to be inſerted in his affidavit. 1 Lill. Abr. 44, 46.

As moſt motions and orders of court are grounded on affidavits, it ſeems impracticable, and indeed unneceſſary to inſtance in what caſes they are to be made uſe of, or when they may be ſaid to be defective, ſhort or evaſive; this being a matter of practice, and few things relating thereto thought worth reporting. Affidavits were formerly only to be taken by ſome judges of that court in which they were made uſe of. Styl. Prac. Reg. 78. But now,

By the ſtat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 5. "The chief juſtice, and other the juſtices of the court of King's Bench, or any two of them, whereof the chief juſtice to be one for that court; the chief juſtice of the Common Pleas, and the reſt of the juſtices there, or two of them, whereof the chief juſtice to be one of that court; and the lord treaſurer, chancellor, and barons of the Exchequer, or two of them, whereof the lord treaſurer, chancellor, or chief baron, to be one for that court; may by commiſſion or commiſſions under the ſeal of the ſaid reſpective courts, from time to time, as need ſhall require, impower perſons in the ſeveral counties to take affidavits concerning any thing depending or concerning any proceeding in the ſaid courts, as maſters of chancery in extraordinary do uſe to do; and any judge of aſſize, in his circuit, may take affidavits concerning any thing depending, &c. as aforeſaid; which affidavits ſhall be filed in the ſeveral offices of the ſaid courts, and be made uſe of as other affidavits taken in the ſaid courts; and all perſons forſwearing themſelves in ſuch affidavits, ſhall incur the ſame penalties as if they had been taken in open court. The perſon taking ſuch affidavits ſhall receive only 1*s.* for ſo doing; beſides the King's duty; which duty ſhall be paid to the proper officer in the ſaid courts before ſuch affidavit be there filed or made uſe of."

If affidavits before commiſſioners in the country, according to the above ſtatute, be expreſſed to be in a cauſe depending between A. and B. and there is no ſuch cauſe in court, they cannot be read, becauſe the commiſſioners have no authority to take them, and there can be no perjury; otherwiſe, if there be a cauſe in court, and this concerns ſome collateral matter. 2 Salk. 461.

The law and practice of the courts require, that on all motions for an information, attachment, complaint, againſt any officer for any offence not committed in the face of the court, for a new trial, relating to the ſerving and returning of writs or proceſs, &c. oath or affidavit be made of what is affirmed, that the judges may be ſatisfied, as well of the truth thereof, as of the reaſonableneſs of granting relief when made out. 1 New Abr. 65.

Alſo by acts of parliament affidavits are made neceſſary; as the ſtatute 4 & 5 Ann. enacts, that "no dilatory plea ſhall be received unleſs on oath, and probable cauſe ſhewn to the court." By ſtat. 12 Geo. 2 cap. 29. affidavit muſt be made of the cauſe of action, and that the ſum exceeds 10*l.* otherwiſe the defendant is not to be held to ſpecial bail.

If a perſon exhibits a bill for the diſcovery of a deed, and prays relief thereupon, he muſt annex an affidavit to his bill, that he has not ſuch deed in his poſſeſſion, or that it is not in his power to come at it; for otherwiſe he takes away the juriſdiction of the Common law courts, without ſhewing any probable cauſe why he ſhould ſue in equity. 1 Chan. Ca. 11, 231. 1 Vern. 59, 180, 247.

But if he ſeeks diſcovery of the deed only, or that it may be produced at a trial at law, he need not annex ſuch affidavit to his bill; for it is not to be preſumed that in either of theſe caſes he would do ſo abſurd a thing, as exhibit a bill, if he had the deed in his poſſeſſion. 1 Vern. 180, 247.

Alſo, if he ſets forth the whole circumſtances of his caſe, and prays general relief, the prayer of relief ſhall be applied to the diſcovery only. Abr. Ca. in Eq. 14. Preced. in Eq. 536.

In bills of interpleader, the party who prefers it muſt make affidavit that he does not collude with either of the other parties. 1 New Ab. 66.

He, who moves for a ne exeat regno againſt another, muſt make affidavit of the loſs he is like to ſuſtain by the party's going out of the kingdom, and that thereby the debt may be loſt, and that the party is actually going out of the kingdom. 1 New. Ab. 66.

A peereſs by her anſwer owned that ſhe had ſeveral deeds in her power, but did not ſet them forth; and on motion ſhe was ordered to produce them on oath, but that order was changed, and ſhe to produce them on honour only, being in ſupplement to her anſwer, which was on honour. Preced. in Eq. 93.

An affidavit muſt ſet forth the matter poſitively, and all material circumſtances attending it, that the court may judge whether the deponent's concluſion be juſt or not. 1 New Abr. 66.

And therefore, on motion to put off a trial for want of a material witneſs, it muſt appear that ſufficient endeavours were made uſe of to have him at the time appointed, and that he cannot poſſibly be preſent, though he may on further time given. Fareſt. 121. Comb. 421, 422.

Upon a rule to ſhew cauſe, the plaintiff offered ſeveral new affidavits, and this diverſity was taken, viz. where they contain new matter, and where they tend only to confirm what was alledged and ſworn when the rule was made; in the latter caſe they may be read, not in the former. 1 Salk. 461.

If there be affidavit againſt affidavit, the proper method is to have it tried by an iſſue at law. Comb. 399. But this is matter diſcretionary in the court. See 3 Mod. 108. where an action on the caſe was brought for ſcandalous matter inſerted in an affidavit. The party is to put nothing in an affidavit, but what is material to the point, and therefore not to ſet forth the merits of his cauſe on motion. *Styl. Practi. Affray, Is derived from the French word effrayer, to affright, and it formerly meant no more; as where perſons appeared with armour or weapons not uſually worn, to the terror of others; and ſo is the word uſed in the ſtatute of Northampton, 2 Ed. 3. c. 3. It is now commonly taken for a ſkirmiſh, or fighting between two or more: In our books it is many times confounded with an aſſault, as appears by Lambard, in his Eirenarcha, lib. 2. c. 3. & lib. 1. c. 17. Yet, as it is there ſaid, they differ in this, that where an aſſault is but a wrong to the party, an affray is a wrong to the commonwealth, and therefore both inquirable and puniſhable in a leet. It may be ſaid likewiſe, that an aſſault is but of one ſide, but an affray is the fighting of many together: Beſides this ſignification, it may be taken for a terror wrought in the ſubject by an unlawful ſight of violence, &c. as if a man ſhew himſelf furniſhed with armour or weapons not uſually worn, it may ſtrike a fear into others unarmed; and ſo it is uſed in ſtat. 2 Ed. 3. c. 3. 4 Hen. 6. c. 3. 8 E. 4. c. 5. Cowel.

Lord Coke defines this word thus: An affray is a publick offence to the terror of the King's ſubjects, and ſo called, becauſe it affrighteth and maketh men afraid. 3 Inſt. 158.

From this laſt definition it ſeemeth clearly to follow, that there may be an aſſault, which will not amount to an affray; as where it happens in a private place, out of the hearing or ſeeing of any, except the parties concerned, in which caſe it cannot be ſaid to be to the terror of the people. 1 Hawk. 134.

Alſo, it is ſaid, that no quarrelſome or threatening words whatſoever ſhall amount to an affray; and that no one can juſtify laying his hands on thoſe who ſhall barely quarrel with angry words, without coming to blows; yet it ſeemeth, that the conſtable may, at the requeſt of the party threatened, carry the perſon who threatens to beat him before a juſtice in order to find ſureties. 1 Hawk. 135.

Alſo, it is certain, that it is a very high offence to challenge another, either by word or letter, to fight a duel, or to be the meſſenger of ſuch a challenge; or even barely to endeavour to provoke another to ſend a challenge, or to fight; as by diſperſing letters to that purpoſe, full of reflections, and inſinuating a deſire to fight. 1 Hawk. 135.

But altho' no bare words, in the judgment of law, carry in them ſo much terror as to amount to an affray, yet it ſeems certain, that in ſome caſes there may be an affray, where there is no actual violence; as where a man arms himſelf with dangerous and unuſual weapons, in ſuch a manner as will naturally cauſe a terror to the people; which is ſaid to have been always an offence at the Common law, and is ſtrictly prohibited by ſtatute: For by 2 Ed. 3. c. 3. it is enacted, that no man of what condition ſoever, except the King's ſervants, in his preſence, and his miniſters in executing their office, and ſuch as be in their company aſſiſting them, and alſo upon a cry made for arms to keep the peace, ſhall come before the King's juſtices, or other of the King's miniſters doing their office, with force and arms, nor bring any force in affray of peace, nor go nor ride armed, by night or day in fairs or markets, or in the preſence of the King's juſtices or other miniſters or elſewhere; upon pain to forfeit their armour to the King, and their bodies to priſon at the King's pleaſure. And the King's juſtices in their preſence, ſheriffs and other miniſters in their bailiwicks, lords of franchiſes and their bailiffs in the ſame, and borough-holders, conſtables and wardens of the peace within their wards, ſhall have power to execute this act. And the judges of aſſize may puniſh ſuch officers as have not done their duty herein.

Upon a cry made for arms to keep the peace] It is holden upon theſe words of exception, that no perſon is within the intention of this ſtatute, who arms himſelf to ſuppreſs dangerous rioters, rebels, or enemies, and endeavours to ſuppreſs or reſiſt ſuch diſturbers of the peace and quiet of the realm. 1 Hawk. 136.

In

In affray of peace] En effrayer de la pees; Lord Coke has it pais, of the country, or the people; and ſo, he obſerves, that the writ grounded upon this ſtatute ſaith, In quorundam de populo terrorem; and therefore the printed book, in affray of peace, ought to be amended. 3 Inſt. 158.

And it is holden upon theſe words, that no wearing of arms is within the meaning of this ſtatute, unleſs it be accompanied with ſuch circumſtances as are apt to terrify the people; from whence it ſeems clearly to follow, that perſons of quality are in no danger of offending againſt this ſtatute, by wearing common weapons, or having their uſual number of attendants with them, for their ornament or defence, in ſuch places, and upon ſuch occaſions, in which it is the common faſhion to make uſe of them, without cauſing the leaſt ſuſpicion of an intention to commit any act of violence, or diſturbance of the peace. 1 Hawk. 136.

Nor to go nor ride armed] It is holden that a man cannot excuſe the wearing ſuch armour in publick, by alledging that ſuch a one threatned him, and that he wears it for the ſafety of his perſon from his aſſault; but it hath been reſolved, that no one ſhall incur the penalty of the ſaid ſtatute for aſſembling his neighbours and friends in his own houſe, againſt thoſe who threaten to do him any violence therein, becauſe a man's houſe is his caſtle. 1 Hawk. 136.

Their bodies to priſon] The ſtatute of 20 R. 2. c. 1. adds a fine likewiſe.

Wardens of the peace] It is holden that any juſtice of the peace, or other perſon who is impowered to execute this ſtatute, may proceed thereon ex officio; and if he finds any perſon in arms, contrary to the form of the ſtatute, he may ſeize the arms, and commit the offender to priſon; and that he ought alſo to make a record of the whole proceeding, and certify the ſame into the exchequer. 1 Hawk. 135.

It ſeems agreed, that any one who ſees others fighting may lawfully part them, and alſo ſtay them till the heat be over, and then deliver them to the conſtable to be carried before a juſtice to find ſureties for the peace. 1 Hawk. 136.

And the law doth encourage him hereunto; for if he receives any harm by the affrayers, he ſhall have his remedy by law againſt them; and if the affrayers receive hurt, by the endeavouring only to part them, the ſtanders by may juſtify the ſame, and the affrayers have no remedy by law. 3 Inſt. 158.

But if either of the parties be ſlain, or wounded, or ſo ſtricken that he falleth down for dead; in that caſe the ſtanders by ought to apprehend the party ſo ſlaying, wounding, or ſtriking, or to endeavour the ſame, by hue and cry; or elſe for his eſcape they ſhall be fined and impriſoned. 3 Inſt. 158.

It ſeems agreed, that a conſtable is not only impowered, as all private perſons are, to part an affray which happens in his preſence; but is alſo bound at his peril to uſe his beſt endeavours to this purpoſe; and not only to do his utmoſt himſelf, but alſo to demand the aſſiſtance of others, which if they refuſe to give him, they are puniſhable with fine and impriſonment. 1 Hawk. 137.

And it is ſaid, that if a conſtable ſee perſons either actually engaged in an affray, as by ſtriking or offering to ſtrike, or drawing their weapons, or the like; or upon the very point of entering upon an affray, as where one ſhall threaten to kill, wound, or beat another, he may either carry the offender before a juſtice to find ſureties for the peace, or he may impriſon him of his own authority for a reaſonable time, till the heat ſhall be over, and alſo afterwards detain him till he find ſurety by obligation: But it ſeems, that he has no power to impriſon ſuch an offender in any other manner, or for any other purpoſe; for he cannot juſtify the committing an affrayer to goal, till he ſhall be puniſhed for his offence: And it is ſaid, that he ought not to lay hands on thoſe, who barely contend with hot words, without any threats of perſonal hurt; and that all which he can do in ſuch caſe, is to command them under pain of impriſonment to avoid fighting. 1 Hawk. 137.

But he is ſo far intruſted with a power over all actual affrays, that though he himſelf is a ſufferer by them, and therefore liable to be objected againſt, as likely to be partial in his own cauſe, yet he may ſuppreſs them; and therefore, if an aſſault be made upon him, he may not only defend himſelf, but alſo impriſon the offender, in the ſame manner as if he were no way a party. 1 Hawk. 137.

If an affray be in an houſe, the conſtable may break open the doors to preſerve the peace; and if affrayers fly to an houſe, and he follow with freſh ſuit, he may break open the doors to take them. 1 Hawk. 137.

But it is ſaid, that a conſtable hath no power to arreſt a man for an affray done out of his own view, without a warrant from a juſtice, unleſs a felony were done, or likely to be done; for it is the proper buſineſs of a conſtable to preſerve the peace, and not to puniſh the breach of it. 1 Hawk. 137.

In a very dangerous affray, a conſtable can juſtify commitment, till the offenders find ſureties for the peace. Lamb. 139. He may likewiſe put the affrayers in the ſtocks till he can procure proper aſſiſtance to convey them to goal. Dalt. 38.

In caſes of affrays, the conſtable muſt apprehend the perſons offending before the affray is over, or elſe he may not do it without a warrant from a juſtice, except it be in an extraordinary caſe; as where a perſon is wounded dangerouſly. Dalt. 36.

In caſe of a ſudden affray, through paſſion or exceſs of drinking, the conſtable may put the perſons in priſon, if there be one in the vill, until the heat of their paſſion and intemperance is over, though he deliver them afterwards; or till he can bring them before a juſtice of peace, and that to avoid the preſent danger. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 95, 90.

If a conſtable is hurt in an affray, he may have his remedy by action of treſpaſs, and have good damages; but the affrayers, if they are hurt, ſhall have no remedy. Lamb. 141. And where any other perſons receive harm from the affrayers they may have remedy by action againſt them. Dalt. 35.

There is no doubt but that a juſtice of peace may and muſt do all ſuch things to that purpoſe, which a private man or conſtable are either enabled or required by the law to do: But it is ſaid, that he cannot without a warrant authorize the arreſt of any perſon for an affray out of his own view; yet it ſeems clear, that in ſuch caſe he may make his warrant to bring the offender before him, in order to compel him to find ſureties for the peace. 1 Hawk. 137.

All affrays in general are puniſhable by fine and impriſonment. 1 Hawk. 138.

Age, (Ætas, Fr. aage) In common acceptation ſignifies a man's life, from his birth to any certain time, or the day of his death: It alſo hath relation to that part of time wherein men live; but in the law it is particularly uſed for thoſe ſpecial times which enable perſons of both ſexes to do certain acts, which before through want of years and judgment they are prohibited to do. As for example; a man at twelve years of age ought to take the oath of allegiance to the king; At fourteen, which is his age of diſcretion, he may conſent to marriage, and chooſe his guardian; and at twenty-one he may alien his lands, goods and chattels: A woman at nine years of age is dowable; at twelve ſhe may conſent to marriage; at fourteen ſhe is at years of diſcretion, and may chooſe a guardian; and at twenty-one ſhe may alienate her lands, &c. 1 Inſt. 78. There are ſeveral other ages mentioned in our ancient books, relating to aid of the lord, wardſhip, &c. now of no uſe. Co. Lit. 78. The age of twenty-one is the full age of man or woman; which enables them to contract and manage for themſelves, in reſpect to their eſtates; until which time they cannot act with ſecurity to thoſe who deal with them; for their acts are in moſt caſes either void or voidable. Perk. But a perſon under twenty-one may contract for neceſſaries ſuitable to his quality, and it ſhall bind him; alſo one under age may be executor of a will 1 Inſt. 171. And at fourteen years of age a perſon may diſpoſe of goods and perſonal eſtate by will; tho' not lands till the age of twenty-one. It hath been adjudged, that if one be born on the firſt of February at 11 o'clock at night, and the laſt of January in the one and twentieth year at one o'clock in the morning, he makes his will of lands, &c. and dies; yet ſuch will is good, for he then was of age. Mod. Caſ. 260. A perſon under the age of twenty-one may make a purchaſe; but at his full age he may agree or diſagree to it. 1 Inſt. 2. So where perſons marry, the man under age of fourteen, or the woman within twelve, they may diſagree to the marriage at thoſe ages: And the law is the ſame in other caſes. Perſons under the age of fourteen, are not generally puniſhable for crimes: But if they do any treſpaſs, they muſt anſwer for the damage. 1 Inſt. 247. 2 Roll. Abr. 547. Fourteen is the age by law to be a witneſs; and in ſome caſes a perſon of nine years of age hath been allow'd to give evidence. 2 Hawk. 434. None may be a member of parliament under the age of twenty-one years; and no man can be ordained prieſt till twenty-four; nor be a biſhop till thirty years of age. By ſtatute Weſtm. 1. 13 Ed. 1. c. 47. age ſhall not delay the demandant in a writ of entry upon diſſeiſin in the Per. By ſtat. Glouc. 6 Ed. 1. c. 2. Nonage of the plaintiff ſhall not delay the taking an inqueſt in mort d'anceſtor. Age ſhall not be allowed the vouchee in Cui in vita, by ſtat. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 40. The full age of a man or woman to alien, demiſe, let, contract, &c. by the Civil law, is 25 years; for then the Romans allowed men to have plenam maturitatem, and the Lombards at 18 years. Co. Lit. 78. b.

By the law of Scotland, a woman cannot contrahere ſponſalia before her age of ſeven years. 1 Rol. 342. But by the Common law of England, perſons may marry at any age: And upon ſuch marriage the wife ſhall be endowed, if ſhe attain the age of nine years, of whatſoever age her huſband be; but not before the age of nine years. Co. Lit. 33. a. And if the huſband alien his land, and afterwards his wife attain the age of nine years, ſhe ſhall be endowed of the land ſold before: And if there be a writ to the biſhop to certify, whether they were ever coupled in lawful matrimony, he ought to certify that they were, of what age ſoever the huſband be. Co. Lit. 33. a. Reſolved, Dyer 369. a.

By the law of Scotland, and the Civil as well as the Common law, the age of conſent to marriage of the man is the age of 14 years. 1. Rol. 342. The age of the woman by the Civil and Common law, is the age of 12 years. 1 Rol. 342. By the law of Scotland it is at the age of 14 years. 1 Rol. 342.

If at the time of the marriage the huſband be above 14, and the wife under 12, when ſhe attains the age of 12 years, the huſband may diſagree as well as the wife, and ſo vice verſa. Co. Lit. 79.

A diſagreement to the marriage, before the age of conſent, is of no force; for, if the huſband diſagree before 14, and marry another, the iſſue of the ſecond marriage is a baſtard. 1 Rol. 341. Contra Dyer 13. a. in Marg. If after the age of conſent, the huſband or wife diſagree by parol, yet cohabit as huſband and wife, this amounts to an agreement. 1 Rol. 341.

Alſo if a man be indebted to another, and afterwards he makes the creditor his executor, and dies, the executor may retain ſo much of the goods of the deceaſed as will ſatisfy his debt; and by this retainer is agent and patient, that is, the party to whom the debt is due, and the perſon that pays the ſame. Agiſtment, (Agiſtamentum) Is where other mens cattle are taken into any ground, at a certain rate per week: It is ſo called, becauſe the cattle are ſuffered geſir, that is, to be levant and couchant there; and many great farms are employed to this purpoſe. 2 Inſt. 643. Agreement. An agreement is the conſent of two or more perſons concurring, the one in parting with, and the other in receiving ſome property, right or benefit; the notion of contracting or entering into agreements aroſe from the increaſe of commerce, and the neceſſity men were under of bartering their ſuperfluities for things of real uſe, and which lay out of the way of their acquiring; that men ſhould execute their agreements and perform their promiſes, though made without writing or conſideration, is enjoined by the law of nature; but in civil ſocieties, and in ours in particular, circumſtances are required which protect the weak, and thoſe who are under the power of others; alſo proviſion is made againſt fraud and circumvention; and that no man ſhould be injured in his property by the turn of any unwary expreſſion. 1 New Abr. 67.

An agreement is defined aggregatio mentium in re aliqua facta vel facienda. Plowd. 17. a. Though a contract executed with all the ſolemnity required by law, may properly be called an agreement; yet, in the more common acceptation of the word, articles, minutes, an eſcrow, &c. containing ſomething preparatory to a more ſolemn and formal execution, are called agreements. 1 New Abr. 67.

Under this head is conſidered,

1. Who are capable of contracting and binding themſelves or others by their agreements.

2. Agreements which are good in law, and will be decreed to be ſpecifically performed in a court of equity; and the manner in which they are to be performed.

3. Parol agreements, and ſuch as may be ſaid to be within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries.

1. Who are capable of contracting and binding themſelves or others by their agreements.

A perſon non compos is not capable of entering into any agreement, for an agreement is an act of the underſtanding which they are incapable of; and therefore they are to be under the care of their curators or guardians, by a commiſſion from the publick. 1 New Abr. 67. See title Idiots and Lunaticks.

Alſo an infant, for the ſame reaſon, is generally incapable of contracting.

A wife during the intermarriage is incapable of entering into any agreement in pais, being under power of her huſband. See title Baron and feme.

The anceſtor ſeiſed in fee may by his agreement bind his heir; therefore if A. agrees to ſell lands, and receives part of the purchaſe-money, but dies before a conveyance is executed, and a bill is brought againſt the heir, he will be decreed to convey, and the money ſhall go to the executor, eſpecially if there are more debts due than the teſtator's perſonal eſtate is ſufficient to pay. 2 Vern. 215. Abr. Eq. 265.

So if a father conveys to a younger ſon, by a defective conveyance, and dies, the heir at law in two caſes ſhall be compelled to make it good. 1. Where there is a covenant for further aſſurance, binding the heir, becauſe the heir is bound by the covenant. 2. Where there is a proviſion made by the father in his life-time for the heir, or he hath ſuch a proviſion by deſcent from the father. 1 New Abr. 68.

If tenant in tail agrees to convey, or bargains and ſells the lands for valuable conſideration, without fine or recovery, and dies before the fine or recovery be levied or ſuffered, the iſſue is not bound either in law or equity; for equity cannot ſet aſide the ſtatute de donis; which ſays, That voluntas donatoris obſervetur; nor can the court ſet up a new manner of conveyancing, and thereby ſuperſede fines and recoveries; for thereby the King would loſe the perquiſites by fines, or the writs of entry and fines for alienation. Hob. 203. 1 Chan. Ca. 171. 1 Lev. 239. 2 Vent. 350.

A. ſeiſed of lands in tail, agrees with B. that he and his heirs ſhall enjoy the intailed lands, if A. and his heirs may enjoy his fee-ſimple lands; this agreement is executed accordingly, and B. had a decree againſt A. to levy a fine and ſettle it, purſuant to the agreement; but A. died without doing it; and though it was decreed that A. himſelf was bound by this agreement to convey, yet ſince he died before he executed the fine, his iſſue was not bound by the agreement; but if the iſſue in tail had approved of his anceſtor's agreement, as he did in this caſe by entering on the lands of B. then it becomes his own agreement, and conſequently in equity he ſhall be obliged to perform it. 1 Chan. Ca. 171.

If there be tenant in tail in equity as of a truſt, or under an equitable agreement, and he for valuable conſideration bargains and ſells the land without fine or recovery, this ſhall bind his iſſue, becauſe the ſtatute de donis doth not extend to it, being an intail in equity and a creature of the court. 1 Chan. Ca. 234. 2 Chan. Ca. 64. 1 Vern. 13, 440. 2 Vern. 133, 583, 702.

As tenant in tail is reſtrained from alienating the eſtate without fine or recovery, ſo he is from charging of it, or diſpoſing of the laſting improvements after his death; therefore if tenant in tail ſells the trees growing on the inheritance, the vendee muſt ſever them during the life of tenant in tail, for if he dies before they are cut down, his iſſue ſhall have them as part of the inheritance, and the vendee, though obliged to pay the whole ſum contracted for, yet ſhall not be allowed to cut down one tree after the death of the tenant in tail; for as the tenant in tail has power over the inheritance but during his own life, ſo he cannot delegate that power to another but for the ſame time, and conſequently whatever remains part of the inheritance at the death of the tenant in tail, at which time his power over it ceaſes, muſt neceſſarily go to the heir to whom the inheritance belongs. Bro. Contract 26. 11 Co. 50. Pop. 194.

2. Agreements which are good in law, and will be decreed to be ſpecifically performed in a court of equity; and of the manner in which they are to be performed.

In many caſes the party injured by breach of an agreement, may have a remedy either by action at Common law, or have recourſe to a court of equity; but here a general rule muſt be obſerved, that wherever the matter of the bill is merely in damages, there the remedy is at law, becauſe the damages cannot be aſcertained by the conſcience of the chancellor, and therefore muſt be ſettled by a jury. See Abr. Eq. 16.

But if there be matter of fraud mixt with the damages; as if A. ſues B. on a covenant at law for damages, and B. files a bill for an injunction upon this equitable ſuggeſtion, that the covenant was obtained by fraud, if A. files his croſs bill for relief upon that covenant, the court will retain it, becauſe the validity of the covenant is diſputed in that court, and on a head properly cognizable there; and therefore, if the validity of the deed be eſtabliſhed, the court will direct an iſſue for the quantum of the damages. Abr. Eq. 17. 1 Chan. Rep. 158.

So where the agreement is to do ſomething in ſpecie, as to convey lands, execute a deed, &c. there it will be proper to apply to a court of equity for a ſpecifick execution to which the party is entitled, if the agreement be good and ſufficiently proved, when otherwiſe he could only recover damages at law. 1 Chan. Ca. 42.

The plaintiff aſſigned ſome ſhares of the exciſe to the defendant, who thereupon covenanted to ſave him harmleſs, and to ſtand in his place touching all payments to the King; the plaintiff being ſued by the King, brought his bill to have the agreement performed in ſpecie; and although it was inſiſted that the plaintiff might recover damages at law, and that this was not a covenant for any thing certain, and by this means a maſter in Chancery was to tax damages inſtead of a jury; yet it was decreed that the defendant ſhould perform his covenants; and it was directed to a maſter, that, as often as any breach ſhould happen, he ſhould report it ſpecially, that the court, if occaſion ſhould be, might direct a trial in a quantum damnificat'. 1 Vern. 189. 2 Chan. Ca. 146.

So if a jointreſs brings her bill to have an account of the real and perſonal eſtate of her late huſband, and to have ſatisfaction thereout for a defect of value of her jointure lands, which he had covenanted to be and to continue of ſuch value; and the defendant inſiſts, that this is a covenant which ſounds only in damages, and properly determinable at law; though it be admitted that a court of Equity cannot regularly aſſeſs damages; yet in this caſe, a maſter in Chancery may properly enquire into the value and defect of the lands, and report it to the court, which may decree ſuch defect to be made good, or ſend it to be tried at law, upon a quantum damnificat'. Abr. Eq. 18.

The condition of a bond was to ſettle certain lands in ſuch a manor, by ſuch a day; the obligor died before the day; ſo that the bond was ſaved at law, yet the court decreed a ſpecifick execution. Abr. Eq. 18.

But here it muſt be obſerved, that agreements, out of which an equity can be raiſed for a decree in ſpecie, ought to be obtained with all imaginable fairneſs, and without any mixture tending to ſurprize or circumvention; and that they be not unreaſonable in themſelves. Abr. Eq. 17.

As where by a marriage agreement the ſon's intended wife was to have more than would have been left for the father (though indebted) his wife and two daughters unpreferred; the court would not decree it, principally, by reaſon of the extremity of it, but left the party to his remedy at law. 2 Chan. Ca. 17.

So where A. articled for the purchaſe of B's eſtate, pretending he bought it for one whom B. was willing to oblige, and thereby got it ſomewhat cheaper, when in truth he bought it for another, equity would not decree an execution of this agreement. 1 Vern. 227.

So where A. on a marriage of his daughter to B. covenanted, that B. ſhould have his lands at his death cheaper than any other perſon, and he lived twenty years after, and deviſed to B. 1000*l.* and to his daughter, B's wife, 500*l.* and he deviſed the lands to his grandſon; the court refuſed an execution of the agreement, becauſe of the uncertainty of it; and it not being mutual, B. not being bound to take it at any price. 1 New Abr. 70.

An agreement for a purchaſe being obtained by an attorney from an old woman of ninety, and ſeveral ſuſpicious circumſtances appearing, the court would neither decree it to be carried into execution againſt the heir at law, nor to be delivered up upon a croſs bill exhibited for that purpoſe, but left the parties to their remedies at law. 2 Vern. 632. Green and Wood.

But as theſe caſes, and all others on this head, depend ſo much upon circumſtances, and are to ſtand or fall according to the degrees of fraud and circumvention attending them, and proved in the cauſe, or by what appears unreaſonable on the face of them, I ſhall only obſerve that a court of equity will much eaſier be prevailed on to diſmiſs a bill which prays a ſpecifick execution of an unreaſonable agreement, than ſet aſide an agreement, though not ſtrictly fair, on a bill for that purpoſe; for this deprives the party of what he had a right to by law; and that where ſuch agreements are ſet aſide, it muſt be on refunding what was bona fide paid, making allowances for improvements, &c. 1 New Abr. 70. 3 Chan. Ca. 136. 1 Vern. 271. 2 Vern. 15, 27.

As men have a property in their acquiſitions, ſo may they diſpoſe of them at their pleaſure, and without valuable conſideration; but if a man promiſes to convey lands, or to give goods without valuable conſideration, or without delivering poſſeſſion of them, this alters no property, nor has the party any remedy in law or equity, being nudum pactum unde non oritur actio.

But if it be done by deed duly executed, under ſeal, this is good in law, though there be no conſideration or no delivery of poſſeſſion; becauſe a man is eſtopped to deny his own deed, or affirm any thing contrary to the manifeſt ſolemnity of contracting. Yelv. 196. Cro. Jac. 270. 1 Brownl. 111. 6 Co. 18. b.

Alſo in equity voluntary conveyances are good againſt the parties, and cannot be revoked, nor will the court interpoſe in behalf of one volunteer againſt another; but if they affect creditors, purchaſers or younger children, the court will ſet them aſide. 1 Chan. Rep. 173. 1 Vern. 100, 464.

If there be a defective conveyance, without an equitable conſideration, a court of equity will not oblige the party to make it good, tho' their be a covenant for further aſſurances; as if a man makes a feoffment to a ſtranger without livery, the feoffor or heir ſhall not be obliged to make good that feoffment, but it ſhall be conſtrued in equity to be an eſtate at will, as it is in law. 2 Vent. 365. 2 Vern. 40. 2 Vern. 475.

If an annuity is granted by one to his houſe-keeper, with a bond for payment of it, and the bond is loſt, equity will decree payment of the annuity; for ſervice is a conſideration, and no turpis contractus ſhall be preſumed unleſs proved. Abr. Eq. 24.

If an agreement be to quit the poſſeſſion of lands, the court will not decree a conveyance of the lands themſelves; but if the agreement was to convey the lands, it is ſaid that the court would have decreed the agreement, though the party was not appriſed what eſtate he had in the lands. 1 Vern. 121.

If one is bound to transfer 300*l.* Eaſt India ſtock before ſuch a time, which he neglects to do, and ſtock is much riſen, he ſhall be obliged to transfer the ſtock in ſpecie, and account for all dividends from the time that it ought to have been transferred. 2 Vern. 394. See Prec. in Chan. 533.

If a creditor agrees with a debtor to take leſs than his debt, ſo that it be paid preciſely at ſuch a day, and the creditor fails of payment, he cannot be relieved, for cujus eſt dare ejus eſt diſponere. 1 Vern. 210. 1 Chan. Ca. 110.

If money be lent on mortgage, at 5 per cent. and the mortgagor covenants to pay 6 per cent. if he made default for the ſpace of ſixty days after the time of payment, if he makes default, the court will not relieve, this being the agreement of the parties. 2 Vern. 134.

If

If a leſſee for a long term of years covenants to lay out 200*l.* upon the premiſſes, within the firſt ten years, and lays out but 30*l.* and after the expiration of thirty years of the leaſe, the leſſor brings an action of covenant, and recovers 150*l.* damages, equity will neither relieve againſt the damage, nor decree the money to be now laid out in improvements; for though the damages ſeem exceſſive, yet the jury were proper judges; for it is probable the leſſee would not be ſo careful in laying it out in laſting improvements, as he would be were it laid out at firſt. 1 Vern. 316.

3. Parol agreements, and ſuch as may be ſaid to be within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries.

The Common law required no other ſolemnity in paſſing lands or tenements, but that of livery and ſeiſin, which being a tranſlation of the feud coram paribus curtis, and teſtified by them, was held an act of ſufficient notoriety to direct the lord of whom to demand his ſervices, and ſtrangers againſt whom to commence their actions; but now by the ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſect. 1. it is enacted, that "all leaſes, eſtates, intereſts of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain intereſts of, in or out of any meſſuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments made or created by livery and ſeiſin only, or by parol, and not put in writing, and ſigned by the parties ſo making or creating the ſame, or their agents thereunto lawfully authoriſed by writing, ſhall have the force and effect of leaſes or eſtates at will only, and ſhall not either in law or equity be deemed or taken to have any other or greater force or effect; any conſideration for making any ſuch parol leaſes or eſtates, or any former uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding."

Sect. 2. "Except leaſes not exceeding the term of three years from the making thereof, whereupon the rent reſerved to the landlord, during ſuch term, ſhall amount unto two third parts, at the leaſt, of the full improved value of the thing demiſed."

Sect. 3. Alſo it is enacted, that "no leaſes, eſtates or intereſts, either of freehold or terms of years, or any uncertain intereſt, not being copyhold or cuſtomary intereſt of, in, to or out of any meſſuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments ſhall be aſſigned, granted or ſurrendered, unleſs it be by deed or note in writing, ſigned by the party ſo aſſigning, granting or ſurrendring the ſame, or their agents thereunto lawfully authoriſed; by writing or by act or operation of law."

Sect. 4. And it is further enacted, that "no action ſhall be brought whereby to charge any executor or adminiſtrator, upon any ſpecial promiſe to anſwer damages out of his own eſtate, or whereby to charge the defendant upon any ſpecial promiſe to anſwer for the debt, default or miſcarriages of another perſon, or to charge any perſon upon any agreement made upon conſideration of marriage, or upon any contract or ſale of lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any intereſt in or concerning them, or upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the ſpace of one year from the making thereof, unleſs the agreement upon which ſuch action ſhall be brought, or ſome memorandum or note thereof ſhall be in writing, ſigned by the party to be charged therewith, or ſome other perſon by him thereunto lawfully authoriſed."

Sect. 7. It is enacted, that "all declarations or creations of truſts, or confidences of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, ſhall be manifeſted and proved by ſome writing ſigned by the party who is by law enabled to declare ſuch truſt."

Sect. 4. "Provided that where any conveyance ſhall be made of lands or tenements, by which a truſt or confidence ſhall or may ariſe, or reſult by the implication or conſtruction of law, or be transferred or extinguiſhed by an act or operation of law; then, and in every ſuch caſe, ſuch truſt or confidence ſhall be of the like force and effect as the ſame would have been if this ſtatute had not been made."

Sect. 17. It is enacted, that "no contract for the ſale of any goods, wares and merchandiſes for the price of 10*l. ſterling*, or upwards, ſhall be allowed to be good, except the buyer ſhall accept part of the goods ſo ſold, and actually receive the ſame, or give ſomething in earneſt to bind the bargain, or in part of payment; or that ſome note or memorandum, in writing, of the ſaid bargain be made and ſigned by the parties to be charged, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute, the following points have been reſolved.

That if there be a parol agreement for the purchaſe of lands, and a bill brought for a ſpecifick execution thereof, and the ſubſtance of the agreement ſet forth in the bill, and confeſſed by the defendant's anſwer, that in ſuch caſe the court will decree a ſpecificate execution; becauſe there is no danger of perjury, which was the principal thing the ſtatute intended to prevent. Abr. Eq. 19.

Alſo a parol agreement which is intended to be reduced into writing, but prevented by fraud, may be decreed in equity; as if upon a marriage-treaty inſtructions are given by the huſband to draw a ſettlement, and by him privately countermanded; and afterwards he draws in the woman, by perſuaſions and aſſurances of ſuch ſettlement to marry him. Abr. Eq. 19.

So where a parol agreement was concerning the lending of money on a mortgage, and the conveyance propoſed was an abſolute deed from the mortgagor, and a deed of defeaſance from the mortgagee, and after the mortgagee had got the deed of conveyance, he refuſed to execute the defeaſance; yet it was decreed againſt him on the point of fraud. Abr. Eq. 20.

So where the defendant, on a treaty of marriage for his daughter with the plaintiff, ſigned a writing comprizing the terms of the agreement, and afterwards deſigning to elude the force thereof, and get looſe from his agreement, ordered his daughter to put on a good humour and get the plaintiff to deliver up that writing, and then marry him, which ſhe accordingly did, and the defendant ſtood by at a corner of a ſtreet to ſee them go by to be married; and the plaintiff was relieved on the point of fraud. Abr. Eq. 20. 2 Vern. 373.

On a bill exhibited for a marriage portion, the chief evidence to ſupport it was a letter proved to have been written by the father's direction, wherein it was ſaid he would give 1500*l.* portion with his daughter, and that he was afterwards privy to the marriage, and conſented to it; and the portion was decreed the huſband. 2 Vern. 322.

But where on a marriage treaty the lady's father propoſed to give 4500*l.* portion, and the huſband was to ſettle 4 or 500*l. per ann.* for a jointure, the father and intended huſband went to Mr. Minſhul's chambers, who hearing the propoſals on both ſides, took down minutes or heads thereof in writing, and the ſame day gave them to his clerk to draw a ſettlement according to the terms of the agreement; the next day the father fell ſick ſuddenly, and died in two hours after, and the next morning the marriage was conſummated; and on a bill brought to have a ſpecifick performance of the agreement, my lord Chancellor decreed it to be within the ſtatute of frauds, and ſaid he knew no caſe where an agreement, though wrote by the party himſelf, ſhould bind, if not ſigned or in part executed by him; and that thoſe preparatory heads might have received ſeveral alterations or additions, or the agreement might have intirely broke off upon ſome further enquiry of the party's circumſtances; and this decree was thought very juſt by the bar, who all agreed with my lord Chancellor, that if the marriage had been on the foot of this writing, and the father had been privy and conſenting to it, that he ſhould afterwards have been obliged to execute his part thereof. Abr. Eq. 21.

On the marriage of the plaintiff with the defendant's daughter, the defendant promiſed to give her 450*l.* portion, and accordingly paid the plaintiff 200*l.* in part, but took a bond from him for it till a ſuitable ſettlement ſhould be made, and the defendant himſelf gave particular directions concerning the ſettlement, which was drawn accordingly and engroſſed; but before it was executed the plaintiff's wife died, and the bill was brought to have the 200*l.* bond delivered up, and the remaining 250*l.* paid, the defendant pleaded the ſtatutes of frauds and perjuries, the the agreement not being reduced into writing and ſigned by the parties; and by way of anſwer, denied that the 200*l.* was paid in part of the portion, but ſaid it was lent to the plaintiff, and the bond given for it; and the plea was allowed; for if the marriage ſhould be looked upon as an execution of the agreement on one ſide, ſo as to take it out of the ſtatute, it would intirely evade it; for all promiſes of this kind, ſuppoſe a marriage either already had or to be had. 1 New Abr. 74.

There are ſeveral caſes in which it has been held, that a parol agreement in part executed ſhall be performed in the whole; but as thoſe caſes are not exactly ſtated or well reported, it will be ſufficient to mention what ſeems to be the ſenſe of them, and what with any juſtneſs can be collected from them, viz. that if an agreement be made concerning lands, though not in writing, and the party by whom it was made receives all or part of the money, equity will compel a ſpecifick performance of the whole agreement; becauſe this is out of the ſtatute, which deſigned to defeat ſuch agreements only, no part whereof was carried into execution, and are ſet up merely by parol; for that was the occaſion of the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, that perſons uſed to impoſe verbal agreements upon others, and by ſuch falſe oaths charge the parties in equity to perform ſuch agreements, though they had never been made; and therefore the mere parol proof of ſuch agreements concerning lands cannot be admitted in a court of equity; but where the price is paid, there it doth not ſtand upon the parol proof of the agreement only, but upon the execution of part of the agreement, which is evidence that the agreement was really made; and therefore there is the ſame reaſon that the plaintiff in equity ſhould have the land for his money, as it is that he ſhould deliver the goods where he hath received the money; but the doubt in theſe caſes is, what ſhall be a proof of the receipt of the money. Thus far it ſeems certain, that if the defendant in his anſwer confeſſeth the receipt of the money for that purpoſe in the bill; or if he denies the money, and it be proved upon him by writing, as by letter under his hand, or other written evidence, he ſhall be obliged ſpecifically to perform the whole agreement; becauſe he hath carried part into execution; but if the defendant confeſſes the receipt of the money, but ſays that he borrowed it from the plaintiff, and that he had it not in execution of that agreement; there he turns the proof of the agreement upon the plaintiff, and then the plaintiff muſt prove the receipt of the money by the defendant, for the purpoſe in the bill, by ſome written agreement. 1 Vern. 151, 159. 1 Vern. 363. 2 Vern. 455. 1 Vern. 210, 220, 472. 2 Vern. 627. 1 Vern. 240. 2 Chan. Caſ. 135.

If a man, on a promiſe of a leaſe to be made to him, lays out money on improvements, he ſhall oblige the leſſor afterwards to execute the leaſe, being executed on the part of the leſſee, and the leſſor ſhall not be allowed to take advantage of his own fraud, and run away with the improvements made by another; but if no ſuch expence had been on the leſſee's part, a bare promiſe of a leaſe, though accompanied with poſſeſſion, would be within the ſtatute of frauds. Preced. in Chan. 561. 1 Vern. 159. See Prec. in Chan. 519.

One that could read, agreed to take a leaſe for twenty-one years; the leſſor himſelf drew the leaſe but for one year, and yet read it for twenty-one years, and after the expiration of the year ejected the leſſee. On a bill brought to be relieved upon this matter, which was proved, the court held it to be within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, and diſmiſſed the bill with coſts, it being the plaintiff's own folly, being able to read; ſecus, if he had been unlettered. Skin. 159.

If a man purchaſes lands in another's name, and pays the money, it will be a truſt for him that paid the money, though there be no deed executed, declaring the truſt thereof; for the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries extends not to truſts raiſed by operation of law. 2 Vent. 361. 1 Vern. 366.

Alſo the following points have been reſolved in the Common law courts, on the ſeveral branches of the abovemention'd ſtatute.

1. That the clauſe which enacts, that no action ſhall be brought, to charge an executor, &c. that this extends not to promiſes made before, though to be performed after the making of the ſtatute; for it would be againſt natural juſtice, that a promiſe made upon good conſideration ſhould be deſtroyed by the retroſpect of a law which none could divine would be made. 2 Jones 108. 1 Vent. 330. 2 Mod. 310. 2 Lev. 227. 2 Show. Rep. 56.

2. That the plaintiff in his declaration need not ſhew any note in writing, but it will be ſufficient for him to produce it on the trial; but if ſuch promiſe is pleaded in bar of another action, it muſt be ſhewn to be in writing; ſo that it may appear to the court to be ſuch a promiſe upon which an action will lie. Raym. 450, 451. 2 Jones 158. S. C.

3. That the clauſe relating to marriage extends as well to a promiſe to marry, as to the payment of marriage portions, &c. 3 Lev. 65. See Skin. 196. which ſeems cont'.

4. That the clauſe which ſays, That no action ſhall be brought upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the ſpace of one year from the making thereof, unleſs it be in writing, extends not to a parol promiſe made to pay ſo much money upon the return of ſuch a ſhip, which ſhip happened not to return within two years after the promiſe made; for the ſhip by poſſibility might have returned within the year; and the clauſe extends only to ſuch promiſes where, by the expreſs appointment of the party, the thing itſelf is not to be performed within a year. 1 Salk. 280. Skin. 326, 353. S. P.

On the clauſe, That no action ſhall be brought on a ſpecial promiſe, to anſwer for the debt, default, &c. of another, it has been reſolved, that if A. is about hiring a horſe from B. and C. to encourage him to lend the horſe, promiſes that A. ſhould deliver him ſafe; this is a collateral promiſe, and an undertaking within the ſtatute; for C. ſubjects himſelf to an action, on the breach of the original contract by A. againſt whom detinue lies on the bailment. So if two come to a ſhop, and one of them contracts for goods, and the ſeller does not chooſe to truſt him, whereupon the other ſays, Let him have them, and I will undertake he ſhall pay you; but if the promiſe be, I will ſee you paid, or I will be your paymaſter, it is otherwiſe. So if A. comes to B. and tells him, Hire your horſe to J. S. and I will ſee you paid the hire; there the hiring is to A. and not to J. S. who is conſidered as ſervant to A. So in all caſes where the whole credit is given to the undertaker, or he alone liable to an action. 1 Salk. 27, 28. 6 Mod. 248, 249.

Agri, In our law denotes arable land in the common fields. Jacob. Forteſcue.

Aid, (Auxilium) Is all one with the French aide, and is generally underſtood to be a ſubſidy granted to the crown. By the ancient law of the land, the King and any lord of the realm, might lay an aid upon their tenants, for knighting an eldeſt ſon, or marriage of a daughter; but this was taken away by the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. This impoſition, which was levied in former times, ſeems to have deſcended to us from Normandy, or rather from the feudal law. Grand Cuſtum. c. 35. It is ſaid to differ from tax in ſignification; for taxes were anciently levied at the will of the lord, upon any occaſion whatſoever, but aids could not be levied but where it was lawful and cuſtomary ſo to do; as to make the eldeſt ſon a knight, marry the eldeſt daughter, or redeem the lord from priſon. By ſtatute 34 Ed. 1. c. 1. it is ordained, that the King ſhall levy no aid or tax without his parliament. Cowel. See Du Freſne, verbo auxilium.

Aid-prayer, (Auxilium petere) A word made uſe of in pleading, for a petition in court to call in help from another perſon that hath an intereſt in the thing conteſted: this gives ſtrength to the party praying in aid, and to the other likewiſe, by giving him an opportunity of avoiding a prejudice growing towards his own right. As tenant for life, by the curteſy, for term of years, &c. being impleaded, may petere auxilium, that is, pray in aid of him in reverſion; that is, deſire the court that he may be called by writ to alledge what he thinks proper for the maintenance of the right of the perſon calling him, and of his own. F. N. B. 50. Aid ſhall be granted to the defendant in ejectione firmæ, when the title of the land is in queſtion; leſſee for years ſhall have aid in treſpaſs; and tenants at will: but tenants in tail ſhall not have aid of him in remainder in fee; for he himſelf hath the inheritance. Danv. Abr. 292. In a writ of replevin, the avowry being for a real ſervice, aid is granted before iſſue; and in action of treſpaſs after iſſue joined, if there be cauſe, it ſhall be had for the defendant, tho' never for the plaintiff. Jenk. Cent. 64. Fitz. Abr. 7. There ought to be privity between a perſon that joins in aid and the other to whom he is joined; otherwiſe joinder in aid ſhall not be ſuffered. Danv. 318. There is a prayer in aid of patrons, by parſons, vicars, &c. and between coparceners, where one coparcener ſhall have aid of the other to recover pro rata. Co. Litt. And alſo ſervants, having done any thing lawfully in right of their maſters, ſhall have aid of them. Termes de la ley. Cowel.

Aid of the King, (Auxilium regis) Is where the King's tenant prays aid of the king, on account of rent demanded of him by others. A city or borough, that hold a fee-farm of the King, if any thing be demanded againſt them which belongs thereto, they may pray in aid of the King; and the King's bailiffs, collectors, or accountants ſhall have aid of the King. In theſe caſes, the proceedings are ſtopp'd till the King's counſel are heard to ſay what they think fit, for avoiding the King's prejudice: and this aid ſhall not in any caſe be granted after iſſue; becauſe the King ought not to rely upon the defence made by another. Jenk. Cent. 64. Termes de la ley. 35.

By the ſtat. de bigamis, 4 Edw. 1. cap. 1. it is enacted that, "Where a feoffment, with a charter thereupon, being made by the King, hath ſo much in it, that another perſon by a like feoffment, and like deed, ſhould be bound to warranty, the juſtices may not proceed without the King's commandment."

By the ſtat. de bigamis, 4 Edw. 1. cap. 2. "But where the King confirmeth or ratifieth another's act in another man's thing, or granteth any thing as much as in him is, or where a deed is ſhewed, whereby the King hath rendered any tenement, and no clauſe of warranty is contained therein; and in like caſes (the ſame being ſhewed to the King) the juſtices may proceed."

By the ſtat. 1. H. 4. cap. 8. it is enacted that, "In caſe lands be granted by the King's patent without title found, where the King's entry is not given by law; the diſſeiſes ſhall have ſpecial aſſiſe of the chancellor's grant, without other ſuit to the King: and if the patentees pray in aid, a procedendo ſhall be granted by the chancellor without other ſuit to the King; and in caſe the diſſeiſee recover againſt the patentees, they ſhall have treble damages."

Aiel, (of the French aieul, i. e. avus) Signifies a writ which lies where a man's grandfather or great grandfather (called Beſaile) being ſeiſed of lands and tenements in fee-ſimple, the day that he died, and a ſtranger abateth or entereth the ſame day, and diſpoſſeſſes the heir of his inheritance. F. N. B. 222. The aunt and the niece ſhall join in a writ of aiel of the ſeiſin of their grandfather; and the writ runs thus: Rex vic. &c. A. B. quod juſte, &c. redd. B. & D. unum meſſuagium, &c. de quo D. avus præd. B. & proavus præd. D. cujus hæred' ipſi ſunt, fuit ſeiſitus, &c. See Plowd. Com. fo. 449. Alder, Signifies the firſt; as alder beſt, is the beſt of all; alder lieſeſt, the moſt dear. Cowel.

Alderman, (Sax. Ealdorman; Lat. Aldermannus) Hath the ſame ſignification as ſenator, or ſenior, or elder; and was the ſame among the Saxons as earl among the Danes. Camb. Brit. fo. 107. But at this day, and long ſince, thoſe are called aldermen who are aſſociates to the civil magiſtrate of a city or town corporate. Stat. 24 Hen. 8. cap. 13. An alderman ought to be an inhabitant of the place, and reſident where he is choſen; and if he removes, he is incapable of doing his duty in the government of the city or place, for which he may be diſfranchized.

chized. 4 Mod. Rep. 36. Alderman Langham was a freeman of the city of London, and choſen alderman of ſuch a ward, and being ſummoned to the court of aldermen he appeared, and the oath to ſerve the office was tendered to him, but he refuſed to take it, in contempt of the court, &c. whereupon he was committed to Newgate; and it was held good. March Rep. 179. The aldermen of London, &c. are exempted from ſerving inferior offices; nor ſhall they be put upon aſſiſes, or ſerve on juries, ſo long as they continue to be aldermen. 2 Cro. 585. In Spelman's Gloſſary we find that we had antiently a title of aldermannus totius Angliæ; witneſs this inſcription on a tomb in Ramſey abby — Hic requieſcit D. Alwinus, inclyti Regis Eadgari cognatus, totius Angliæ Aldermannus, et hujus ſacri cœnobii miraculoſus fundator. See Spelman's gloſſary at large on this word.

Alderman was one of the three degrees of nobility among the Saxons: Ætheling was the firſt, and thane the loweſt; but alderman was the ſame as our earl. The word was diſuſed in the later ages of the Saxons, and in its place the word earl was introduced. It is certain that it was uſed in King Athelſtane's reign. It is true it literally imports no more than elder; but amongſt the Saxons it ſignified a duke, an earl, a nobleman, and ſometimes a general; but then he was called heretoga, viz. Mercna heretoga, alderman of Mercland; which title he had in relation to his military power: But the title alderman ſhewed his civil juriſdiction; which title afterwards was applied to a judge; as in the reign of King Edgar, Alwin, the ſon of Æthelſtane, is called aldermannus totius Angliæ, that is, as Spelman tells us, juſticiarius Angliæ.

There was likewiſe aldermannus hundredi: Which dignity was firſt introduced in the reign of Hen. 1. Among his laws, cap. 8. we read, *præſit autem ſingulis hominum novenis decimus, et toti ſimul hundredo unus de melioribus, et vocatur aldermannus, qui dei leges et hominum jura vigilanti ſtudeat obſervantia promovere. Alcat, (Sax. Alfæth) A cauldron or furnace, wherein boiling water was put for a criminal to dip his arm in up to his elbow, and there hold it for ſome time. Du Freſne.

Alehouſes. Before the ſtatute of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 25. it was lawful for any one to keep an alehouſe without licence; for it was a means of livlihood, which any one was free to follow: But if it was diſorderly kept, it was indictable as a nuſance. 1 Salk. 45.

The ancient, true, and principal uſe of inns, alehouſes, and victualling houſes, was for the receit, relief and lodging of wayfaring people travelling from place to place, and for ſuch ſupply of the wants of ſuch people as are not able by greater quantities to make their proviſion of victuals, and not meant for entertainment and harbouring of lewd and idle people, to ſpend and conſume their money and their time in a lewd and drunken manner. Preamble to ſtat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 9.

Stat. 5 Ed. 6. c. 25. ſect. 1. The juſtices of peace in every ſhire, city, and borough, town corporate, franchiſe or liberty, or two of them (whereof one to be of the quorum) ſhall have power to put away common ſelling of ale and beer, in common alehouſes and tipling-houſes, where they ſhall think meet. And none ſhall keep any common alehouſe or tipling-houſe, but ſuch as ſhall be thereunto admitted in the open ſeſſions of the peace, or elſe by two juſtices of peace, whereof one to be of the quorum. And the juſtices ſhall take bond and ſurety from time to time, by recognizance, of ſuch as ſhall be admitted to keep any common alehouſe or tipling-houſe, as well againſt the uſing unlawful games, as alſo for the maintenance of good order. For making of which recognizance, the party ſhall pay but twelve pence.

Sect. 2. The juſtices ſhall certify the recognizance at the next quarter ſeſſions, there to remain of record before the juſtices, upon pain of forfeiture for every ſuch recognizance taken and not certified, three pounds ſix ſhillings and eight pence.

Sect. 3. The juſtices of peace where ſuch recognizance ſhall be taken, ſhall have power, in their quarter ſeſſions, by their diſcretion, to enquire of all ſuch perſons as ſhall be admitted to keep any alehouſe or tipling-houſe, and that be bound by recognizance, if they have forfeited the ſame recognizance. And the juſtices ſhall, upon every ſuch preſentment or information, award proceſs againſt ſuch perſon, to ſhew why he ſhould not forfeit his recognizance, and ſhall have power to hear and determine the ſame.

Sect. 4. If any perſon, other than ſuch as ſhall be admitted by the juſtices, ſhall obſtinately take upon him to keep a common alehouſe or tipling-houſe, or ſhall, contrary to the commandment of the juſtices or two of them, uſe commonly ſelling of ale or beer; the ſaid juſtices, or two of them (whereof one to be of the quorum), ſhall commit ſuch perſon to the common goal, there to remain three days. And before his deliverance, the juſtices ſhall take recognizance of him, with two ſureties, that he ſhall not keep any common alehouſe or tipling-houſe, or uſe commonly ſelling of ale or beer.

Sect. 5. The juſtices ſhall make certificate of every ſuch recognizance and offence at the next quarter ſeſſions, which certificate ſhall be a ſufficient conviction. And the juſtices, upon the ſaid certificate made, ſhall in open ſeſſions aſſeſs the fine for every ſuch offence at twenty ſhillings.

Sect. 6. In ſuch places where any fair ſhall be kept, for the time only of the fair, it ſhall be lawful for every perſon to uſe common ſelling of ale or beer in booths, or other places there.

The firſt ſection of the foregoing ſtatute muſt be underſtood of unlicenſed houſes only. 1 Salk. 46. And by the ſame ſection, the juſtices in their ſeſſions have power to ſuppreſs ſuch unlicenſed alehouſes, and need not proceed by information or conviction; but they have thereby a diſcretionary power to ſuppreſs them, without ſhewing any cauſe or miſdemeanor. Lord Raym. 1303.

There is a difference between ſuppreſſing an unlicenſed alehouſe, and one that is licenſed. Where an alehouſe is licenſed, the juſtices to ſuppreſs it, muſt either proceed upon the recognizance, the condition whereof muſt at leaſt be broken; and therefore his having another trade, or being a bailiff, can be no cauſe in ſuch caſe: or by indictment, and then there muſt be ſuch diſorders as prove a nuſance. But where an alehouſe is unlicenſed, the juſtices may ſuppreſs it at diſcretion; for on the denial of a licenſe no appeal lies, and this ſtatute, which gives the juſtices a power to ſuppreſs where they ſhall think meet, would ſignify nothing if it did not extend to ſuch caſes; for it cannot extend to alehouſes that are licenſed, becauſe they are not puniſhable without a breach of the recognizance. And as to thoſe that are unlicenſed, if they be ſuppreſſed, the want of a licence can only come in queſtion in ſuch caſe, and not the reaſon and cauſe why it was denied. 1 Salk. 45, 46.

Stat. 4 Jac. 1. c. 4. No perſon ſhall ſell any beer or ale to any perſon, that then ſhall ſell beer or ale as a common tipler, or alehouſe-keeper, the ſame perſon not having any licence (other than for the uſe of his houſhold) upon pain to forfeit for every barrel ſix ſhillings and eight pence, and after that rate.

Stat. 3 Car. 1. c. 4. ſect. 2. If any perſon ſhall, not being licenſed, keep a common alehouſe, or uſe commonly ſelling of ale or beer, cyder or perry, ſuch perſon ſhall forfeit twenty ſhillings to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh; the offence being viewed by the mayor, bailiff, or juſtice of peace, or other head officer, or confeſſed by the party, or proved by the oath of two witneſſes: the ſaid penalty to be levied by the conſtables or churchwardens, who ſhall be accountable therefore to the uſe of the poor; poor; and for default of ſatisfaction within three days, the diſtreſs to be appraiſed and ſold, and the overplus to be delivered to the party. And if ſuch offender ſhall not have ſufficient goods, or ſhall not pay the ſaid twenty ſhillings within ſix days after conviction, then the mayor, bailiff, &c. ſhall commit the offender to ſome conſtable, or other inferior officer, to be openly whipped.

Sect. 3. If any conſtable or officer ſhall neglect to execute the ſaid warrant, it ſhall be lawful for the mayor, bailiff, &c. to commit the conſtable or officer to the common goal, until the ſaid offender ſhall be by the ſaid conſtable or officer, or by his procurement, puniſhed and whipped, or until he ſo neglecting ſhall have paid forty ſhillings to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh.

Sect. 4. If the offender, being an unlicenſed alehouſe-keeper, ſhall offend the ſecond time, then the mayor, bailiff, &c. ſhall commit him to the houſe of correction for one month. And if ſuch perſon ſhall again offend, he ſhall be committed unto the houſe of correction until by the order of the juſtices in their general ſeſſions he ſhall be delivered.

Sect. 5. Such offender, as ſhall be puniſhed by virtue of this act, ſhall not be puniſhed again for the ſame offence by the act 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 25. and ſuch offender as ſhall be puniſhed by virtue of the act 5 & 6 Ed. 6. ſhall not be puniſhed again for the ſame offence by virtue of this act.

Sect. 6. In places where any fair ſhall be kept, for the time only of the ſame fair, it ſhall be lawful for every perſon to uſe common ſelling of ale or beer in booths or other places.

Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 31. ſect. 9. Where any juſtice ſhall ſuſpect that any alehouſe-keeper, victualler, or retailer, ſells ale, beer, cyder, or perry, without ſuch licence, it ſhall and may be lawful for ſuch juſtice to call ſuch ſuſpected perſon before him, and alſo any exciſe officer or gauger, to produce before ſuch juſtice his ſtock-book, or other account, which ſuch officer keeps, of the charge or ſurvey of ſuch ſuſpected perſon, in reſpect of any of the liquors aforeſaid; and likewiſe to examine ſuch exciſe officer or gauger upon oath, touching the manner in which ſuch officer ſurveys or charges ſuch ſuſpected perſon, in reſpect of any of the liquors aforeſaid, or how, or in what manner ſuch ſuſpected perſon actually pays the duties for any of the ſaid liquors; if it ſhall appear by ſuch ſtock-book or other account, or by the examination of the ſaid officer or gauger, that ſuch perſon ſo ſuſpected, is ſurveyed as a victualler or retailer, and is charged with the ſame duties that victuallers and retailers are uſually charged with, and pay for any of the liquors aforeſaid, and is not intitled to the allowance or abatement given to common brewers, then, and in ſuch caſe, ſuch ſuſpected perſon ſhall be deemed an alehouſe-keeper, victualler, retailer, or ſeller of any of the liquors aforeſaid, to all intents and purpoſes, as if the ſame had been proved by two witneſſes.

Sect. 10. And if any perſon ſhall make information before any one juſtice of the peace, and ſhew probable cauſe that he ſuſpects that any perſon ſells ale without licence, beer, or other liquors withont a licence from two juſtices, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for ſuch juſtice to call ſuch ſuſpected perſon before him, and alſo to ſummon any other perſon or perſons as evidence, to prove the charge againſt ſuch ſuſpected perſon, and if ſuch perſon ſo ſummoned ſhall refuſe to appear, or, when appearing, ſhall refuſe to be examined upon oath, and give evidence as aforeſaid, ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall forfeit the ſum of ten pounds, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattles, of ſuch offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and ſeal of ſuch juſtice, rendering him or them the overplus, after charges of the ſaid diſtreſs and ſale deducted, to be paid to the overſeers for the uſe of the poor where the offender ſhall live.

Sect. 11. And that if any perſon ſhall be diſabled by conviction to ſell ale, beer, cyder, or perry, ſuch perſon ſhall, by the ſame conviction, be alſo diſabled to ſell any ſpirituous liquors or ſtrong waters; any licence before obtained for that purpoſe notwithſtanding; and every licence granted to the perſon ſo convicted, to ſell ale, beer, cyder, perry, ſpirituous liquors, ſtrong waters, or any of them, from the time of ſuch conviction, ſhall be null and void; and every perſon ſelling ale, beer, cyder, perry, ſpirituous liquors, ſtrong waters, or any of them, during the term of ſuch diſability, ſhall be ſubject to all, or ſuch of the penalties, as are reſpectively inflicted by law for ſelling ale, beer, cyder, perry, ſpirituous liquors, ſtrong waters, or any of them, by retail without licence; and in all proſecutions of ſuch offenders, a certificate from the clerk of the peace (or perſon acting as ſuch) of any ſuch conviction, ſhall be legal evidence; which certificate ſuch clerk of the peace or perſon ſhall grant on demand without fee or reward.

Sect. 12. And every perſon ſo convicted of the offence of ſelling ale, beer, or other liquors, without a licence from two juſtices of the peace, ſhall, for every ſuch firſt offence, forfeit the ſum of forty ſhillings; and for every ſuch ſecond offence ſhall forfeit the ſum of four pounds; and for every ſuch third offence ſhall forfeit ſix pounds; all which ſaid reſpective forfeitures ſhall and may be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattles of every ſuch offender (rendering to him the overplus, after charges of the ſaid diſtreſs and ſale deducted) by warrant under the hand and ſeal of the juſtice convicting ſuch offender; and ſhall be paid one moiety thereof to the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the overſeers of the poor, for the uſe of the poor of the pariſh or place where ſuch offence was committed; and if no ſufficient diſtreſs ſhall be found, whereon to levy the ſaid reſpective forfeitures, then the ſaid juſtice of the peace ſhall and may commit every ſuch offender ſo reſpectively convicted as aforeſaid, to the common goal or other priſon, or houſe of correction, within his juriſdiction, without bail or mainpriſe, for the ſpace of one month, for the firſt offence; and for the ſecond offence, for the ſpace of two months; and for the third offence, until ſuch offender ſhall be diſcharged by order of the court of general quarter ſeſſions.

Stat. 28 Geo. 2. cap. 19. ſect. 2. Every perſon ſelling ale, beer, or other liquors without licence, after a third conviction, ſhall, for every ſuch offence, ſo often as it ſhall happen, forfeit the ſum of ſix pounds, to be levied and diſpoſed of in like manner as the forfeitures in the firſt, ſecond, and third conviction are directed to be, in and by the ſaid act; and in caſe no ſufficient diſtreſs ſhall be found, whereon to levy the ſaid ſeveral forfeitures, then the juſtices of the peace, who ſhall have convicted ſuch offender, ſhall and may commit him or her ſo convicted, to the common goal, or other priſon or houſe of correction within his juriſdiction, without bail or mainprize, until ſuch offender ſhall be diſcharged by order of the court of general or quarter ſeſſions.

2. Licenſing alehouſes, and the requiſites upon that occaſion.

Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 11. Whereas many inconveniencies have ariſen from perſons being licenſed to keep inns and common alehouſes, by juſtices of the peace, who, living remote from the places of abode of ſuch perſons, may not be truly informed as to the occaſion or want of ſuch inns or common alehouſes, or the characters of the perſons applying for licences to keep the ſame: Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforeſaid, that from and after the twenty-fourth day of June one thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty-nine, no licence ſhall be granted to any perſon to keep a common inn, or alehouſe, or to retail any brandy or ſtrong waters, but at a general meeting of the juſtices of the peace, acting in the diviſion where the ſaid perſon dwells, to be holden for that purpoſe, on the firſt day of September yearly, or within twenty days after, or at any other general meeting of the ſaid juſtices, to be holden for the diviſion wherein the ſaid perſon reſides; and all licences which ſhall, after the ſaid twenty-fourth day of June one thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty-nine, be granted to the contrary hereof ſhall be null and void.

Sect. 12. Nothing herein contained ſhall extend to alter the method or power of granting licences for keeping of of common inns, alehouſes, or brandy-ſhops, in any city or town corporate.

Stat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 31. ſect. 1. Upon granting licences by juſtices of the peace to any perſon to keep an alehouſe, inn, victualling-houſe, or to ſell ale, beer, and other liquors by retail, every ſuch perſon ſhall enter into recognizance to the King's majeſty, his heirs, and ſucceſſors, in the ſum of ten pounds, with two ſufficient ſureties, each in the ſum of five pounds, or one ſufficient ſurety in the ſum of ten pounds, under the uſual condition, for maintenance of good order and rule within the ſame; and in caſe the perſon applying for ſuch licence ſhall be hindred through ſickneſs or infirmity, or any other reaſonable cauſe, to be allowed by the ſaid juſtices of the peace at the meeting of the ſaid juſtices for granting the ſaid licences, then that it ſhall and may be lawful for them to grant ſuch licence upon two ſufficient ſureties entering into ſuch recognizance, each in the penalty of ten pounds, for performance of the condition of the ſaid recognizance; which ſaid recognizance, with the condition thereof, fairly written or printed, ſhall forthwith, or at the next general or quarter ſeſſions of the peace at fartheſt, after granting ſuch licences, be ſent or returned to the clerks of the peace, or perſons acting as ſuch for every county, riding, city, liberty, or town corporate, in that part of Great Britain, called England, wherein ſuch licences ſhall be granted, under the hands of the juſtices of peace before whom ſuch recognizances were taken, to be by the ſaid clerks of the peace, or ſuch other perſon acting as ſuch, duly entered or filed amongſt the records of the ſeſſions of the peace; and that for every ſuch licence granted without taking ſuch recognizance, and for every ſuch recognizance taken, and not ſent or returned as aforeſaid, every juſtice of the peace ſigning ſuch licence ſhall forfeit 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Sect. 2. To prevent diſorders in alehouſes, no licence to keep the ſame ſhall be granted, to any perſon not licenſed the year preceding, unleſs ſuch perſon produce, at the general meeting of the juſtices in September, a certificate under the hands of their parſon, vicar, or curate, and the major part of the churchwardens and overſeers, or elſe of three or four reputable and ſubſtantial houſholders and inhabitants of the pariſh or place where ſuch alehouſe is to be; ſetting forth, that ſuch perſon is of good fame and of ſober life and converſation; and it ſhall be mentioned, in ſuch licence, that ſuch certificate was produced, otherwiſe ſuch licence ſhall be null and void.

Sect. 3. If any perſon licenſed ſhall die or remove from an alehouſe, it ſhall be lawful for the perſon ſucceeding to ſuch houſe, to keep on the ſaid alehouſe during the reſidue of the term of ſuch licence, on condition that within thirty days after ſuch death or removal, ſuch perſon obtain ſuch certificate as aforeſaid, to be ſigned by ſome neighbouring juſtice, in order to its being produced at the next general meeting in September; and if ſuch certificate be not ſo obtained and ſigned within the ſaid thirty days, then, immediately from and after the expiration thereof, ſuch licence ſhall be null and void; and no licence ſhall intitle any perſon to keep an alehouſe in any other place than that in which it was firſt kept by virtue of ſuch licence, and ſuch licence, with regard to all other places, ſhall be null and void.

Sect. 4. No licence ſhall be granted but on the firſt day of September yearly, or within twenty days after; and that ſuch licence ſhall be made for one year only, and to commence on the twenty-ninth day of the ſaid September; and that the day and place for granting ſuch licence ſhall be appointed by two or more juſtices acting for the diviſion, by warrant under their hands and ſeals, at leaſt ten days before ſuch meeting, directed to the high conſtable, or high conſtables, of the ſaid diviſion; requiring him or them to order his or their reſpective petty conſtables or other peace officers, to give notice to the ſeveral innkeepers and alehouſe-keepers within their reſpective conſtablewicks, of the day and place of ſuch meeting; and all licences hereafter granted at any other time or place, ſhall be null and void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever.

Sect. 5. The clerks of the peace ſhall keep a regiſter or calendar of all recognizances ſo ſent or returned, and ſhall deliver, or cauſe to be delivered to the juſtices of the peace at their general meetings in September every year, for granting licences in each diviſion or place, a true copy of ſuch regiſter or calendar; and that for every recognizance there ſhall be paid, by the clerk or clerks of the juſtices taking ſuch recognizances, to the ſaid clerks of the peace, as their fee for filing or recording the ſaid recognizance, and for making and delivering copies of the ſaid regiſter or calendar thereof, the ſum of one ſhilling, and no more; which ſhall be paid to the clerks of the ſaid juſtices by the perſons licenſed, over and above the fees payable to the ſaid juſtices clerks.

Sect. 6. The ſaid forfeitures for granting licences, without taking recognizances, ſhall and may be ſued for, and recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his Majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter, for the uſe of the perſon or perſons who ſhall ſue or proſecute for the ſame, together with coſts of ſuit; wherein no eſſoin, or wager of law, or more than one imparlance ſhall be allowed.

Sect. 7. Any juſtice of the peace of any county, &c. wherein ſuch licence ſhall be granted, upon complaint or information that ſuch licenſed perſon hath done or committed, any act, offence, or miſdemeanor, whereby in the judgment of the ſame juſtice ſuch recognizance may be forfeited, or the condition thereof broken, may by ſummons under hand and ſeal, require ſuch perſon ſo complained of or informed againſt, to appear at the next general or quarter ſeſſion of the peace for the ſaid county, &c. then and there to anſwer to the matter of ſuch complaint or information; and alſo may bind the perſon or perſons who ſhall make ſuch complaint or information, or any other perſon or perſons, in a recognizance to appear at ſuch general or quarter ſeſſion, and give evidence againſt ſuch perſon ſo complained of or informed againſt; and the juſtices of the peace, in their general or quarter ſeſſions, ſhall have power to direct the jury which ſhall attend at ſuch ſeſſions for the trial of traverſes, or ſome other jury of twelve honeſt and ſubſtantial men, to be then and there impanelled by the ſheriff without fee or reward, to enquire of the miſdemeanor charged in the ſaid complaint or information; and if ſuch jury ſhall find that the perſon ſo complained of or informed againſt, hath done any act whereby the condition of his recognizance is broken, ſuch act being ſpecified in ſuch complaint or information, it ſhall and may be lawful for the court, at ſuch general or quarter ſeſſions, to adjudge ſuch perſon guilty of the breach of ſuch recognizance; which verdict and adjudication ſhall be final to all intents and purpoſes; and thereupon the ſaid juſtices ſhall order the recognizance entered into by ſuch offender to be eſtreated into the Exchequer, to be levied to his Majeſty's uſe; and that the ſaid perſon, the condition of whoſe recognizance ſhall be adjudged to be broken and forfeited, ſhall, from and after ſuch adjudication, be utterly diſabled to ſell any ale, beer, cyder, perry, ſpirituous liquors, or ſtrong waters, for the ſpace of three years; and any licence or licences, granted or to be granted to ſuch perſon during ſuch term, ſhall be void and of no effect.

Sect. 8. Provided, that the ſaid juſtices may, at the requeſt of the proſecutor, or party ſo complained of or informed againſt, or either of his or her ſureties, if they ſhall ſee juſt, adjourn the hearing and trial of the ſaid complaint or information, to the then next general or quarter ſeſſions of the peace, where the ſame ſhall be finally determined.

Sect. 13. And every conviction of any offender for ſelling ale, beer, or other liquors, without ſuch licence, or after being diſabled to ſell as aforeſaid, ſhall be certified by the juſtice of peace making the ſame, to the next general or quarter ſeſſion of the peace, to be filed or entered amongſt the records of the ſaid ſeſſion; and that ſuch conviction ſhall and may be drawn up and certified in the following form of words, as the caſe ſhall happen, or in any other form of words to the ſame effect, mutatis mutandis, that is to ſay, Middleſex.

Middlesex. A. B. is convicted on his or her own confession (or on the oath of ——) of having sold ale, beer, or other liquors, in the parish of —— in this county, on the —— day of —— without being licensed thereto, according to law (or, after being disabled to sell, as the case may be). Given under my hand and seal this —— day of ——

And there shall be added, that the same is the first, second, or third conviction; which said conviction, in the same or the like form of words, shall be good and effectual in law to all intents and purposes, and shall not be quashed, set aside, or adjudged void or insufficient for want of any other form or words whatsoever.

Sect. 14. Provided always, that such offender who shall be punished by virtue of this act, shall not be punished again for the same offence by any former act; and that such offender who shall be punished by virtue of any former act, shall not be punished again for the same offence by virtue of this present act, or any thing herein contained.

Sect. 15. Provided, that this act, or any thing herein contained, shall not in any wise be prejudicial to the privilege of licensing taverns and other publick houses, claimed by the two Universities of that part of Great Britain called England, or either of them, nor to the chancellor, masters and scholars, or any officers of the same, or their successors, but that they may use and enjoy such privilege, as they have heretofore lawfully used and enjoyed; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sect. 16. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to alter the time or times of granting licences for keeping of common inns or alehouses, or to oblige persons, not licensed the year preceding, to produce certificates, in any city or town corporate.

Sect. 17. Provided, that any person shall be deemed a competent witness, and be admitted to give evidence upon any information or complaint for any offence committed against this act; notwithstanding such person be an inhabitant of, or charged or liable to be charged to the payment of any rates or assessments for the relief of the poor of any parish or place, where such offence shall be committed.

By stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 13. sect. 12. No justice of the peace, being a common brewer of ale or beer, innkeeper, or distiller, or other seller of or dealer in ale, or any kind of spirituous liquors, or interested in any of the said trades or businesses, or being a victualler or malster, shall during such time as he shall be such common brewer, innkeeper, &c. or interested in any of the said trades or businesses, be capable, or have any power to grant any licence or licences to any person or persons whatsoever, for selling ale, beer, or any other liquors by retail; and in case any such justice or justices shall grant any such licence, the same shall be null and void.

By the statutes 1 Ann. stat. 2. c. 22. sect. 6. and 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. sect. 56. All mayors, town-clerks, and other persons whom it may concern, shall make out ale-licences duly stamped, before the recognizance be taken, on pain of 10*l.* half to the king, and half to the prosecutor, with costs.

This stamp duty by stat. 9 Ann. c. 23. is one shilling; and by stat. 29 Geo. 2. sect. 1. every licence is charged with a further duty or stamp of 20*s.* And by last mentioned act, sect. 20. If any person shall write any licence without such stamp, he shall forfeit 10*l.* with costs, to be recovered as stamp penalties; and the licence shall not be available till the duty shall be paid, and also a penalty of 5*l.*

By statutes 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. sect. 8. and 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. sect. 9. No person shall retail any distilled spirituous liquors, without a licence from the officer of excise taken out ten days before, for which he shall pay 40*s.* yearly. And by statutes 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. sect. 11. and 29 Geo. 2. c. 12. sect. 22. Such persons shall be first licensed to sell ale or spirituous liquors by two or more justices of the peace. And by statutes 9 Geo. 2. c. 23. sect. 14. and 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. sect. 28, 29. The justice's clerk shall have 2*s.* 6*d.* and no more for such licence.

Stat. 29 Geo. 2. c. 12. sect. 23. If any person so licensed to sell ale, beer, or other exciseable liquors, shall die or remove from the alehouse or other place wherein such ale, beer, or other liquors, shall by virtue of such licence, be sold, it shall and may be lawful for the executors, administrators, and assigns of such person so dying or removing, who shall be possessed of such house or place, or the occupier thereof, to sell ale, beer, or other liquors therein, during the residue of the term for which such licence shall have been granted to the person so dying or removing, without any certificate from any justice of the peace, or any new licence to be had or obtained in that behalf, notwithstanding 26 Geo. 2.

Sect. 24. In case any alehouse shall be empty or unoccupied after the general day appointed for licensing (the occupier whereof was duly licensed the year preceding) it shall be lawful for any two justices of peace, at a petty sessions, to grant a licence to any new tenant or occupier, to open such house as an alehouse, and to sell ale there, till the next general licensing day, so as the said licence be stamped as herein directed.

Sect. 26. Every person who shall retail ale, beer, or other liquors, in any prison or house of correction, or workhouse to be appointed for the reception of poor persons, shall be deemed a keeper of a common alehouse or tipling-house, unless he or she shall obtain from the justices of the peace, according to due course of law, a licence to sell such beer, ale, or other exciseable liquor.

3. Penalties on persons suffering tipling.

Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 9. sect. 2. If any inn-keeper, victualler, or alehouse-keeper, permit any person dwelling in any city, town corporate, market town, village or hamlet, where such inn, alehouse or tipling-house is, to remain drinking or tipling in the said inn, victualling-house, tipling-house or alehouse; other than such as shall be invited by any traveller, and shall accompany him only during his abode there; and other than labouring and handicraftmen in cities and towns corporate, and market towns, upon the usual working days for one hour at dinner-time, to take their diet in an alehouse; and other than labourers and workmen, which for the following of their work for the day, or by the great, in any city, &c. shall for the time of their continuing in work there, lodge or victual in any inn, &c. other than for urgent occasions, to be allowed by two justices of peace: Every such inn-keeper, victualler, &c. shall for every offence forfeit ten shillings to the use of the poor of the parish; the same offence being viewed by any mayor, bailiff, or justice of peace, within their several limits, or proved by the oath of two witnesses, to be taken before any mayor, bailiff, or other head officer, or justice of peace.

Sect. 3. The said penalties to be levied by the constable or churchwardens of the parish by way of distress; and for default of satisfaction within six days, the same to be appraised and sold, and the surplusage to be delivered to the party: And for want of sufficient distress, the party offending to be by the mayor, bailiff, &c. committed to the common goal until the penalty be paid.

Sect. 4. If the constables or churchwardens do not levy the penalties, or in default of distress to certify the same default of distress, by the space of twenty days, to the mayor, bailiff, &c. within whose jurisdiction the offence is committed; every person so offending shall forfeit forty shillings, to the use of the poor of the parish; to be levied by distress, by warrant from any one justice, to be detained for six days; within which time, if payment be not made, the goods to be presently appraised and sold, and the surplusage delivered to the party; and for want of distress, the constables or churchwardens offending, to be by the mayor, bailiff, &c. committed to the common goal until the penalty be paid: For all which penalties levied by the constables or churchwardens, the said constables and churchwardens shall be accountable to their suc-ceſſors, and other the pariſhioners, as they uſually be in other church reckonings. And for all forfeitures, by reaſon of any neglect of the conſtables or churchwardens, thoſe ſhall be accountable, who by force of any warrant or precept do levy the ſame, or upon the enlargement of perſons committed do receive the ſame.

4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 5. The ſaid offence ſhall be inquired of and preſented before the juſtices of aſſiſe in their circuit, juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions, and before the mayors, bailiffs, or other head officers of every city or town corporate, who have power to enquire of treſpaſſes, &c. and in every court leet; and due proceeding ſhall be againſt the offenders, as in like caſes.

Sect. 7. All conſtables, churchwardens, headboroughs, tithingmen, aleconners, and ſidemen, ſhall in their oaths incident to their offices, be charged to preſent the ſaid offence contrary to this ſtatute.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. ſect. 4. If any alehouſe-keeper ſhall be convicted of the ſaid offence, he ſhall for three years be diſabled to keep any alehouſe.

4. Penalties on perſons guilty of tipling and drunkenneſs.

By the ſtatutes 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 4. 1 Jac. 1. . 9. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. 1 Car. 1. c. 4. it is enacted that, if any perſon ſhall continue drinking or tipling, in any inn, victualling houſe, or alehouſe, or any tavern, keeping an inn or victualling-houſe; he ſhall on conviction thereof before the mayor or a juſtice of the peace, on view, confeſſion, or oath of one witneſs, forfeit for every offence 3*s.* 4*d.* to be paid within one week next after the conviction, to the churchwardens, who ſhall be accountable for the ſame to the uſe of the poor: And if he ſhall refuſe or neglect to pay the ſame, it ſhall be levied by diſtreſs: And if he be not able to pay the forfeiture, then the mayor, juſtice, or court where the conviction ſhall be, may puniſh the offender, by ſetting him in the ſtocks for every offence by the ſpace of four hours.

By 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 5. the ſaid offence may alſo be inquired of and preſented, before juſtices of aſſize, juſtices of the peace in ſeſſions, mayors, and in the leet; and proceeding ſhall be had thereupon for the conviction, as upon indictment or preſentment.

And by the laſt mentioned ſtatute, ſect. 11. the offender is to be preſented, indicted, or convicted in ſix months.

And all conſtables, churchwardens, aleconners, and ſidemen, ſhall in their ſeveral oaths incident to their offices, be charged to preſent the ſaid offence. 2 Jac. 1. c. 7. ſect. 5.

And if any alehouſe-keeper ſhall be convicted of the ſaid offence, he ſhall moreover for the ſpace of three years be diſabled to keep any ſuch alehouſe. 7 Jac. 1. c. 10. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7.

Drunkenneſs excuſeth no crime; but he who is guilty of any crime whatever, through his voluntary drunkenneſs, ſhall be puniſhed for it as much as if he had been ſober. 1 Hawk. 2.

If any offend their brethren by drunkenneſs, the churchwardens and ſidemen ſhall preſent the ſame to the ordinary, that they may be puniſhed by the ſeverity of the laws, according to their deſerts; and ſuch notorious offenders ſhall not be admitted to the holy communion, till they be reformed. Canon 109.

And all conſtables, churchwardens, aleconners, and ſidemen, ſhall be ſworn to preſent the offence of drunkenneſs. 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 7.

By the ſtatutes 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 2. and 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. ſect. 1, 3. it is enacted, that every perſon who ſhall be drunk, and thereof ſhall be convicted before one juſtice, or mayor, on view, confeſſion, or oath of one witneſs, ſhall forfeit for the firſt offence 5*s.* to be paid within one week after conviction to the churchwardens, who ſhall be accountable for the ſame to the uſe of the poor; and if he ſhall refuſe or neglect to pay the ſame as aforeſaid, it ſhall be levied by diſtreſs, and if the offender be not able to pay the ſaid ſum of 5*s.* he ſhall be committed to the ſtocks, there to remain by the ſpace of ſix hours.

And if any conſtable, or other inferior officer to whom that ſhall be given in charge by the precept of any mayor or juſtice, do neglect the due correction of the offender, or the due levying of the penalties where diſtreſs may be had; every perſon ſo offending ſhall forfeit 10*s.* to be levied by diſtreſs, by any other perſon ſo having warrant from any mayor, juſtice or court, where any ſuch conviction ſhall be, to be paid to the churchwardens, who ſhall account for the ſame, to the uſe of the poor where the offence ſhall be committed. 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 3.

And if any perſon once convicted of drunkenneſs, ſhall after that be again convicted of the like offence, he ſhall be bounden with two ſureties in a recognizance of 10*l.* with condition to be from thenceforth of good behaviour. 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 6. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. ſect. 3.

The ſaid offence may alſo be inquired of and preſented before juſtices of aſſize, juſtices of the peace in their ſeſſions, mayor, and in the leet; and thereupon proceſs ſhall be had for the conviction, as upon indictment or preſentment. But the offender ſhall be preſented, indicted or convicted in ſix months after the offence. 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 5. 11.

But when the offender hath been once puniſhed, by any the ways before mentioned, he ſhall not be puniſhed again by any other ways or means. 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 9.

If any alehouſe-keeper ſhall be convicted of being drunk; he ſhall, beſides the penalties abovementioned, be utterly diſabled to keep any ſuch alehouſe, for the ſpace of three years next enſuing the conviction. 7 Jac. 1. c. 10. 1 Car. 1. c. 4.

Ale-ſilver, A rent or tribute annually paid to the Lord Mayor of London, by thoſe that ſell ale within the liberty of the city. Antiq. Purvey. 183. Cowel.

Aleſtake, A may-pole called aleſtake, becauſe the country people drew much ale there: But it is not the common may-pole, but rather a long ſtake drove into the ground, with a ſign on it that ale was to be ſold there. Cowel.

Ale-taſter, Is an officer appointed in every court-leet, ſworn to look to the aſſize and goodneſs of ale and beer, &c. within the precincts of the lordſhip. Kitch. 46. Alfetum, A cauldron or furnace: Sax. alfæth, compounded (according to Du Freſne) from ælan, or onælan, accendere; and fæt, vas; quaſi vas calefactionis. But more likely from æle, cereviſia, and fæt, as we ſtill ſay, the ale-fat, or ale-vat, or brewing veſſel. —— Et ſi aquæ judicium ſit, calefiat, donec excitetur ad bullitum, et ſit alfetum ferreum, vel æneum, vel plumbeum. The alfret was a cauldron in which boiling water was put for the criminal to dip his hand in up to the elbow, and there hold it for ſome time; ſays Du Freſne in verbo alfretum. Leges Athelſtani Regis apud Brompt. cap. 19. Cowel.

Alias, A ſecond or further writ, iſſued from the courts at Weſtminſter, after a capias, &c. ſued out without effect. Pract. Attor. Jacob.

Alien, (Alienare) Is derived from the French word aliener, and ſignifies as much as to transfer the property of any thing to another. To alien in mortmain, is to make over lands or tenements to a religious houſe or other body politick. Staund. Prær. Reg. 48. See Mortmain. To alien in fee, is to ſell the fee-ſimple of any land or tenement, or of any incorporeal right. Stat. Weſt. 2. c. 25. ann. 13 Ed. 1. Cowel.

Alien, Is one born out of the ligeance of the King. Lit. ſect. 198. 7 Co. 16. a. Calvin's caſe.

Alien, alius, alienus, alienigena, ſignifies one born in a ſtrange country: It is uſually taken for the contrary to a denizen, or natural ſubject; that is, one born in a ſtrange country, and never here enfranchiſed. Bro. Denizen 4. Yet a man born out of the land, ſo it be within the limits of the King's obedience, beyond the ſeas, or of Engliſh liſh parents out of the King's obedience, is not accounted an alien, but a ſubject. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. Alſo if one born out of the King's allegiance, come and dwell in England, his children begotten here, are not aliens, but denizens. 7 Co. Rep. Calvin's caſe.

An alien is one born in a ſtrange country and different ſociety, to which he is preſumed to have a natural and neceſſary allegiance; and therefore the policy of our conſtitution has eſtabliſhed ſeveral laws relating to ſuch a one; the reaſons whereof are, that every man is preſumed to bear faith and love to that prince and country where firſt he received protection during his infancy; and that one prince might not ſettle ſpies in another's country; but chiefly that the rents and revenues of the country might not be drawn to the ſubjects of another. 1 New Abr. 76. 7 Co. 18. 1 Vent. 427. Molloy 363.

Some have thought that the laws againſt aliens were introduced in the time of Hen. 2. when a law was made at the parliament of Wallingford, for the expulſion of ſtrangers, in order to draw away the Flemings and Picards, introduced into the kingdom by the wars of King Stephen. Daniel 67. Others have thought that the original of this law was more ancient; and that it is an original branch of the feudal law; for by that law no man can purchaſe any lands but he muſt be obliged to do fealty to the lords of whom the lands are holden; ſo that an alien, that owed a previous faith to another prince, could not take an oath of fidelity in another ſovereign's dominions. Spelm. tit. Legeant' 368. Cuſtumer, cap. 43. We find it uſed among the Romans, and only the Cives Romani were eſteemed freemen among them. Afterwards, when their territories increaſed, all the Italians were made free, under the name of Latines, only they had not the privilege of wearing gold rings, which was altered by Juſtinian; and as the empire increaſed, ſo all born within the pale of the empire were citizens, in orbe Romano qui ſunt ex conſtitutione imperatoris Antonini cives Romani effecti ſunt. Dig. lib. 1. tit. 5. f. 16.

Lord chief juſtice Hale ſays, that the law of England rather contracts that extends the diſability of aliens, becauſe the ſhutting out of aliens tends to the loſs of the people, which laborioufly employed are the true riches of any country. 1 Vent. 427.

Under this head is conſidered,

1. Who are aliens by the Common law, or by Statute; and who not.
2. Of naturalization and denization.
3. What acts aliens may do; what not.
4. Of pleading alienage.

1. Who are aliens by the Common law, or by Statute; and who not.

All thoſe are natural born ſubjects, whoſe parents, at the time of their birth, were under the actual obedience of our King, and whoſe place of birth was within his dominions. 7 Co. 18. a.

In aſſiſe for certain tenements in Shoreditch; the defendants pleaded in bar, that the plaintiff, Robert Calvin, was an alien, born on the 5th day of November, anno 3 Jac. at Edinburgh in Scotland, ac infra ligeantiam domini regis regni ſui Scotiæ, ac extra ligeantiam regni ſui Angliæ; and upon demurrer to this plea, the queſtion was, whether the plaintiff born in Scotland, ſince the crown of England deſcended to King James, was an alien born, and ſo diſabled to bring an action real for lands here; and adjudged, that he was not an alien. 7 Rep. Calvin's caſe.

A bill was exhibited in the Star Chamber againſt William Courteen and 160 Dutchmen, for buying and tranſporting ſeveral ſums of money, who pleaded the general pardon 7 Jac. the queſtion was, whether thoſe who were neither naturalized, nor made denizens, were capable of the pardon? The chief juſtice Hobart held, that the Dutch living here under the King's protection, and being alien amies, were truly under the King's ſubjection, and therefore were comprehended under theſe words in the preamble of the act, of loving and obedient ſubjects, but they could not properly be called natural ſubjects; and if ſuch alien amies commit treaſon, the indictment ſhall be, that it was done contra dominum regem, but not contra naturalem dominum; and it ſhall conclude contra ligeantiæ ſuæ debitum. Hob. 271.

An Engliſh merchant died in Poland, leaving his wife with child, who was an alien; this child was adjudged a ſubject born; for in this caſe partus non ſequitur ventrem; but the child ſhall be of the condition of the father. Cro. Car. 437.

Information for not paying the cuſtom for linen cloth; the caſe was, the defendants were born in this realm, their father was an alien, but their mother was born here; and the queſtion was, whether they ſhould pay cuſtom as aliens, or not? For that the attorney general affirmed, that it had been lately held in the Exchequer, that the iſſue of aliens for the firſt generation, being merchants, ſhould pay alien duties; but in this caſe the mother was an Engliſhwoman, ſo that the defendants were not the iſſue of aliens. Hard. 335.

If one of the King's ambaſſadors in a foreign country, hath iſſue there by his wife, being an Engliſhwoman, by the Common law they are natural ſubjects. 7 Co. 18. a.

If the King of England makes a new conqueſt, the perſons there born are his ſubjects; but if it be retaken from him again, the perſons there born afterwards are aliens. Dyer 224. Vaugh. 281, 282.

One born in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, or any of the King's plantations, is a natural ſubject of England, becauſe his natural allegiance is due to the King of England at his birth; and that faith and allegiance is every where due within the King's dominions. Vaugh. 279, 301. 7 Co. 1 to 28.

The antenati, or thoſe born in Scotland before the deſcent of the Engliſh crown to King James 1. are aliens; for the uniting the kingdoms by a ſubſequent deſcent, cannot make them ſubjects of that crown to which they were born aliens; but the poſtnati, or ſuch as were born after, are not aliens; for being born within the allegiance, and under the protection of the King of England, they are his natural ſubjects, and not aliens. 7 Co. 1 to 28.

If aliens come as enemies into the realm, and poſſeſs themſeves of a town or fort, and one of them has iſſue born here, this iſſue is an alien; for it is not cœlum nor ſolum that makes a ſubject, but the being born within the allegiance, and under the protection of the King. 7 Co. 18. a.

Thoſe born on the Engliſh ſeas are not aliens. Molloy 370.

If an alien has iſſue by an Engliſhwoman out of the King's ligeance, the iſſue ſhall be alien, tho' ſhe is a natural ſubject; for ſhe is ſub poteſtate viri. 1 Vent. 422.

The children of the King's ambaſſadors, born of Engliſh parents in a place out of the King's ligeance, are not aliens by the Common law. 7 Co. 18. a. Calvin's caſe.

By ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. de natis ultra mare, it is declared, that "the King's children, wherever born, ought to inherit; and that all children inheritors, which from henceforth ſhall be born without the ligeance of the King, whoſe fathers and mothers, at the time of their birth be and ſhall be of the faith and allegiance of the King of England, ſhall have and enjoy the ſame benefits and advantages to have and bear the inheritance within the ſame ligeance as other inheritors aforeſaid, in time to come, ſo always that the mothers of ſuch children do paſs the ſea by the licence and wills of their huſbands."

If an Engliſh merchant goes beyond ſea, and takes an alien wife, the iſſue ſhall inherit him; ſo it is if an Engliſhwoman goes beyond ſea and takes an alien huſband, the children there born ſhall inherit her; for though the ſtatute be in the conjunctive, yet it hath been conſtrued in the diſjunctive to hinder this diſability; and the word and being taken inſtead of or, as ſometimes it is, it being not reaſonable that the child ſhould not inherit the parent that is of ability, for the defect of the other that is not. Cro. Car. 601, 602. Lit. Rep. 22, 24. S. C. 1 Sid. 198.

S. C.

S. C. cited; but it was held that if a baron and feme Engliſh, go beyond ſea without licence, or ſtay there beyond the time limited by the licence, and have iſſue, that ſuch iſſue is an alien and not inheritable. Cro. Eliz. 3. But quære, and ſee Lit. Rep. 27. and Bro. tit. Denizen 6.

Huſband and wife dwelling in Calais, when it was taken by the French, fled into Flanders; where the wife was delivered of a ſon; the iſſue was adjudged a denizen, becauſe his parents were born in Calais, then reckoned part of the King's dominions, and becauſe he himſelf was begotten there, though to avoid the rage of enemies, born in another prince's territories. Dyer 224.

A baſtard was begot at Tournay by an Engliſhman of an Engliſh woman after the conqueſt thereof by H. 8. and Cataline Ch. J. Saunders Ch. B. Widdon and Brown J. and Dyer, held that this baſtard was a liege man, in like manner as iſſue born here in England between huſband and wife, and ſo capable of purchaſing and impleading here as a denizen, Tournay being at the time parcel of the dominions of England. Dyer 224.

If an alien comes into England, and has iſſue two ſons, thoſe two ſons are indigenæ, ſubjects born, becauſe born within the realm. Co. Lit. 8. a.

There are regularly (unleſs in ſpecial caſes) three incidents to a ſubject born. 1. That the parents be under the actual obedience of the king. 2dly, That the place of his birth be within the king's dominions. 3dly, The time of his birth chiefly to be conſidered; for he cannot be a ſubject born of this kingdom, that was born under the ligeance of the king of another kingdom; albeit afterwards the one kingdom deſcends to the king of the other kingdom. 7 Rep. 18. a.

And therefore all perſons born in Normandy, Gaſcoign, Guyen, Anjou, and Bretaigne, while they were under the actual obedience of the king of England, were inheritable within this realm as well as Engliſhmen, becauſe they were under one ligeance, due to one ſovereign; and therefore perſons born in the iſles of Guernſey and Jerſey, parcel of the dukedom of Normandy, tho' no parcel of the realm of England, but ſeveral dominions enjoy'd by ſeveral titles, and govern'd by ſeveral laws, are inheritable to lands within the kingdom of England. 7 Rep. 20. b. 21. a. —— But perſons born in other parts of Normandy, &c. now out of the actual poſſeſſion of the kings of England, are not for that reaſon ſubjects to the kings of England. 7 Rep. 18. a.

A merchant trading to Poland married an alien, and died, leaving her big with child: It was held, that the father, being an Engliſh merchant, and living abroad for merchandize, the after-born child is born a denizen, and ſhall be heir to him; for as Berkley J. ſaid, She is ſub poteſtate viri, & quaſi under the allegiance of our king. And per Bramſton, tho' the Civil law is that partus ſequitur ventrem, yet our law is otherwiſe, and the child ſhall be of the father's condition, and he being an Engliſh merchant, and reſiding there for merchandize, his children ſhall by the common law, or rather, as Berkley ſaid, by the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. be accounted the king's lieges, as their father was. And another caſe being cited to have been adjudged 2 Car. accordingly, judgment was given for the plaintiff the after-born child. Cro. Car. 601.

So were ſuch merchant had ſeveral children born in Poland, of a Poliſh woman, and deviſed his lands in England to ſuch children; and it being demanded of all the juſtices of England at Serjeants Inn, as Yelverton J. ſaid, they made no ſcruple any of them, but that the iſſue ſhould inherit, and were not aliens, becauſe the father went with licence, being a merchant, and in our law partus ſequitur patrem; and alſo there is blood between him and his iſſue, and he communicates nature to them; and the judges took it that the words of the 25 E. 3. de natis ultra mare, whoſe fathers and mothers be, or ſhall be of the allegiance of the king, ſhall be taken diſtributively and not copulatively, fathers or mothers. But the reporter adds a nota, that no ſuch opinion was delivered by ſome of the juſtices as mentioned by Yelverton J. Litt. Rep. 28, 29.

By the 7 Ann. it is enacted, that "the children of all natural-born ſubjects, born out of the ligeance of her majeſty, her heirs and ſucceſſors, ſhall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be natural-born ſubjects of this kingdom, to all intents, conſtructions, and purpoſes whatſoever."

By the ſtat. 4 Geo. 2. the above clauſe is confirmed with the following proviſo, "that it ſhall not extend to any children, ſo as to make them natural-born ſubjects of Great Britain, whoſe father, at the time of the birth of ſuch children, reſpectively were or ſhall be attainted of high treaſon, by judgment, outlawry or otherwiſe, either in this kingdom or in Ireland, or whoſe fathers, at the time of the birth of ſuch children reſpectively, by any law or laws made in this kingdom, or in Ireland, were or ſhall be liable to the penalties of high treaſon or felony, in caſe of their returning into this kingdom or into Ireland, without the licence of his majeſty, his heirs or ſucceſſors, or any of his majeſty's royal predeceſſors, or whoſe fathers, at the time of the birth of ſuch children reſpectively, were or ſhall be in the actual ſervice of any foreign prince or ſtate, then in enmity with the crown of England; but that all ſuch children are, were and ſhall be and remain in the ſame ſtate, plight and condition, to all intents, conſtructions and purpoſes whatſoever, as they would have been in, if the ſaid act of the ſeventh year of her ſaid late majeſty's reign, or this preſent act had never been made; but out of this proviſo are excepted (other than the children of ſuch perſons who went out of Ireland in purſuance of the articles of Limerick) the child of every ſuch perſon before deſcribed, who at any time between the ſixteenth day of November 1708, and the twenty-fifth day of March 1731, hath come into Great Britain or Ireland, &c. and hath continued to reſide in any of thoſe places for the ſpace of two years, and during ſuch reſidence hath profeſſed the proteſtant religion; alſo every child, whoſe father came into Great Britain or Ireland, &c. and profeſſed the proteſtant religion and died there, between the times aforeſaid; alſo every child, whoſe father continued in the actual poſſeſſion, or receipt of the rents and profits of any lands, &c. for the ſpace of one whole year, at any time between the aforeſaid times, or hath bona fide, and for valuable conſideration, ſold, conveyed or ſettled any lands, &c. in Great Britain or Ireland; and any perſon claiming title thereto under ſuch ſale, &c. hath been or continued in the actual poſſeſſion or receipt of the rents and profits thereof, for the ſpace of ſix months, between the times aforeſaid, then, &c.

By the ſtat. 5 Geo. 1. it is enacted, "that if any manufacturer or artificer of or in wool, iron, ſteel, braſs, or any other metal, clockmaker, watchmaker, or any other artificer or manufacturer of Great Britain, ſhall at any time after the firſt day of May 1719, go into any country out of his majeſty's dominions, there to uſe or exerciſe, or teach any of the ſaid trades or manufactories to foreigners; or in caſe any of his majeſty's ſubjects now being, or who hereafter ſhall be in any ſuch foreign country out of his majeſty's dominions, as aforeſaid, and there uſing or exerciſing any of the ſaid trades or manufactories herein before mentioned, ſhall not return into this realm within ſix months next after warning ſhall be given to him by the ambaſſador, envoy, reſident, miniſter or conſul of the crown of Great Britain, in the country in which ſuch artificer ſhall be, or by any perſon authorized by ſuch ambaſſador, &c. or by one of his majeſty's ſecretaries of ſtate for the time being, and from thenceforth continually inhabit and dwell within this realm; then and in ſuch caſe every ſuch perſon ſhall be deemed an alien.

2. Of naturalization and denization.

Naturalization is an adoption of one to be intitled by birth to what an Engliſhman may claim; and where naturalization is, it takes effect from the birth of the party, but denization takes effect from the date of the patent. Arg. Cart. 187.

Naturalization is always by parliament, and perpetual; for if one be naturalized for a day, it is good for ever; per Mountague, Ch. J. Cro. Jac. 539.

Aliens denizens are those who are made so by letters patent; but aliens naturalized are so by act of parliament; the one will not make the heir inheritable to his ancestor, but the other will; as for instance, Cornelius Godfrey being an alien born, had issue his eldest son born in Flanders; afterwards the father was made denizen, and had issue his youngest son born in England, and died; then the eldest son was naturalized, and having made a lease for years to Dixon, rendring rent, he died without issue, and the younger brother brought an action of debt for the rent arrear; and adjudged that he might; for by the naturalization of the elder brother, he was capable to purchase, and by consequence to make a lease, and that his brother was inheritable to him; and so the action brought by him was good. Godb. 275.

An alien born may become a subject of England two ways, by denization and by naturalization; denization is by the King's letters patent, which receive him into the society as a new man, and make him capable to purchase, and to transmit land by descent; but it doth not make him inheritable to any other relation; for though the King by his charter may admit him into the society, yet it cannot alter the law, which denied him to inherit any relations; but if he be naturalized by act of parliament, then he in all things inherits like a natural-born-subject, because in an act of parliament every man's consent is involved. 1 Inst. 8. a. 129. a. Palm. 13. Cro. Jac. 539.

If a man take an alien to wife, and afterwards sell his land, and his wife be naturalized, she shall be endowed of the lands sold before her naturalization. Co. Lit. 33. a.

A man may be made a denizen in tail for life, years, or upon condition; also the King may make a particular denization, as if he grants to an alien quod in quibusdam curiis suis Angliæ audiatur ut Anglus, & quod non repellatur per illam exceptionem quod est alienigena. 2 Jones 12. Cro. Jac. 539. Co. Lit. 129. a.

It was taken for a ground, that no statute of naturalization shall be taken by equity, because it carries with it a prejudice to the subjects in general, by making others sharers with them, not only in the rules, but also in the trades of the kingdom, by which our subjects born are less capable of acquiring a livelihood; per three justices; and for this reason, and also for that hereby other subjects may be disinherited of their lands, Bridgman Ch. J. said, Naturalization (if it may be said of a parliament) carries in it somewhat of injustice; and the rather, because it is not agreeable to the policy of other states, as in France and elsewhere, where persons naturalized have not so great privileges as here. Sid. 197.

But one cannot be naturalized, either with limitation for years, life, or in tail, or upon condition, for it is against the absoluteness, purity, and indelibility of natural allegiance. Co. Lit. 129. a. 2 Rol. Rep. 95.

A. devised an house to his wife for life, remainder to B. (who was an alien) if he should be then a denizen, and capable to take, if not, then to the heirs of his body, and in default of such issue, remainder to the master and governors of the free school of St. Olaves. After the death of the wife, B. enter'd and enjoy'd the same many years, and sold the same to C.; the master and wardens brought an ejectment, supposing that B. was an alien, and died without issue; but to prove that he was a denizen, it was shewed, that in the deed and fine he called himself a freeman, and that the fine was with proclamations, and five years passed; and that as aliens are prohibited by statute from being of any trade, upon pain of forfeiture of their goods, he would not have incurred the penalty by using a trade here, without being first made a denizen. But per Williams J. a denizen cannot be made but by letters patent, or act of parliament, which cannot be sufficiently proved without matter of record. The court were all clear of opinion, that the plaintiff had good title, but the parties agreed, and no verdict given, but a juror withdrawn. 2 Bulst. 33.

Naturalizing in Ireland is of no effect as to England, for naturalization is but a fiction of law, and can have effect but upon those only consenting to that fiction; therefore it has the like effect as a man's birth hath, where the law-makers have power, but not where they have not. Naturalizing in Ireland gives the same effect in Ireland as being born there; so in Scotland as being born there; but not in England, which consents not to the fiction of Ireland or Scotland, nor to any but her own. Vaugh. 280.

He that is born within the King's ligeance, is called sometimes a denizen, quasi deins nee, viz. born within, and thereupon in latin is called indigena, the king's liegeman, for ligeus is ever taken for a natural-born subject; but many times in acts of parliament denizen is taken for alien born, that is infranchised or denizated by letters patent, whereby the King does grant unto him, Quod ille in omnibus tractetur, reputetur, habeatur, teneature, & gubernatur tanquam ligeus noster infra dictum regnum nostrum Angliæ oriundus, & non aliter, nec alio modo. But the king may make a particular denization, as he may grant to an alien, quod in quibusdam curiis suis Angliæ audiatur ut Anglus, & quod non repellatur per illam exceptionem, quod sit alienigena & natus in partibus transmarinis, to enable him to sue only. Co. Lit. 129. a.

Note, for law, that where an alien born comes into England, and brings his son with him who was born beyond sea, and is an alien as his father is, there the king by his letters patent cannot make the son heir to his father, nor to any other; for he cannot alter his law by his letters patent, nor otherwise but by parliament; for he cannot disinherit the right heir, nor disappoint the lord of his escheat. Bro. Deniz. pl. 9.

If an alien born has issue a son beyond sea, this son is an alien as the father is; and if he comes into England, and is made a denizen, and after has issue another son in England, and he purchases land, viz. the father; the second son shall inherit, and not the eldest. Bro. Discent, pl. 57.

If an alien be made a denizen, and the letters of denization have a proviso (usual in such charters) that the denizen shall do his liege homage, and that he shall be obedient, and observe the laws of this realm; this proviso is not any condition, for though he never doth his liege homage, nor be obedient to all the laws of this realm, yet this will not make the denization void; for if he doth not observe the laws, he shall forfeit the penalties appointed by them. 1 Roll. Abr. 195. Lane 58. S. C.

An alien had issue two sons, one of them purchased lands in fee, and died without issue, the other shall not be his heir, because there was no inheritable blood between the father and them; and where the son cannot be heir to the father, there one son cannot be heir to another; but if a man hath two sons, and is afterwards attainted, and then one of them purchaseth lands, and dieth without issue, in such case the other son shall be heir to his brother, because by the attainder the lineal blood was attainted, and not the blood collateral which was between the brothers. 4 Leon. 5. Palm. 19.

If an Englishman and an alien purchase lands jointly and the alien die, it was a question, whether the Englishman should have the whole by survivorship, because they were joint-tenants till office found; But this is denied by others; because, if the freehold should be in the alien till office found, then he might have an action of trespass, for a trespass done on the land; but 'tis plain an alien cannot maintain such an action. Dyer 283.

In ejectment, the case was, the testator devised an house to his wife for life, remainder to W. R. (who was an alien) if he should be then a denizen, and a person capable to take; if not, then to the heirs of his body, after the death of the wife; W. R. enter'd, and the remainder being limited over to the master and wardens of the free school of St. Olaves in Southwark; they enter'd and brought an action, supposing that W. R. was an alien, and having sold the estate, was now dead without issue. It was given in evidence for the defendant, that W. R. was a denizen, because he called himself so in the conveyance which he made of the house; besides, he exercised a trade, which by implication proves him to be a denizen; but adjudged,

S. C. cited; but it was held that if a baron and feme Engliſh, go beyond ſea without licence, or ſtay there beyond the time limited by the licence, and have iſſue, that ſuch iſſue is an alien and not inheritable. Cro. Eliz. 3. But quære, and ſee Lit. Rep. 27. and Bro. tit. Denizen 6.

Huſband and wife dwelling in Calais, when it was taken by the French, fled into Flanders, where the wife was delivered of a ſon; the iſſue was adjudged a denizen, becauſe his parents were born in Calais, then reckoned part of the King's dominions, and becauſe he himſelf was begotten there, though to avoid the rage of enemies, born in another prince's territories. Dyer 224.

A baſtard was begot at Tournay by an Engliſhman of an Engliſh woman after the conqueſt thereof by H. 8. and Cataline Ch. J. Saunders Ch. B. Widdon and Brown J. and Dyer, held that this baſtard was a liege man, in like manner as iſſue born here in England between huſband and wife, and ſo capable of purchaſing and impleading here as a denizen, Tournay being at the time parcel of the dominions of England. Dyer 224.

If an alien comes into England, and has iſſue two ſons, thoſe two ſons are indigenæ, ſubjects born, becauſe born within the realm. Co. Lit. 8. a.

There are regularly (unleſs in ſpecial caſes) three incidents to a ſubject born. 1. That the parents be under the actual obedience of the king. 2dly, That the place of his birth be within the king's dominions. 3dly, The time of his birth chiefly to be conſidered; for he cannot be a ſubject born of this kingdom, that was born under the ligeance of the king of another kingdom; albeit afterwards the one kingdom deſcends to the king of the other kingdom. 7 Rep. 18. a.

And therefore all perſons born in Normandy, Gaſcoign, Guyen, Anjou, and Bretaigne, while they were under the actual obedience of the king of England, were inheritable within this realm as well as Engliſhmen, becauſe they were under one ligeance, due to one ſovereign; and therefore perſons born in the iſles of Guernſey and Jerſey, parcel of the dukedom of Normandy, tho' no parcel of the realm of England, but ſeveral dominions enjoy'd by ſeveral titles, and govern'd by ſeveral laws, are inheritable to lands within the kingdom of England. 7 Rep. 20. b. 21. a. —— But perſons born in other parts of Normandy, &c. now out of the actual poſſeſſion of the kings of England, are not for that reaſon ſubjects to the kings of England. 7 Rep. 18. a.

A merchant trading to Poland married an alien, and died, leaving her big with child: It was held, that the father, being an Engliſh merchant, and living abroad for merchandize, the after-born child is born a denizen, and ſhall be heir to him; for as Berkley J. ſaid, She is ſub poteſtate viri, & quaſi under the allegiance of our king. And per Bramſton, tho' the Civil law is that partus ſequitur ventrem, yet our law is otherwiſe, and the child ſhall be of the father's condition, and he being an Engliſh merchant, and reſiding there for merchandize, his children ſhall by the common law, or rather, as Berkley ſaid, by the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. be accounted the king's lieges, as their father was. And another caſe being cited to have been adjudged 2 Car. accordingly, judgment was given for the plaintiff the after-born child. Cro. Car. 601.

So were ſuch merchant had ſeveral children born in Poland, of a Poliſh woman, and deviſed his lands in England to ſuch children; and it being demanded of all the juſtices of England at Serjeants Inn, as Yelverton J. ſaid, they made no ſcruple any of them, but that the iſſue ſhould inherit, and were not aliens, becauſe the father went with licence, being a merchant, and in our law partus ſequitur patrem; and alſo there is blood between him and his iſſue, and he communicates nature to them; and the judges took it that the words of the 25 E. 3. de natis ultra mare, whoſe fathers and mothers be, or ſhall be of the allegiance of the king, ſhall be taken diſtributively and not copulatively, fathers or mothers. But the reporter adds a nota, that no ſuch opinion was delivered by ſome of the juſtices as mentioned by Yelverton J. Litt. Rep. 28, 29.

By the 7 Ann. it is enacted, that "the children of all natural-born ſubjects, born out of the ligeance of her majeſty, her heirs and ſucceſſors, ſhall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be natural-born ſubjects of this kingdom, to all intents, conſtructions, and purpoſes whatſoever."

By the ſtat. 4 Geo. 2. the above clauſe is confirmed with the following proviſo, "that it ſhall not extend to any children, ſo as to make them natural-born ſubjects of Great Britain, whoſe father, at the time of the birth of ſuch children, reſpectively were or ſhall be attainted of high treaſon, by judgment, outlawry or otherwiſe, either in this kingdom or in Ireland, or whoſe fathers, at the time of the birth of ſuch children reſpectively, by any law or laws made in this kingdom, or in Ireland, were or ſhall be liable to the penalties of high treaſon or felony, in caſe of their returning into this kingdom or into Ireland, without the licence of his majeſty, his heirs or ſucceſſors, or any of his majeſty's royal predeceſſors, or whoſe fathers, at the time of the birth of ſuch children reſpectively, were or ſhall be in the actual ſervice of any foreign prince or ſtate, then in enmity with the crown of England; but that all ſuch children are, were and ſhall be and remain in the ſame ſtate, plight and condition, to all intents, conſtructions and purpoſes whatſoever, as they would have been in, if the ſaid act of the ſeventh year of her ſaid late majeſty's reign, or this preſent act had never been made; but out of this proviſo are excepted (other than the children of ſuch perſons who went out of Ireland in purſuance of the articles of Limerick) the child of every ſuch perſon before deſcribed, who at any time between the ſixteenth day of November 1708, and the twenty-fifth day of March 1731, hath come into Great Britain or Ireland, &c. and hath continued to reſide in any of thoſe places for the ſpace of two years, and during ſuch reſidence hath profeſſed the proteſtant religion; alſo every child, whoſe father came into Great Britain or Ireland, &c. and profeſſed the proteſtant religion and died there, between the times aforeſaid; alſo every child, whoſe father continued in the actual poſſeſſion, or receipt of the rents and profits of any lands, &c. for the ſpace of one whole year, at any time between the aforeſaid times, or hath bona fide, and for valuable conſideration, ſold, conveyed or ſettled any lands, &c. in Great Britain or Ireland; and any perſon claiming title thereto under ſuch ſale, &c. hath been or continued in the actual poſſeſſion or receipt of the rents and profits thereof, for the ſpace of ſix months, between the times aforeſaid, then, &c.

By the ſtat. 5 Geo. 1. it is enacted, "that if any manufacturer or artificer of or in wool, iron, ſteel, braſs, or any other metal, clockmaker, watchmaker, or any other artificer or manufacturer of Great Britain, ſhall at any time after the firſt day of May 1719, go into any country out of his majeſty's dominions, there to uſe or exerciſe, or teach any of the ſaid trades or manufactories to foreigners; or in caſe any of his majeſty's ſubjects now being, or who hereafter ſhall be in any ſuch foreign country out of his majeſty's dominions, as aforeſaid, and there uſing or exerciſing any of the ſaid trades or manufactories herein before mentioned, ſhall not return into this realm within ſix months next after warning ſhall be given to him by the ambaſſador, envoy, reſident, miniſter or conſul of the crown of Great Britain, in the country in which ſuch artificer ſhall be, or by any perſon authorized by ſuch ambaſſador, &c. or by one of his majeſty's ſecretaries of ſtate for the time being, and from thenceforth continually inhabit and dwell within this realm; then and in ſuch caſe every ſuch perſon ſhall be deemed an alien.

R.* was a denizen, because he called himself so in the conveyance which he made of the house; besides, he exercised a trade, which by implication proves him to be a denizen; but adjudged, that ſince a denizen cannot be made but by letters patent, or by act of parliament, the proof that he is ſo muſt be by matter of record; and the defendant having failed in ſuch proof judgment was given for the maſter and wardens of the ſchool. 2 Bulſt. 33.

By the 7 Ja. 1. cap. 2. it is enacted, "that no perſon or perſons, of what quality, condition, or place ſoever, being of the age of eighteen years or above, ſhall be naturalized or reſtored in blood, unleſs the ſaid perſon or perſons have received the ſacrament of the Lord's Supper within one month before any bill exhibited for the purpoſe; and alſo ſhall take the oath of ſupremacy and the oath of allegiance in the parliament houſe, before his or her bill be twice read; which oath the lord chancellor, or lord keeper, and the ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, have authority to adminiſter."

A denizen is not capable of nobility, nor to ſit in parliament; for that to have a power of making laws, 'tis neceſſary he ſhould be totally received into the ſociety, which he cannot be without the conſent of parliament. Molloy 382.

By the ſtat. 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 2. it is enacted, "that no perſon born out of theſe kingdoms, (although he be naturalized or made a denizen) except ſuch as are born of Engliſh parents, ſhall be capable to be of the privy council, or a member of either houſe of parliament, or to enjoy any office or place of truſt, either civil or military; or to have any grant of lands, tenements or hereditaments, from the crown to himſelf, or to any other or others in truſt for him."

But this ſtatute by the 1 Geo. 1. ſt. 2. c. 4. is explained, ſo as not to extend to diſable or incapacitate any perſon, who at or before his Majeſty's acceſſion to the crown was naturalized, to be of the privy council, or a member of either houſe of parliament, &c. and by this ſtatute it is enacted, that no perſon ſhall hereafter be naturalized, unleſs in the bill exhibited for that purpoſe there be a clauſe, or particular words inſerted, to declare that ſuch perſon ſhall not thereby be enabled to be of the privy council, or a member of either houſe of parliament; or to take any office or place of truſt either civil or military, or to have any grant of lands, tenements or hereditaments from the crown, to himſelf, or any other in truſt for him; and that no bill of naturalization ſhall hereafter be received in either houſe of parliament, unleſs ſuch clauſe or words be firſt inſerted or contained therein.

3. What acts aliens may do; and what not.

If an alien, chriſtian or infidel, purchaſe houſes, lands, tenements or hereditaments to him and his heirs, altho' he can have no heirs, he is of capacity to take a fee-ſimple but not to hold. For upon an office found, the King ſhall have it by his prerogative of whomſoever the land is holden. And ſo it is if the alien doth purchaſe land and die, the law doth caſt the freehold and inheritance upon the King. If an alien purchaſe any eſtate of freehold in houſes, lands, tenements or hereditaments, the King upon office found ſhall have them. If an alien be made denizen and purchaſe land, and die without iſſue, the lord of the fee ſhall have the eſcheat, and not the King. But as to a leaſe for years, there is a difference between a leaſe for years of a houſe for the habitation of a merchant ſtranger being an alien, whoſe King is in league with ours, and a leaſe for years of lands, meadows, paſtures, woods, and the like. For if he take a leaſe for years of lands, meadows, &c. upon office found the King ſhall have it. But of a houſe for habitation, he may take a leaſe for years as incident to commerce, for without an habitation he cannot merchandize or trade. But if he depart or relinquiſh the realm, the King ſhall have the leaſe. So it is if he die poſſeſſed thereof, neither his executors or adminiſtrators ſhall have it, but the King: For he had it only for habitation, as neceſſary to his trade or traffick, and not for the benefit of his executor or adminiſtrator. But if the alien be no merchant, then the King ſhall have the leaſe for years, tho' it were for his habitation, and ſo it is if he be an alien enemy. And all this was reſolved by the judges aſſembled together for that purpoſe, in the caſe of Sir James Croſs, Paſch. 29 of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Co. Lit. 2. b.

An alien cannot purchaſe or inherit any lands in England, and the reaſon is, becauſe every perſon is preſumed to have a natural and neceſſary allegiance to that ſociety that firſt protected and preſerved him, and therefore he cannot pay an allegiance to any other ſociety, unleſs he be afterwards received into it. Vaugh. 227, 291. 7 Co. 16. Dyer 2. pl. 8.

An alien ſhall take nothing by deſcent, curteſey, dower, or guardianſhip. 1 Vent. 417. Molloy 464. But he may take the eſtate though he is not capable of holding it; therefore if in tail, he may ſuffer a recovery and dock the remainders. Co. Lit. 2. b. 2 Rol. Rep. 321. Goldſb. 102. 4 Leon. 82. Bro. tit. Denizen and Alien. 17.

And as an alien cannot inherit himſelf, ſo he cannot be inherited; the grandfather born in England, the ſon an alien, the grandſon born in England, the grandſon ſhall not inherit the grandfather, becauſe he muſt then repreſent the father, who cannot be repreſented; but if the father be an alien, and two brothers born in England, they may inherit each other, becauſe the deſcent is immediate, and they don't take by repreſentation of the father. 1 Sid. 193, 198. 1 Vent. 413 to 429. Hard. 224. Co. Lit. 8. Cont.

If the eldeſt ſon be an alien, the younger brother born in England ſhall inherit the father; otherwiſe it were if the eldeſt ſon were attainted, becauſe the eldeſt ſon and all his deſcendants are before the younger brother, and the younger cannot inherit before that line is extinct; and it is a foreign preſumption, to ſuppoſe that any of that line ſhould come over and have children in England; but the perſon attainted is ſuppoſed to have all his children reſiding in the kingdom under the King's allegiance; therefore there is a line continuing before that of the younger brother. 1 Vent. 417. 1 Inſt. 8. a. 1 Sid. 195.

For the ſame reaſon, if an alien hath four ſons, the two eldeſt aliens, and the two younger naturalized, and one of the younger ſons purchaſe lands and dies, the eldeſt brother having iſſue born within the realm, the younger brother, and not the iſſue of the eldeſt, ſhall inherit. Hard. 224.

If an alien hath a ſon an alien, and afterwards is made a denizen, and hath a ſecond ſon, the ſecond ſon ſhall inherit though the eldeſt ſon be alive. Cro. Jac. 539.

In an action of debt brought by an adminiſtratrix; the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was an alien born in Gant, under the allegiance of the King of Spain, an enemy to the Queen: Upon demurrer to this plea, it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that the action being brought by her as adminiſtratrix, tho' ſhe was an alien, it was good, becauſe ſhe was not to recover in her own right, but in the right of another, and to his uſe; and it was a queſtion, whether the King of Spain could be called an enemy till war was proclaimed? Owen 45.

The Spaniſh ambaſſador exhibited his bill in Chancery againſt Sir Richard Bingley, to have a diſcovery of ſeveral goods, which he ſet forth, as belonging to the ſubjects of his maſter generally, without alledging any perſons certain; and upon a demurrer to this bill, it was referred by the chancellor to ſome of the judges; it was reſolved by them, that the ambaſſador, as procurator general of all the ſubjects of Spain, could not bring the bill, becauſe the King of Spain could not make a procurator general of all, or any of his ſubjects, without their conſent; 'tis true, he may appoint an ambaſſador, who is a publick miniſter for the King and not for his ſubjects, otherwiſe than as it concerns the King and his miniſter to protect them; and therefore he may mediate, proſecute, and defend them at the council-table, which is in the nature of a court of ſtate. Therefore in this caſe, the chancellor ordered a bill and anſwer to be filed by conſent only, that examination of witneſſes might be taken, and then to determine the matter by way of arbitration, and not by a formal decree. Hob. 78.

Caſe, &c. by an alien, for words ſpoken by the defendant, (viz.) that he was a bankrupt: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff was an alien ſub ligeantia of another prince, and extra

extra ligeantiam domini regis; and tho' ſuch an alien may have an action here for his goods or merchandiſe, and may have an houſe for his habitation, yet he cannot maintain a perſonal action for defaming him; but adjudged, that he may; for merchants ſtrangers are enabled to trade here, and by conſequence they are entitled to all perſonal actions for the ſupport of their credit and trade, and other actions likewiſe, as aſſault and battery, for aſſaults done upon themſelves. 1 Bulſt. 134.

If an alien hath iſſue two ſons, A. born beyond ſeas, and B. born in England, and A. is naturalized, he ſhall inherit B. Palm. 3. 3 Cro. Jac. 539.

And now by the 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 6. it is enacted, "that all and every perſon or perſons, being the King's natural-born ſubject or ſubjects, within any of the King's realms or dominions, ſhall and may hereafter lawfully inherit and be inheritable, as heir or heirs to any honours, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, and make their pedigrees and titles by deſcent from any of their anceſtors, lineal or collateral, although the father and mother, or fathers and mothers, or other anceſtor of ſuch perſon or perſons, by, from, through or under whom he, ſhe or they ſhall or may make or derive their title or pedigree, were or was, or is or are, or ſhall be born out of the King's allegiance, and out of his majeſty's realms and dominions, as freely, fully and effectually to all intents and purpoſes, as if ſuch father or mother, or fathers or mothers, or other anceſtor or anceſtors, by, from, through or under whom he, ſhe or they ſhall or may make or derive their title or pedigree, had been naturalized or natural-born ſubjects." See ſtatute 25 Geo. 2. c. 39. for explaining ſome doubts upon this act.

If an alien purchaſes lands, the King ſhall have it upon office found, for ſince the freehold is in the alien, and he is tenant to the lord of whom the lands are holden, it cannot be deveſted out of him but by ſome notorious act, by which it may appear that the freehold is in another; but if an alien purchaſes lands and dies, then the freehold is in the King without office found, becauſe no man can take it as heir to the alien, therefore the freehold is caſt upon the King; but if an alien purchaſe, and afterwards is made a denizen, and then hath iſſue and dies, the iſſue ſhall inherit till office found, becauſe there is a perſon in being to take as heir to the denizen, upon whom the law caſts the freehold, which is not to be deveſted out of him without the ſolemnity of an office. Co. Lit. 2. 1 Leon. pl. 61.

If an alien and a ſubject purchaſe lands to them and their heirs, the ſurvivorſhip ſhall take place till office found, but the office found intitles the King and ſevers the jointenancy; for the freehold is in the alien by the ſolemnity of livery, 'till 'tis deveſted out of him by ſolemn office found; and every perſon is ſuppoſed a natural-born ſubject that is reſident in the kingdom, and owes a local allegiance to the King till the contrary be found by office. Cro. Eliz. 123. Dyer 283. pl. 31.

If an alien purchaſes a copyhold in fee in the name of J. S. in truſt for him and his heirs, though it be found that the copyhold was in truſt for the alien, and that J. S. had the legal eſtate, yet the King muſt ſue in Chancery to have the truſt executed for his benefit. 1 Roll. Abr. Allen 14. Style 20, 21, 41, 76.

An alien cannot purchaſe a leaſe for years of lands, but he may, if he be a merchant, take a leaſe of a houſe for his habitation for years only, and this is for the encouragement of commerce; for if an alien trade he muſt have an abode amongſt us, but if he depart the kingdom or die, it goes to the King, not to his executors or adminiſtrators; becauſe it was a perſonal privilege annexed to the alien, as a merchant, for the encouragement of commerce, and conſequently muſt expire with him, without going to his executors or adminiſtrators. Poph. 36 Co. Lit. 2. b. 1 Roll. Abr. 194.

But by the 32 H. 8. cap. 16. ſect. 13. it is enacted, "that all leaſes of any dwelling houſe or ſhop within this realm, or any the King's dominions, made to any ſtranger, artificer, or handicraftſman born out of the King's obeiſance, not being a denizen, ſhall be void and of no effect; and the perſon ſo taking ſuch leaſe forfeits 100*l.* and the perſon letting 100*l.* more; one moiety to the King, and the other to him that ſues for the ſame."

Upon this ſtatute the caſe was, an action of debt was brought upon an obligation, and upon oyer demanded of the condition it was recited, and it referred to indentures, which indentures were likewiſe recited in hæc verba; the indentures were upon a leaſe of a houſe in Weſtminſter, reſerving rents with covenants, &c. the defendant pleaded 32 Hen. 8. cap. 16. and that he was an alien, &c. and ſo would avoid the leaſe and the rent, and all the ſecurity; divers exceptions were taken to this plea. 1. He has not ſaid where he was an artificer; but this was over-ruled; for it is a perſonal quality, and ſhall follow the perſon and is univerſal. 2. The defendant ought to have ſet forth and pleaded the indenture, but per cur', Since the plaintiff has brought it into court, as muſt be intended, and ſet it forth, the defendant may plead upon it without ſetting of it forth again. 3. The plea is, that indentura prædicta vacua exiſtet, and this was likewiſe over-ruled; for the law is, that the indenture and bond make but one ſecurity, and if the covenant be releaſed before breach, the bond will ſignify nothing. 4. This appears to be a meſſuage or tenement, but he has not averred it to be a manſion-houſe or ſhop, according to the ſtatute; and upon this point the court at firſt were divided. Keyling held, that meſſuagium is manſum, et quod clare conſtat non debet verificari. Moreton: Though meſſuagium be a word of art, and may be applied to other things by a large ſenſe, as to a barn or chapel; yet in propriety it is a manſion-houſe, and ſhall be intended ſo. Twiſden and Wyndham, That it ought to have been averred; for he muſt bring himſelf preciſely within the ſtatute, eſpecially in ſuch a caſe as this, where he would avoid his own contract; but afterwards the defendant had judgment. 1 Saund. 1 to 10. 1 Sid. 308. S. C. 2 Keb. 102, 116. S. C. 2 Show. Rep. 135. S. C. cited, and agreed to be good law.

A ſpecial verdict found, that the plaintiff made a leaſe of a houſe to the defendant, who was found to be an alien artificer, and that this leaſe was made by indenture between the plaintiff and defendant, and that there was no other ſecurity or promiſe made by the defendant, and that the defendant entered and enjoyed ſo long, for which the plaintiff brought a quantum meruit; to which the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, and the matter being found ut ſupra, the court held, that an aſſumpſit would not lie. 1. Becauſe this would evade the ſtatute. 2. A promiſe in law never takes place where there is an actual agreement. 2 Show. Rep. 135.

Debt upon an obligation for performance of covenants in a leaſe of a houſe, &c. the defendant pleaded the ſtatute 32 Hen. 8. cap. 16. and ſets forth that he was a vintner, and alien artificer; and upon demurrer it was inſiſted upon for him, that a vintner is as much an artificer, and within the meaning of the ſtatute, as a mercer, draper, or grocer: Ch. Juſt. This ſtatute refers to another made 1 R. 3. c. 9. which prohibits alien artificers to exerciſe any handicraft in England, unleſs as ſervant to a ſubject ſkilful in the ſame art, upon pain of forfeiture of his goods; now the miſtery of a vintner chiefly conſiſts in mingling of wines, and that is not properly an art but a cheat; ſo the plaintiff had judgment. 3 Mod. 24.

If a woman alien, be ſhe friend or enemy, marry a ſubject, ſhe ſhall not be endowed, becauſe by the policy of the Common law, all aliens are diſabled from acquiring any freehold amongſt us; alſo dower is an eſtate created by act of law, and therefore the law, which nil fruſtra agit, ſhall not transfer an eſtate to one who cannot keep it, but muſt immediately, in reſpect of her legal diſability, give title to another; and there is a diverſity between ſuch acts of law and the acts of the party himſelf; as if an alien makes an actual purchaſe, &c. So aliens ſhall not be tenants by the courteſy, by the ſame reaſon. 7 Co. 25. Co. Lit. 31.

An alien friend may have perſonal actions but not real; an alien enemy ſhall have neither real, perſonal, nor mixt actions. The reaſon why an alien friend is allowed to maintain a perſonal action is, becauſe he would otherwiſe wiſe be incapacitated to merchandiſe, which may be as much to our prejudice as his; but as to the allowing of him to maintain real actions, there is no reaſon for it, becauſe there is no neceſſity that he ſhould ſettle amongſt us; an alien enemy is diſabled from the prejudice that may accrue to the King and kingdom, if he were allowed to maintain an action. Co. Lit. 129. b. 1 And. 25. Dyer 2. b.

A merchant ſtranger ſhall have an action for ſaying He is a bankrupt, for by law he may have perſonal actions, and theſe words tend to impair his credit in trade. Yelv. 198. 1 Bulſ. 134. S. C.

An alien friend, merchant, may upon a ſtatute extend lands, and upon office the King ſhall not have them, and upon ouſter he ſhall have an aſſize; for the main end and deſign of both the ſtatute-ſtaple and merchant, was to promote and encourage trade, by providing a ſure and ſpeedy remedy for merchant ſtrangers as well as natives, to recover their debts at the day aſſigned for payment. Dyer 2. b. in marg.

An alien friend may be an adminiſtrator, and ſhall have adminiſtration of leaſes, as well as perſonal things, becauſe he hath them in another's right, and not to his own uſe. Cro. Car. 8. 1 Vent. 417. S. C. cited.

But it has been long doubted, whether an alien enemy ſhould maintain an action as executor; for on the one hand it is ſaid, that by the policy of the law, alien enemies ſhall not be admitted to actions to recover effects which may be carried out of the kingdom, to weaken ourſelves and inrich the enemy; and therefore publick utility muſt be preferred to private convenience; but on the other hand it is ſaid, that theſe effects of the teſtator are not forfeited to the king by way of repriſal, becauſe they belong not to the alien enemy, for he is to recover them for others; and if the law allows ſuch alien enemies to poſſeſs the effects as well as an alien friend, it muſt allow them power to recover, ſince in that there is no difference, and by conſequence he muſt not be diſabled to ſue for them; if it were otherwiſe it would be a prejudice to the King's ſubjects, who could not recover their debts from the alien executor, by his not being able to get in the aſſets of the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 683. Molloy 870. Carter 49, 191. Skin. 370.

If an alien enemy comes here ſub ſalvo conductu, he may maintain an action. So if an alien may come hither in time of peace per licentiam domini regis, as the French proteſtants did, and lives here ſub protectione, and a war afterwards happens between the two nations, he may maintain an action, for ſuing is but a conſequential right of protection; and therefore an alien enemy, that is here in peace under protection, may ſue a bond; aliter of one commorant in his own country. 1 Salk. 46.

4. Of pleading alienage.

If one born in Jerſey, or elſewhere within the King's obedience, brings a real action, and the tenant pleads, that the demandant is an alien born under the obedience of the French King, and out of ligeance of, &c. the demandant may reply, that he was born at ſuch a place in England, within the King's allegiance, &c. and ſuch hath ever been the manner of pleading in ſuch caſe. Co. Lit. 161. 7 Co. 26. 6 Co.

In an aſſiſe tempore Jac. 1. the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was born apud E. infra regnum Scotiæ ac intra ligeantiam dicti domini regis regni ſui Scotiæ, ac extra ligeantiam dicti domini regis regni ſui Angliæ; and this was held no good plea, becauſe it referred ligeance and faith to England, and not to the King. 7 Co. 1, 9. Litt. Rep. 26.

In debt on an obligation, which was for payment of rent reſerved by leaſe for years; the defendant pleaded the 32 Hen. 8. and that he was an alien artificer, &c. the plaintiff replied, that he was no alien artificer; but having laid no place where he was born, the replication was held naught. 1 Sid. 357.

The defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy, born in ſuch a place in France; the plaintiff replied that he is indigena, and born at ſuch a place in the kingdom of England, & non alienigena modo & forma prout, &c. et hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam, and upon demurrer to this replication, it was held to be ill; for that the plaintiff did not rely upon the firſt part of it, that he was born in England, and ſo conclude with an averment, that an iſſue might be taken by the other ſide, viz. that he was born in England, and that this matter might be triable by a proper viſne; but here he hath put alien or not alien in iſſue, viz. non alienigena modo & forma, which cannot be tried for want of a viſne; and therefore judgment was given that the bill ſhould abate. Carth. 302.

In indebitatus aſſumpſit the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was an alien enemy born at Roan in France, under the allegiance of, &c. The plaintiff replied, he was born at Hamburgh, under the allegiance of the emperor, a friend of the King, &c. and traverſed, that he was born at Roan in France, &c. Upon demurrer, the defendant had judgment, becauſe by the traverſe Roan is part of the iſſue, which is very immaterial; the plaintiff ſhould have traverſed, that he was born under the allegiance of the French King. 3 Salk. 28.

In debt for an eſcape, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was an alien enemy, born at Roan in France, under the allegiance of the French King, &c. and the plaintiff replied that he was a natural ſubject, born at Weſtminſter in the county of Middleſex; and traverſed, that he was born in France; and upon demurrer, the court held this to be an immaterial traverſe; for the plaintiff ſhould have reſted and tendered an iſſue upon his being born at Weſtminſter. 3 Salk. 28.

Alienation, (from alienare, to alien) A transferring the property of a thing to another. It chiefly relates to lands and tenements; as to alien land in fee, is to ſell the fee-ſimple thereof, &c. and to alien in mortmain, is to make over lands or tenements to a religious houſe or body politick; for which the King's licence is to be obtained. Stat. 15 R. 2. c. 5. *Stat. For if leſſee for life, by livery alieneth in fee, or makes a leaſe for the life of another, or gift in tail, it is a forfeiture of his eſtate: So if tenant in dower, tenant for another's life, tenant for years, &c. do alien for a greater eſtate than they lawfully may make. 1 Inſt. 233, 251. Conditions in feoffments, &c. that the feoffee ſhall not alien, are void. 1 Inſt. 206. Hob. 261. Allegiance, or Ligeance, Allegiantia, (from the Lat. alligare) Is the lawful obedience, which a subject is bound to render to his sovereign. Co. Lit. 129. a. 7 Co. 4.

Allegiance is naturalis, acquisita, vel localis; that is, natural, acquired, or local. Natural; as every subject born immediately upon his birth ought to pay a natural allegiance to his sovereign, and is called a natural liegeman, as the King is said to be his natural liege lord. Acquired; so a man naturalized, or made denizen, acquires a ligeance to the King. Local; so a man who comes under the dominion of the King, ought to pay a local allegiance; for he has his protection. And therefore, if an alien friend come into England, and commit treason, the indictment shall be contra ligeantiæ suæ debitum. 7 Co. 4, 5, 6.

But ligeance is reciprocum ligamen, quia sicut subditus tenetur ad obedientiam, ita rex tenetur ad protectionem. Thus, an alien enemy, if he comes into the realm, does not owe any allegiance, and cannot be indicted for treason; but shall be punished by the martial law. 7 Co. 5, 6.

By the antient law in the time of King Arthur, and afterwards revived in the time of King Edgar, every man of the age of twelve years or upwards, ought to have been sworn to the King in the tourn, or in the leet. Co. Lit. 68. b. 172. b. 7 Co. 6. b. 7. a. 1 Bulst. 199.

By the statute 1 El. c. 1. s. 19. Every archbishop, bishop, and other ecclesiastical person and officer, and every judge, justice, mayor, and other temporal officer, and every person, who has fees or wages of the crown, shall take the oath of supremacy and fidelity, therein declared and set forth.

And by sect. 24, 25. Every person, before he sue livery, or ouster le main, do homage, be received into the Queen's service, take orders, or any degree in the University, must take the said oath.

By the stat. 5 Eliz. c. 1. s. 5. Every schoolmaster, publick or private teacher of children, bencher, utter barrister, antient of any house of court, principal of any inn of Chancery, attorney, prothonotary, philizer, sheriff, escheator, feodary, and all persons admitted to any office at Common law, or other law, shall take the said oath.

By the statute 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. the oath of allegiance is prescribed.

And by the stat. 7 Jac. 1. c. 6. All persons above 18, of whatever sex or degree therein intended, shall take it, viz. every archbishop and bishop, before the lord chancellor or lord keeper:

An ecclesiastical judge or officer before the archbishop, bishop, or ordinary of the dioceses, where he exercises his office:

Every person of, or above the degree of a baron or baroness, and all of the privy council, and the presidents of Wales, and the North, before four of the privy council, of whom the lord chancellor, treasurer, privy seal, or secretary to be one; or, if above thirty miles from London, before the bishop of the dioceses, or such whom the lord chancellor, or lord keeper, by dedimus potestatem shall authorize:

The servants of the King, Queen, or Prince, &c. before the lord steward, &c. judges, justices of peace, sheriffs, or other officers of justice, or who receive a fee of the King, before the lord chancellor or lord keeper; treasurer, admiral, warden of the cinque ports, chief justice of B. R. or C. B. justices of assize in the county where they reside, or other whom the lord chancellor or keeper shall authorize:

Mayor, or other chief officer of a corporation, before such who administer the oath of office: Aldermen, and under officers, and every freeman of a corporation, before the chief officer in the open hall:

All of the house of commons, before their entry into the house in every parliament, before the lord steward, or his deputies:

Master of the ordnance, lieutenant of the tower, and mint master, the four principal officers of the navy under the lord admiral, before lord chancellor, or lord keeper or lord admiral; and all officers, &c. of the tower, before the lord lieutenant of the tower:

Vice-admirals, captains, and soldiers in the King's ships, before any two of the said principal officers of the navy:

All persons, having the charge of forts, &c. captains of soldiers within the realm, before justices of assise, or two justices of peace:

Doctors, advocates, and proctors of the Civil law, and their clerks, before the bishop of the dioceses where they reside:

All who sue livery, or ouster le main, before the master or surveyor, or attorney of the court of wards, in open court:

Serjeants at law, servants to the judges, and officers in Serjeants Inn, before one of the chief justices, or chief baron:

All subjects in inns of court, and principals and treasurers of inns of Chancery, before the benchers or readers of the said houses: And all admitted into inns of Chancery, before the principal, or treasurer, and antients, or four of them, in their open halls:

Prothonotaries, filizers, officers, attornies, and chief clerks of any court of record, before the judges of the same court:

Clerks of Chancery, and all officers of Chancery, before the master of the rolls, or two masters in Chancery:

Parsons, vicars, and curates, and others in orders, schoolmasters, and ushers, before the bishop of the dioceses, or ordinary, in open court:

Vice chancellors of both Universities, heads of colleges and halls, proctors and beadles, before the senior master in convocation: And others promoted to any degree, before the vice chancellor in the congregation house: All fellows and scholars of houses, before the head of such house, in the open hall:

Doctors of physick, who are admitted into the college of physicians, by the president of such college.

By the stat. 25 Car. 2. c. 2. all persons admitted into any office, civil or military, or who shall receive any salary, fee, &c. by patent, or grant from the crown, or have any place of trust, or in the navy, or service in the houshold of the King, or Duke of York, shall take the said ſaid oaths of ſupremacy and allegiance the next term, or at the next quarter ſeſſions of the place were he reſides.

By the ſtat. 1 W. & M. c. 8. all perſons, required to take the aforeſaid oaths, ſhall inſtead thereof take the oaths thereby preſcribed.

By the ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 24. all, who ſhall act as ſerjeant, counſellor, barriſter, advocate, attorney, ſollicitor, proctor, clerk, or notary, not having before taken the ſaid oaths, ſhall incur a præmunire.

By the ſtat. 13 & 14 W. 3. c. 6. and 1 Ann. c. 22. all in office, &c. (as by the ſtat. 25 Car. 2. c. 2.) and all eccleſiaſtical perſons, members of colleges and halls in either univerſity, of the foundation, (being 18,) all teaching pupils in the univerſity or elſewhere, ſchoolmaſters, uſhers, teachers of ſeparate congregations, all who act as ſerjeant, &c. (as by the ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 24.) ſhall take the oath of abjuration in three months after admiſſion to ſuch place, or practice, in one of the courts at Weſtminſter, or at the quarter ſeſſions of the place where he reſides, or at the next term or quarter ſeſſions, tho' after three months.

By the ſtat. 6 Ann. c. 14. and 8 Ann. c. 15. all officers, civil and military in Scotland, ſhall take the oaths of allegiance, aſſurance, and abjuration in the courts of ſeſſion, juſticiary, or Exchequer of Scotland, or quarter ſeſſion there; or in Chancery, B. R. C. B. or Exchequer in England.

By the ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 13. all perſons in office, &c. (as by the ſtat. 1 Ann. c. 22.) conſtables, writers in Scotland, being in London, or Weſtminſter, or thirty miles diſtance on the firſt day of Michaelmas term, ſhall take the oaths in Chancery, B. R. C. B. or Exchequer the ſame term, or otherwiſe before the 23d of January, at the quarter ſeſſions of the place where he ſhall reſide on the firſt of December 1715; and all who come after into office, &c. ſhall do ſo in three months.

By the ſtat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 31. it is ſufficient, if any take the oaths before the end of the next term, or before the next quarter ſeſſions, tho' not within three months; or if beyond ſea, within four months after return; and all omiſſions before, are pardoned

By the ſtat. 5 El. c. 1. the biſhop may tender the oath of ſupremacy and allegiance required by 1 El. c. 1. to any ſpiritual, or eccleſiaſtical perſon within his dioceſs.

By the ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. ſ. 13. the biſhop, or two juſtices of peace may tender the oath of allegiance therein required to any convict, or perſon indicted for recuſancy, or who hath not taken the ſacrament twice the year paſt, and may examine on oath perſons unknown, who paſs through their county, and if they do not deny being recuſant, and having received the ſacrament, may (if not noblemen or noblewomen) tender them the ſaid oath.

And by ſect. 41. of the ſame ſtatute, ſix of the privy council, whereof the lord chancellor, treaſurer, or ſecretary of ſtate to be one, may tender to nobility.

By the ſtat. 7 Jac. 1. c. 6. ſect. 26. any of the privy council, or the biſhop of the dioceſs, may require any nobleman or noblewoman of 18 years of age, or any two juſtices of peace of the county or corporation, may require any other perſon of that age, to take the ſaid oath: And, if any baron or baroneſs of that age be indicted or convicted for not coming to church, or receiving the ſacrament, three of the privy council, of whom the lord chancellor, treaſurer, privy ſeal, or ſecretary, to be one, ſhall require ſuch oath: And, if any of that age, and under that degree, be ſo indicted or convict; or, if the miniſter, conſtable, and churchwardens, or any two of them, complain to a juſtice of peace where the perſon ſuſpected dwells, one juſtice of peace ſhall require it.

But a conſtable, upon ſuch warrant, cannot break open a houſe to take him. 12 Co. 131.

By the ſtat. 1 W. & M. c. 8. Perſons ſhall take the oaths there preſcribed, before thoſe enabled to tender the former oaths.

By the ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 27. thoſe who may lawfully tender the oaths, may ſummon any to take the ſaid oaths.

So by the ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 13. ſ. 10. two or more juſtices of the peace, or any appointed by the King by order in privy council, or by commiſſion under the great ſeal, may tender the ſaid oaths to any they ſuſpect to be dangerous, or diſaffected to the government.

Sect. 11. By writing under their hands and ſeals they may ſummon any to appear before them at a certain time therein appointed, to take the ſaid oaths: Which ſummons ſhall be ſerved on him, or left at his dwelling or uſual abode, with one of the family.

By the ſtat. 11 Eliz. c. 1. he, who obſtinately refuſes the oath there preſcribed, ſhall loſe, for his life only, every eccleſiaſtical or temporal promotion, or office, or benefice he had at the time of the refuſal.

By the ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. ſect. 14. if a perſon refuſe the oath therein preſcribed, when tendered by the biſhop or two juſtices, or to be examined upon oath, (unleſs noble) they may commit him to goal without bail, 'till next aſſizes or quarter ſeſſions, when the oath ſhall be again tendered, and if refuſed, the refuſer (unleſs noble) incurs a præmunire.

A feme covert ſhall be committed only 'till ſhe takes the oath.

And noblemen or noblewomen (other than feme covert) refuſing, when tendered by ſix of the privy council, incur a præmunire.

By the ſtat. 7 Jac. 1. c. 6. ſ. 26, 27. refuſers to take the oath duly tendered, ſhall be committed to goal without bail, by thoſe impowered to tender it, 'till next aſſiſes, or quarter ſeſſions, where the oath ſhall be again tendered, and a refuſal incurs a præmunire, (except femes covert, who ſhall be committed till they take it;) and ſuch perſon is incapable of any office, &c. (being no office of inheritance, or miniſterial function) or to practiſe the Common law, phyſick, ſurgery, or as apothecary, or other liberal ſcience, 'till he take ſuch oath.

So he ſhall be committed for a refuſal, tho' he be a lord of parliament. 12 Co. 131.

By the ſtat. 25 Car. 2. c. 22. ſect. 4, 5. a perſon thereby required to take the oaths, who ſhall neglect or refuſe, ſhall be ipſo facto incapable of office, or employment: And if he executes it after ſuch neglect, he forfeits on conviction 500*l.* and ſhall be diſabled to ſue in any court of law or equity; to be guardian, executor, or adminiſtrator; to take a legacy, or deed of gift; or bear any office within the realm.

By the ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 13. ſect. 7. all, who refuſe to take the oaths in the places, and at the times preſcribed, ſhall be ipſo facto adjudged incapable to enjoy their offices, or any profit appertaining to them; and every ſuch office ſhall be void.

And by ſect. 10, 11. any, who refuſes the oaths tendred purſuant to that act, or to appear at the time to which ſummoned, or at the next quarter ſeſſions, and there take the ſaid oaths, ſhall be adjudged a popiſh recuſant convict, and to forfeit and be proceeded againſt as ſuch.

Allegiare, To excuſe, defend, or to juſtify by due courſe of law.——Si quis ſe velit allegiare *ſecundum regis weregilidum hoc faciat. Aller-good, The word aller is uſed to give a ſuperlative ſenſe to the word added to it; ſo aller-good is the greateſt good. Cowel.

Allevíare, Signifies to levy or pay an accuſtomed fine. Some of our antient hiſtorians mention ſuch fines paid by perſons to their lords for redemption of their daughters, or for a licence to marry them. Brad. Pref. to Eng. Hiſt. p. 64. Cowel.

Allocation, (Allocatio) In a legal ſenſe is an allowance made upon account in the Exchequer; or more properly a placing or adding to a thing. Cowel.

Allocatione faciendâ, A writ for allowing to an accountant ſuch ſums of money as he hath lawfully expended in his office; directed to the lord treaſurer, and barons of the Exchequer, upon complaint made. Reg. Orig. 206.

Allocato comitatu, Is a new writ of exigent, allowed before any other county court holden, on the former not being fully ſerved, or complied with, &c. Fitz. Exig. 14. Jacob.

Allodial, This is where an inheritance is held without paying any acknowledgement to any lord or ſuperior; and therefore is of another nature from that which is feodal or beneficiary. It is derived from the Saxon a privative and leod, vaſallus, or rather leof, dominus, i. e. held without any burthen or vaſſalage, or without a ſuperior. Allodial lands are free lands, which a man enjoys without paying any fine, rent, or ſervice to any other. Cowel. See Alodium.

Alluginoſus, i. e. Mucidus.

Alluminor, (from the Fr. allumer, to lighten) Is uſed for one who coloureth or painteth upon paper or parchment; and the reaſon is, becauſe he gives light and ornament by his colours to the letters or other figures. The word is uſed in ſtat. 1 R. 3. c. 9. but we now call ſuch a one a limner. Cowel.

Almaine rivets, Is a light kind of armour for a man, with ſleeves of mail, or plates of iron, for the defence of his arms: This may ſeem to have been the pattern of the rocket, not long ſince in uſe among us, having looſe ſleeves, which the livery-cloaks of noblemens coachmen may alſo ſeem to imitate. Cowel.

Almanack, Is part of the law of England, of which the court muſt take judicial notice; per Holt Ch. J. 6 Mod. 41.—6 Mod. 81. Trin. 2 Ann. B. R. in the caſe of Brough v. Perkins, S. P. by Holt Ch. C.* but the ſame point does not appear—The diverſity of fixed and moveable feaſts was condemned per tot cur. for we know neither the one nor the other but by the almanacks, and we are to take notice of the courſe of the moon. 6 Mod. 150, 160. Paſch. 3 *Ann. Whether the patent to the company of ſtationers for ſole printing of almanacks be good or not, ſee 10 Mod. 105.

Whether ſuch a day of the month was on a Sunday or not, and ſo not a dies juridicus, is triable by the country or the almanack. Dyer 182. pl. 55.

It was ſaid that the court might judicially take notice of almanacks, and be informed by them; and cited Robert's caſe in the time of Lord Catline; and Coke ſaid, that ſo was the caſe of Galery v. Banbury, and judgment accordingly. 1 Leo. 242. pl. 328. Paſch. 29 *Eliz. Almner or Almoner, (Eleemoſynarius) An officer of the King's houſe, whoſe buſineſs it is to diſtribute the King's alms every day. He ought to admoniſh the King to beſtow his alms, eſpecially upon ſaints days and holy days; and he is likewiſe to viſit the ſick, widows that are poor, priſoners and other neceſſitous people, and to relieve them under their wants; for which purpoſe, he hath the forfeiting of deodands, and the goods of felo's de ſe, allowed him by the King. Fleta, lib 2. cap. 22. The lord almoner has the diſpoſition of the King's diſh of meat, after it comes from the table, which he may give to whom he pleaſes; and he diſtributes four pence in money, a twopenny loaf of bread, and a gallon of beer; or inſtead thereof, three pence daily at the court gate, to twenty-four poor perſons of the King's pariſh, to each of them that allowance. This officer is uſually ſome biſhop. Cowel. Jacob.

The almoner has not any intereſt, but is miniſter and has diſpoſition of the alms of the King durante bene-placito; and if the almoner commit treaſon, and be attaint, this is no forfeiture of what is granted to him in the uſual form, but only during his life, yet the King may grant it at will without recital, becauſe it is a leſs eſtate than he has, and if he grant the goods and chattels of felo de ſe, he need not recite the grant of them made to the almoner, nor determine his will as to them. 1 Rep. 50.

If a felo de ſe is indebted to the King, ſuch debt ſhall be paid before the almoner ſhall diſtribute. Savil 60. pl. 129.

Almoine. See Aumone, and Frank-almoine.

Almonarium, Almonaria, Almeriola, A cup-board or ſafe, to ſet up cold and broken victuals, to be thence diſtributed for alms to the poor. This ſort of repoſitory is in the northern parts ſtill called the aumbry, ambry, and ammery.—*Nos dedimus totam illam ſeldam vocatam le Huſe, cum ſchopis, ſolariis, ſtallis, ciſtis, et almorietis cum omnibus ſuis pertinentiis. Alnage, (Fr. Aulnage) Signifies the meaſure of an ell, or meaſuring with an ell. It is uſed in ſtat. 17 Ed. 4. c. 5.

Alnager, or Aulnager, (Fr. auneur, Lat. ulniger) Is properly a meaſure by the ell; and the word aune in French ſignifieth an ell. An aulnager with us is a publick ſword officer of the King's, whoſe place is to examine into the aſſiſe of all cloths, made throughout the land, and to fix ſeals upon them; and another branch of his office is to collect a ſubſidy or aulnage duty granted to the king. He hath his power by ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 4. c. 1. and ſeveral other antient ſtatutes; which appoint his fees, and inflict a puniſhment for putting his ſeal to deceitful cloth, &c. viz. a forfeiture of his office, and the value. 27 Ed. 3. 3 R. 2. But there are now three officers belonging to the regulation of clothing, who bear the diſtinct names of ſearcher, meaſurer, and aulnager; all which were formerly compriſed in one perſon. 4 Inſt. 31. And becauſe the ſubjects of this kingdom ſhould not be abuſed, an office of ſearching is eſtabliſhed by act of parliament. Cowel.

Alne, A river in Northumberland.

Alnetum, A place where alders grow; or a grove of alder trees: Alnetum eſt ubi alni arbores creſcunt. Unum pomarium, et unum alnetum, et unum ſokemannum, et decem libratas terræ. Pat. 16 Hen. 3. par. 1. m. 8. It alſo often occurs in Domeſday.

Alodium, Signifies a manor, and alſidarii or alodarii, the lords of the ſame manor. The old tranſlation of the Saxon laws uſeth this word for bockland. And aloacii, or rather alodacii, for them that hold bockland or charter-lands. Quando moritur alodarius, *rex inde habet relevationem terræ, &c. Aloverium, A purſe. This word is mentioned in Fleta, lib. 2. c. 82. par. 2 Cowel.

Altarage,

Altarage, (Altaragium) The offerings made upon the altar, and alſo the profit that ariſes to the prieſt by reaſon of the altar, obventio altaris. Godol. Repert. Can. Introd. p. 51. Mich. 21 Eliz. It was declared in the Exchequer, that by altarage is meant tithes of wool, lambs, colts, calves, pigs, chickens, butter, cheeſe, fruits, herbs, and other ſmall tithes with the offerings due: The caſe of the vicar of Weſt Haddon in Northamptonſhire. But the word altarage at firſt is thought to ſignify no more than the caſual profits ariſing to the prieſt, for the peoples voluntary oblations at the altar; out of which a portion was aſſigned by the parſon to the vicar: Since that our parſons have generally contented themſeves with the greater profits of glebe, and tenths of corn and hay; and have left the ſmall tithes to the officiating prieſts: And hence it is that vicarages are endowed with them. Termes de la ley 39. 2 Cro. 516——Vicarius de Tickill ad ſuſtentationem ſui habeat totum altaragium, ita quod nomine altaragii contineantur omnes obventiones, decimæ et proventus ipſius eccleſiæ de Tickill, exceptis decimis bladi, leguminis et fœni, et terris ad dictam eccleſiam pertinentibus, &c. ordinatio Walteri archiep. Ebor. An. Dom. 1249. Vicaria in eccleſia ſancti Martini de Stampford conſiſtit in toto altaragio dictæ eccleſiæ. Monaſt. 2 tom. 881. 3 tom. 139.

It ſeems to be certain, that the religious, when they allotted the altarage in part or in whole to the vicar or chaplain, did mean only the cuſtomary and voluntary offerings at the altar, for ſome divine office or ſervice of the prieſt, and not any ſhare of the ſtanding tithes, whether predial or mixt. Kenn. Paroch. Antiq. Gloſſ.

In the caſe of Franklyn and the maſter and brethren of St. Croſs, T. 1721, it was decreed, that where altaragium is mentioned in old endowments, and ſupported by uſage, it will extend to ſmall tithes, but not otherwiſe. Bunb. 79.

It is moſt probable, that the greateſt annual revenue by altars, if not by altarages in any one church within this realm, was in that of St. Paul's London. For when the chantries were granted to King Henry 8. whereof there were 47 belonging to St. Paul's, there were in the ſame church at that time no leſs than 14 ſeveral altars. And altho' they were but chantry prieſts that officiated at them, and had their annual ſalaries on that account, diſtinct from altarages in the proper ſenſe of oblations; yet in regard theſe annual profits accrued by their ſervice at the altar, they may not improperly be termed penſion altarages, tho' not oblation altarages. God. Introd. p. 51.

Alteration, (Alteratio) Is a changing of a thing: And when witneſſes are examined upon exhibits, &c. they are to remain in the office, and not to be taken back into private hands, by whom they may be altered. Jacob.

Ambactus, A ſervant or client. Du Freſne.

Ambaſſador, or Ambaſſadour. [Ambaſſadeur, French; embaxador, Spaniſh. It is written differently, as it is ſuppoſed to come from the French or Spaniſh language; and the original derivation being uncertain, it is not eaſy to ſettle its orthography. Some derive it from the Hebrew בשר, to tell, and מבשר, a meſſenger; others from ambactus, which, in the old Gauliſh ſignified a ſervant; whence ambaſcia in low Latin, is found to ſignify ſervice, and ambaſciator, a ſervant; others deduce it from ambacht, in old Teutonick, ſignifying a government; and Junius mentions a poſſibility of its deſcent from αναβαινω; and others from am and ad, and baſſus, low, as ſuppoſing the act of ſending an ambaſſador, to be in ſome ſort an act of ſubmiſſion. All theſe derivations lead to write ambaſſador, not embaſſador.] A perſon ſent in a publick manner from one ſovereign power to another, and ſuppoſed to repreſent the power from which he is ſent. The perſon of an ambaſſador is inviolable. Ambaſſador is, in popular language, the general name of a meſſenger from a ſovereign power, and ſometimes, ludicrouſly, from common perſons. In the judicial and formal language, it ſignifies particularly a miniſter of the higheſt rank reſiding in another country, and is diſtinguiſhed from an envoy, who is of leſs dignity. Johnſon.

An ambaſſador is a perſon ſent by one ſovereign prince to another, to tranſact in the place of his ſovereign, ſuch matters as relate to both ſtates. 1 New Abr. 85.

An ambaſſador and agent are the ſame thing, if we conſider only the function of their charges: Only in this they differ; an agent hath charge to repreſent the affairs only; but an ambaſſador ought to repreſent the greatneſs of his maſter, and his affairs. Molloy de Jure Maritimo, b. 2. ch. 10. ſect. 1.

Ambaſſadors are in two capacities, either ordinary or extraordinary: The ordinary ambaſſadors, are thoſe who are commanded to reſide in the place whither ſent, unleſs they receive letters of revocation; and as the time of their return is indefinite, ſo their buſineſs is uncertain, ariſing out of emergent occaſions; and commonly the protection and affairs of the merchants is their greateſt care. The extraordinary are thoſe who are employed upon ſome particular great affairs, as condolements, or congratulations, or for overtures of marriage, &c. their equipage is generally very magnificent and illuſtrious, and they may return without requeſting leave, unleſs there be a reſtraining clauſe in their commiſſion. Molloy ib. ſect. 2.

By the laws of nations, none under the degree of a ſovereign prince can nominate or ſend any in that quality; nor can any ſubject ſend or receive any ambaſſador, be he ever ſo great; if a viceroy doth it, it is no leſs than high treaſon; and ſo it was declared when the Scots, inconſulto principe, ſent Loudon and others, in quality of private commiſſioners, to treat with the French King Lewis the Thirteenth, in the name of the whole nation, for aſſiſtance; the King would not admit or hear them. So did Queen Elizabeth when Chriſtopher Aſſonville came into England in quality of miniſter of ſtate, ſent from the Duke of Alva then governor of Flanders: She refuſed to admit him, he not having any commiſſion or credentials from the King of Spain. It is true, the Electors and Princes of Germany have obtained the privilege of ſending and the reception of ambaſſadors; but that is limited only to matters touching their own territories, and not the ſtate of the empire. And ſo likewiſe the Hans towns may do the ſame; for they claim the like privilege, they being free imperial cities, and partake of the ſame regalia, either by preſcription, or by grants from former emperors, whoſe neceſſities forced them to part with ſuch royal flowers of the empire; generally they ſend for their ambaſſadors two perſons, one of great birth, and who hath been a ſoldier, to maintain decency; and the other a doctor or lawyer, to regulate affairs with learning, and by the pen. Molloy ib. ſect. 4.

Stat. 7 Ann. c. 12. A. D. 1708.

An act for preſerving the privileges of ambaſſadors, and other publick miniſters of foreign Princes and States.

Sect. 1. WHEREAS ſeveral turbulent and diſorderly perſons, having in a moſt outrageous manner inſulted the perſon of his Excellency Andrew Artemonowitz Mattueof,

A M B

Mattueof, ambaſſador extraordinary of his Czariſh Majeſty, Emperor of Great Ruſſia, her Majeſty's good friend and ally, by arreſting him, and taking him by violence out of his coach in the publick ſtreet, and detaining him in cuſtody for ſeveral hours, in contempt of the protection granted by her Majeſty, contrary to the law of nations, and in prejudice of the rights and privileges, which ambaſſadors and other publick miniſters, authorized and received as ſuch, have at all times been thereby poſſeſſed of, and ought to be kept ſacred and inviolable; Be it therefore declared, &c. That all actions and ſuits, writs and proceſſes, commenced, ſued, or proſecuted againſt the ſaid ambaſſador, by any perſon or perſons whatſoever, and all bail-bonds given by the ſaid ambaſſador, or any other perſon or perſons on his behalf, and all recognizances of bail given or acknowleged in any ſuch action or ſuit, and all proceedings upon or by pretext or colour of any ſuch action or ſuit, writ or proceſs, and all judgments had thereupon, are utterly null and void, and ſhall be deemed and adjudged to be utterly null and void, to all intents, conſtructions, and purpoſes whatſoever.

Sect. 2. And be it enacted by the authority aforeſaid, that all entries, proceedings, and records againſt the ſaid ambaſſador, or his bail, ſhall be vacated and cancelled.

Sect. 3. And to prevent the like inſolences for the future; Be it further declared by the authority aforeſaid, That all writs and proceſſes, that ſhall at any time hereafter be ſued forth or proſecuted, whereby the perſon of any ambaſſador, or other publick miniſter of any foreign prince or ſtate, authorized and received as ſuch by her Majeſty, her heirs or ſucceſſors, or the domeſtick, or domeſtick ſervant of any ſuch ambaſſador, or other publick miniſter, may be arreſted or impriſoned, or his or their goods or chattles may be diſtrained, ſeized or attached, ſhall be deemed and adjudged to be utterly null and void to all intents, conſtructions and purpoſes whatſoever.

Sect. 4. And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, that in caſe any perſon or perſons ſhall preſume to ſue forth or proſecute any ſuch writ or proceſs, ſuch perſon or perſons, and all attornies and ſolicitors proſecuting and ſoliciting in ſuch caſe, and all officers executing any ſuch writ or proceſs, being thereof convicted, by confeſſion of the party, or by the oath of one or more credible witneſs, before the lord chancellor or lord keeper of the great ſeal of Great Britain, the chief juſtice of the court of Queen's Bench, the chief juſtice of the court of Common Pleas for the time being, or any two of them, ſhall be deemed violators of the laws of nations, and diſturbers of the publick repoſe, and ſhall ſuffer ſuch pains, penalties, and corporal puniſhment, as the ſaid lord chancellor, lord keeper, and the ſaid chief juſtices, or any two of them, ſhall judge fit to be impoſed and inflicted.

Sect. 5. Provided, and be it declared, that no merchant or other trader whatſoever, within the deſcription of any of the ſtatutes againſt bankrupts, who hath or ſhall put himſelf into the ſervice of any ſuch ambaſſador or publick miniſter, ſhall have or take any manner of benefit by this act; and that no perſon ſhall be proceeded againſt as having arreſted the ſervant of an ambaſſador or publick miniſter, by virtue of this act, unleſs the name of ſuch ſervant be firſt regiſtred in the office of one of the principal ſecretaries of ſtate, and by ſuch ſecretary tranſmitted to the ſheriffs of London and Middleſex for the time being, or their under ſheriffs or deputies, who ſhall, upon the receipt thereof, hang up the ſame in ſome publick place in their offices, whereto all perſons may reſort, and take copies thereof without fee or reward.

Sect. 6. And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, that this act ſhall be taken and allowed in all courts within this kingdom as a publick act; and that all judges and juſtices ſhall take notice of it without ſpecial pleading; and that all ſheriffs, bailiffs, and other officers and miniſters of juſtice, concerned in the execution of proceſs, are hereby required to have regard to this act, as they will anſwer the contrary at their peril.

[Adjudications upon the foregoing ſtatute.]

Strange moved to diſcharge the defendant out of execution, as being an ambaſſador's ſervant, viz. his Engliſh ſecretary; and it was objected, that he did not lie in the houſe; and the words of 7 Ann. c. 12. are domeſtick ſervant: Sed per curiam, The nature of his employment requires his attendance at the houſe, and it is not neceſſary he ſhould lie there; and the general words all writs and proceſſes ſhall be void, take in this caſe; and therefore the execution muſt be ſet aſide. 2 Strange 797. Eaſt. 1 Geo. 2. B. R.

4 Geo. 2. Widmore v. Alvarez: In the caſe of the French ambaſſador, it was ruled, that the perſon need not lie in the houſe, but he muſt do ſome actual ſervice there.

Rule upon hearing counſel of both ſides was made, to diſcharge the defendant out of execution, by virtue of the ſtatute of 7 Ann. c. 12. it being made appear to the court, that he was a domeſtick ſervant of the envoy from the Elector Palatine, viz. his ſecretary, and that all the ſteps preſcribed by the act were purſued. May 25, 1728. Ld. Raym. 1524. Eaſt. 1. Geo. 2.

The defendant was ſecretary to the reſident from Venice, but yet was taken in execution; accordingly upon affidavit from the reſident that he was ſo, and that his name was entered in the Duke of Newcaſtle's office, tho' it was not tranſmitted over to the ſheriff of Middleſex at the time he was arreſted, but a few days after; and upon affidavit that he offered to ſhew his teſtimonial to the officer, and that he really exerciſed the office, the court diſcharged him, notice being given of the motion. Barnardiſt. Rep. in B. R. Mich. 2 Geo. 2.

On rule to ſhew cauſe, why the defendant ſhould not be diſcharged out of cuſtody, being a ſervant to an ambaſſador, Mr. Reeves ſaid, that the words of the affidavit, upon which the rule was made only were, that he was hired in quality of a domeſtick ſervant to the ambaſſador, and did what ſervice he required of him: But he objected, that it was not ſworn, that he actually ſerved the ambaſſador in the capacity he was hired in; and beſides he ſaid, the defendant has ſtiled himſelf apothecary in the affidavit; and by an expreſs clauſe in the act, which gives protection to ambaſſadors ſervants, no one is intitled to ſuch protection, who is liable to an act of bankruptcy. The attorney general on the other ſide ſaid, that by the defendant's ſtiling himſelf apothecary, it does not appear that he was any thing more than a journeyman, and in ſuch caſe he would not be liable to become bankrupt; and as to the other objection, he ſubmitted it, that the affidavit was certain enough. But the court ſaid, It was neceſſary that the defendant ſhould have ſworn, that he actually ſerved in the capacity he was hired; and upon that diſcharge the rule. Barnard. Rep. in B. R. 4 Geo. 2.

The defendant was arreſted, and held to ſpecial bail, and moved to be diſcharged on producing a certificate from the French ambaſſador, that he was his maſter of horſe. It appeared that he was a trader, and ſuch a one as a commiſſion of bankruptcy might iſſue againſt; and ſo the court diſcharged the rule to ſhew cauſe. 2 Vin. 289.

Upon a motion to ſuperſede a proceſs againſt the defendant, upon the ſtatute 7 Ann. as being in the ſervice of a foreign ambaſſador; the court held, that to be a privileged ſervant within the act, it is not required that the party actually live in the ambaſſador's houſe; but neither is it enough that the party be regiſtred in the ſecretary's office as a ſervant; but when he comes for the benefit of the act, he muſt ſhew the nature of his ſervice, that the court may judge, whether he be a domeſtick ſervant within the meaning of the act of parliament. In this caſe, it was objected againſt the defendant, that he was a trader, and ſo expreſly excluded from privilege by the ſtatute: To which Mr. Solicitor general, who was counſel for the defendant, anſwered, that by traders within this act, muſt be underſtood ſuch as may have the benefit of the ſtatutes concerning bankrupts, which infants are not intitled to, as it was determined in one Whitlock's caſe; and that the defendant could prove he had exerciſed no trade ſince his full age. Fitzgib. Rep. 200.

Defendant ſaid that he was a menial ſervant to the Mecklenburg ambaſſador. It was held that menial ſervants are not within the act; the words being domeſtick, or domeſtick ſervant, who are ſuch as are employed in and about the houſhold affairs only.

The defendant, a courier to the Spaniſh ambaſſador, moved to ſtay proceedings. The plaintiff alledged the defendant was a trader. It was anſwered, the trade was ſo inconſiderable, that it could not amount to a bankruptcy. It was again replied, that a probable cauſe will make a bankrupt; and it was further alledged, that the defendant being no domeſtick, had no ſettled yearly wages; and that being regiſtered in the ſheriff's office was not material: So the court diſcharged the rule to ſtay proceedings. 2 Vin. 288. Mich. 10. Geo. 2.

A domeſtick of the Duke of Holſtein, reſident here, was arreſted, and thereupon gave a bail-bond; and it was moved upon this ſtatute to ſet the ſame aſide; all the terms required by the act being complied with, and thereupon the arreſt was ſet aſide, and the bail-bond vacated. 8 Vin. 288.

A ſervant to the Genoeſe ambaſſador brought a bill in Chancery. It was moved that he ſhould not proceed, till he gave ſecurity by bond in 40*l.* penalty for payment of coſts of ſuit if awarded againſt him, in the ſame manner as where a plaintiff is beyond ſea; and a precedent was cited where a like order was made in the caſe of an ambaſſador's ſervant plaintiff in this court, and dated 25 July 8 Ann. and it was ordered accordingly. 2 Vin. 288.

Amenable, (Fr. Amener, to bring or lead unto) or amainable (from the Fr. main, a hand) ſignifies tractable, that may be led or governed: And in our books it is commonly applied to a woman that is governable by her huſband. Cowel Edit. 1727.

Amendment, and Jeofails. Amendment, emendatio, Signifieth in our common law a correction of an error committed in a proceſs, and eſpied before judgment, and ſometimes after the party ſeeks advantage by the error. Cowel. Termes de la ley. Bro. tit. Amendment. But if the fault be found after judgment given, the party that will redreſs it, is driven to his writ of error. Cowel. Bro. tit. Error.

Jeofail is a compound of three French words, J' ay faillé, that is, I have failed, ego lapſus ſum, and in a legal ſenſe denotes an overſight in pleading; or a jeofail is, when the parties to a ſuit have proceeded to iſſue, and this pleading or iſſue is ſo badly pleaded or joined, or the proceedings ſo defective, that it will be error if they proceed: then ſome of the ſaid parties might by their counſel ſhew it to the court, which occaſioned many delays in ſuits. Cowel.

Un'er this head is conſid'ered,

1. Amendment at Common law.
2. Statutes concerning amendment and jeofail.
3. Original and judicial writs amendable, and not amendable.
4. Declarations and rolls amendable, and not amendable.
5. Records and poſteas amendable, and not amendable.
6. Iſſues, verdicts and judgments amendable, and not amendable.
7. Fines and recoveries amendable, and not amendable.
8. Indictments amendable.

1. Amendment at Common law.

At Common law there was little room for amendments, which appears by the ſeveral ſtatutes of amendments and jeofails, and likewiſe by the conſtitution of the courts; for, ſays Britton, the judges are to record the parols [or pleas] deduced before them in judgments; alſo, ſays he, Ed. 1. granted to his juſtices to record the pleas pleaded before them, but are not to eraſe their records, nor amend them, nor record againſt their inrolment, nor any way ſuffer their records to be a warrant to juſtify their own miſdoings, nor that they eraſe their words, nor amend them, nor record againſt their inrolment. This ordinance of Ed. 1. was ſo rigidly obſerved, that when Juſtice Ingham, in his reign, moved with compaſſion for the circumſtances of a poor man who was fined 13*s.* 4*d.* erazed the record, and made it 6*s.* 8*d.* he was fined 800 marks, with which a clock-houſe at Weſtminſter was built, and furniſhed with a clock; yet notwithſtanding there were ſome caſes that were amendable at Common law; and out of this general rule there are the following exceptions.

Firſt, All miſtakes were amendable the ſame term, becauſe it is a roll of that term, and ſo in the breaſt of the court during the whole term; and even a new roll might be brought in the cauſe, and conſequently the ſame roll may be amended. 8 Co. 157. 1 Salk. 49. 6 Mod. 274.

Secondly, That part of the count which records the writ was amendable at Common law, though of a ſubſequent term, as South, for Southampton, without a tittle or daſh, was amended at Common law; becauſe the recording of the writ was ſurpluſage, and by the law which conſtitutes the court, the judges were not to record againſt a former record. 8 Co. 156. b. 7 Hen. 6. 45. Vide Cro. Car. 144.

Thirdly, An eſſoin, if the plaintiff's name was miſtaken, or if an eſſoin was made as guardian, when there was no guardian in the writ; this was amendable at Common law, becauſe ſuch an eſſoin was contrary to the writ, and conſequently an inrolment of it would contradict a former record. 2 Hen. 4. 4. Fitz. Amendment 7, 61. Bro. Amendment 26.

Fourthly, Continuances could be amended at Common law; as where A. brought a bill againſt B. who vouched C. who entered into warranty, and pleaded to iſſue, a venire facias, and a jurat' inter A. and B. were put in; which jurat' ought to have been between A. and C. and becauſe it appeared by the record of the iſſue, and the award of the venire facias, and the venire itſelf, that the jurat' ought to have been between A. and C. this was amended; otherwiſe it would be an inrolment againſt a former record. 6 Ed. 3. 25. Fitz. Amendment 73. 8 Co. 156. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 199. G. H. C. P. 109.

Fifthly, In the caſe of the King they amended the writ, where the fault was in the form; as in a quare impedit brought by the King, the writ was præſentare inſtead of præſentare; and it was amended; for it could not be intended that the original inſtitution of the court was to deſtroy or leſſen the prerogative of the King. 8 Co. 156. b. 42. Ed. 3. 6.

No original writ was amendable at Common law. Ld. Raym. Rep. 565. Arg.

An original writ was not amendable at Common law in the caſe of a common perſon; but in caſe of the King in

in quare impedit, where the writ was præſentere for præſentare, it was amended, and the defendant awarded to anſwer. 8 Rep. 156. b.

Whatever at Common law might be amended in civil caſes was at Common law amendable in criminal caſes, and ſo it is at this day; reſolved by Holt Ch. J. Powell and Powis J. 1 Salk. 51. pl. 14.

Tho' miſawarding of proceſs on the roll might be amended at Common law the ſame term, becauſe it was the act of the court; yet if any clerk at Common law iſſued out an erroneous proceſs on a right award of the court, that was never amended in any caſe at the Common law. 1 Salk. 51. pl. 14.

Statutes of amendment extend only to pleadings of record, therefore pleadings while in paper, are amendable by the Common law. Anciently all pleas were ore tenus at the bar; and then, if any error was ſpied in them it was preſently amended. Since that cuſtom is changed, the motion to amend becauſe all in paper, ſucceeded in the room of it; and it is a motion that the court cannot refuſe: But they may refuſe it if the party deſiring it refuſe to pay coſts, or the amendment deſired ſhould amount to a new plea. 10 Mod. 88.

2. Statutes concerning amendment and jeofail.

The conſtitution of Ed. 1. before mentioned, was found to be very inconvenient, becauſe the court being tied down ſo ſtrictly not to alter their records after the firſt term, was found very inconvenient, and many judgments were reverſed by the miſpriſion [or neglect] of their clerks in proceſſes; to remedy which inconvenience the following ſtatute was made.

Stat. 14 Ed. 3. c. 6. It is aſſented, that by the miſpriſion of a clerk in any place whereſoever it be, no proceſs ſhall be adnulled or diſcontinued, by miſtaking in writing one ſyllable, or one letter too much or too little; but as ſoon as the thing is perceived, by challenge of the party, or in other manner, it ſhall be haſtily amended in due form, without giving advantage to the party that challengeth the ſame, becauſe of ſuch miſpriſion.

Challenge of the party] In Ld. Raym. Rep. 669. Paſch. 13 W. 3. it was ſaid arguendo that theſe words, challenge of the party, muſt be underſtood of a demurrer; but Holt Ch. J. contra, that challenge of the party is for arreſt of judgment. 1 Salk. 50. pl. 11.

In detinue of three writings, one of the writings was omitted in the continuance. It was held that all the proceſs was diſcontinued notwithſtanding this ſtatute, which enacts the proceſs ſhall be amended. 8 Rep. 157. a. cites 15 Ed. 3. Amendment 158.

In præcipe quod reddat by John Martel of Sleford, they were at iſſue, and in the venire facias Sleford was omitted, and the jury paſſed for the demandant; and this matter was alledged in arreſt of judgment, and it was amended by the ſtatute of the 14 E. 3. Br. Amendment, pl. 50.

Coſinage of the manor of Tybynry-Brooke, and the writ was of the manor of Tybynry, and (Brooke) was left out, and the opinion was, that it may be well amended, and yet the ſtatute ſays, where a ſyllable or letter is too much or too little in a word, but if part of the word be wanting, the word is wanting. Bro. Amendment, pl. 18.

Miſpriſion of the clerk, where he made writ of execution of 100 pounds, whereas the roll was but 100 marks; and per Thorpe: The plaintiff ſhall not have it, but till 100 marks are levy'd. Bro. Amendment, pl. 25.

By this ſtatute the juſtices had liberty, on challenge of the party, to amend the proceſs where the clerk had miſtaken one ſyllable or letter, and the judges afterwards conſtrued the ſtatute ſo favourably, that they extended it to a word; but they were not ſo well agreed, whether they could make theſe amendments as well after as before judgment; for they thought their authority was determined by the judgment; and therefore to put an end to the diverſity of opinions by the following ſtatute, viz. 9 H. 5. c. 4. It is declared that the judges ſhall have the ſame power, as well after as before judgment, as long as the record in proceſs is before them. Gilb. H. C. B. 110.

Sat. 9 Hen. 5. c. 4. Whereas it was ordained and eſtabliſhed in the ſtatute made the fourteenth year of King Edward the Third after the conqueſt, that for miſpriſion of the clerk in any place whereſoever it be, the proceſs of the plea ſhould not be avoided or diſcontinued by miſtaking in writing one letter or ſyllable too much or too little; but as ſoon as the thing is perceived, by challenge of the party, or in other manner, it ſhould haſtily be amended in a due form, without giving advantage to the party that challengeth the ſame becauſe of ſuch miſpriſion; the King our ſovereign lord, conſidering the diverſity of opinions which have been upon the ſaid ſtatute, and to put the thing in more open knowledge, hath declared and ordained at this time, by authority of this preſent parliament, that the juſtices before whom ſuch plea or record is made, or ſhall be depending, as well by adjournment, as by way of error, or otherwiſe, ſhall have power and authority to amend ſuch record and proceſs, as afore is ſaid, according to the form of the ſame ſtatute, as well after judgment given in any ſuch plea, record, or proceſs given, as before judgment given in any ſuch plea, record, or proceſs, as long as the ſame record and proceſs is before them, in the ſame manner as the juſtices had power to amend ſuch record and proceſs before judgment given by force of the ſaid ſtatute made in the time of the ſaid King Edward.

This ſtatute is confirmed by ſtatute 4 Hen. 6. c. 3. with an exception, that it ſhall not extend to proceſs on outlawry, or to records or proceſſes in Wales. But by 2 Sand. 40. this laſt exception, and the like exception in 8 Hen. 6. c. 15. ſeem to be annulled by the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. c. 26. by which it is enacted, that the laws of England ſhall be uſed, practiſed and executed in Wales.

Though the foregoing ſtatutes gave the judges a greater power than they had before, yet it was found that they were too much cramped, having authority to amend nothing but proceſs, which they did not conſtrue in a large ſignification, ſo as to comprehend the whole proceedings in real and perſonal actions, and criminal and common pleas, but confined it to the meſne proceſs and jury proceſs. 8 Co. 157. a. And therefore to enlarge the authority of the courts, the following ſtatute, viz. 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. gives them power by them and their clerks to amend what they ſhall think in their diſcretion to be the miſpriſion of their clerks in any record, proceſs, and plea, warrant of attorney, writ, panel, or return. Gilb. H. C. B. 110.

Statute 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. ſect. 1. "Our lord the King hath ordained and eſtabliſhed by the authority of this preſent parliament, that for error aſſigned or to be aſſigned, in any record, proceſs or warrant of attorney, original writ or judicial, panel or return, in any places of the ſame raſed or interlined, or in any addition, ſubſtraction, or diminution of words, letters, titles, or parcel of letters found in any ſuch record, proceſs, warrant of attorney, writ, panel, or return, which raſings, interlinings, addition, ſubſtraction, or diminution, at the diſcretion of the King's judges of the courts and places, in which the ſaid records or proceſs by writ of error, or otherwiſe, be certified, do appear ſuſpected, no judgment nor record ſhall be reverſed nor adnulled."

Sect. 2 "And that the king's judges of the courts and places in which any record, proceſs, word, plea, warrant of attorney, writ, panel, or return, which for the time ſhall be, ſhall have power to examine ſuch records, proceſs, words, pleas, warrants of attorney, writs, panels or return, by them and their clerks, and to reform and amend (in affirmance of the judgments of ſuch records and proceſſes) all that which to them in their diſcretion ſeemeth to be miſpriſion of the clerks in ſuch record, proceſſes, word, plea, warrant of attorney, writ, panel, and return; except appeals, indictments of treaſon and of felonies, and the outlawries of the ſame, and the ſubſtance of the proper names, ſurnames, and additions left out in original writs and writs of exigent; according to the ſtatute another time made the firſt year of king Henry, father to our lord the King that now is, and in other writs containing proclamation; ſo that by ſuch miſpriſion of the clerk, no judgment ſhall be reverſed nor adnulled. And if any record, proceſs, writ, warrant of attorney, return, or panel be certified defective, otherwiſe wiſe than according to the writing which thereof remaineth in the treaſury, courts or places from whence they be certified, the parties in affirmance of the judgments of ſuch record and proceſs ſhall have advantage to alledge, that the ſame writing is variant from the ſaid certificate, and that found and certified, the ſame variance ſhall be by the ſaid judges reformed and amended according to the firſt writing."

Sect. 3. "Imbezilling of a record, whereby any judgment ſhall be reverſed, is felony."

Sect. 4. "Provided always, that if any ſuch record, proceſs, writ, or warrant of attorney, panel, or return, or parcel of the ſame, be now, or hereafter ſhall be exemplified in the King's Chancery under the great ſeal, and ſuch exemplification there of record inrolled, without any raſing in the ſame place in the exemplification and the inrollment of the ſame, that another time for any error aſſigned, or to be aſſigned in the ſaid record, proceſs, writ, warrant of attorney, panel, or return, in any letter, word, clauſe, or matter of the ſame varying, or contrary to the ſaid exemplification and the inrollment, there ſhall be no judgment of the ſaid records and proceſs reverſed nor adnulled."

There are only two ſtatutes of amendments, viz. the 14 Ed. 3. and 8 H. 6. the reſt are reckon'd to be ſtatutes of jeofails, and not of amendments; per Powell J. 1 Salk. 51. pl. 14. Mich. 3 Ann. B. R. in caſe of the Queen v. Tutchin. ——— And ibid. he held that the 8 H. 6. was only to enlarge the ſubject-matter of 14 Ed. 3. and that 14 E. 3. extends only to proceſs out of the roll, viz. writs that iſſue out of the record, and not to proceedings in the roll itſelf; but that the 14 E. 3. extend not to the King, becauſe of theſe words (challenge of the party) and that the ſtatute 8 H. 6. has always been conſtrued in imitation of the act of Ed. 3. and the exception in the ſtatute of H. 6. was only ex abundanti cautela; and all judges and ſages of the law in all ages have taken it not to extend to the crown; and the caſes on the other ſide are not to be relied upon.

Stat. 8 Hen. 6. c. 15. "It is ordained and eſtabliſhed that the King's juſtices, before whom any miſpriſion or default is or ſhall be found, be it in any records and proceſſes which now be, or ſhall be depending before them, as well by way of error as otherwiſe, or in the returns of the ſame, made or to be made by ſheriffs, coroners, bailiffs of franchiſes, or any other, by miſpriſion of the clerks of any of the ſaid courts of the King, or by miſpriſion of the ſheriffs, coroners, their clerks, or other officers clerks, or other miniſters whatſoever, in writing one letter or one ſyllable too much or too little, ſhall have power to amend ſuch defaults and miſpriſions according to their diſcretion, and by examination thereof by the ſaid juſtices to be taken where they ſhall think needful. Provided that this ſtatute do not extend to records and proceſſes in the ports of Wales, nor to the proceſſes and records of outlawries, felonies and treaſons, and the dependances thereof."

As theſe ſtatutes only extended to what the juſtices ſhould interpret the miſpriſion of their clerks, and other officers, it was found by experience, that many juſt cauſes were overthrown for want of form, and other failings, not aided by this ſtatute, though they were good in ſubſtance; and therefore the following ſtatute was made. Gilb. H. C. B. 111.

Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 30. "Foraſmuch as the party plaintiffs and defendants, in all manner of actions and ſuits, as well real as perſonal, at the Common law of this realm, before this time have been greatly delayed and hindered in their ſuits and demands, by reaſon of the crafty, ſubtile, and negligent pleadings of the plaintiffs or demandants, defendants or tenants, where any action or demand hath been ſued, had, or made, as well in miniſtring of their declarations at bars, as alſo in their replications, rejoinders, rebutters, joining of iſſues, and other pleadings, to the great hurt, delay, and hindrance of the ſaid plaintiffs or demandants, or to the vexation of the defendants or tenants; inſomuch, that when the iſſues joined in the ſame actions between the parties to the ſame, have been tried and found by the verdict of twelve or more indifferent perſons, for the ſaid plaintiffs or demandants, or for the tenants or defendants, and the juſtices ready to give judgement for the ſaid parties for whom the ſame iſſue was found, the ſame parties have been compelled, by the courſe and order of the Common law of this realm afore this time, to replead, and the ſaid verdicts ſo given, as is afore rehearſed, to be taken as void and of none effect; ſometimes becauſe the iſſues have been misjoined, and jeofail, and ſometimes by taking advantages of the parties own miſpleading, or in the purſuing, miſconveying, or diſcontinuing of proofs of any of the parties, and for divers other cauſes, the which is thought as well a great ſlander to the Common law of this realm, and to the miniſters of the ſame, as alſo a plain delay and hinderance unto the ſaid parties, in that they ſhould not have their judgments when the iſſue hath been found and tried as is aforeſaid, to their great coſts and charge: Be it therefore enacted, &c. That from henceforth if any iſſue be tried by the oath of twelve or more indifferent men, for the party, plaintiff or demandant, or the party, tenant or defendant, in any manner of action or ſuit at the Common law of this realm, in any of the King's courts of record, that then the juſtice or juſtices by whom judgment thereof ought to be given, ſhall proceed and give judgment in the ſame; any miſpleading, lack of colour, inſufficient pleading, or jeofail, any miſcontinuance, or diſcontinuance, or miſconveying of proceſs, misjoining of the iſſue, lack of warrant of attorney for the party againſt whom the ſame iſſue ſhall happen to be tried, or any other default or negligence of any of the parties, their counſellors or attornies, had or made to the contrary notwithſtanding; and the ſaid judgments thereof, ſo to be had and given, ſhall ſtand in full ſtrength and force to all intents and purpoſes, according to the ſaid verdict, without any reverſal or undoing of the ſame by writ of error or of falſe judgment, in like form as though no ſuch default or negligence had never been had or committed."

Sect. 2. "Provided alway, and be it enacted by the authority aforeſaid, in avoiding of errors, and other great inconveniences that daily do fortune to ariſe and grow in the King's courts of record at Weſtminſter, through the negligence of attornies, becauſe they deliver not their warrants of attorney in ſuch actions and ſuits, wherein they be named attorney, according to the laws of this realm, that all and every ſuch perſon and perſons, which ſhall fortune hereafter to be attorney to or for any other perſon or perſons, being demandant or plaintiff, tenant or defendant, in any action or ſuit at any time hereafter commenced or taken in any of the King's ſaid courts, and plead to any iſſue in the ſame action or ſuit; that then the ſame attornies, and every of them, from time to time ſhall deliver, or cauſe to be delivered, his or their ſufficient and lawful warrant of attorney, to be entred of record, for every of the ſaid actions or ſuits wherein they be named attornies, to the officer or his deputy, ordained for the receipt and entring thereof, in the ſame term when the ſaid iſſue is entred of record in the ſaid court, or afore; upon pain of forfeiting unto our ſaid ſovereign lord 10*l.* ſterling for every default, for not delivering of the ſaid warrant of attorney."

Sect. 3. "And alſo further to ſuffer impriſonment, as by the diſcretion of the juſtices of the court for the time being, where any ſuch default ſhall fortune to be had or made, ſhall be thought convenient.

If any iſſue be tried by the oath of 12 men] See ſect. 1. of the foregoing ſtatute.

A judgment by nil dicit is not within the intent of the ſtatute of jeofails, which ſpeaks of verdicts; for this ſhall not be ſaid a verdict; for a verdict is that put in iſſue by the joining of the parties; agreed per cur'. Goldſ. 49. pl. 9. Paſch. 29 Eliz.

A judgment given upon a retraxit is not aided by the ſtatute of jeofails, as it would be if given on the verdict. Cro. Jac. 211. pl. 3. Mich. 6 Jac. 1. B. R.

It aids not diſcontinuances after failure of record on nul tiel record pleaded. Cro. Jac. 303, 304. pl. 5. Trin. 10 Jac. 1. B. R.

This

This ſtatute doth not help imperfect verdicts. Arg. 2 Leon. 196. in pl. 245. cites this caſe; an information was brought againſt B. for entry into an houſe and 100 acres of land in S. he pleaded Not guilty; but the jury found him guilty as to the 100 acres, but ſaid nothing as to the houſe; whereupon error was brought, and the judgment reverſed; ſays it was a great caſe argued in the Exchequer, and was Brache's caſe; and Coke, who cited it, ſaid, that it was not a diſcontinuance, but no verdict for part.

An iſſue upon the vi et armis is not within the act; but it muſt be joined upon the ſpecial matter alledged. Cro. Jac. 599. See 1 Saund. 81, 82.

If in replevin the plaintiff is nonſuit after evidence, and the jury aſſeſs damages for the avowant, this is no trial within the act; for the enquiry of the jury is only in nature of an office of inqueſt. Cro. Eliz. 339.

For the party plaintiff, or demandant] In treſpaſs againſt A. and B. A. pleads guilty, and B. confeſſes the action, and writ of enquiry is awarded upon the roll, but afterwards, quoad B. there is no continuance entered, and afterwards the iſſue is found for the plaintiff; admitting there is a diſcontinuance quoad B. yet it is aided by the ſtatute; for B. was party to the original, and is privy to the verdict, being liable to the damages. 11 Co. 6. b.

Any miſcontinuance, or diſcontinuance] If as to part, the defendant joins iſſue, but ſays nothing as to the reſt, and this iſſue is found for the plaintiff, he ſhall have judgment. 11 Co. 6. b. 2 Leon. 194.

This extends as well to thoſe on the part of the plaintiff, as to the part of the defendant. 1 Roll. Rep. 161.

Diſcontinuances after, as well as thoſe before verdict, are within this act. Cro. Eliz. 489. Cro. Jac. 528.

Diſcontinuances are helped by the ſtatute, but not imperfect verdicts. 2 Leon. 196. Cro. Eliz. 133. Godb. 57. 3 Lev. 55.

Miſconveying of proceſs] But if upon an information of perjury, the court awards a ſubpœna againſt the defendant, this is not a miſconveying, but a diſorderly proceſs, and not aided by the ſtatute. 1 And. 48. adjudged. Kelw. 214. adjudged, and there ſaid, this is no more helped by the ſtatute, than if in ejectment the court ſhould award a petit cape, or in a real action a diſtreſs or attachment; for ſuch diſorders were never intended to be redreſſed by the ſtatute. See Cro. Jac. 89. Where one proceſs does not warrant the other.——So when a venire is awarded to a wrong officer, and he returns it, and thereupon a trial is had, this is a miſ-trial, and not helped. 1 Brownl. 134. Cro. Eliz. 574, 586.

But if there be any defect in an original, or in the return thereof, it is not helped by this act. Kelw. 207.

Lack of warrant of attorney] Where the entry was, that the defendant obtulit ſe per Higgens attor' ſuum, without ſhewing his Chriſtian name; and it was argued, that it was helped by this ſtatute; and in Cro. Eliz. 153. it was ſaid, that if there were any warrant of attorney, and his name appears, then it may be amended by it; but for this vide 1 Roll. Abr. 289. 1 Leon. 175. and vide 18 Eliz. c. 14. [which immediately follows] by which a proviſion is made againſt the want of any warrant of attorney. See 1 Leon. 175. Cro. Eliz. 145, 153.

This ſtatute, though much more extenſive than the former, and though it very much enlarged the authority of the judge in amendments in miſtakes; yet it remedied no omiſſion, but that the party's own neglect in filing his own warrant, ſhould not after verdict prejudice the right of the party that had prevailed; therefore to remedy the omiſſions which the prevailing party might be guilty of, as well as the other ſide, the following ſtatute was made. Gilb. H. C. B. 111.

Stat. 18. Eliz. c. 14. "Be it enacted, &c. That if any verdict of twelve men or more, ſhall be given in any action, ſuit, bill, plaint, or demand in any court of record, the judgment thereupon ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed by reaſon of any default in form or lack of form, touching falſe latin, or variance from the Regiſter, or other defaults in form, in any writ original or judicial, count, declaration, plaint, bill, ſuit or demand, or for want of any writ original or judicial, or by reaſon of any imperfect or inſufficient return of any ſheriff or other officer, or want of any warrant of attorney, or by reaſon of any manner of default in proceſs, upon or after any aide prier or vouchee, nor any ſuch record or judgment after verdict to be given hereafter, ſhall be reverſed for any the defects or cauſes aforeſaid; any law, ſtatute, or uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding."

Sect. 2. "Provided that this act, or any thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to any writ, declaration, or ſuit of appeal of felony or murder, nor to any indictment, or preſentment of felony, murder, treaſon, or other matter, nor to any proceſs upon any of them, nor to any writ, bill, action or information upon any popular or penal ſtatute; any thing aforeſaid to the contrary notwithſtanding."

Sect. 3. "Provided alſo, that all attorneys in any ſuit or action in any court of record, ſhall deliver in the warrant of attornies in ſuch action or ſuit, wherein they be named attornies, to be entered or filed of record, in ſuch manner and form as heretofore by the law or ſtatutes in that behalf made they ſhould or ought to have done, upon pain to forfeit ten pounds for every ſuch offence; the one moiety thereof to be to the Queen's Majeſty, her heirs and ſucceſſors, and the other moiety to ſuch officer or officers to whom, or in whoſe office the ſame warrant ſhould be delivered, entered or filed, and to ſuffer impriſonment by the diſcretion of the juſtices of the court for the time being, where any ſuch default ſhall fortune to be had or made; the ſaid ten pounds to be recovered by action of debt, bill or information, in which no eſſoin, protection, or wager of law ſhall be allowed."

The meaning of this ſtatute is, that the giſt of the action muſt be ſubſtantially alledged; but any other circumſtances relative to that action ſhall be ſuppoſed by the verdict; for it was not the intention of the ſtatutes perfectly to deſtroy the allegata; for this would have ruined all proceedings in the courts of juſtice; but the deſign was to cure any inſufficiency that was not of the eſſence of the plaintiff's action. What is ſubſtance, and what not, muſt be determined in every action according to its nature; and that ſeems properly to be the eſſence of the action, without which the court would have no ſufficient grounds to give judgment. In the ſame manner, that is of the eſſence of a plea, where the court has ſufficient ground to diſmiſs the defendant on ſuch plea found for him. G. H. C. B. 111.

Judgment thereupon] See the preceding ſtat. ſect. 1.

But if in treſpaſs againſt A. B. and C. A. pleads Not guilty, and it is found for him, but againſt the other two; if there is judgment by default, the want of an original may be aſſigned for error; for the verdict being found for A. he is out of the caſe, and it is as if the action had been brought againſt the other two only; but if the verdict had been for the plaintiff, the want of the original quoad the other had been cured. 1 Leo. 210.

Other faults] But the omiſſion of vi et armis in a declaration of treſpaſs is ſubſtance, becauſe that is the inducement for the King's fine. Cro. Car. 407. March 149. Cro. Jac. 443, 526, 536. So is the aſſignment of a breach upon a recognizance for good behaviour. Cro. Jac. 412.

For want of any writ original or judicial] An ill writ in ſubſtance, or a good writ which warrants not the declaration, is not aided by the ſtatute. Cro. Eliz. 722. Yelv. 108, 109. 1 Sid. 84. 5 Co. 37. b. 3 Bulſt. 224. When the variance is ſuch that it ſhall be taken as no original. Cro. Eliz. 204. Hob. 251. Cro. Jac. 654, 655. But not ſo where the vicious writ is certified to be the writ upon which the proceedings were, and that there is no other. Cro. Jac. 185, 479, 664, 675. Palm. 428. But where it appears there was a good original, no averment ſhall be taken that the proceedings were on the vicious one. Cro. Jac. 597. Palm. 428. And in ejectment, where the declaration recited the original to be ſummonitus eſt, there being none upon the file, the court would not intend a vicious one; but that there was a good a good one, which is loſt; and that the plaintiff's clerk miſtook in the recital thereof. 1 Saund. 317. So the want of a venire, diſtringas, &c. is aided, but not a vicious one; and where a vicious one ſhall be taken as none, vide Cro. Eliz. 483. Owen 59. Moor 465. Noy 57. Moor 684. pl. 944. The want of a bill on the file, which is in nature of an original, is aided by the equity of this act. Hob. 130, 134, 264, 282. 1 Jones 304. Cro. Car. 282.

Imperfect o inſufficient return] But if there be no return; as if the writ be album breve, or the name of the ſheriff not indorſed, this is not help'd. 1 Roll. Rep. 295. 5 Co. 41. Cro. Eliz. 310, 509. Yelv. 110. Cro. Jac. 188, 189.

In the return of the venire, the words quilibet juratorum per plegiat' were wanting, and Cro. Jac. 534. per curiam, it was held not as a blank or no return, but as an inſufficient one, and help'd. 2 Roll. Rep. 87. Adjudged, becauſe by the appearance of the jurors it was ſalved, and ſaid it was not like Dr. Huſſy's caſe, where pledges were wanting upon an original, which vide 3 Bulſt. 275, 276, &c. 1 Roll. Rep. 445, 446, 447. Cro. Jac. 414. Where it is ſaid, that not finding pledges upon an original is merely the neglect of the party, and ſo not help'd.

If a venire is awarded to the coroners, and returned by two of them only, whereas at the time of the award and return thereof, there were two more, this is only a miſ-return, and aided. Lamb and Wiſeman, Cro. Jac. 383. adjudg'd. Hob. 70. adjudg'd; and yet if one ſheriff of London makes a return without the other, this is not helped, being no return at all; for they make but one officer; and the court knows that one ſheriff there is two perſons. Hob. 70.

Upon the return of a venire de medietate linguæ, it did not appear which were denizens, and which aliens. Cro. Eliz. 841. per curiam, It is an inſufficient return, and aided by the ſtatute.

Upon the venire twenty-three only were returned, but the habeas corpora was awarded againſt the twenty-three and A. eleven of the other and A. were ſworn and tried the cauſe, Fines and North, 1 Jones 302. adjudged, it was not help'd; for A. was not returned by the ſheriff. Cro. Jac. 278. 5 Co. 36. b. 37. a. Cro. Eliz. 194. 1 Brownl. 274. 1 Jones 357.

So if the trial had been by eleven of the twenty-three, and one of the tales de circumſtantibus, Sankell and Stoeker. Cro. Car. 223. adjudged per curiam cont. Croke, 1 Jones 245. But vide 1 Brownl. 274. where it was adjudged according to the opinion of Croke, vide Latch 54. But if twenty-five were returned, and the twenty-fifth is ſworn, and tries the cauſe, it is not helped, becauſe a miſtrial. Cro. Jac. 647. But if tried by twelve of the other, it is helped. Cro. Jac. 647.

In a ſcire facias upon a recognizance againſt the heirs and tertenants of the conuzor, the ſheriff returns J. S. tertenant, but ſays nothing as to the heir, and J. S. pleads to iſſue, and it is found againſt him. Cro. Car. 295. Adjudged by three judges againſt Croke, that quoad the heir, there being no return, it is not helped by the ſtatute; but per Croke, The defendant having pleaded to iſſue, and that being found againſt him, he ſhall not now take advantage of the heir's not being returned ſummoned, and Cro. Car. 312, 313. it was adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe quoad the heir, it was only a diſcontinuance, which is aided by the 32 H. 8. 1 Jones 319. adjudged.

The foregoing ſtatutes extended only to the courts above, but the ſubſequent ſtatutes extend to all courts of record, and remedy ſeveral defects and omiſſions not included in the former. 2 Saund. 258.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 13. enacts, "that if any verdict of twelve men or more, ſhall hereafter be given for the plaintiff or demandant, or for the defendant or tenant, bailiff in aſſize, vouchee, pray in aid, or tenant by receit, in any action, ſuit, bill, plaint or demand in any court of record, the judgment thereupon ſhall not be ſtayed nor reverſed by reaſon of any variance in form only, between the original writ or bill, and the declaration, plaint or demand; or for lack of any averment of any life or lives of any perſon or perſons, ſo as upon examination, the ſaid perſon be proved to be in life; or by reaſon that the venire facias, habeas corpora, or diſtringas, is awarded to a wrong officer, upon any inſufficient ſuggeſtion; or by reaſon the viſne is in ſome part miſawarded, or ſued out of more places, or of fewer places than it ought to be, ſo as ſome one place be right named; or by reaſon that any of the jury which tried the ſaid iſſue is miſnamed, either in the ſurname or addition, in any of the ſaid writs, or in any return upon any of the ſaid writs, ſo as upon examination it may be proved to be the ſame man that was meant to be returned; or by reaſon that there is no return upon any of the ſaid writs, ſo as a pannel of the names of jurors be returned and annexed to the ſaid writ; or for that the ſheriff's name, or other officer's name having the return thereof, is not ſet to the return of any ſuch writ, ſo as upon examination it be proved that the ſaid writ was returned by the ſheriff or under ſheriff, or any ſuch other officer; or by reaſon that the plaintiff in an ejectione firmæ, or in any perſonal action or ſuit, (being an infant under the age of one and twenty years) did appear by attorney therein, and the verdict paſs for him; any law, cuſtom or uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding."

"Provided, that this act, or any thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to any writ, declaration or ſuit of appeal of felony or murder; nor to any indictment or preſentment of felony, murder or treaſon, nor to any proceſs upon any of them; nor to any writ, bill, action or information upon any popular or penal ſtatute; any thing therein contained to the contrary notwithſtanding."

The main deſign of this ſtatute was to help any miſtake in the jury proceſs, but there were ſeveral things ſtill to be ſupplied, and ſeveral others to be adjudged form, which were always conſtrued to be matters of ſubſtance, and conſequently not aided by any of the former ſtatutes; and therefore the following act was made, called by Judge Twyſden, The Omnipotent Act. G. H. C. P. 113.

Stat. 16. & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. ſect. 1. "Whereas great delay, trouble and vexation hath been, and ſtill is occaſioned to the people of this realm, as well by arreſting and reverſing of judgments, as by ſtaying executions by writ of error and ſuperſedeas: for remedy thereof, be it enacted, &c. That if any verdict of twelve men ſhall be given in any action, ſuit, bill or demand, to be commenced from and after 25 March 1665, in any of his Majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter, or in the courts of record in the counties palatine of Cheſter, Lancaſter, or Durham, or in his Majeſty's courts of the great ſeſſions in any of the twelve ſhires of Wales, judgment thereupon ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed, for default in form, or lack of form; or by reaſon that there are not pledges, or but one pledge to proſecute, returned upon the original writ; or becauſe the name of the ſheriff is not returned upon ſuch original writ; or for default of entering pledges upon any bill or declaration; or for default of alledging the bringing into court of any bond, bill, indenture, or other deed whatſoever, mentioned in the declaration or other pleading; or for default of allegation of bringing into court of letters teſtamentary, or letters of adminiſtration; or by reaſon of the omiſſion of vi & armis, or contra pacem; or for or by reaſon of the miſtaking of the chriſtian name or ſurname of the plaintiff or defendant, demandant or tenant, ſum or ſums of money, day, month, or year, by the clerk, in any bill, declaration or pleading, where the right name, ſurname, ſum, day, month or year, in any writ, plaint, roll or record preceding, or in the ſame roll or record where the miſtake is committed, is or are once truly and rightly alledged, whereunto the plaintiff might have demurred; and ſhewn the ſame for cauſe; nor for want of the averment of hoc paratus eſt verificare; or for hoc paratus eſt verificare per recordum; or for not alledging prout patet per recordum; or for that there is no right venue, ſo as the cauſe were tried by a jury of the proper county or place where the action is laid; nor any judgment after verdict, confeſſion by cognovit actionem, or relicta verificatione, ſhall be reverſed for want of miſericordia, or capiatur; or by reaſon that a capiatur is entered for a miſericordia, or a miſericordia is entered where a capiatur ought to have been been entered; nor for that ideo conceſſum eſt per curiam is entered for ideo conſideratum eſt per curiam; nor for that the increaſe of coſts after a verdict in an action, or upon a nonſuit in replevin, are not entered to be at the requeſt of the party for whom the judgment is given; nor by reaſon that the coſts in any judgment whatſoever are not entered to be by conſent of the plaintiff; but that all ſuch omiſſions, variances, defects, and all other matters of like nature, not being againſt the right of the matter of the ſuit, nor whereby the iſſue or trial are altered, ſhall be amended by the juſtices or other judges of the courts where ſuch judgments are or ſhall be given, or whereunto the record is or ſhall be removed by writ of error."

Sect. 2. "Provided, that this act, or any thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to any writ, declaration, or ſuit of appeal of felony or murder, nor to any indictment or preſentment of felony, murder, treaſon, or other matter, nor to any proceſs upon any of them; nor to any writ, bill, action or information upon any penal ſtatute, other than concerning cuſtoms and ſubſidies of tonnage and poundage."

Sect. 5. "Provided, that this act ſhall not extend to any writ of error to be brought by any executor or adminiſtrator; nor to any action popular, nor unto any other action which is, or hereafter ſhall be brought upon any penal law or ſtatute (except action of debt for not ſetting forth of tithes); nor to any indictment, preſentment, inquiſition, information, or appeal."

The foregoing ſtatutes being chiefly calculated to aid imperfections after verdict, and the ſtatute 27 Eliz. c. 5. aiding defects in form only on a general demurrer, it was thought proper to enlarge the authority of the courts further in favour of ſuitors; and therefore the following act was made. Carth. 66. Skin. 49.

Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 1. For the amendment of the law in ſeveral particulars, and for the eaſier, ſpeedier, and better advancement of juſtice, Be it enacted, &c. "That where any demurrer ſhall be joined, and entered in any action or ſuit in any court of record within this realm, the judges ſhall proceed and give judgment, according as the very right of the cauſe and matter in law ſhall appear unto them, without regarding any imperfection, omiſſion or defect in any writ, return, plaint, declaration, or other pleading, proceſs, or courſe of proceeding whatſoever, except thoſe only which the party demurring ſhall ſpecially and particularly ſet down and expreſs, together with his demurrer, or cauſes of the ſame, notwithſtanding that ſuch imperfection, omiſſion or defect, might have heretofore been taken to be matter of ſubſtance, and aided by the ſtatute made 27 Eliz. c. 5. ſo as ſufficient matter appear in the ſaid pleadings, upon which the court may give judgment, according to the very right of the cauſe; and therefore no advantage or exception ſhall be taken of or for an immaterial traverſe; or of or for the default of entering pledges upon any bill or declaration; or of or for the default of alledging the bringing into court any bond, bill, indenture, or other deed whatſoever, mentioned in the declaration or other pleading; or of or for the default of alledging of the bringing into court letters teſtamentary, or letters of adminiſtration; or of or for the omiſſion of vi & armis & contra pacem, or either of them; or of or for the want of averment of hoc paratus eſt verificare, or, hoc paratus eſt verificare per recordum; or of or for not alledging prout patet per recordum; but the court ſhall give judgment according to the very right of the cauſe, as aforeſaid, without regarding any ſuch imperfections, omiſſions and defects, or any other matter of like nature, except the ſame ſhall be ſpecially and particularly ſet down and ſhewn for cauſe of demurrer."

Sect. 2. "And all the ſtatutes of jeofails ſhall be extended to judgments which ſhall at any time afterwards be entered upon confeſſion, nihil dicit, or non ſum informatus, in any court of record; and no ſuch judgment ſhall be reverſed, nor any judgment upon any writ of enquiry of damages executed thereon be ſtayed or reverſed, for or by reaſon of any imperfection, omiſſion, defect, matter or thing whatſoever, which would have been aided and cured by any of the ſaid ſtatutes of jeofails, in caſe a verdict of twelve men had been given in the ſaid action or ſuit, ſo as there be an original writ or bill, and warrants of attorney duly filed according to the law as is now uſed."

By ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 20. ſ. 7. This ſtatute is extended to writs of mandamus and informations in nature of quo warranto.

Notwithſtanding the great enlargment of the power of the judges by the ſeveral ſtatutes before mentioned, in amending writs, proceſſes, &c. yet none of them was thought to extend to writs of error, and the rather, becauſe ſuch amendment could not be in affirmance of the judgment; but it being found, that defective writs of error occaſioned great delay of juſtice, it is enacted,

By ſtatute 5 Geo. 1. c. 13. "That all writs of error wherein there ſhall be any variance from the original record, or other defect, may and ſhall be amended and made agreeable to ſuch record, by the reſpective courts where ſuch writ or writs of error ſhall be made returnable; and that where any verdict hath been or ſhall be given in any action, ſuit, bill, plaint or demand in any of his Majeſty's courts of record, the judgment thereupon ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed for any defect or fault; either in form or ſubſtance, in any bill, writ original or judicial, or for any variance in ſuch writs from the declaration or other proceedings."

3. Writs original and judicial amendable, and not amendable.

Error to reverſe a judgment in treſpaſs, for that the writ of enquiry was directed to the ſheriffs of London quod inquirant, when it ſhould be quod inquirerent; alſo it was that they inquirant per ſacr'um proborum, &c. de civitate præd', when it ſhould be de Balliva, and there was no city mentioned before; adjudged, that the firſt was amendable, for it was the default of the clerk, and that the other was well enough; for it was ſometimes de civitate, and ſometimes de Balliva. Cro. Eliz. 657.

The caſe was, a common recovery was ſuffered, but the writ of entry either by being wet or ill keeping, was ſo much defaced, that in ſome material places it was not legible, but in the roll it plainly appeared what things were in demand, and ſo likewiſe in the habere facias ſeiſinam; and upon conſideration of the ſtatute 8 H. 6. by which power is given to the juſtices to amend writs and records in affirmance of judgments, where it ſhall appear to them to be the miſpriſion of the clerk; It was ruled, that this writ ſhall be amended, becauſe the cuſtos brevium is the clerk of the court, in whoſe cuſtody this writ was kept and defaced, and by whatever means it happened, 'tis a miſpriſion, viz. 'tis an offence and a default in the clerk, which as to this matter is the ſame thing as a miſpriſion; but if the parchment had been eaten by rats or deſtroyed in part, it could not have been amended. 1 And. 79.

If an original writ wants form, or if there is falſe latin in it, or if it varies from the Regiſter in point of form, the judgment ſhall not be ſtayed after a verdict, but the ſame is amendable. 4 Rep. 45.

A note was delivered to the curſitor to make an original againſt B. B. militem, and inſtead of that addition, he put in generoſum, and in all the proceedings he was named militem; adjudged, that the negligent omiſſion or addition of any thing, which the clerk ought to have added or omitted of courſe, ſhall be amended. 8 Rep. Blackamore's caſe.

In treſpaſs, upon the general iſſue pleaded, one of the jurors of the principal panel appeared at the aſſizes, and no more; and upon the prayer of the plaintiff, a tales was awarded, and the ſheriff returned a panel in this manner; Nomina decem talium, and under it he returned the names of eleven jurors; adjudged, that this was only a miſpriſion of the clerk, and the word decem was put out, and then the title was Nomina talium, &c. 4 Rep. 102.

In treſpaſs, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the venire facias was directed vicecomiti, &c. leaving out the county of which he was ſheriff; but becauſe the roll was right, and it being in a judicial writ, it was amended. 2 Cro. 78.

Ejectment,

Ejectment, &c. the original was for one houſe, but the pleadings, the roll, and the record of niſi prius mentioned two houſes; after a verdict for the plaintiff, and a writ of error brought, and before the record was moved, the plaintiff moved the court, that the writ might be amended; which was granted, becauſe the writ which mentioned one houſe could never be the ground of all thoſe proceedings where two houſes were mentioned. Brownl. 144.

Judicial writs ſhall be amended after a verdict, to make them agree with the roll, if that is right; therefore a venire facias, which bore teſte out of term, or on a Sunday, or a diſtringas awarded a long time before the trial, ſhall be amended by the roll. 2 Cro. 161.

In ejectment the diſtringas was between Richard Folkes and John Child, and the panel was between Richard Folkes and William Child; the truth was, there were two records of niſi prius, in both which Richard Folkes was plaintiff, in one againſt John Child, and in the other againſt William Child, and the ſheriff, by miſtake, had annexed the panel between Richard Folkes and John Child to the diſtringas between him and William Child; but adjudged, it was aided by the ſtatute of jeofails, and 'tis as if there had been no writ at all. 2 Cro. 396.

Error of a judment, &c. and the error aſſigned was becauſe a juror was returned in the venire facias by the name of Hugh Maltby; and upon the diſtringas, Hugh Moltby was returned and ſworn, and another juror was returned by the name of John Collingham of Cortlington; and upon the diſtringas, John Collingham of Gortlington was returned and ſworn, and both theſe faults were amended; the firſt becauſe the juror came into court, and upon examination it appeared he was the ſame man mentioned both in the venire facias and diſtringas, there being only the alteration of one letter in his ſurname, and the other was amended, becauſe the variance of the town where the juror dwelt is not material; for at the time of the return of the venire facias he may dwell in one town, and at the time of the return of the diſtringas in another. 2 Cro. 457.

Adjudged, that where the venire facias is good, and well returned, a fault in the diſtringas ſhall be amended by it, by the ſheriff in court. 2 Roll. Rep. 111.

Quare impedit to preſent ad eccleſiam, &c. and before appearance the plaintiff moved, that the writ might be amended, for his title was to preſent to a vicarage, and not to a rectory; the court doubted, becauſe it was in an original writ, and in a matter of ſubſtance, but becauſe the attorney gave a note to the curſitor to draw the writ to preſent ad vicariam, &c. it was held to be the miſpriſion of the clerk, and amendable. Cro. Car. 53.

Aſſumpſit againſt Anne, the executrix of Sir William Wade, and the record and venire facias were between the ſame parties, but the habeas corpora was between the plaintiff and the Lady Wade, executrix of Sir Henry Wade; it was inſiſted, that the trial was without warrant; but adjudged, that ſince all the other proceedings were right, this miſpriſion of the habeas corpora ſhall be amended. Cro. Car. 21.

The venire facias and other proceſs was directed to the ſheriffs of Canterbury, and the return was made by one ſheriff; adjudged, this was amendable at Common law, and likewiſe by the ſtatute of jeofails, for that extends to indictments and informations on penal ſtatutes, but this is an indictment for a miſdemeanor; ſo the ſheriff of Canterbury was ſworn in court, that there was but one ſheriff, and it was amended. Sid. 244.

Debt upon the ſtatute againſt the hundred was brought by original, and at the niſi prius the plaintiff was nonſuit, becauſe the original was Edward, when it ſhould be Edmund; a rule was made for the curſitor to attend, and that if he had right inſtructions, then to amend it; which was done in court. Sid. 412.

The plaintiff brought an action by original, and the inſtructions to the curſitor were right, by his proper name Weſtby, but the writ was Weſtly, and ſo were all the proceedings; upon a motion to the court, the curſitor was ordered to attend, and it appearing that his inſtructions were right, the original was amended in court, and ſo were all the proceedings, without applying to the Chancery. 2 Vent. 152.

In ejectment brought by original, the record upon the iſſue roll was, that the defendant, ſummonitus fuit to anſwer the plaintiff, &c. after a verdict for the plaintiff, upon Not guilty pleaded, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here was a vitious original, which is not aided by any ſtatute of jeofails; for it was, that the defendant ſummonitus fuit, &c. when in ejectment (as this cauſe was) it ought to be attachiatus fuit, &c. and this is not helped by the verdict; but upon ſearch of the file, there was no original found; and therefore it was inſiſted for the defendant, that ſince no original could be found, it muſt be intended that there was an original, but that it was vitious, becauſe it appeared to be ſo upon the iſſue roll; but adjudged, that it ſhall be intended a good original, this being after a verdict, and that ſuch good original is loſt; but if it had been vitious, the court will not intend that it was ſo, unleſs 'tis produced by the defendant. 1 Saund. 318.

Upon a motion in arreſt of judgment it was inſiſted, that the day on which the aſſizes was to be held, and the place where, were left out of the diſtringas, and ſo a miſtrial: Sed per curiam, If there had been no diſtringas, the trial had been good, becauſe the warrant to try the cauſe is the jurata, and that being right, the diſtringas ſhall be amended by it. 3 Mod. 78.

After the death of the Lord Powis, &c. the eſcheator took a verdict in paper, afterwards a ſuperſedeas came to him at the ſuit of one Herbert and his wife, in which writ the ſyllable (ſe) was omitted, for it was written thus at full length, ſuperdeas; adjudged, that it was not amendable. Dyer 170.

In an action of waſte upon the ſtatute of Glouceſter; the writ was quod nullus faciat vaſtam, venditionem & diſtrictionem, when it ſhould have been deſtructionem; adjudged, this being an original writ ſhall not be amended, becauſe 'tis matter of ſubſtance; for the word diſtrictio alters the very ſenſe of the ſtatute. 4 Rep. 44. Freeman's caſe.

Upon a motion to amend a ve. fa. which was album breve, the court refuſed to amend it, tho' the ſheriff's name was to the panel; but if the ſheriff had returned the ve. fa. as uſual, (viz.) executio iſtius brevis patet in quodam pannello huic brevi annex', tho' he had not ſet his name to that return, yet becauſe it was in the panel, it ſhould have been amended. Brownl. 43.

After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the name of the ſheriff was not endorſed on the diſtringas; it was inſiſted, that this being a judicial writ, it was not neceſſary; but adjudged that it was ill, and not amendable by any ſtatute; and 'tis the ſame caſe, as where the ſheriff's name is not endorſed on the ve. fac. which is never amendable. 2 Cro. 188.

Error of a judgment in an inferior court, in which the plaint was entered againſt Francis, but all the proceedings were againſt John, adjudged, that a plaint is in nature of an original writ, and this being erroneous, cannot be amended after a verdict. Style 115.

After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved to ſet it aſide, becauſe the diſtringas and jurata are returnable a die ſanctæ Trinitatis in tres ſeptimanas (which happened to be on the 26*th day of June*) niſi Johannes Holt miles, &c. 27 die Junii, &c. prius venerit; ſo that the day of niſi prius was after the day in bank; but the plea roll was right, for there it was a die ſancti Michaelis in tres ſeptimanas; adjudged, this could not be amended, for the day appointed by the niſi prius is impoſſible; 'tis true, where the diſtringas and jurata are right, the niſi prius roll may be amended by the plea roll, ſo as it doth not alter the point in iſſue; but here they are both wrong. 1 Salk. 48.

Upon a motion to amend a writ of error, for that it recited a judgment given in curia regis, when it ſhould be regis & reginæ, for that the note to the curſitor was right, and this was a miſpriſion only in matter of form; but it was denied to be amended, for there is no fault in the writ itſelf; 'tis true, it doth not agree with the record; now the ſtatute 8 H. 6. which gives the court power to amend, 'tis in matters precedent to the judgment, and to ſupport judgments; but if a writ of error might might be amended, it may be to reverſe a judgment; beſides, this writ is a commiſſion to the court, and they cannot amend their own commiſſion. 1 Salk. 49.

The defendant was found guilty upon an information for a libel; and it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the ve. fa. was returnable die lunæ prox' poſt tres ſept. ſanct. Michaelis, which was 23 Octob. but the diſtringas, thro' miſtake, was teſted 24 Octob. which was the day after the venire facias was returnable, when it ſhould be on the ſame day; this was agreed to be a diſcontinuance, for the 24th day cannot continue the 23d day, and 'tis not amendable at Common law, or by any ſtatute of amendments: not at Common law, becauſe this would be to warrant a trial that was tried without any authority, and to make it contrary to the truth of the fact; not by any ſtatute of amendments, of which there are but two, (viz.) 14 Ed. 3. cap. 6. and 8 H. 6. cap. 2. 12. Now this laſt ſtatute was only to enlarge the ſubject-matter of the firſt, which extends only to proceſs out of the roll; (i. e.) writs which iſſue out of the record, and not to proceedings on the roll itſelf; and that ſtatute doth not extend to caſes wherein the King is concerned; and the ſtatute 8 H. 6. has always been conſtrued in imitation of the ſtatute of 1 Ed. 3. not to extend to the crown. 1 Salk. 51.

Judgment in treſpaſs againſt five defendants; and a writ of error being intended, the attorney left a note with the curſitor to make it out between the plaintiff and five more, naming them: Note; E. one of the defendants is dead, make out the writ of error, which he did againſt four, and took no notice of him that was dead; the queſtion was, whether this was amendable; and adjudged it was not; for all the parties in the firſt judgment ought to join in a writ of error, which was not done here, but only four, without mentioning the other to be dead; 'tis true, the inſtructions to the curſitor were plain, and it was his miſtake, but yet it ſhall not be amended, becauſe this is a writ to reverſe a judgment, and the ſtatutes were made to amend writs for the ſupport of judgments; ſo this writ was quaſhed. 5 Mod. 16, 69.

4. Declarations and other pleadings and rolls, amendable, and not amendable.

Aſſumpſit, &c. by the plaintiff againſt two defendants; he had a verdict, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that by the Imparlance roll (which is called the declaration upon the file) the promiſe was alledged to be made by one defendant, and no more, but in the plea roll, and in the record of niſi prius, and in all the other proceedings after, it was alledged to be by two; but adjudged, that the Imparlance roll in this caſe ſhall be amended, becauſe it appeared by the paper-book, that the promiſe was made by two; ſo that it was a plain miſtake of the clerk to enter it on the imparlance roll, that it was made by one. Cro. Eliz. 258.

Ejectment, &c. againſt two defendants, in which the plaintiff declared, that they intraverunt, &c. but the expulſion and ejectment were laid in the ſingular number, viz. a poſſeſſione ſua expulit & ejecit; it was objected, that 'tis not amendable, becauſe 'tis the point of the action; adjudged, that it was amendable, for 'tis only the miſpriſion of the clerk. 2 Bulſt. 35.

In ejectment, the plaintiff declared upon a demiſe 25 March 6 Jac. by virtue of which he entered and was poſſeſſed, &c. until the defendant poſtea ſcilicet anno ſexto ſupradicto ejected him; ſo that he named the year, but not the day when he was ejected; the defendant imparled to the next term, and the plaintiff declared right, and both the day and the year were named when he was ejected: After a verdict for the plaintiff, on error brought, the queſtion was, whether it was erroneous, for that no day was ſet forth in the firſt declaration, when the plaintiff was ejected? It was agreed by the court, that the firſt is the moſt material declaration; therefore if any matter of ſubſtance is omitted in it, that ſhall not be amended by the ſecond declaration after the imparlance, becauſe that is but a recital of the firſt, but in this caſe the firſt declaration is good; for the plaintiff declared on a demiſe 25 Martii 6 Jac. which is the firſt day of the year, and that the defendant poſtea ſcilicet anno ſexto Jac. ejected him, which is certain enough, tho' the day was not mentioned, becauſe it was after the demiſe, and before the action brought. 2 Cro. 211.

Error of a judgment, &c. and after the record removed and error aſſigned, which was in the entry after the imparlance, in this manner, Ad quem diem venerunt tam præd' Thomas (the plaintiff) quam præd' Samuel (the defendant) per attornatos ſuos prædictos et præd' Thomas defendit vim & injuriam, &c. when it ſhould be Samuel, the defendant; ſo that the name of the plaintiff was miſtaken, and put in ſtead of the defendant; but it was adjudged amendable. 2 Cro. 627.

In trover, &c. the plaintiff, amongſt many other goods, declared, that he was poſſeſſed de uno ſpadone, una equa pretii 52*s.* 4*d.* ſo there was no price added to the gelding: The court was divided, whether this was a defect of form or of ſubſtance; the two judges, who held it to be a defect of ſubſtance, inſiſted that a value ought to be added to every dead thing, and a price to every live thing; but the other two held it not neceſſary; eſpecially where the thing itſelf was not in demand, but damages, and that it was only a defect of form, which was aided by the ſtatute 18 Eliz. but upon viewing the roll it appeared to be de uno ſpadone & de una equa pretii 53*s.* 4*d.* ſo that the copulative et making it an entire ſentence, the price ſhall relate to both gelding and mare, and the record of niſi prius was amended by the roll. 2 Cro. 129.

Debt againſt an adminiſtrator, who pleaded plene adminiſtravit, &c. the plaintiff replied, that die impetrationis, &c. habuit diverſa bona, which muſt be intended, that the plaintiff himſelf habuit diverſa bona, &c. when he ſhould have alledged, that the defendant habuit diverſa bona, &c. but adjudged upon a motion in arreſt of judgment, that it ſhould be amended, for it was only the miſtake of the clerk. Yelv. 65.

Debt againſt an heir upon the bond of his anceſtor, and the plaintiff, in reciting the bond in his declaration, had left out the words ad quam quidem ſolutionem obligo me et hæredes meos: after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was inſiſted, that it might not be amended, becauſe it was the ſubſtance of the declaration; but adjudged, that it ſhall be amended, eſpecially ſince the action was brought againſt the heir, and he ſo named in the declaration; and this omiſſion was merely by the negligence of the clerk, who had the bond before him. Cro. Car. 147.

Debt for 300*l.* part upon an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and part upon an inſimul computaſſet, and in ſumming it in the imparlance roll both did not amount to 300*l.* for it wanted 10*l.* of that ſum: after a verdict for the plaintiff, and error brought, this was amended. Hutt. 83.

Aſſault, &c. the plaintiff had a verdict and damages to 3100*l.* upon view of the record the attorney for the defendants found that there was no day or year entered on the imparlance roll, when the aſſault was committed, but a blank left for it; and there being a day given to move in arreſt of judgment, the attorney for the plaintiff got by night into the treaſury, and filled up the imparlance roll with the day and year; the attorney for the defendant having beſpoke of the pronotary a recordatur, which he was to have the next day; this matter being diſcovered, it was moved, that the roll might be made as before; but adjudged, that it was amendable, until and after the recordatur entered, in the one caſe by the clerks, and in the other by the court, for what was amendable was only matter of form. Latch. 164.

Caſe, wherein the plaintiff declared, that whereas in ſuch a court of pie-powders held at Glouceſter ſecundum conſuetudinem civitatis illius, he brought an action of debt againſt W. R. who arreſted, &c. and afterwards ſuffered to eſcape, &c. thoſe words ſecundum conſuetudinem civitatis illius were in the imparlance roll, but were left out of the iſſue roll; and after a verdict for the plaintiff, this was one objection in arreſt of judgment; but adjudged, that it was only vitium clerici, and therefore amendable. Cro. Car. 33.

In an action upon the ſtatute of Winton; the caſe was, Bearcroft ſent 4000*l.* by the Worceſter carrier towards London, and divers ſervants to guard the waggon, which was afterwards robbed in the hundred of Burnham and Stone; and he himſelf declared againſt the hundreds for an aſſault and robbery done to himſelf when he was at Worceſter, above fifty miles from the place where the robbery was committed, and declared, that he made oath, that he did not know the robbers, or any of them; and the jury being ready at the bar to try the cauſe, the trial was put off to another day, before which day there was a miſtake found in the declaration, for that he ought to have declared of a robbery on his ſervants, and of the oath made by them; and upon a motion he had leave to amend the declaration, for otherwiſe the year would be lapſed, and ſo the action loſt, tho' this made great raſures and obliterations in the record. 3 Lev. 349.

Declarations which want ſubſtance ſhall not be amended in another term, neither ſhall matters of ſubſtance in a plea in bar, or in a replication, eſpecially matters in fact, be amended in another term. 8 Rep. Blackmore's caſe.

Debt on a bond to ſtand to an award, &c. the defendant pleaded that the arbitrators made no award; the plaintiff replied and ſhewed the award, but aſſigned no breach, iſſue being joined upon the award; the plaintiff had a verdict, but could have no judgment, becauſe that defect in his replication, in not aſſigning a breach being matter of ſubſtance, could not be amended; for if there was no breach, there was no cauſe of action. 2 Cro. 220.

In debt for 800l. the plaintiff declared upon a ſtatute, the money to be paid upon requeſt; and upon oyer of the ſtatute it appeared, that it was to be paid on a certain day; adjudged not amendable: this was upon a demurrer to the declaration. 2 Cro. 316.

Caſe, &c. wherein the plaintiff declared that he having brought an action of battery againſt the defendant, and proceeding to a trial, a juror was withdrawn, and they ſubmitted the cauſe to the award of two of the jurors infra unum menſem proxime ſequen' fiend', and that afterwards eodem die, in conſideration that the plaintiff did promiſe to perform on his part, what the arbitrators ſhould award (leaving out infra menſem) the defendant promiſed in the ſame manner, &c. but the words infra unum menſem were put in by the plaintiff's attorney after iſſue joined, and without notice given to the defendant; upon non aſſumpſit pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict, but the judgment was arreſted by Roll only in court, for that this amendment was in a point material; for tho' every ſubmiſſion to an award implies a promiſe to perform it, and tho' the award muſt be taken according to and with relation to the ſubmiſſion, which in this caſe was to be made within a month, yet in judgment of law the promiſe is collateral to the ſubmiſſion; and not being laid in this declaration, to be made at the ſame time, but another time tho' it be eodem die, yet 'tis not adequate to the ſubmiſſion, becauſe it cannot immediately be applied to it, for a little diſtance of time, tho' in the ſame day, alters the intendment of the law, a new trial was awarded. Allen 69.

Aſſumpſit, &c. againſt John Germain, knight, the defendant pleaded in abatement that he is a knight and baronet; the plaintiff replied that he is a knight; and moved to amend his declaration upon payment of coſts; but it was denied, becauſe there was nothing to amend by, and the defendant had taken advantage of the fault. 1 Salk. 50.

In covenant not to make, or ſuffer any act or thing to incumber, &c. the breach aſſigned was that the defendant ad ſeſſionem Ceſtriæ tent', &c. anno. 4 Jac. 2. utlagat' fuit; and upon demurrer to this declaration, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth in what term the outlawry was had, it was moved to amend it; but adjudged, that if the defendant had pleaded in abatement, or to the right, it might be reaſonable to amend the declaration, but never where he demurs, becauſe this fault might be the reaſon of the demurrer. 1 Salk. 50.

Debt qui tam, &c. for 100l. againſt a juſtice of peace, for refuſing to grant his warrant to ſuppreſs a conventicle; after iſſue joined, and the cauſe ſet down to be tried at the niſi prius, the plaintiff moved to amend a word in his declaration, which was, that he had laid the conventicle to be at Mr. Turner's manſion-houſe, when in truth it was not, but at a little diſtance from it: Sed per curiam, After iſſue joined, &c. and this information being on a penal ſtatute, it ſhall not be amended. 2 Mod. 144.

Writ of error to reverſe a judgment upon a mutuatus, the error aſſigned was, for that the memorandum was die veneris, on ſuch a day, which was before the debt became due; it was moved for leave to amend the memorandum, and to make it another day, that it might agree with the judgment; but per curiam it was denied. 4 Mod. 367.

Caſe againſt huſband and wife for words ſpoken by the wife; the plaintiff had a verdict, and the judgment was entered thus, et præd' (the wife) in miſericordia, when the huſband ought likewiſe to be amerced; upon error brought, the record was certified in B. R. and becauſe upon view of the prothonotary's book of judgments it was right entered there, it was amended by the court. Hob. 127.

In an action upon the ſtatute of Winton of hue and cry, the plaintiff had miſtaken to alledge the very day on which the robbery was done, but ſhewed, that it was committed in September, &c. and that he gave notice to the hundred, when in truth it was committed in October, ſo that by this record it would appear, that notice was given before the robbery was committed; the record was made up for trial, but it was not put in to the clerk of the aſſiſe, becauſe of this miſtake; and thereupon the court was moved, that it might be amended, which was granted. 1 Brownl. 156.

In a quo warranto, the plaintiff had judgment by diſclaimer of the liberties, virtute vel prætextu literarum geren' dat' decimo ſeptimo anno Jacobi Regis, which laſt words were written in the margin of the paper book, but there being a line drawn croſs, they were left out by the clerk in engroſſing the judgment, therefore it was moved, that the words geren' dat' anno decimo ſeptimo Jacobi might be interlined in the record; againſt which it was objected, that it could not be amended, it being now another term after the judgment was entered; but adjudged, that it was amendable, as well in another term as in the ſame term, and that by the Common law, for 'tis no more than the miſpriſion of the clerk, as where a ſpecial verdict is miſtaken it ſhall be rectified by the notes of the clerk. Cro. Car. 101.

Aſſaults againſt the defendant, in which the plaintiff declared againſt W. Malin of Langley; and the record of niſi prius was W. Langly of Malins; the plaintiff had a verdict, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment for that reaſon; but adjudged, that it ſhall be amended, for 'tis a plain miſtake of the clerk, and the record of niſi prius ſhall be amended by the roll. Hetley 64.

In ejectment againſt four defendants, the jury found two not guilty and one of the other guilty as to one meſſuage, ten acres of land, and ten acres of paſture, and the other as to ſixty acres of land, and fifteen acres of paſture; and in entering up the judgment, the clerk miſtook the parcels, and entered, that the firſt was guilty as to the ſixty acres, and the other as to the meſſuage, &c. and upon a writ of error in B. R. the queſtion was, whether this could be amended; and adjudged that it might, becauſe 'tis only the miſpriſion of the clerk in matter of fact, when he had the record before him, by which he might be directed, but if it had been miſpriſion in matter of law it could not be amended. Palm. 258.

Error of a judgment in ejectment, for that in the record a ſpace was left to inſert the coſts, which were not yet taxed; but becauſe the record was not certified, the plaintiff had liberty to get the coſts taxed and make the record perfect; but per Hale chief baron, If it had been certified, it had been amended by rule of court, and if it ſhould afterwards be removed by writ of error, the court there muſt amend it; for if a record is removed out of the C. B. into B. R. by writ of error, and afterwards amended by the rule of court, it muſt likewiſe be amended in B. R. becauſe 'tis an affirmance of the judgment, and therefore favoured in law. Hard. 505.

5. Records of niſi prius and poſteas amendable, and not amendable.

In ejectment, the caſe upon the pleading was, that J. W. biſhop of Glouceſter, being ſeiſed of a barn and tithe, demiſed the ſame to the plaintiff, reciting the confirmation of the dean and chapter, but that was of a leaſe made by R. W. upon the trial the jury did not find de facto, that the dean and chapter did confirm any leaſe made by J. W. but they found expreſly that he did make a leaſe of this barn, and tithes, to the plaintiff, who now moved the court, that the confirmation of the dean and chapter of a leaſe made by R. W. might be amended, and made J. W. the plaintiff ſuggeſting that the jury intended to find it ſo, which might appear by the notes of the clerk of aſſiſes; but the court would not amend the verdict upon ſuch ſuggeſtion, it being returned to the court, and now too late to have it amended. Cro. Eliz. Normington v. Try.

After a verdict for the plaintiff at the aſſiſes, it was moved to amend the jurata in the record of niſi prius, which was thus, (viz.) Ponitur in reſpectu coram domino rege et domina regina apud Weſtm', &c. niſi juſticiar', &c. ad aſſiſas capiend' aſſign prius die, &c. viceſimo die Martii; now here were two miſtakes, for the Queen died in December before, ſo it could not be coram domina regina, and the aſſiſes were on the 23*d day*, and not on the 20*th day of March*; the record was right in both theſe matters, and therefore it was inſiſted, that the jurata in the record of niſi prius might be amended by it, as it was in Merchant and Reaſon's caſe, and in Aquila Week's caſe; but it was denied; for in all caſes where the record of niſi prius hath been amended by the roll, the writ of diſtringas hath been right, which, together with the niſi prius is a ſufficient authority for the judge to try the cauſe, but here the diſtringas was wrong, for it was Gulielmus & Maria dei gratia, when the Queen was at that time dead; 'tis true, the miſpriſion of the clerk in a writ of niſi prius is amendable by the ſtatute 8 H. 6. according to Blackmore's caſe, but then it muſt have ſufficient matter to authoriſe the judge to try the iſſue, for without that writ he cannot try it; now in this caſe there could be no authority from the Queen, for ſhe was dead, and the cauſe was tried three months after her death, for which reaſon it was not amendable. 5 Mod. 211.

6. Iſſues, verdicts and records amendable, and not amendable.

Error, &c. in a writ of annuity, wherein the judgment was, that the plaintiff ſhould recover the arrears before and pending the writ, quæ quidem arreragia in toto ſe attingunt ad 75*l.* which in truth was a quarter's rent more than was in arrear; and this was aſſigned for error; but adjudged, that becauſe it appeared upon the record to what the arrears did amount at the day of the writ brought, and becauſe the judgment had been perfect, if the clerk had not put it into a certain ſum, which was not his buſineſs to do; therefore this was only his miſtake, and ſhall be amended. Dyer 55.

In Blackmore's caſe it was adjudged, that the court in the ſame term may as well amend their own judgment, as any other part of the record; for in the ſame term the judgment is given, the record is in the breaſt of the judges, and not in the roll. 8 Rep.

Error of a judgment againſt Edward Seymour at the ſuit of Sir John Clifton; and the error aſſigned was, that the judgment was entered thus; (viz.) quod recuperet verſus Edvardum Seymour, leaving out the word prædictum; adjudged, that it was amendable. Goldſ. 113.

Two plaintiffs brought an ejectment in C. B. againſt two defendants: upon Not guilty pleaded, the jury found one of the defendants guilty as to the lands in D. and the other defendant guilty as to the lands in S. and in entering the judgment there was a miſtake by the clerk, who entered quite contrary to the finding of the jury; for that the defendant which was found guilty as to the lands in D. the entry was, that he was guilty of the ejectment of the lands in S. and ſo e converſo; and upon a writ of error brought in B. R. the queſtion was, whether this could be amended after the record moved? The better opinion was, that upon a writ of error in B. R. upon a judgment in C. B. the entry is mittitur tranſcriptum recordi; but upon a writ of error in the Exchequer chamber, upon a judgment in B. R. the record remains ſtill in B. R. and therefore that court may amend it after ſuch writ of error brought; but this muſt be in a miſtake, and not in point of judgment, where there is matter of law. 2 Roll. 252.

Upon a demurrer to a declaration in C. B. judgment was given againſt the plaintiff, who brought a writ of error in B. R. for that the judgment was entered thus, (viz.) that on ſuch a day the plaintiff being exactus non venit, ideo nil capiat per breve, and thereupon a writ of inquiry was grounded, and this was aſſigned for error, for that this judgment was entered upon a nonſuit, when it ſhould have been upon a demurrer: Sed per curiam, There is little difference between judgment in both caſes; for the judgment in both is, that nil capiat per breve; ſo that this being only a miſ-entry of the clerk, when he had the whole record before him, it was amended, tho' the error and miſ-entry was in another court. 1 Rol. Rep. 309.

In ejectment the plaintiff had a verdict for ten meſſuages, fifteen acres of land, fifteen acres of meadow, and fifteen acres of paſture, and as to the reſt in the declaration the jury found the defendant Not guilty; and the entry of the judgment was, that the plaintiff ſhould recover the meſſuages and the greater number of the acres in the verdict; and thereupon the defendant brought a writ of error, and aſſigned errors; and upon a ſcire facias ad audiendum errores, the defendant in error pleaded in nullo eſt erratum, and moved in C. B. to amend the judgment: it was objected, that the time was paſt after the aſſignment of errors to amend the judgment, and if it was not, yet the judgment could not be amended, becauſe 'tis the act of court; Sed per curiam, The time is not paſt ſo long as diminution may be alledged, or a certiorari awarded; and this being a plain miſtake in the clerk, in entering the judgment not according to the verdict, it was amended. W. Jones 9.

Debt, &c. by Thomas Welcome, againſt B. B. in which the plaintiff had a verdict, and the judgment was entered quod præd' B. B. recuperet, when it ſhould have been quod præd' Thomas recuperet; it was moved, that the record might be amended, this being only the miſpriſion of the clerk; but adjudged, that it ſhould not be amended, becauſe the judgment is the act of the court, and not of the clerk. Goldſb. 104.

Error of a judgment, &c. and error aſſigned was, that the judgment was entered, that the plaintiff ſhould recover 20*l.* aſſeſſed to him per juratores necnon 10*l. per jur'*, when it ſhould be cur', ſo that there was only a miſtake of a letter, (viz.) j for c; but becauſe it was part of the judgment, it could not be amended. Goldſ. 151.

An attorney directed his clerk to make a ca. ſa. returnable in Trinity-term, the laſt return whereof was on the 25*th of June*, and the clerk by miſtake wrote the 25*th of July*; adjudged, this was not amendable, becauſe of the miſchief which might inſue; for if 'tis amended, and made returnable the laſt return of Trinity term, it may happen that the party may be in the company of the ſheriff after the return, and before 'tis amended. 2 Sid. 7, 12.

In the year 1676 the Earl of Stafford gave a warrant of attorney to one Simpſon to confeſs a judgment at the ſuit of the plaintiff, &c. Simpſon ſent the warrant to one Wall, his entering clerk, who entered the judgment, that the plaintiff recuperet debitum et damna ſua, but left a blank for the damages; Wall died, and his warrant of attorney was loſt, but Simpſon, who was ſtill living, made affidavit of the fact, and thereupon a motion was made to inſert a ſum certain for the damages and coſts; for that at Common law, before any ſtatute of amendments, the court had power to amend their own judgments, and in this caſe the words omitted are the act of the court; they might likewiſe amend it if it had been the miſpriſion of the the clerk; all which is very true; but in this case there is nothing to amend it by; for the warrant of attorney being lost, 'tis uncertain what sum shall be allowed for costs; besides, admit that this is amendable, yet it must be in the same term in which the judgment was entered; for so long and no longer, the court hath power to amend their own judgments; but here the judgment was entered above 19 years past, and so not amendable. 5 Mod. 147.

In ejectment, the plaintiff declared on a demise 10 Aprilis 1697, instead of 1696, so that at the trial, the year 1697 was not come: There was a verdict for the plaintiff, and now he moved to amend it; but it was denied; because if it should be granted, it altered the issue and made a new title in the plaintiff. 1 Salk. 48.

Two as principals, and one as accessary, were indicted for the murder of a woman; one of the principals confessed the fact; the other principal and accessary were convicted; both the principals were hanged, and Sampson the accessary was pardoned, and brought a writ of error to reverse his attainder; and upon a certiorari to the clerk of the assise to certify the record, he returned, that at the general goal delivery, &c. held 18 die Martii in such a year, before such judges, the defendants were indicted, &c. and afterwards, 20 die Martii aforesaid, coram præfat' justiciariis, they were tried, convicted, and had judgment, &c. the error insisted on was, that there was not continuance by adjournment from the 18*th to the* 20*th of March*; 'tis true; 'tis coram præfat' justiciariis, but they may still be the same justices by another commission; that this record thus certified is ill, and cannot be amended, neither by the common law, or by any statute. Jones 420.

7. Fines and recoveries amendable, and not amendable.

In a formedon for the manor of Ilfeild, the defendant pleaded in bar a common recovery against the donee in tail of the said manor; the plaintiff replied, nul tiel record, which being certified, it appeared, that the recovery was of the manor of Isfield; adjudged, this being the mistake of the clerk in one letter, it shall be amended, especially it being in the case of a common recovery, which is suffered by the assent of both parties. 5 Rep. 46.

Upon a fine levied in Michaelmas term 11 Eliz. the proclamations ingrossed by the chirographer were right; but in the note of the fine delivered to the custos brevium, the second proclamation was entered to be made 20 Maii, where it should have been 23 Maii; adjudged, that it shall be amended, because the engrosment by the chirographer is the foundation, and that being right, 'tis a sufficient warrant to mend the other; but the court held it to be a good fine without any amendment. Hut. 122.

The writ of covenant was tested six months after the dedimus; the court of Grand Sessions in Wales ordered it to be amended; whereupon the Earl of Pembroke petitioned the house of peers for a bill to set aside this amendment, whereby he had lost the benefit of a writ of error, and the matter was referred to the judges, to certify whether the amendment was warranted by law; and Holt Ch. J. certified that it was not, because the writ of covenant was an original, and not amendable either by the common law, or by any statute; that as to amendments, there is no difference between an amicable and an adversary action; that a fine and common recovery are as much an assurance as a deed, and no-body pretends to amend a mistake in a deed; that Gage's case in the 5*th Rep.* 45. is misreported, and no law; hereupon a bill was allowed by the lords, but rejected by the commons. 1 Salk. 52.

A recovery was suffered, but the writ of seisin was made returnable the same return as the writ of entry; the return was ordered to be amended. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 127.

The writ of entry was made returnable tres Mich. 23 Car. 2. which was before the date of the deed, to make a tenant to the præcipe; and ordered to be amended by making the writ returnable Crastin' animarum. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 127.

It was moved to amend a recovery suffered by Jane Knight, the lands being said in the recovery to lie in parochia sanctæ Mariæ salvatoris in Southwark, whereas there is no such parish; for the proper name is sancti Salvatoris; and the court gave him leave to raise the word (Mariæ); and per Treby Ch. J. the vulgar name is St. Mary Over-ree, that is, over the river; but sancti Salvatoris is the name used in pleadings. L. Raym. 134.

Upon the certificates of the custos brevium, Mr. Prothonotary Tempest, and the clerk of the warrants of this court, said, that the writ of entry and writ of seisin between the parties had been duly issued; and also that the recovery in this cause was taken at the bar of this court of the term of St. Michael, in the 8*th year of K. Charles the First*, all the parties in the said recovery named then and there appearing in their own persons. It was ordered, that the said recovery should be enter'd of record of that same term of St. Michael, upon the 13th roll, among the rolls of the pleas of land inrolled in that term. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 127.

On motion to amend a writ of entry by putting out Cowickbury, and inserting (in paroch' de Sheering) it appeared that the deed to lead the uses thereof was right; and upon producing several precedents, a fine was to the heirs males, and scire facias is made to the heirs in general; this shall be amended. Bro. Amendment, pl. 113.

A common recovery was suffered, to the intent to bar an intail, and the warrant of attorney was, that Alicia Pinde ponit loco suo A. B. &c. whereas her name was Elizabeth, and so it was assigned for error, that no warrant was entered for Elizabeth; the query was, if this were amendable, and the book says, that it was amended afterwards. Dyer 105.

In formedon the writ was præcipe quod reddat 20 acres Heddington, not saying in Heddington; the cursitor upon oath confessed, that the paper deliver'd to make out the writ by, had the word (in,) and therefore it was amended by order of the court, it being only the default of the clerk. Cro. Eliz. 644. pl. 49.

In the third proclamation upon the foot of a fine levied in Trin. term. 5 Jac. the said proclamation as said to be made 6 Jac. and upon the foot of the fine the fourth proclamation is wholly left out; but because upon view of the proclamations indorsed upon record remaining with the chirographer, and the book in which the proclamations were first enter'd, it appear'd that the said proclamations were rightly and duly made; it was adjudged that they may be amended. 13 Rep. 54. Trin. 7. Jac. 1.

In a recovery agreed to be suffered by A. B. and R. C. the writ of entry was sued out in the name of J. C. instead of R. C. but ordered to be amended. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 127.

A warrant to suffer a recovery by W. R. and Hester his wife; the serjeant had certified that the warrant was given by W. R. and Margaret his wife, and the mittitur and transcript made, and the recovery enter'd accordingly, but order'd to be amended.

A recovery enter'd by A. B. and C. his wife, but the name of the wife totally omitted, ordered by the court to be amended. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 127.

A motion to amend a recovery in Hill. 1703. wherein West-Engleston and West-Tyneham was put in the writ of entry, instead of Ingleston Tyneham: the deed to lead the uses was right; E. J. who was one of the vouchees was dead, the other parties alive and consenting; and it appearing that it was the intent of all the parties that it should be right, and common recoveries being common assurances, amendments ought more easily to be made than in other cases; therefore the court ordered it to be amended accordingly. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 17.

A motion to amend a recovery by putting in these words, paroch' sanctæ Mariæ in Wallingford, and in paroch' de Wargrove, and a rule to shew cause was granted; this was afterwards opposed strongly, three justices against the amendment; but Tracey seem'd for it, tho' the parties were

were all dead, and purchaſers in the caſe: It was denied chiefly becauſe if the amendment was made, the King would loſe his fine for the parcels to be inſerted. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 25, 26.

A motion was made laſt term to amend a fine by inſerting the word (woorth,) and this preſent term on ſhewing the cauſe, the rule was made abſolute for the amendment, tho' it was objected that the heirs at law would be prejudiced if the fine was amended; the court ſaid, they could not take notice, whether it would be a prejudice to the heirs at law or not; but it was the duty of the court to make the fine agreeable to the deed and intention of the parties. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 52.

A motion to amend a recovery by inſerting ſeveral pariſhes which were left out in the inſtructions to the curſitor; it appeared that the deed to lead the uſes of the recovery, was dated the 7th of October, the writ of entry teſted the 11th of December, and returnable in menſem Mich. The court ordered the recovery to be amended. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 85.

It was moved to amend a fine by ſtriking out the words in America in partibus tranſmarinis, this fine was of lands and tenements in the iſland of Antigua, or otherwiſe Antiguea, in paroch' ſanctæ Mariæ Iſlington in the county of Middleſex, and was paſſed in the year 1714; application had been made to the maſter of the rolls, and an order made by his honour for the amendment, which order was ſet aſide by my lord chancellor: After great debate in this cauſe (a writ of error being depending) the judges were unanimouſly of opinion, that this court had the only cognizance of fines, and order'd the ſame to be amended. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 121.

A rule to compleat a recovery of Eaſter term the 9th of Queen Ann. the præcipe at bar was ſign'd by ſerjeant Richardſon, the plea roll enter'd, and the exemplification ingroſſed but not ſealed, and neither the roll carried in, nor the writs filed; upon reading the deeds and affidavit of notice to the reſpective parties, the recovery was order'd to be compleated, and the rolls and writs to be filed. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 126.

8. Indictments and popular actions amendable, and not amendable.

An action was brought, upon the ſtatute of hue and cry, againſt the hundred of Cheſſam; the plaintiff had a verdict; and upon error brought, and all the records certified, the plaintiff prayed, that the title of the action might be amended, for upon the roll it was an action on the caſe, when it ſhould have been, an action on the ſtatute; but adjudged, that it could not be amended, becauſe the ſtatute 18 Eliz. did not extend to amendments upon popular actions, upon penal ſtatutes or indictments. Winch. 66.

Two were indicted of felony, and found guilty, but the indictment was only in the ſingular number, tho' both their names were in it; nine of the judges were of opinion, that it was amendable; it being doubted by juſtice Yelverton at the aſſizes, before the felons were tried, and therefore he deſired the opinion of the judges, who agreed as aforeſaid, and the parties were executed. 2 Bulſt. 35.

An indictment was removed into B. R. by a certiorari, and the court was moved, that the word (publicè) might be inſerted, but it was denied, becauſe it was of another term. Style. 321.

The defendant was indicted for barretry in Middleſex, and upon a certiorari brought, two or three lines of the indictment were left out; and the clerk of the peace of Middleſex attending, it was moved to amend it by the record: adjudged, that if this had been to remove an indictment in London, it might be amended, becauſe they have power by their charter to certify tenorem recordi, ſo that the record ſtill remains with them, and the court may amend by it; but it cannot be amended in any other county, becauſe the law ſuppoſes the record itſelf to be removed, and ſo there is nothing remaining for them to amend it by. Sid. 155.

The defendant being indicted for murder, pleaded, that he is Earl of Banbury, &c. the attorney general replied, and then the defendant moved to amend his plea; which was granted, becauſe not entered on the roll, but only filed. 1 Salk. 47. The King verſus Knolles. The like rule in an information for perjury. 1 Salk. 47.

Amercement, Amerciamentum, (from the Fr. Merci, i. e. Miſericordia) ſignifies the pecuniary puniſhment of an offender againſt the King, or other lord, in his court, that is found to be in miſericordia; that is, to have offended, and to ſtand at the mercy of the King or lord. There ſeems to be a difference between amercement and fines. Kitchin, fol. 214. For fines, as they are taken for puniſhments, are certain, and grow expreſly from ſome ſtatute, but amerceaments are ſuch as are arbitrarily impoſed by affeerors, which Kitchin, fol. 78. in ſome manner confirms in theſe words, L' amerciament eſt affire per pares. Manwood, in his Foreſt Laws, par. 1. fol. 166. ſaith, an amerceament is a more eaſy, more merciful penalty, and a fine more ſharp or grievous: his words are theſe. If the pledges for ſuch a treſpaſs do appear by common ſummons, but not the defendant himſelf, then the pledges ſhall be impriſoned for that default of the defendant. But otherwiſe it is, if the defendant himſelf do appear and be ready in court before the lord Ch. J. in Eyre, to receive his judgment, and pay his fine: if ſuch pledges do make default, in that caſe the pledges ſhall be amerced, but not fined. So that an amercement is for a ſmall fault, and a fine for a great one. The author of the New Terms of Law, ſaith, that amerceament is properly a penalty aſſeſſed by the peers or equals of the party amerced, for an offence done; for the which he putteth himſelf upon the mercy of the lord: who alſo makes mention of an amercement royal, and defines it to be a pecuniary puniſhment laid upon a ſheriff, coroner, or ſuch like officer of the King, by juſtices, for ſome offence. Ratcliff baron of the Exchecquer. 2. H. 7. See Miſericordia. If the amerceament were too grievous, i. e. diſproportioned to the nature of the offence, or the abilities of the offender, there was a releaſe to be ſued by a writ called moderata miſericordia. Amerciamenta illevabilia were ſuch amercements as, thro' the poverty or eſcape of the amerced, became deſperate debts, and were deducted in the accounts of the bailiff, or ſteward, or collectors of rents and other dues. So A. D. 1425. the prior and canons of Burcheſter, allowed to the receiver their rent at Kirthington —— In allocatis eidem pro amerciamentis illevabilibus hoc anno ſex denarios. See Kenn. Paroch. Antiq. 573. and Gloſſary, in voc. amerciamentum. Cowel.

In all actions quare vi et armis, as in reſcous, treſpaſs, vi et armis, &c. if judgment is given againſt the defendant, he ſhall be fined and impriſoned, for impriſonment is incident to a fine; and when the judgment is quod capiatur, it muſt be intended capiatur till he pays the fine; if the defendant plead a falſe deed, or denies his own deed, and 'tis found againſt him, or if relicta verificatione he confeſſeth the action, he ſhall be fined; but if he pleads the deed of his anceſtor, or denieth it, and it is found againſt him, he ſhall be only amerced, if the defendant in replevin claimeth a property, where in truth he hath none, and 'tis found againſt him, he ſhall be fined. In an appeal of robbery, death, felony, or maihem, if the plaintiff be nonſuit, barred, or his writ abate by his own default, he ſhall be fined, and ſo in attaint; ſo likewiſe for any contempt done to a court of record, and alſo in all caſes where a thing is prohibited by any ſtatute: Thus much concerning fines.

Now for amercements theſe rules were agreed, (viz.) in all writs of præcipe quod reddat, formedon, quod permittat, &c. if the plaintiff be barred or nonſuit, or his writ abate, either for matter or form, he ſhall be amerced; but if there are two plaintiffs, and the writ abate for the death of one of them, in ſuch caſe the other ſhall be amerced. In all perſonal actions without force, as in debt, detinue, &c. if the plaintiff be nonſuit, barred, or his writ abate for matter or form, he ſhall be amerced; but if the writ abate for the death of one plaintiff, or if one of them is nonſuit, which in law is a nonſuit of both, he who ſurviveth ſhall not be amerced, nor he who was nonſuited, but the other who was. In all judicial proceſs, if the plaintiff be nonſuit, barred, or his writ abate, he ſhall not be amerced, becauſe 'tis a proceſs founded on a judgment and record, and in these actions he shall not find pledges. In all real and personal actions, if part be found for the plaintiff, and part for defendant, or part against one defendant, and part or nothing against the other defendant, where there are two, in such case, neither the plaintiff nor defendant shall be amerced; and therefore, in assault brought against husband and wife, supposing the battery to be done by both, and the wife is only found guilty, the plaintiff shall not be amerced; one defendant shall not be twice amerced, but one plaintiff may: upon a discontinuance in any action, the plaintiff shall not be amerced, because 'tis the act of the court; and so it is where the court hath no jurisdiction. In all actions, &c. where the defendant appeareth the first day, and tendereth the thing in demand, he shall not be amerced, because he doth what the King commanded by his writ; but in all actions in which the offence is supposed to be done by force, if the defendant at the first day confesseth the action, yet he shall be fined, because his confession is not a satisfaction, but a declaration of the offence. In all actions, &c. where the writ doth abate for want of form or substance, or if the plaintiff or defendant is barred, the judgment for the defendant is, quod quærens nihil capiat per breve suum, &c. sed sit in misericordia pro falso clamore suo, &c. and that the defendant eat inde sine die; but if the plaintiff be nonsuit, then the judgment is, ideo consideratum est per curiam quod (the plaintiff) et plegii sui de prosequendo sint in misericordia. 8 Rep. 61. Beecher's case.

In trespass, &c. the defendant justified the taking, &c. for at the sheriffs torn the plaintiff was presented for not appearing there, being duly summoned, and thereupon he was amerced by the jury, which was affeered by four of the jurors to 40*s.* which was certified to the next quarter sessions, and there it was confirmed, whereupon the steward of the sheriff's court made a warrant to the defendant to levy the 40*s.* by virtue whereof he took the bullock, &c. Upon demurrer to this plea it was insisted for the plaintiff, that the amerciament ought to have been assessed by the court, and not by the jury, as the defendant had pleaded, because 'tis a judicial act; besides, it ought not to be levied by the defendant as bailiff, by a warrant from the steward, &c. because 'tis expresly provided by the statute 1 Ed. 4. that no fine or amerciament in a torn shall be levied, unless 'tis certified to the next sessions by indenture, and there inrolled; and by process made from the sessions to the sheriff himself, so that it cannot be levied by warrant from his steward to the bailiff, for that is directly contrary to the statute; and so it was adjudged. Cro. Car. 260.

In dower, the defendant confessed as to part, and judgment against him quod sit in misericordia, and pleaded in bar as to the rest; and upon demurrer to that plea, judgment against him quod sit in misericordia again; upon a writ of error brought it was insisted, that he could not be twice amerced in the same action; but adjudged, that he may, where both the judgments are final and independant on one another, as in this case, but not where one is interlocutory. 1 Salk. 54.

Upon a capias directed to the sheriff of Yorkshire, he issued a warrant to the bailiff of the liberty of Pomfret; to take the defendant Smith; who (not returning the writ) was amerced at several times to 50*l.* which was estreated into the Exchequer; afterwards the parties agreed that upon producing a certificate from the plaintiff's attorney that the debt was paid, these amerceaments should be discharged, which was accordingly done upon motion, tho' it was said that there ought to be a constat of the estreat, and that the amerceaments are not usually discharged upon motion, but that the court in such cases gives the sheriff leave to compound them. 1 Salk. 54.

Issues were returned upon the distringas, and so upon a second and third; and upon a motion for a rule to estreat them, it was denied, because 'tis the course of the court to send twice in a year into the Exchequer, (viz.) on the last day of the two issuable terms; but in extraordinary cases there may be a rule to estreat them sooner. 1 Salk. 55.

The town shall be amerced for an escape of a murderer, tho' it was committed in a field or a by-lane, if the escape was in the day time. Dyer 210.

But in Milbourne's case it was adjudged, that at Common law, if a man be killed in a town in the day-time, so long as there is full day, if the murderer escape, the town shall be amerced; but if it was done in the night, and the felon escape, the town shall not be amerced, because in such case it shall not be presumed that they neglected to apprehend him. 7 Rep. 4. Milbourn's case.

Some courts may fine, but not imprison, as the leet; some cannot fine nor imprison, but amerce, as the county court, hundred, court baron, &c. for no court can fine or imprison which is not a court of record; some may imprison, but not fine, as the constable at petty-sessions for an affray made in disturbance of the court; some cannot fine, imprison nor amerce; as the ecclesiastical courts held before the ordinary, archdeacon, &c. or their commissaries, and such as proceed according to the Canon or Civil law; and some may fine, imprison, and amerce, as the case requires, as the courts of record at Westminster and elsewhere. 11 Rep. 43. b.

The sheriff in his tourn may impose a fine on all such as are guilty of any contempt in the face of the court; for he still continues a judge of record; and there seems to be no doubt but he may impose what reasonable fine he thinks fit upon a suitor refusing to be sworn, or upon a bailiff refusing to make a panel, &c. or upon a tithingman neglecting to make his presentment, or upon a juror refusing to present the articles wherewith they are charged, or upon a person duly chosen constable refusing to be sworn. 2 Hawk. P. C. 58. c. 10. sect. 15.

Admiralty court, which is no court of record, may punish one that resists the process of their court, and may fine and imprison for a contempt to their court in the face of it; but should they proceed to give the party damages, a prohibition would be granted. Vent. 1. 20 Car. 2. B. R. Sparkes v. Martin.

Amelle, (from the Lat. Amictus) A priestly garment. Cowel.

Amicia, (the same with Almutium) A cap made with goat's or lamb's skins; that part whereof which covered the head was square, and one part of it hung behind and covered the neck. It is mentioned in the Monasticon, 3 tom. pag. 36. pennulas autem hujus amiciarum caprinas esse volumus vel agninas.

Amicus curiae, If a judge is doubtful or mistaken in a matter of law, a by-stander may inform the court, as amicus curiæ. 2 Inst. 178. In some cases, a thing is to be made appear by suggestion on the roll by motion; sometimes by pleading, and sometimes as amicus curiæ. 2 Keb. 548. Any one as amicus curiæ may move to quash a vicious indictment; for if there were a trial and verdict, judgment must be arrested. Comberb. 13. A counsel urged that he might, as amicus curiæ, inform the court of an error in proceedings to prevent giving false judgment; but it was denied, unless the party was present. 2 Show. Rep. 297.

If an action be abated, any one as amicus curiæ may move to have the verdict set aside, even the defendant himself. Comb. 170.

Amittere legem terrae, To lose and be deprived of the liberty of swearing in any court, or (as Sir Edw. Coke says) to become infamous, is used by Glanvill, lib. 2. c. 13. for the punishment of the champion, over-come or yielding in battle, upon a writ of right, and of jurors found guilty in a writ of attaint. Cowel. See Selden's Titles of Honor, and statute 5 Eliz. c. 9. against perjury.

Ancient demeſne, or demain, (Vetus patrimonium domini) Is a certain tenure, whereby all manors belonging to the crown in the days of Saint Edward, or William the Conqueror, were held; the numbers and names as well of ſuch manors as belonged to the King, as of all others belonging to common perſons after a ſurvey made of them, he cauſed to be written in a book, now remaining in the Exchequer, and called Domeſday; and thoſe, which by that book appear to have at that time belonged to the crown, and are contained under the title Terra Regis, are called antient demeſne. Kitchin, fol. 98. Of theſe tenants were two ſorts; one that held their lands frankly by charter, the other by copy of court roll, or by the verge at the will of the lord, according to the cuſtom of the manor. Britton, cap. 66. num. 8. The benefit of this tenure conſiſts in theſe points: 1. The tenants holding by charter, cannot be impleaded out of their manor; or if they be, they may abate the writ by pleading their tenure, before or after anſwer made. 2. They are free from toll for all things concerning their livelihood and huſbandry. They may not be panelled upon any inqueſt. F. N. B. fol. 14. d. & fol. 228. &c. By whom it appears, theſe tenants held originally by plowing the King's lands, plaſhing his hedges, or ſuch like, towards the maintenance of his houſhold; for which cauſe they had ſuch liberties granted to them: And to avoid diſturbances, they may have writs to ſuch as take duties of toll; they have alſo immunity of portage, paſſage and ſuch like.

All thoſe lands which were in the poſſeſſion of Edward the Confeſſor, and afterwards came to William the Conqueror, and were by him about the 20th year of his reign ſet down in a book, called Domeſday, under the title de terra Regis, are antient demeſne lands; theſe were exempt from any feudal ſervitude, and were let out to huſbandmen to plough and cultivate for ſupplying proviſions and neceſſaries for the King's houſhold and family; and for this purpoſe the tenants (who are called by Bracton villani privilegiati) enjoy certain privileges, and the tenure itſelf had ſeveral properties diſtinct from others, which it retains to this day, though the lands be in the hands of a ſubject, and the ſervices changed from labour to money 4 Inſt. 296. 2 Inſt. 542. *F. 1. How ancient demeſne is to be tried.

This tenure, my Lord Ch. Juſt. Holt ſays, is as antient as any other, though he ſuppoſes that the privileges annexed to it commenced by ſome act of parliament, for that it cannot be created by grant at this day. 1 Salk. 57.

The lands which were in the poſſeſſion of Edward the Confeſſor, and were given away by him, are not at this day antient demeſne, nor any others, except thoſe writ down in the book of Domeſday; and therefore, whether ſuch lands are antient demeſne or not, is to be tried only by that book. 1 Salk. 57. 4 Inſt. 269. Hob. 188. 1 Brownl. 43.

But if the queſtion is, whether lands be parcel of a manor which is antient demeſne, this ſhall be tried by a jury. Salk. 56, 774.

Ancient demeſne is pleaded as to ſuch a manor, and iſſue is taken whether 'tis ſo or not, this ſhall be tried by the book of Domeſday; but if iſſue be taken, that certain acres are parcel of the manor of H. which is ancient demeſne, that ſhall be tried by a jury; for parcel or not parcel is matter of fact, which cannot be tried by that book. 9 Rep. Caſe of the abbot of Strata Marcelia.

The tenant pleaded ancient demeſne held of the manor of Sudbury in the county of Suffolk, and iſſue being taken, whether that manor was ancient demeſne or not, the book of Domeſday was brought into the court of Common Pleas at the trial, and this was by a certiorari out of the Chancery, directed to the treaſurer and chamberlain of the Exchequer, and by mittimus ſent to the Common-Pleas. Dyer 150. b.

Iſſue was taken whether the manor of Bowden in the county of Northampton was ancient demeſne, or not; and the Book of Domeſday being brought into court, it appeared, that the manor of Bowden in the county of Leiceſter was ancient demeſne, but not the manor of Bowden in the county of Northampton. 1 Brownl 43.

It appears, that all the land which is intitled in the Domeſday book in the Exchequer, under tit. Terræ Regis Terræ E. Regis & Confeſſoris, or Terræ Regis W. Conqueſtoris, is antient demeſne; and thoſe which are intitled under other titles, terræ epiſcopi S. &c. are not ancient demeſne; and plea was made there, where it was ſhewn, ſhewn, that the manor of D. was ancient demeſne; that in this will are three manors of one name, and that they hold of the manor which is under this tit. Terræ epiſcopi E. and not of the manor, which is under this title Terræ regis; quod nota, and ſo he confeſſed, and avoided the record which was ſhewn to prove the ancient demeſne. Br. Ancient Demeſne, pl. 5. cites 40 Ed. 3. 45.

Iſſue was, whether the manor of Otterbury was ancient demeſne, and the court awarded quod quærens habeat recordum libri de Domeſday hic in Octab. Hillarii. At the day, the plaintiff had the book brought into court by a porter. It appear'd that Edward the Confeſſor anno 18 Regni ſui, had given this manor to the abbot of R. and that it was not under the title de terra regis; for all lands held in ancient demeſne which the Confeſſor had, were written by William the Conqueror, anno 20 of his reign, in the book of Domeſday, under the title de terra regis, and theſe are all held in ancient demeſne at this day; but thoſe which were given away by the Confeſſor, and which are not written in Domeſday under that title, are not ancient demeſne, and a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. Cited by Holt Ch. J. 1 Salk. 57.

It is in a manner agreed, that the land in the Domeſday book which comes under tit. terræ regis E. or under terræ regis only, which is intended W. the conqueror, in whoſe time the book was made, ſhall be intended ancient demeſne; and the plaintiff ſhew'd divers charters by inſpeximus, which rehearſed, that W. the conqueror dedit, conceſſit, et confirmavit, &c. the ſaid manor, to prove that it was land of W. the conqueror, and becauſe dedimus may be a confirmation, and the grant of land in poſſeſſion, &c. therefore per Belk. This is no trial that it was the land of W. the conqueror, or of King E. and alſo that ancient demeſne ſhall not be tried by charter, nor in other manner but only by the Domeſday book; quod nemo negavit; and therefore the plaintiffs were nonſuited, and by him the lands of other lords are alſo in the Domeſday book under other titles. Br. Ancient demeſne, pl. 9. cites 49 Ed. 3. 22.

An ejectment for land in Long-Hope in the county of Glouceſter, the iſſue was, whether it was ancient demeſne or not; and at the trial, the Domeſday book was brought in by an officer of the Exchequer, by which it appear'd, that Hope was ancient demeſne, but nothing was mention'd of Long-Hope; thereupon they offered to prove by the ſteward of the manor and others, that it was the ſame as was formerly called Hope, and lately had got the name of Long-Hope. And Windham J. was for examining the witneſſes, but all the court e contra, and that he had fail'd of the record to prove the iſſue; and if the truth was as ſuppoſed, they might have help'd it in pleading, that it was known by the one name and the other, and that Long-Hope and Hope are one and the ſame vill. Sid. 147. pl. 6.

Tenant in ancient demeſne brought a monſtraverunt againſt the lord, who prayed, that the tenant might make it appear to the court, that the manor is ancient demeſne, and thereupon he produced the book of Domeſday under this title, (viz) terra ſancti Stephani, and not terra regis Edwardi, or terra regis; he offered alſo to prove, that this manor was in the King's hands by producing a grant of Ed. 1. in which there was an inſpeximus of the grant of H. 1. in which there was another inſpeximus of the grant of William the conqueror, who had granted this manor to G. D. in which there was alſo an inſpeximus chartam Edwardi regis; ſo that it appeared, that this manor was in the poſſeſſion of William the conqueror and Edward the confeſſor; but adjudged, that the lands under the title of terra ſancti Stephani could never be intended to be in the poſſeſſion of either of thoſe Kings, it being ſo long after the conqueſt; and as to the inſpeximus in thoſe grants, 'tis only a word of form, and therefore did not prove that the lands were ever in the poſſeſſion of thoſe Kings. 43 Ed. 3. 23. 49 Ed. 3. 22.

2. Privileges of tenants in ancient demeſne.

My lord Coke enumerates the ſix following privileges which tenants in ancient demeſne are to enjoy. 1. That they ſhall not be impleaded for any of their lands, &c. out of the ſaid manor, but are to have juſtice adminiſtred to them at their own doors by petit writ of droit cloſe, directed to the bailiffs of the King's manors, or to the lord of the manor, if it be in the hands of a ſubject. 2. They cannot be impanelled to appear at Weſtminſter, or elſewhere in any other court, upon any inqueſt or trial of any cauſe. 3. They are free and quiet from all manner of tolls in fairs and markets, for all things concerning huſbandry and ſuſtenance. 4. They are to be free of taxes and tallages by parliament, unleſs they be ſpecially named. 5. That they were not to contribute to the expences of knights of parliament. 6. That if they be ſeverally diſtrained for other ſervices than they are obliged to by cuſtom of the manor, they all for ſaving of charges may join in a writ of monſtraverunt, although they be ſeveral tenants. 4 Inſt. 269.

Lands in ancient demeſne are extendable upon a ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit. 2 Inſt. 397. 4 Inſt. 270.

In an indictment for not taking upon him and executing the office of a conſtable, to which he was choſen by the leet, the queſtion was, whether a tenant in ancient demeſne was obliged to execute the office; and the court held he was. 1 Vent. 344.

Note; in Hutton's reports, there is cited one Ward's caſe, to be adjudged in B. R. 20 Eliz. touching the toll of the town of Leiſtock in Suffolk, where it was adjudged that the privilege of ancient demeſne does not extend to him that is a merchant, or that trades and gets his living by buying and ſelling, but the privilege was annexed to the perſon in reſpect of the land, ſcilicet, becauſe they manure the demeſnes of the King, and provide corn for the garriſons of the King, and purveyance was not then in uſe, but the privilege is intended for thoſe things which ariſe or are to be uſed on the land, or for his family that manures the land.

Where a ſheriff returns tenants in ancient demeſne upon any jury, they may have a writ de non ponendis in aſſiſis & juratis againſt the ſheriff, or any one who hath return of writs; and if notwithſtanding ſuch writ, de non ponendis, &c. the ſheriff will return them in ſuch caſe, they may have an attachment againſt him; ſo where the defendant pleaded ancient demeſne, and the ſheriff returned perſons who held in ancient demeſne, they may be challenged and withdrawn. 1 Rep. 105.

Where the tenants in ancient demeſne are diſtrained to do the lord other ſervices or cuſtoms than they or their anceſtors have formerly done, they may have a writ of monſtraverunt directed to the lord, commanding him not to diſtrain for other ſervices, &c. and if he will ſtill diſtrain, &c. then by a writ directed to the ſheriff, he may command him not to demand or diſtrain for other ſervices; and if he ſtill perſiſts, then he may raiſe the poſſe comitatus, or command the neighbours to reſcue and reſtore the diſtreſs; but the uſual courſe is, that if after the writ to the ſheriff, the lord will ſtill diſtrain, then an attachment lies againſt him, returnable in one of the courts of record at Weſtminſter, to anſwer for the contempt. Plowd. Com. 129.

3. By what acts the tenure may be altered.

If a fine be levied, or recovery ſuffered of lands in ancient demeſne, this makes them frank-fee. 4 Inſt. 270. 10 Co. 53.

But if the lord be not a party, he may have a writ of diſceit, and avoid the fine or recovery; for lands in ancient demeſne were not originally within the juriſdiction of the courts of Weſtminſter; but the tenants thereof enjoy this amongſt other privileges, not to be called from the buſineſs of the plow by any foreign litigation. 7 Hen. 4. 44. 1 Rol. Abr. 327.

But if the lord be party, then the lands became frank-fee, and are within the juriſdiction of the courts of Weſtminſter, for the privilege of ancient demeſne being eſtabliſhed for the benefit of lord and tenant, they may deſtroy it at pleaſure. 2 Rol. Abr. 324. 1 Salk. 57.

If a fine be levied of lands, part ancient demeſne and part frank-fee, and the lord brings a writ of diſceit, the court court of B. R. upon view of the tranſcript of the record, and proof that part are ancient demeſne, will reverſe and avoid the fine as to that parcel; but they will not order the fine to be torn off the file, as in caſes where the whole fine is reverſed, becauſe it ſhall ſtand good as to the frank-fee; but they will order a mark to be made on the fine to ſignify that it is cancelled as to that part; and in this caſe the tertenant muſt be made party by ſcire facias; for otherwiſe the conuſance of him that was party to the fine ſhall not bind, if the tenements are frank-fee; becauſe by that means the tertenant might be diſpoſſeſſed without notice; whereas if he appears upon the ſcire facias, he may plead a releaſe or confirmation in bar, and ſo preſerve his poſſeſſion. Kelw. 43. 1 Rol. Abr. 775. 1 Leon. 290. Cro. Eliz. 417.

But if a fine be levied of land all ancient demeſne, and the lord reverſes it by writ of diſceit, it ſeems doubtful from the books, whether the fine ſhall ſtand good between the parties; ſome ſay that it ought not to be wholly ſet aſide, nor the conuzor reſtored to his land againſt his own ſolemn acknowledgment on record, eſpecially ſince the lord, who brings the writ of diſceit, ſeeks nothing but to reſtore the land to the privileges of ancient demeſne; others on the contrary hold, that the writ of diſceit and the reverſal thereon wholly avoids the fine, and reſtores the conuzor to the poſſeſſion of the land; and the conuzance, though on record, ſhall be no eſtoppel; becauſe it was made in a court that had no juriſdiction of the matter; and therefore the whole proceedings coram non judice. Bro. tit. Fine, 101. 17 Ed. 3. 31. F. N. B. 98. a. 9 Hen. 7. 12. 8 Ed. 4. 6. 1 Rol. Abr. 863. Cro. Eliz. 471.

Where there is a cuſtom, that lands in ancient demeſne ſhall be divided between heirs males, and a fine is levied at common law of thoſe lands, in ſuch caſe the cuſtom is gone, becauſe the land is changed by the fine from that which was ancient demeſne to lands at common law, and the cuſtom doth not run with the lands ſimply, but quatenus they were ancient demeſne; but 'tis otherwiſe where a fine is levied of lands held in gavelkind, for there the cuſtom of dividing it runs with the lands. Dyer 60, 72.

If the lord of a manor in ancient demeſne confirms the eſtate of his tenant to hold by certain ſervices at common law, the quality of his eſtate is by this means changed, tho' there is no tranſmutation of poſſeſſion; for the tenant is now diſcharged from the cuſtoms of the manor, and ſhall never be impleaded by a petit writ of droit-cloſe. 9 Rep. 40. Beaumont's caſe.

Writ of deceit, for a fine levied of land in ancient demeſne; the defendant pleaded a releaſe made by the lord of the manor, in the reign of Ed. 2. by a fine then levied to one who was then tenant of thoſe lands, which releaſe was of one meſſuage and yard-land, and of all ſervices and cuſtoms, &c. except 2*s.* for one acre of land, ſuit of court and reliefs; the queſtion was, whether the ſeigniory, as to the cuſtom of ancient demeſne, was extinguiſhed by this releaſe of the cuſtoms and ſervices; and adjudged, that it was; but that by the ſaving the rent, the ſuit of courts and reliefs ſtill continued. Moor 143.

Tenant in fee made feoffment of lands in ancient demeſne to the uſe of himſelf and wife, for life, remainder to the uſe of his daughter Mary Andrews, and the heirs of her body to be begotten by one John Givillim, with divers remainders over; afterwards the ſaid John Givillim married Mary Andrews, by whom he had iſſue Thomas Givillim, and he and his wife, after the death of his father and mother, levied a fine in placito conventionis in the court of the manor, by which fine conceſſerunt the ſaid lands to three perſons during their reſpective lives, under the yearly rent of ſix pounds, by virtue whereof they entered; and afterwards the ſaid Thomas Givillim and his wife levied another fine in the ſaid court, to the uſe of the ſaid Thomas and his heirs; and at the quarter ſeſſions he, by bargain and ſale there enrolled, conveyed the reverſion to Thomas Payne and his heirs, to whom he likewiſe releaſed all his right, and then died, leaving iſſue Thomas, who had iſſue Richard, the leſſor of the plaintiff. It was inſiſted againſt him, that he was barred by the ſtatute of limitations, becauſe this fine levied by his grandfather, being only a diſcontinuance of the eſtate-tail, his father was intitled to a formedon, and he having neglected to proſecute it for twenty years, Richard his ſon, tho' an infant, is now barred by that ſtatute; but adjudged, firſt, that a fine may be levied in the court of the manor, where the lands are ancient demeſne, tho' it is enacted by the ſtatute de modo levandi fines anno 18 Ed. 1. that they ſhall be levied in the Common Pleas, and not elſewhere, becauſe a writ of diſceit lies againſt him who levies a fine of lands in ancient demeſne, in any other court but that of the manor; therefore that ſtatute muſt extend to invalidate fines levied in Borough-Courts, and other baſe and inferior courts; and a fine thus levied is no bar to the eſtate-tail, for that muſt be a fine with proclamations, by virtue of the ſtatute 4 H. 7. but 'tis a diſcontinuance and in this caſe only during the lives of the three grantees for life: Now the father of the plaintiff could not enter, becauſe the eſtate for lives was not determined whilſt he was living; but a title of entry commenced in his ſon, the now plaintiff, upon the death of the ſurvivor of the three grantees for life, and he having made an entry within twenty years after his title did accrue, by conſequence he is not barred by that ſtatute. 1 Lutw. 770.

If in a writ of right in ancient demeſne, the tenant pleads in abatement of the writ, and that by judgment is abated, and the demandant brings a writ of falſe judgment, wherein the writ of right is affirmed to be good, the court of Common Pleas ſhall proceed as the inferior court ſhould have done; and altho' judgment be there given to recover the land, yet the land is not frank-fee, but continues ancient demeſne; becauſe the beginning and foundation of thoſe proceedings was in the court of ancient demeſne. F. N. B. 19. 4 Inſt. 270.

If the lord infeoffs another of the tenancy, this makes the land frank-fee, becauſe the ſervices are extinguiſhed perpetually. 1 Rol. Abr. 324.

So if the lord releaſes to the tenant all his right in the tenancy, or if he confirms to him to hold by certain ſervices at the Common law, theſe make the land frank-fee. See 1 Rol. Abr. 324, 325.

A fine was levied of lands in ancient demeſne, and the cognizor, and cognizee and his wife being all dead, a writ of diſceit was brought againſt the heir of the one and the other, and againſt the tertenant and the purchaſer under the fine; and it was objected, that this writ did not lie againſt the heir of the cognizor, becauſe the levying the fine was a perſonal wrong in the anceſtor, and moritur cum perſona; but adjudged, that it was not a perſonal wrong alone, but a total diſinheriſon to all ſucceeding lords of that manor; and it ſeems unreaſonable, that by the act of God, (viz.) by the death of the cognizor, they ſhould be defeated of the proper remedy: Then it was objected, that this writ ought to be brought as well againſt the heirs of the wife, as the heirs of the huſband, they being both cognizees in the fine: But adjudged, that the tertenant is the proper perſon againſt whom this writ lies, and that all others may be brought in by the ſcire facias, if there ſhall be occaſion. 3 Lev. 417.

Writ of diſceit againſt the defendants, wherein the plaintiff ſet forth, that he was ſeiſed in fee of the manor of Bromeſgrove in Com. Wigorn. which time out of mind was ancient demeſne, and that all the lands held of the ſaid manor are pleadable in curia manerii there per parvum breve de recto clauſo; that the defendants intending to defraud the plaintiff of the profits of the ſaid manor, had levied a fine in the court of Common Pleas, of certain lands, parcel thereof; and that by reaſon of the ſaid fine, thoſe lands were now become frank-fee, and pleadable at Common law in exhæreditationem of the plaintiff, and to his damage of 40*l.* The objection made to this declaration was, that the plaintiff had ſet forth, that the lands were placitat' & placitabilia in curia manerii, but did not ſay before whom the court was held, (viz.) coram ballivis & ſectatoribus; but this objection was diſallowed: Then the queſtion was, whether the fine ſhould be reverſed quoad the benefit of the lord of the manor, as in the whole; and adjudged, that it ſhould be intirely reverſed, becauſe it was levied coram non judice, which makes it wholly void. 1 Lutw. 711.

4. Pleading ancient demeſne, and the form thereof.

In all actions wherein if the demandant recovers, the lands would be frank-fee, ancient demeſne is a good plea. 8 Hen. 35. 1 Rol. Abr. 322.

Therefore in all actions real, or where the realty may come in queſtion, ancient demeſne is a good plea; as aſſiſe, writ of ward of land, writ of account againſt a bailiff of a manor, writ of account againſt a guardian, &c. See 4 Inſt. 270. 1 Rol. Abr. 322, 323.

In replevin ancient demeſne is a good plea, becauſe by indictment, the freehold will come in queſtion. Godb. 64. 1 Bulſt. 108.

In an ejectione firmæ, ancient demeſne is a good plea; for by common intendment the right and title of the land will come in queſtion; and if in this action it ſhould not be a good plea, the ancient privileges of thoſe tenants would be loſt, inaſmuch as moſt titles at this day are tried by ejectment. Hob. 47. 1 Bulſt. 108. Hetl. 177. Cro. Eliz. 826.

But in all actions merely perſonal, as debt upon a leaſe, treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, &c. ancient demeſne is no plea. Hob. 47. 5 Co. 105.

A writ of right was brought in a court of ancient demeſne, and the plaintiff made proteſtation to ſue there in nature of a writ of right at Common law; the tenant joined the miſe upon the meer right, and thereupon the record was removed by an accedas ad curiam; but adjudged, this is no ſufficient cauſe of removal, and therefore a proſedendo was awarded. Dyer 112.

In ejectment, the defendant pleaded ancient demeſne to the juriſdiction, &c. and upon demurrer it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that this was no good plea, becauſe this action is in nature of an action of treſpaſs, and in ſuch action 'tis not a good plea; but adjudged, that it is a good plea in ejectment, becauſe by common intendment the right and title of the land may come in queſtion, and ſo it may in replevin, and in account againſt a guardian in ſocage; and therefore 'tis a good plea. 5 Rep. Alden's caſe.

The demandant recovered in a writ of right c'oſe, which was directed to the bailiffs of the manor, and the tenant brought a writ of falſe judgment to reverſe it, and aſſigned for error, that the writ of right cloſe was directed to the bailiffs when the court was held coram ſectatoribus: But the judgment given in the manor court was affirmed, becauſe it ſhall be intended that the bailiffs were likewiſe ſuitors; for none elſe can be judges of that court. 3 Leon. 63.

The plaintiff brought an action for taking a cable rope for toll, ſetting forth, that Loſtocke is a village and ancient demeſne, and that the tenants of ancient demeſne are to be quit of toll in all places; that he was an inhabitant and tenant there, &c. the defendant juſtified the taking by virtue of a cuſtom to take toll for any goods brought by ſea to merchandiſe, and that the plaintiff brought thither goods by ſea, twenty hundred weight of cable to merchandiſe; and for that reaſon it was held a good plea. Cro. Eliz. 227.

In treſpaſs contra pacem, though the realty comes in debate, yet ancient demeſne is no plea; for this is at the ſuit of the King, and puniſhable for the good of the commonwealth. Cro. Eliz. 826. 1 Rol. Abr. 322.

In an aſſiſe by tenant by ſtatute-merchant, ancient demeſne is no good plea, becauſe the plaintiff does not demand the freehold, but till he hath ſatisfaction. 2 Inſt. 397.

In a quare impedit, ancient demeſne is no plea, becauſe if it ſhould be granted there would be a failure of right; for there they cannot grant a writ to the biſhop. 1 Rol. Abr. 323. Hob. 48.

So in an action of waſte ancient demeſne is no plea, becauſe in ancient demeſne they cannot, upon the diſtreſs returned, award a writ to enquire of waſte, according to the ſtatute; for the ſheriff ought by the ſtatute to go in perſon, which cannot be ſupplied by their officer, and there would be a failure of right; but in this caſe the lands ſhall not be frank-fee. 2 Inſt. 306. 4 Inſt. 270. Hob. 47. 1 Rol. Abr. 323.

If the manor and demeſne thereof are demanded, ancient demeſne is no plea, becauſe the lord would be judge in his own cauſe. F. N. B. 11. 2 Leon. 194. 1 Salk. 56. Comb. 183.

Antient demeſne may be pleaded after imparlance, becauſe the lord may reverſe the judgment by writ of diſceit; and it goes in bar of the action itſelf, viz. in that court, becauſe it is coram non judice. Dyer 210. Stile 30. Latch 83. Moor 451.

In treſpaſs, upon Not guilty pleaded, the jury gave a ſpecial verdict, that the defendant was ſeiſed of the lands in queſtion, and that he held the ſame of the manor of Bromeſgrove, which is ancient demeſne; and that the plaintiff having obtained a judgment againſt him, took out execution by elegit, by virtue whereof the ſheriff delivered the lands to him, and he entered, upon whom the defendant re-enter'd, and now the plaintiff brought an action of treſpaſs, &c. the queſtion was, whether lands held in antient demenſne might be delivered in execution upon an elegit? Adjudged, that a freehold in antient demeſne could not be recovered in any of the courts of Common law; and even where the poſſeſſion is to be recovered, antient demeſne is a good plea, but not in treſpaſs, tho' the freehold ſhould come in queſtion, becauſe the iſſue is upon the wrong done: Now in this caſe, tho' the poſſeſſion is recovered by the act of the ſheriff, in purſuance and by virtue of a judgment obtained in a court of Common law, yet the land itſelf was never directly in queſtion; and ſince the judgment is good, and in force, the elegit doth warrant the extending a moiety of the defendant's lands, and thoſe held in antient demeſne are his lands, as well as thoſe which are not ſo held; therefore neither the ſheriff, nor he to whom he delivered poſſeſſion of thoſe lands, are liable to any action of treſpaſs. Hob. 47.

In ejectment, there was a judgment obtained for lands held in antient demeſne, and a writ of procedendo ad executionem judicii iſſued out of the King's Bench, to the ſuitors of the court of antient demeſne, who returned, that they could not execute it, becauſe the land was frank-fee, as it appeared to them by a tranſcript of a fine levied of the ſame; but this return was diſallowed, becauſe the parties had allowed the juriſdiction of the court before; and if the land had been frank-fee, it ought to have been pleaded; but now after judgment 'tis too late to ſay, that 'tis frank-fee. Moor 451.

In ejectment, after imparlance, the defendant pleaded antient demeſne; and upon demurrer it was inſiſted by the plaintiff that this plea came too late; but adjudged, that ſince the land is not impleadable at Common law, and the defendant hath pleaded no other plea, 'tis ſoon enough after an imparlance. Cro. Car. 6.

In replevin, &c. the defendant made cognizance, &c. for toll in Highworth market which being demanded, and the plaintiff refuſing to pay, they juſtified the taking the cattle, &c. the plaintiff replied, that ſhe is tenant of the manor of Hanningdon, which is antient demeſne, and that the tenants of antient demeſne lands are quit of toll in all places in the kingdom; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that the plaintiff had not well intitled herſelf to this privilege, for ſhe ſays, that ſhe is tenant of the manor, &c. ſhe ſhould have ſaid, that ſhe is ſeiſed in fee of ſuch lands, &c. which ſhe held of J. F. as of his manor of Hanningdon, which is antient demeſne; but adjudged 'tis not neceſſary to mention what eſtates ſuch tenants have, but that homines et tenentes de antiquo dominico, &c. ought to be diſcharged of toll, &c. Then it was objected, that the privilege was laid too general, for it was to be diſcharged of toll in in all places, &c. when by law they are not diſcharged of toll, but only of ſuch things which ariſe on their own tenements, and which are for the ſupport and eaſe of their families; and the reaſon is, becauſe in the beginning they manured the King's demeſnes, which by their tenure they were obliged to do; and therefore to encourage them in that labour they had this privilege, to be quit of toll of all things which which did ariſe or grow on their own lands; but when they turn merchants, they are not within the reaſon of this privilege; but adjudged, that to be quit of toll in all places ſhall be intended of ſuch things in all places where he is tenant. 2 Lutw. 1144.

Ancienty, (Fr. Anciennetè, that is, Antiquitas) Elderſhip, or ſeniority: It is uſed in the ſtatute of Ireland, 14 Hen. 3. As, The eldeſt ſiſter can demand no more than her other ſiſters, by reaſon of her ancienty. Cowel.

Andates lucus, (Anderida.) Mr. Camden was of opinion, that Newenden in Kent, ſituated near the wood called Ander, was the place where a famous caſtle was built by the Romans, to defend the ſea-coaſts from the Saxon pirates. But Mr. Somner was of another opinion: He rather thinks it was Pevenſa, becauſe that is near the ſea-coaſt; but the other is more remote. Cowel, edit. 1727.

Angelica veſtis, A monkiſh garment which laymen put on a little before their deaths, that they might have the benefit of the prayers of the monks. It was from them called Angelica, becauſe they were called Angeli, who by their prayers animæ ſaluti ſuccurrebant. And therefore where we read the word ſuccurrendum in our old books, it is underſtood of one who had put on the habit, and was near death: Si quis ad ſuccurrendum metu mortis ſe loco prænominato dederit, illic recipietur. Monaſticon, 1 tom. p. 632. So likewiſe, de ſuſceptis in morte, is meant of thoſe dying perſons who had put on the habits. Cowel. edit. 1727.

Angel, Signifies, in the computation of money, ten ſhillings of Engliſh coin.

Angild, (Angildum) The bare ſingle valuation or compenſation of a criminal; from the Sax. an, one, and gild, payment, mulct, or fine. Si villanus furatus fuerit, &c. et habeas plegium, admoneas eum de angildo. Twigild was the double mulct or fine; and trigild, the tréble, according to the rated ability of the perſon. *Cowel. Annats, (Annates) This word has the ſame meaning with firſt fruits, in ſtat. 25 H. 8. c. 20. The reaſon of the name is, becauſe the rate of the firſt fruits paid for ſpiritual livings is after the value of one year's profit. Alcuinus's Divine Offices.* The anniverſary or yearly return of the day of the death of any perſon, which the religious regiſter'd in their obitual or martyrology, and annually obſerv'd in gratitude to their founders and benefactors, was by our forefathers called a year-day and a mind-day, i. e. a memorial day; and tho' this proceeded from one of the trading arts of the prieſts, who got many a legacy for thus continuing the memorial of their friends; yet abating the ſuperſtition of it, we muſt confeſs this practice of theirs has been a great advantage to the hiſtory of men and times, by fixing the obits of great and good men. Cowel, edit. 1727.

Anno Domini, Is the computation of time from the incarnation of our Saviour; which is generally inſerted in the dates of all publick writings; ſometimes with, and ſometimes without the year of the King's reign. As the Romans made their computation from the building of the city of Rome, and the Grecians by Olympiads; ſo Chriſtians, in remembrance of the happy incarnation of our Saviour, reckon their time from thence. The day of the month, the year of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, and the year of the King's reign are the uſual dates of deeds. 2 Inſt. 675.

Annoyance, Annoiſance, or Nuſance (Fr. Nuiſance, hurt or offence) hath a double ſignification, being uſed as well for any hurt done to a publick place, as a highway, bridge, or common river, as to a private, by laying any thing that may breed infection, by incroaching, or ſuch like means; as alſo for the writ that is brought upon this tranſgreſſion, of which ſee more in Nuſance. The word annoiſance is uſed in the ſtat. 22 H. 8. c. 5. Cowel, edit. 1727.

Annua penſione, Is a writ (now diſuſed) whereby the King having due unto him an annual penſion from an abbot or prior, for any of his chaplains (whom he ſhould think fit to nominate, being as yet unprovided of ſufficient living) doth demand the ſame of the ſame abbot or prior; and alſo willeth him for his chaplain's better aſſurance, to give him his letters patent for the ſame. *Reg. may ſee the names of all the abbies and priories bound to this, in reſpect of their foundation or creation; as alſo the form of the letters patent, uſually granted upon this writ.

Annuity, Annuus redditus, Signifies a yearly rent to be paid for term of life, or years, or in fee; and it is alſo uſed for the writ that lies againſt a man for the recovery of ſuch a rent, if it be not ſatisfied every year according to the grant. Reg. Orig. 158. F. N. B. 152.

An annuity, according to lord Coke, is an annual ſum of money granted to another in fee, for life, or years, which charges the perſon of the grantor only. Co. Lit. 144. b. The author of the New Terms of Law, defineth annuity to be a certain ſum of money granted to another in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for term of life or years, to receive of the grantor or his heirs, ſo that no freehold be charged therewith, and whereof a man ſhall never have aſſiſe, or other action, but a writ of annuity.

An annuity, ſtrictly taken, is a yearly payment of a certain ſum of money granted to another in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years, charging the perſon of the grantor only; if payable out of lands, it is properly called a rent-charge; but if both the perſon and eſtate be made liable, as they moſt commonly are, then it is generally called an annuity. Co. Lit. 144. b. Finch. 161. 1 Rol. Abr. 226. Doct. & Stud. Dial. 2. c. 30.

Saint Germain, in his book ſtiled Doctor and Student, dial. 1. cap. 3. ſheweth divers differences between a rent and an annuity; whereof the firſt is, that every rent, be it rent-charge, rent-ſervice, or rent-ſeck, is going out of land, but an annuity goeth not out of any land, but chargeth only the perſon; that is to ſay, the grantor, or his heirs, that have aſſets by deſcent; or the houſe, if it be granted by a houſe of religion. Lit. ſect. 220. 2. A ſecond difference is, that for the recovery of an annuity, no action lieth, but only a writ of annuity againſt the grantor, his heirs or ſucceſſors. Fitz. Nat. Brev. 152. But of a rent, the ſame actions lie as do of land, as the caſe requireth. 3. The third difference is, that an annuity is never taken for aſſets, becauſe it is no freehold in law, neither ſhall it be put in execution upon a ſtatute merchant, ſtatute ſtaple, or elegit, as a rent may. Doct. and Stud. cap. 30. So alſo Dyer 345. Cowel. ed. 1727.

1. Difference between an annuity, rent-charge, and other rents.

A man ſeiſed of land grants by deed poll, or indenture, a yearly rent to be iſſuing out of the ſame land to another in fee, in tail, or for life, &c. with a clauſe of diſtreſs; this is a rent-charge; and if the grant be without a clauſe of diſtreſs, then it is a rent-ſeck. Lit. ſect. 218.

A rent-ſervice is an annual return made by the tenant, either in labour, money or proviſions, in retribution for the land that paſſes. 1 Vent. 161. Co. Lit. 142.

If a man holds certain land by rent-ſervice, and pays the rent to his lord continually in another county than where the land is, this ſhall change the nature of the rent; and therefore, where the plaintiff would have intitled himſelf to it as to an annuity, he was not ſuffer'd. Br. Rent, pl. 26.

If a man makes a feoffment in fee, or a leaſe for life, or a gift in tail, remainder over in fee, upon ſuch grants there can be no rent-ſervice reſerved at this day, the feoffor or grantor having no reverſion, and the feoffee or grantee by the ſtatute of quia emptores terrarum muſt hold of the capital lord; therefore if in ſuch deeds, a rent be reſerved, there muſt be a clauſe of diſtreſs inſerted; and this will make it a good rent-charge, the land being charged with a diſtreſs for the payment of it. Lit. ſect. 214, 215. 2 Inſt. 505. Plowd. 134.

If a man grants a rent out of three acres, and grants over, that if the rent be arrear, that he ſhall diſtrain for the rent in one of the acres, this is one intire rent; but it cannot be a rent-charge for the whole, becauſe the greateſt part of the land out of which it iſſues, is not chargeable with any diſtreſs for the recovery of it; and denominatio ſumenda a majori; therefore it is taken to be a rent-ſeck; for which, by the words of the grant the grantee may diſtrain in the third acre; for whenever the remedy, by way of charge for the rent, is not commenſurate to the rent, the rent is called ſeck, and the charge is only appurtenant to the rent, and does not give it it's denomination; and the reaſon is, becauſe if ſuch original grant ſhould be loſt and worn out by time, and a man were to preſcribe for it, if he were to give it the denomination of a charge, it would graſp more land than was originally intended to be charged; and therefore the law binds them down to the denomination of the rent, as ſeck, and to ſet forth the charge as an appurtenant, that by length of time no more ſhould be comprehended in the charge than was originally intended in the grant of that charge. Co. Lit. 147. 7 Co. 51. b.

A man in replevin preſcribed, that the plaintiff and his anceſtors, and thoſe whoſe eſtate, &c. have had common in land where, &c. and that the plaintiff and his anceſtors have uſed to pay 10*s. rent per annum* to him and his anceſtors for the ſame common, and ſo, avowed for the 10*s.* and good, notwithſtanding that he does not preſcribe that he and his anceſtors, &c. have had the rent, but that the other has paid it, which is all one, per cur', quod nota. And this is not a rent but an annuity, for he cannot have aſſiſe; for he cannot have rent out of his own land; and yet a good preſcription, per cur': but he ought to alledge ſeiſin, per cur', and ſo ſee preſcription to diſtrain in his own land. Br. preſcription, pl. 1.

If a man grants a rent out of his lands to J. S. and his heirs, and grants that he may diſtrain for it during his life, this is a rent-charge in J. S. becauſe he may diſtrain in the lands out of which it iſſues, during his own life; but it ſhall be ſeck in the hands of his heirs; becauſe by the expreſs words of the deed, the remedy was to ceaſe upon his death; aliter, if the diſtreſs had been limited only for years; for then the intire rent had been ſeck; becauſe the remedy being temporary is not adequate to the right, which is perpetual. Co. Lit. 147. b. 7 Co. 51. b.

If a man would that another ſhould have a rent-charge iſſuing out of his land, but would not that his perſon be charged in any manner by a writ of annuity, then he may limit ſuch a clauſe in the end of his deed; provided always, that this preſent writing, nor any thing therein ſpecified, ſhall any way extend to charge my perſon by a writ or an action of annuity, but only to charge my lands and tenements with the yearly rent aforeſaid, &c. then the land is charged, and the perſon of the grantor diſcharged. Co. Lit. ſect. 220.

2. By what words an annuity may be granted.

If a man grants an annuity to another, to be received out of his coffers, or to be received out of a bag of money, or to be received of a ſtranger, yet this is ſufficient to charge his perſon, and the ſubſequent words ſhall be rejected. 1 Rol. Abr. 227.

So, if a man grant a rent out of his manor, when he has not any manor; this is a good annuity. 1 Rol. Abr. 227.

Or, if he grant a rent of 20*l. per annum*, to be received of his tenants in D. when he has not any tenant there. 1 Rol. Abr. 227.

If a man grant a rent out of land, in which he has nothing, proviſo that he be not charged for this in a writ of annuity, it ſhall be a good annuity; for the proviſo, being repugnant, is void. Co. Lit. 146. a. 2 Bulſt. 149.

If a man grant a rent-charge out of his land, the grantee has an election to take it as a rent, or as an annuity. Lit. ſect. 219. 2 Bulſt. 148.

So if I bind my goods and lands to the payment of a yearly rent to J. S. this is a good rent-charge, with power power to diſtrain, tho' there be no expreſs words either of grant or diſtreſs; or if I grant that if ſuch a rent be arrear, that J. S. ſhall diſtrain for it in the manor of D. this is a good rent-charge; for in all theſe caſes it is evidently my intention, that my land be liable to the charge. Co. Lit. 147. 2 Roll. Abr. 424. Br. Rent, 14.

So it is if I grant to S. S. that he and his heirs, or the heirs of his body, ſhall diſtrain for 40*s.* rent in my manor of Dale, this is a good rent-charge in fee or in tail, becauſe the power of diſtraining is in one caſe given to the heirs general, and in the other to the deſcendants of the body of S. S. and whoever has a power of diſtraining, has an eſtate in the rent for which the diſtreſs is given. Co. Lit. 14. a. Lit. ſect. 221. 2 Roll. Abr. 424. 7 Co. 51.

But if I grant a rent of 40*s.* out of the manor of Dale, and if the rent be behind, that the grantee ſhall diſtrain in my manor of Sale, this power of diſtreſs in the manor of Sale ſhall not amount to the grant of a rent-charge out of the manor of Sale; for though in the former caſes ſuch conſtruction is admitted to ſupport the intentions of the parties, where the grant is not explicit; yet in this caſe, the reaſon of ſuch conſtruction fails; becauſe here is a plain grant of the rent out of the manor of Dale, and the diſtreſs is given in the manor of Sale, as a means for the recovery of it; for which he had no remedy by the grant itſelf; and therefore the rule, quod expreſſum facit ceſſare tacitum, takes place here, that were the intentions of the parties are evident, there that conſtruction ſhall never be admitted, which the law only allows in dubious contracts, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; for if that manner of interpretation were admitted, the grant might be made double, and the grantor twice charged, againſt the deſign of the grant. 2 Roll. Abr. 425. Co. Lit. 147. a. 7 Co. 51.

If a man grants an annuity to another and his heirs, and does not ſay for him and his heirs, this is determinable by the death of the grantor. 2 Hen. 4, 13.

A man ought to grant an annuity for him and his heirs, otherwiſe the heir ſhall not be charged, nor can it continue after his death; contrary of the grant of a rent out of land, or a grant of a rent whereof he is ſeiſed; note the diverſity; for this charges the land, but an annuity charges the perſon only. Br. Charge, pl. 54.

Where a man grants an annuity to J. S. and his heirs, this ſhall not ſerve but during the life of the grantor, and yet there it is fee-ſimple, determinable upon the life of a man; but if he had granted it for him and his heirs to the other and his heirs, it is otherwiſe: But a grant out of land to J. S. and his heirs, is good, for the land is charged, and in the other caſe the perſon is charged, which cannot extend to the heir without expreſs words. Br. Eſtates, pl. 65.

If a rent be granted to A. and if the rent be behind, that a ſtanger ſhall diſtrain for it, for the uſe of the grantee; this is a good rent-charge in A. and the diſtreſs limited to a ſtranger for his benefit, is in effect making him the grantee's ſervant for that purpoſe; and what a man may do by one ſervant, he may do by himſelf or any other. 2 Roll. Abr. 425.

But if the diſtreſs had been limited to a ſtranger, without ſaying for the benefit of the grantee; ſo that the limitation of the diſtreſs may ſeem to be independant on the grant and without relation to it, this diſtreſs does not make it rent-charge; ſince by no words in the deed, the diſtreſs ſhall be applied to the uſe or advantage of the grantee. 2 Roll. Abr. 425.

If A. grants and confirms to B. a rent of 5*l.* to be taken out of his lands, which rent B. has of the grant of his father, though B. never had any ſuch rent from his father, yet this grant of A. ſhall be good to create a rent-charge in B. for it is evidently the intention of A. that B. ſhall have a rent of 5*l.* out of his land; and a miſtake or error in the deſcription of the thing referred to, ſhall not render the true deſign of the contract ineffectual and void. Bro. tit. Grant, 69, 73. 2 Rol. Abr. 425.

If a man grants a rent in fee, without ſaying for him and his heirs, his heirs cannot be charged in an annuity. Co. Lit. 144.

The ſame law, though he adds further to the grant, he obliges himſelf and his heirs to warrant the annuity to the grantee and his heirs, for this does not inlarge the grant. Br. Annuity, pl. 13.

If a man ſeiſed of twenty acres of land, grant a rent of 20*s. percipiendum de qualibet acra terræ ſuæ*, or out of every acre of land, this is in nature of a ſeveral grant out of every acre; for the grant ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the grantor, and the grantee ſhall have 20*s.* out of each acre. Co. Lit. 147. 1 Rol. Abr. 228. Kelw. 3.

If A. bargains and ſells land to B. by indenture, and before inrollment they both join in a grant of a rent-charge to C. this after the inrollment ſhall be conſtrued the grant of B. and the confirmation of A. becauſe when the bargain and ſale is inrolled, it has the effect of a deed inrolled, from the making thereof; and therefore it muſt be the grant of B. who had the land at the time of the grant made; but if the deed had never been inrolled, then it ſhould have been the grant of A. and confirmation of B. becauſe the land never paſſed from A. the deed being ineffectual and void without inrollment. Co. Lit. 147. b.

If an original grant be made of a rent-charge, to commence after the death of J. S. it is good; for this is not like the caſe of lands, where the livery muſt carry the freehold immediately, and where the abeyance, or want of diſtinguiſhing where the freehold is, may be of prejudice to the rights of others; for if the freehold was to be granted in futuro, a man that had brought his præcipe againſt the grantor, after he had proceeded in it a conſiderable time, the writ might abate by the freehold's veſting in a ſtranger, by reaſon of a conveyance made by the grantor before the writ brought; but the grant of a rent de novo is not attended with this inconvenience; for no man can have a precedent right to a thing which originally was created by the grant itſelf; yet quære at what diſtance of time ſuch charges may be allowed to commence, whether it muſt not be after the lives of the perſons in eſſe; for if they be indefinite, they ſeem to have the ſame tendency to a perpetuity as any other contingent remainders or executory intereſt; and the bare affectation of a perpetuity, is ſufficient to condemn any conveyance. Bro. tit. Grant 86. 8 Hen. 7, 3. Plowd. 156. Palm. 29, 30. 2 Vent. 204.

Aſſiſe of 20*s. rent*, the deed was, I have granted to B. & hæredibus ſuis annuum redditum 20*s. de molendino meo de C. percipiend' de me & hæredibus meis in perpetuum*, and it was awarded that it was iſſued out of the mill, and is only an annuity, and therefore the aſſiſe lies well. Br. Aſſiſe, pl. 247.

Annuity was granted ſolvend' at ſuch and ſuch feaſts, ſi petatur. It was a queſtion if it be due without an actual demand. Palm. 320.

3. Remedies for recovering annuities.

If a man grants by his deed any annual rent to J. S. in fee, for life or years, out of certain lands, with clauſe of diſtreſs, the grantee may, at his election, either diſtrain for this rent, or have a writ of annuity, and thereby charge his perſon. Lit. ſect. 219. F. N. B. 152. 6 Co. 58. b.

If a man grants a rent out of his land, and by a proviſo in the deed, or by deed of defeaſance, provides that the grant, nor any thing therein contained, ſhall be conſtrued to extend to charge his perſon by writ of annuity; in this caſe the perſon of the grantor is not chargeable, becauſe the charge upon the perſon ariſing only from the manner of conſtruing grants, which for the conſideration given ought to be extended as far as the words will bear againſt the grantor, there can be no room for ſuch conſtruction, when by the expreſs words of the grant, the perſon of the grantor is not charged; nor no implication ſhall be admitted to overthrow an expreſs clauſe in the deed. Lit. ſect. 220. Poph. 87. 6 Co. 87.

Tenant for years of lands determinable upon the life of another, granted a rent of 10*l. per annum* to B. B. iſſuing out of the ſame for fifteen years, with a clauſe of diſtreſs; the life died; adjudged, that a writ of annuity may be brought by the grantee for the arrears of the rent, becauſe the rent-charge did determine by the act of God; beſides, an intereſt was immediately veſted in the grantee, and therefore it was in his election to make it a rent-charge, and ſo to charge the land with it, or a perſonal thing to charge the perſon of the grantor in a writ of annuity. 2 Rep. 37.

An annuity was granted to a feme ſole for life, who afterwards married; there were arrears due in her life-time, and then ſhe died, ſo that the annuity was determined; adjudged, that her huſband might have an action at Common law for theſe arrears, for an annuity is more than a thing in action, for that it may be granted over. Owen 3.

If a man grants a rent-charge out of the manor of Dale, in which the grantor has no intereſt, with a proviſo, that the grant ſhall not charge his perſon, this proviſo is void; becauſe the grantor having nothing in the manor of Dale, could not by any act of his charge it; and conſequently the grantee having no remedy for his annuity, but againſt the perſon of the grantor, the proviſo to exempt his perſon is void, as rendering the whole grant ineffectual; and if in this caſe the grantor had been ſeiſed of the manor, and had granted a rent-charge out of it, for the life of the grantee, with a proviſo that the grant ſhould not charge his perſon, though the grantee himſelf could have no remedy but by diſtreſs, becauſe that remedy being open to him, the proviſo is good to exonerate the perſon; yet upon the death of the grantee, his executor may have an action of debt againſt the grantor for the arrears, becauſe the executor has no other remedy for the recovery of them; for he cannot diſtrain after the grant is determined; and therefore the proviſo to exempt the perſon is void againſt the executor, as rendering the grant uſeleſs, and ineffectual. Co. Lit. 146. 6 Co. 41. b. 7 Co. 65. b.

And hence it is, that if a rent be granted out of lands, with a proviſo that the perſon of the grantor ſhall not be charged, that this proviſo is void, becauſe the grantee having no diſtreſs given by the deed for the recovery of the rent, would be without any manner of remedy, if the proviſo took place. 6 Co. 58. b.

If a man by his deed grants that if J. S. be not yearly paid the ſum of 10*s.* that then he may diſtrain for it in his manor of Dale, this is a good rent-charge out of the manor, but no writ of annuity lies for it, becauſe there is no grant of the rent made by the grantor; yet becauſe he hath given the grantee a power to diſtrain if ſuch a yearly ſum be not paid him, the manor is thereby charged with the diſtreſs, and conſequently with the diſtreſs for which the rent is given. Co. Lit. 146.

Judgment in a writ of annuity granted to the plaintiff for exerciſing the office of a ſteward, and afterwards the ſame was behind again, whereupon the plaintiff brought a ſcire facias upon the judgment, to which the defendant pleaded, that pending the writ the plaintiff had refuſed to execute the office of a ſteward, (viz.) to hold a court, &c. tho' he was required; adjudged, a good plea, for by his refuſal the annuity was determined, and he could only have an action of debt for the arrears. Dyer 377.

The biſhop of Rocheſter brought a writ of annuity againſt the dean and chapter of Rocheſter, and declared for an annuity by preſcription from the prior of St. Andrew's in Rocheſter, which priory was diſſolved anno 28 H. 8. and about three years afterwards their poſſeſſions were given by the ſaid King to the dean and chapter of Rocheſter; the Ch. J. Anderſon was of opinion, that the annuity was determined, becauſe 'tis the nature of an annuity to charge only the perſons; and in this caſe the corporation of the priory were the perſons granting, which being now diſſolved the annuity is gone; but if any land had been charged with the payment, or if the priory had been changed into an abby, the annuity ſhould continue. Owen 73.

If a man ſeiſed of land in fee, and poſſeſſed of other land for years, grants a rent-charge for life out of both, with a power to diſtrain in both, if the rent be arrear, the leaſhold as well as the land of inheritance are ſubject to the diſtreſs; becauſe a man may oblige his chattles to the diſcharge of the rent; but the rent being a freehold ſhall iſſue only out of the inheritance; becauſe the leaſehold, being only a temporary and periſhing intereſt, is not a fund commenſurate to the charge; and therefore the rent ſhall iſſue out of the inheritance, which for its duration is a more compleat eſtate to ſupport the charge, and render the grant effectual. And hence it was adjudged, that tho' the grantee might diſtrain the leaſehold lands, yet he muſt avow for a rent iſſuing out of the inheritance. Co. Lit. 147. Cro. Jac. 390. 1 Rol. Rep. 330. Cro. Eliz. 607, 622.

But if a man poſſeſſed of a term of years, grants a rent out of it to another for life, tho' the eſtate be of ſhorter duration than the charge; yet becauſe it is the only fund provided by the grant, for the payment of the rent, it ſhall anſwer the grantee ſo long as it has continuance, if the life for which the rent was granted, laſts ſo long. 7 Co. 51. Cro. Eliz. 183.

An annuity was brought by the dean and chapter of S. againſt the maſter of St. Bartholomew's hoſpital, in which the plaintiffs demand an annuity by preſcription, to be paid to them yearly at S. the plaintiffs had judgment, and afterwards they brought a ſcire facias upon that judgment againſt the ſucceſſor of the ſaid maſter, for arrears of the ſaid annuity, which became due after the judgment was given; and adjudged good. Cro. Eliz. 810.

The grantor by deed granted an annuity of 5*l. per annum* to the grantee for two years, payable at Michaelmas or ſixteen days after; the grantee brought an action of debt for this five pounds, which he declared, that it was in arrear et adhuc aretro exiſtit; and upon demurrer to the declaration it was inſiſted, that an action of debt would not lie for it, but a writ of annuity was the proper remedy; but adjudged, that debt would lie upon the contract, it being in a grant for years and by deed. Cro. Eliz. 268.

Where a man hath an annuity by preſcription, and he brings a writ of annuity for the arrears, and recovers, he ſhall never afterwards have another writ as long as that judgment ſtands in force, becauſe the preſcription is altered by the judgment, and changed into a thing of a higher nature, but he ſhall have a ſcire facias on that judgment. 6 Rep. 7.

There is another remedy for the recovery of an annuity or rent-charge, and that is, when a power is given the grantee to enter and hold the lands till ſatisfied the arrears by the perception of profits, the grantee, when the rent is arrear, may in ſuch caſe enter and hold the lands till ſatisfied by the perception of the profits; tho' in this caſe it was objected, that there was no eſtate conveyed, out of which a uſe might ariſe to the grantee, upon the nonpayment of the rent; and that this grant could paſs no eſtate to the grantee, as a conveyance at Common law, becauſe the grantee could have no inheritance or freehold in the land, when the rent was in arrear for want of livery, nor any eſtate for years, for want of a certain commencement and determination; yet it was adjudged, that by the grant he had an intereſt veſted in him, when the rent was arrear; and though it be an uncertain intereſt, which, for the uncertainty of its commencement and determination, might be void by the ſtrict rules of law, if it were granted independant of any eſtate certain, yet it is good in this caſe, becauſe it is created to attend a determinate eſtate; and the nonpayment of the rent fixes the certainty of its beginning, and the ſatisfaction of the arrears, by the perception of the profits, the end and determination of ſuch intereſt; and therefore the grantee may reduce ſuch intereſt, as it riſes, into his poſſeſſion by ejectment, which is the proper remedy to recover the poſſeſſion. 1 Sid. 223, 262, 344. 1 Lev. 170. 1 Keb. 784. Raym. 135, 158.

Upon nihil debet pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict, and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that debt would not lie for theſe arrears, but he ought to have brought a writ of annuity, becauſe the term was not expired but the annuity ſtill continued. 4 Rep. in Ognell's caſe.

The declaration was de placito debiti, and the plaintiff declared for 10*s.* arrear de annuali redditu; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, for as 'tis an action of debt the plaintiff cannot have judgment, becauſe it appears by the declaration that it was an annuity; and ſo it was adjudged. 2 Bulſt. 15.

In a writ of annuity the parties were at iſſue upon a preſcription, and the jury found for the plaintiff, but no damages; but before judgment the plaintiff releaſed the damages, and had judgment to recover the annuity; and upon a writ of error brought it was aſſigned for error, that the jury had given no damages, which ought to be given as well in an annuity by preſcription as by deed; but the judgment was affirmed, becauſe 'tis an advantage for the defendant, that damages were not given againſt him, and the not finding damages doth not alter the judgment. 1 Rol. Rep. 88.

If a man grants a rent-charge to J. S. his heirs and aſſigns; and if it ſhall happen that the rent be behind and unpaid, that then the ſaid J. S. his heirs and aſſigns ſhall enter into the land and have and enjoy the rents thereof, until the arrears be fully ſatisfied; and the grantor covenants to levy a fine to the uſes of the ſaid deed; and after the fine levied the rent be arrear, the grantee may enter into the land, or make a leaſe for years to try his title in ejectment; becauſe by the fine there is an eſtate veſted in the conuzees, to raiſe an uſe in the grantee, of the rent-charge, when the rent is behind; and whenever the rent becomes arrear, the poſſeſſion is executed to that uſe, and conſequently the grantee hath a right to take and keep that poſſeſſion till the uſe for which it was executed be ſatisfied; and that was till the arrears of rent be paid by the perception of the profits; and therefore, though the greateſt intereſt in the land be uncertain (becauſe it is uncertain when the rent will be paid out of the profits) yet while his intereſt remains, if his poſſeſſion be diſturbed or veſted, he may reſtore it by ejectment, which is the proper remedy to recover the poſſeſſion; and if the grantee aſſign over the rent, the aſſignee may likewiſe enter and maintain a title in ejectment; for though the uſe ariſes out of the eſtate of the conuzee only, as the rent is in arrear, and till the rent be behind and unpaid, there is nothing more than a bare poſſeſſion of uſe, which in its nature is not aſſignable; yet by the conveyance of the rent it ſhall paſs, becauſe it is nothing more than a remedy or ſecurity for the rent; and therefore ſhall attend that into whoſe hands ſoever it comes. Cro. Jac. 510, 511, 512. 2 Rol. Rep. 12. Poph. 126, 147. 2 Rol. Rep. 427. 3 Bulſt. 250.

The plaintiff brought an annuity by plaint in the grand ſeſſions in Carmarthen, and declared, that it was granted to him for life, by the defendant, and had a verdict and judgment againſt him, and the defendant brought a writ of error, and the error aſſigned was, that by the ſtatutes 34 & 35 H. 8. all real actions brought in Wales, and mixt actions, ſhall be ſued by writ, and all perſonal actions by plaint, and that annuity is a mixt action, therefore not to be brought by plaint: Sed per curiam, 'Tis a perſonal action, and charges the perſon only and not the land. W. Jones 214.

An action of debt does not lie for the arrearages of an annuity, if the grantee be ſeiſed of it in fee, tail or for life. Co. Lit. 162. 4 Co. 40. a.

As regularly the remedies for recovery of an annuity or rent-charge are either by writ of annuity or diſtreſs, it is to be ſeen which is the moſt eligible method, and what ſhall determine the grantee's election. If A. grants a rent-charge to B. and his heirs, if the rent be arrear, not only the grantee, but his heirs in infinitum, may diſtrain for it; for the remedy being commenſurate to the right, muſt be of equal duration with the right; but if in this caſe the rent be arrear, and the grantee brings a writ of annuity, in order to charge the perſon of the grantor, it is no longer to be conſidered as a rent iſſuing out of the land, becauſe the writ of annuity has intirely turned the charge upon the perſon of the grantor; and under that denomination it muſt determine with the life of the grantor, becauſe his heirs are not chargeable. 1 Rol. Abr. 226. Poph. 87. Hob. 58. Dyer 344. Co. Lit. 144.

But if A. granted for him and his heirs to B. and his heirs, ſuch a rent out of his lands, in this caſe the heirs, being comprehended in the contract, are bound to make good the grant ſo far as they have aſſets by deſcent from the grantor. 2 Rol. Abr. 226. Co. Lit. 144.

4. Pleadings.

In replevin, the defendant avowed for an annuity granted to him pro conſilio impendendo; the plaintiff replied, that the defendant was accuſed of treaſon and committed to the Tower, and that he had buſineſs which required his counſel, but could not be admitted to him; and upon demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff, becauſe he might give counſel in priſon as well as when at large. Dyer 2.

An annuity was granted to an attorney pro conſilio impenſo et impendendo, and afterwards there being a difference between the grantor and a ſtranger, the attorney not being required to give counſel to the grantor, was of counſel with his adverſary; adjudged, that his annuity was not determined by this miſbehaviour. Dyer 369.

A writ of annuity was brought for an annuity pro conſilio impenſo, &c. the defendant pleaded in bar, that he carried a bill in Chancery, and deſired him to ſet his hand to it, and becauſe he refuſed, he detained the annuity; adjudged no good plea, for tho' the plaintiff was bound to give his advice, yet he was not bound to ſet his hand to every bill brought to him. Poph. 135.

A. granted a rent-charge to B. B. brought a writ of annuity, and counts of a rent-charge granted to him, and concludes, by force of which he was ſeiſed in his demeſne as of freehold; adjudged upon a writ of error, and in affirmance of the judgment, that this is only a miſtake of the law, and does not vitiate the declaration, which is good, and that this is no election to have this as a rent-charge. 2 Bulſt. 148.

In annuity the plaintiff declared of a grant for his life by deed, virtute cujus ſeiſitus fuit in dominico ſuo ut de libero tenemento. It was objected that this proves it a rent-charge, and no annuity, and ſo had made it his election to have it as a rent-charge, and cited D. 65. 3 E. 6. and 221. 5 Eliz. ſed non allocatur; for being an annuity for life, tho' no rent-charge, ſuch count is good; and tho' Bendloe took ſuch exceptions in 3 E. 6. yet the court notwithſtanding reſolved for the plaintiff. Cro. Car. 170.

Annuity brought againſt the prior of M. in Southwark, was præcipe, &c. quod reddat 10*l. or four gowns*, which are arrear of a certain annual rent of five marks, or one gown, &c. and the writ held good notwithſtanding it was in the diſjunctive with (or). Br. Annuity, pl. 33.

Debt upon arrears of an annuity, and counted of a grant out of the manor of D. and did not ſhew where the manor is, and yet well, becauſe the action is found upon the deed, and not upon the land. Bro. Count, pl. 92.

Annuity of 10*l.* granted to him pro ſervitio impenſo et impendendo, and did not count that he had continued in his ſervice. Per Brian: There is a diverſity where an annuity is granted to be an officer certain, as parker or bailiff, and where it is general pro ſervitio, &c. for in the caſe of ſpecial ſervice he ſhall alledge the continuance in the bailiwick or parkerſhip; for he knows what ſervice he ſhall do, and in the other caſe does not know till the defendant commands him; and therefore let him anſwer. Note the diverſity. Br. Count, pl. 72.

An annuity was granted for life pro conſilio impenſo, &c. and in a writ of annuity brought for the arrears, the defendant pleaded, that before any were due, he required the plaintiff to do him ſervice, and he refuſed, &c. the plaintiff replied, that before any refuſal, the defendant on ſuch a day and year did diſcharge him, the ſaid plaintiff, from his ſervice: Adjudged that the defendant's plea was not good, becauſe he ought to have ſhewed for what manner of ſervice the plaintiff was detained, and the annuity granted, and then what ſervice he required of him, and what he refuſed; neither is the replication good, for the diſcharge from the ſervice was not an abſolute diſcharge, ſo that the defendant could never afterwards require it, becauſe the annuity being granted to the plaintiff for life, he ought to continue his ſervice ſo long as the annuity continueth, but where the retainer is for years, then then a discharge is peremptory and absolute. 1 Leon. 209.

In a writ of annuity the plaintiff declared, that whereas the King by letters patent had granted to the defendants certain privileges concerning making allum, &c. they the said defendants, as well for the counsel given by the plaintiff to them concerning the said letters patent, and before they were drawn, as afterwards, &c. granted to him an annual sum of 40*l.* for so many years, &c. the defendants confessed the annuity as aforesaid, but say it was granted to the plaintiff to be taken out of the clear profits and gains which should accrue to them by making allum; and averred, that no such gains did accrue to them since the grant; and upon demurrer it was adjudged a good grant of an annuity to charge their persons. Hutt. 33.

Rent was granted to T. Quintin by his father by name of T. his son, and he brought assise of the rent by name of T. Q. of N. and did not say T. son of T. Q. and yet the writ was good; quod nota; and yet in annuity it ought to agree with the specialty. Br. Variance, pl. 70.

Annuity against the parson of E. the plaintiff counted that he and his predecessors time out of mind have been seised of the said annuity of 40*s. per ann. by the hands of A. late vicar, of* E. and of his predecessors vicars time out of mind; and that King E. 3. when a vicar died, presented one J. as parson, who was instituted and inducted, and that all the defendant's predecessors, and likewise the defendant were instituted and inducted as parsons; and that he has been seised of the annuity by the hands of the said parsons till the defendant withdrew it; and the count was awarded good; for he shall be taken as parson, and not as vicar, so that the writ shall not be brought against him as vicar; quod nota per judicium; for it is agreed, that tho' there are vicars and parsons (as are in divers churches) and several patrons, yet when one is presented as parson he shall be taken as parson. Br. Annuity, pl. 44.

The plaintiff may count by prescription in writ of annuity, if it commences before time of memory, by composition, fine, or patent of the King. Bro. Annuity, pl. 21.

Debt upon arrears of annuity till he was promoted to a competent benefice, and shewed that such a day he took feme, and for the arrears due before, he brought the action; Choke demanded judgment of the court, for this act changes the action of annuity into debt, and therefore ought to shew places, and by the best opinion, for this default the count is not good. Br. Count, pl. 26.

A Writ of Annuity.

Antejuramentum, and Praejuramentum, By our ancestors called juramentum calumniæ; in which both the accuser and the accused were to make this oath before any trial or purgation, viz. the accuser was to swear that he would prosecute the criminal; and the accused was to make oath on the very day that he was to undergo the ordeal, that he was innocent of the crime of which he was charged. Leg. Athelstan. apud Lambard. 23. If the accuser failed to take this oath, the criminal was discharged; and if the accused did not take his, he was intended to be guilty, and not admitted to purge himself. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 66.

Antistitium, A word used for monastery in our old histories. Blount.

Antichetarius, Signifies where a man endeavours to discharge himself of the fact of which he is accused, by recriminating and charging the accuser with the same fact. This word is mentioned in the title of a chaper in the laws of Canutus, capite 47.

Apatisatio, An agreement or compact made with another. Upton, lib. 2. c. 12. —— De officio militari, viz. Concedimus per præsentes bonum & salvum conductum, ac salvam gardiam sive securitatem apatisationis.

Apoiare, To bring to poverty. —— Permisit suos spoliare patriam, aporiare vulgus. Walsingham in R. 2. It hath been used sometimes to signify shun or avoid.

Apostare, To violate: Apostare leges, apostatare leges, wilfully to break or transgress the laws. —— Qui leges, apostabit terræ suæ, reus sit apud regem. Leg. Edw. Confessoris, l. 35. Cowell.

Apostata capiendo, A writ that formerly lay against one who having entered and professed some order of religion, broke out again, and wandered up and down the country, contrary to the rules of his order: It was directed to the sheriff for the apprehension of the offender, and delivery of him again to his abbot or prior. Reg. Orig. 71, 267.

Apothecaries, Are exempted from serving offices, &c. their medicines are to be searched and examined by the physicians chosen by the college of physicians, and if faulty shall be burnt, &c. 32 Hen. 8. c. 40. And apothecaries to the army are to make up their chests of medicines at apothecaries hall, there to be openly view'd, &c. under the penalty of 40*l.* Stat. 10 Ann. cap. 14. 10 Geo. 1. Apparator, or Apparitor, A messenger that serves the process of the spiritual court: His duty is to cite the offenders to appear; to arrest them; and to execute the sentence or decree of the judges, &c. Stat. 21 Hen. 8. cap. 5. The office of an apparitor will best appear from this commission of Walter, archbishop of Canterbury, granted in the year 1316. —— Walterus Dei gratia Cant. archiep. totius Angliæ primas, dilecto filio Willielmo de Graftone in apparitoris officio, in curia nostra Cantuar', videlicet, in consistorio ac decanatu nostro ecclesiæ beatæ Mariæ de arcubus London, ministranti salutem, gratiam & benedictionem. Personam tuam, eo quod de fidelitate in dicto officio per laudabile testimonium apud nos multipliciter commendaris, volentes prosequi cum favore, dictum apparatoris officium in curia, consistorio & decanatu prædictis perpetuo possidendum tibi conferimus per præsentes; ita tamen quod te fideliter geras in officio prædicto memorato. Volentes & tibi specialiter concedentes, ut cum ministerio dicti officii per teipsum personaliter vacare non poteris, vel absens fueris a curia, consistorio & decanatu prædictis, nihilominus per alium idoneam personam, quem ad hoc assignandum omnia & singula quæ dicto incumbent officio—facere valeas, & jugiter exercere. Dat. apud Lambith. 8 id. Mart. 1316.

If a monition be awarded to an apparitor, to summon a man, and he upon the return of the monition avers that he had summoned him, when in truth he had not, and the defendant be thereupon excommunicated; an action on the case at Common law will lie against the apparitor for the falshood committed by him in his office, besides the punishment inflicted on him by the ecclesiastical court for such breach of trust. Ayl. Parerg. 70. 2 Bulst. 264.

Action upon the case, for that the defendant an apparitor under the bishop of Exeter, maliciously, and without colour or cause of suspicion of incontinency, of his own proper malice, procured the plaintiff ex officio, upon pretence of fame of incontinency with one Edith (whereas there was no such fame nor just cause of suspicion) to be cited to the Consistory court, and there to be at great charges and vexation, untill he was cleared by sentence; which was to his great discredit and cause of great expences and losses; for which the action is brought. Upon Not guilty pleaded, and found for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that in this case an action lieth not; for he did nothing but as an informer, and by virtue of his office. But all the court held, forasmuch as it is alledged, that he did maliciously and without colour of suspicion cause him to be cited, upon pretence of fame where there was no offence committed; and it is averred, that there was not any such fame, and he is found found guilty thereof, therefore the action well lieth. Cro. Car. 291.

Apparator comitatus, An officer formerly called by this name; for which the ſheriff of Buckinghamſhire had conſiderable yearly allowance; and in the reign of Queen Elizabeth there was an order of court for making that allowance; but the cuſtom and reaſon of it are now altered. Hale's Sher. Acc. 104.

Apparlement, (from the Fr. parcillement, i. e. in like manner) Signifies a reſemblance or likelihood; as apparlement of war. Stat. 2 Ric. 2. ſt. 1. c. 6.

Apparura, Furniture and implements; apparel. Dominus clamat habere omnes carrectus ferro non ligatas, & omnes carrucas cum tota apparura. Placit. in Itin. apud Ceſtriam 14 H. 7. Carrucarum apparura is plough-tackle, or all the implements belonging to a plough. Cowell.

Appeal, Appellum, (from the Fr. appel or appeller, to call, becauſe appellans vocat reum in judicium) Is an accuſation of another in legal form, for a crime by him committed. Co. Lit. 123. b. 287. b. It ſignifies in our Common law, as much as accuſatio with the Civilians; for as in the Civil law, cognizance of criminal cauſes is taken either upon inquiſition and denunciation, or accuſation; ſo in ours, cognizance is taken of criminal cauſes upon indictment or appeal; indictment comprehending both inquiſition and denunciation. An accuſation or appeal, is a lawful declaration of another man's crime (which by Bracton muſt be felony at the leaſt) before a competent judge, by one that ſetteth his name to the declaration, and undertakes to prove it upon the penalty that may enſue thereon. Cowell.

There were anciently ſeveral kinds of appeals, which ſeem obſolete at this day; as appeals of treaſon, which might be ſued before the parliament and other courts of law, as well as before the conſtable and marſhal, and were determinable by battle. 2 Inſt. 132. Bract. 118. 2 Hawk. P. C. 161.

But appeals before the parliament are taken away by 1 H. 4. cap. 14. and thoſe before other law-courts are become obſolete.

But as to the juriſdiction of the conſtable and marſhal, in relation to treaſons committed out of the realm, it ſeems to continue ſtill in force; for in the 7th year of Charles the Firſt, an appeal of treaſon, ſuppoſed to be committed beyond ſea, was actually commenced before the conſtable and marſhal; who, for want of ſufficient poof to clear the truth, awarded that a duel ſhould be fought between the parties, for the final determination of the matter. See Ruſhworth's Collect. part. 2. vol. 1. p. 112.

Appeals de pace, de plagis, and de impriſonamento are out of uſe, and have been turned to actions of treſpaſs for many hundred years paſt; alſo the whole learning of appeals of arſon ſeems obſolete at this day. Co. Lit. 288. a.

The kinds of appeals, therefore, that ſeem to require any conſideration at this day, are thoſe of death, larceny and rape, which are capital appeals, and that of mayhem, which is conſidered as a treſpaſs. 1 New Abr. 122.

An appeal of death, which is now chiefly in uſe, is a vindictive action which the law gives a wife againſt her huſband's murderer, and to the heir at law againſt one who kills his anceſtor, which being the ſuit of the ſubject, the King cannot pardon. 1 New Abr. 122.

By Magna Charta, [Stat. 9 Hen. 3.] c. 34. No man ſhall be taken or impriſoned upon the appeal of a woman for the death of any other than of her huſband.

It being alledged by ſome, and eſpecially by Treby Ch. J. that an appeal was a revengeful odious proſecution, and therefore deſerved no encouragement; on which occaſion Holt, with great vehemency and zeal, ſaid, that he wondered any Engliſhman ſhould brand an appeal with the name of an odious proſecution; that for his part he looked upon it to be a noble proſecution, and a true badge of Engliſh liberties, and referred to the ſtatute of Glouceſter, and the comment thereupon in 2 Inſt. 12 Mod. 375.

At the Common law, before the ſtatute 9 Hen. 3. a woman as well as a man might have had an appeal of death of any of her anceſtors, and therefore the ſon of a woman ſhall at this day have an appeal, if he be heir at the death of the anceſtor, for the ſon is not diſabled, but the mother only, for the ſtatute ſays, propter appellum feminæ. 2 Inſt. 68.

Fleta ſays, Fœminia autem de morte viri ſui inter brachia ſua interfecti, & non aliter poterit appellare; and therewith agree the Mirror, Britton and Bracton. 2 Inſt. 68. —— 2 Inſt. 317. S. P. cites Bracton and Britton. —— Staun. P. C. 58. b. S. P.

By inter brachia in theſe ancient authors, is underſtood the wife, which the dead perſon had lawfully in poſſeſſion at his death, for ſhe muſt be his wife both of right and in poſſeſſion; for in an appeal, ne unques accouple in loyal matrimony, is a good plea. 2 Inſt. 68.—2 Inſt. 317. S. P. and that there muſt be no divorce. —— St. P. C. 59. a Ne unque accouple, &c. is a good plea in bar —— S. P. Accordingly, Br. Appeal, pl. 17. cites 50 E. 3. 15.—— 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 164. ſ. 36. ſays, that if the meaning of inter brachia be according to Sir Edw. Coke, it ſeems at leaſt to follow, that if the huſband were divorced from the wife at his death, tho' by a voidable ſentence, ſhe cannot maintain an appeal; yet it is generally holden, that a wife who has eloped from her huſband may have an appeal of his death; and Stamford ſeems to underſtand inter brachia to be, that the wife ought to have had the deceaſed in her view, and to have been preſent at his death, which is moſt certainly not neceſſary at this day.

The judges are ſo far bound to take notice of this ſtatute, that if a woman brings an appeal of death of her father, or of any other beſides her huſband, they ought ex officio to abate it, tho' the defendant takes no exception to it. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 166. cap. 23. ſ. 42.

If a man be killed who has no feme nor ſon, and his daughter, ſiſter, or other couſin, who is a feme, is his heir, and he has an uncle or other male couſin who is not heir but of the kin, ſhe ſhall not have appeal; for the ſtatute of Magna Charta, cap. 37. is, that none ſhall be taken by appeal of a feme, unleſs of the death of her huſband, and therefore the appeal is loſt. Br. Appeal, pl. 63.

A feme ſhall have appeal where ſhe ſhall have no dower, as where ſhe elopes from her baron. Br. Appeal, pl. 17. cites 50 E. 3. 15. per Ingleby.

If a feme brings appeal of the death of her baron, and convicts the defendant, and takes another baron before execution, if the defendant gets charter of pardon, this ſhall not be allowed before the baron and feme are warned, and the feme ſhall have execution notwithſtanding the coverture. per Skrene; but per Gaſcoign Ch. J. It is not ſo, for the feme has diſabled herſelf by taking of the ſecond baron; and by the juſtices of B. R. M. 2 M. 1. She ſhall loſe her appeal by taking of the ſecond baron; for the cauſe of appeal is, that ſhe wants her baron, therefore when ſhe has another baron the cauſe ceaſes, and ceſſante cauſa ceſſat effectus; and the ſame it ſeems of the execution of the appellee. Br. Appeal, pl. 148. cites 11 H. 4. 48.

If ſhe has judgment of death againſt the defendant, if after ſhe takes huſband, ſhe can never have execution of death againſt him. 2 Inſt. 69. — 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 164. cap. 23. ſ. 38. S. P. But ſays it ſeems clear, that in ſuch caſe the appellee ſhall not be diſcharged without the King's pardon, and that he does not find it ſettled what ought to be done with the appellee in this caſe; but it ſeems certain, that the King cannot proceed againſt him by way of indictment, becauſe he is attainted already; and therefore it may be probably argued, that the court may award execution of him ex officio, or at leaſt at the demand of the King; for otherwiſe he would ſave his life by reaſon of the attainder by which he is adjudged to loſe it.

For the death of an anceſtor who leaves no wife, the heir only can bring an appeal, and ſuch heir muſt himſelf be innocent of the fact, he muſt be heir general according to the courſe of the Common Law, and alſo heir male, and in his count muſt ſet forth how he is heir to the deceaſed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 165.

If an heir die, hanging an appeal commenced by him, it ſeems agreed that no other heir can proceed in ſuch appeal, or commence a new one; and it ſeems the ſtronger opinion, that if the right of bringing an appeal be once veſted in an heir, who dies without bringing any, the right of appeal is gone for ever; and if an heir die after judgment given againſt the appellant, it is queſtionable whether his heir can ſue execution. 2 Hawk. P. C. 166.

The huſband was killed and afterwards the wife died within the year, the heir ſhall not have appeal becauſe the appeal was once given to the wife, ſo that the action was once out of the blood, and therefore cannot be given to the blood again. Keilw. 120.

If an appeal be commenced by an heir who dies, hanging the writ, it ſeems to be agreed by almoſt all the books, that no other heir can afterwards proceed in ſuch appeal, or commence a new one, becauſe it is a perſonal action, given to the heir in reſpect of his immediate relation to the perſon killed, at the time of his death, and like other perſonal actions ſhall die with him; but ſome have held, that if the firſt heir dies within the year and the day, without commencing an appeal, the next heir may bring one; but this is doubted by others, and the generality of books ſeem to favour the contrary opinion, as more agreeable to the general tenor of the law in relation to appeal, which in no caſe, as the ſerjeant ſays he knows of, will ſuffer the right of bringing an appeal to be transferred from one to another, and compares it to the caſe of a wife dying within the year and day in whom the right of appeal is veſted, no heir ſhall have appeal; but that it is held by Sir Matt. Hale, [Hale's Pl. C. 182.] and ſome others, that if the firſt heir gets judgment in appeal of death and dies, his heir may have execution. But that Stamford [St. P. C. 59. b. cites Trin. 16. H. 7. 15.] doubts this, and ſeems contrary to many of the old books, and not eaſily reconcileable with the reaſon of the caſes in the books. But whether in this caſe the court may not award execution either ex officio, or at the demand of the King, may deſerve to be conſidered. Alſo if a perſon killed has no wife at his death, and no iſſue but daughters, and all thoſe daughters die within the year and day, it may reaſonably be argued, that the heir male may have appeal, becauſe the right of bringing one never veſted in any other before; but ſays he does not find this caſe in any of the books. 2 Hawk. P. C. 165, 166. c. 23. ſect. 41.

An appeal was brought by the ſon againſt his father, of the death of the mother of the plaintiff, and held good, for he is heir to the mother, for appeal lies as well of the death of a woman as of the death of a man. Br. Appeal, pl. 106.

If there be no wife of the perſon killed, then the next heir at the Common law ſhall have the appeal, if ſuch heir be male, but if ſuch heir be a female, as daughter, &c. ſhe ſhall not have it; nor ſhall the youngeſt ſon in Borough-Engliſh have the appeal, tho' he be inheritable to the land. St. P. C. 59.

An hermaphrodite, if the male ſex be predominant, ſhall have an appeal of death as heir; but if the female ſex doth exceed the other, no appeal doth lie for her as heir. 2 Inſt. 69.

An infant may bring an appeal, but he muſt proſecute it by guardian, and he ſhall be nonſuited upon ſuch guardian's non-appearance at a day whereon he is demandable; but if the infant comes into court, and ſays, that he will relinquiſh the ſuit, and the guardian inſiſts to continue it, the court may diſcharge him and aſſign another. Moor 461. H. P. C. 183.

But an ideot, or perſon born deaf and dumb, or one attainted of treaſon or felony, or outlawed in a perſonal action, ſo long as ſuch attainder or outlawry continues in force, cannot bring any appeal whatſoever. 2 Hawk. 168. H. P. C. 183. 2 Hawk. P. C. 162.

If the wife take another huſband either before or pending the appeal, ſhe puts an end to it for ever; and if ſhe marry after judgment, ſhe cannot pray execution. 2 Hawk. P. C. 164.

Serjeant Hawkins ſays, that infancy, old age, or the imbecillity of the plaintiff, is no good objection againſt bringing an appeal, though defendant loſes the benefit of waging battle; and ſo puts him in a worſe condition than if the appeal were brought by one capable of fighting; for ſince the defendant has proper means for his acquittal, by putting himſelf upon a trial by his country, and the imbecillity of the plaintiff is wholly owing to the act of God, and no ways leſſens the injury complained of by him, it is not reaſonable he ſhould ſuffer any diſadvantage from it. And agreeably hereto it ſeems ſettled of late times, contrary to the numerous authorities in the old books, that the parol ſhall not demur in an appeal for the non-age of the plaintiff; yet it is certain that an infant muſt proſecute ſuch ſuit by guardian; but though the guardian be ſo neceſſary in the proſecution of ſuch ſuit, yet if the infant comes into court and ſays he will relinquiſh it, notwithſtanding which the guardian will proſecute it, they may in diſcretion diſcharge ſuch guardian, and aſſign another, it not being reaſonable that an infant be bound to continue a ſuit againſt his will, which demands nothing but revenge, and will be chargeable to him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 161. c. 23. ſect. 30.

2. When, where, and in what manner, an appeal of death muſt be brought and proſecuted.

By the ſtatute of Glouceſter, 6 Ed. 1. cap. 9. which is conſtrued to extend only to appeals of death, an appeal ſhall not be abated for default of freſh ſuit, if the party ſue within the year and day after the deed done, the computation whereof, as the law is now ſettled, ſhall be made not from the day when the wound was given, but from the day when the party died; alſo the year and day ſhall be from the beginning of the day, and not from the preciſe time when the death happened, becauſe regularly no fraction ſhall be made of a day. 2 Inſt. 320. 3 Inſt. 53. 4 Co. 42. b. 2 Hawk. P. C. 162.

All appeals are local actions, and regularly to be tried in the county wherein the offence was committed. Dyer 38.

But it is ſaid, that if a perſon had died in one county, of a wound given in another, the appeal might be brought in either of them, and the trial be at the bar by a jury returned from the body of each of thoſe counties; but ſince the 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 2. which enacts, that the party may ſue an appeal in the county where the perſon felonioufly ſtricken, &c. ſhall die, &c. it ſeems the trial may be from ſuch county only. 2 Hawk. P. C. 163.

Appeals are commenced either by writ, which is an original out of Chancery, returnable in the King's Bench only, or by bill. 2 Hawk. P. C. 155.

Appeals by bill may be ſued in the King's Bench againſt any perſon in actual cuſtody, or by having bail filed for him there. Cro. Eliz. 605.

If a man be brought into court either by a void writ of appeal, or by a voidable one, which is afterwards abated, he may be arraigned by bill in cuſtodia mareſchalli. 2 Hawk. P. C. 155. Skin. 634.

A bill of appeal lies before juſtices of Eyre, and before juſtices ſpecially aſſigned, and before juſtices of goal delivery, and for the ſame reaſon, as ſome ſay, before juſtices of aſſize; who by the purport of ſeveral ſtatutes are authoriſed to deliver goals without any ſpecial commiſſion againſt any priſoner in the goal, which they are to deliver, or, as it is generally holden, againſt a perſon whom they have bailed. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 156.

If ſome of the accomplices only be in priſon, a bill of appeal lies againſt all, which, after the trial of thoſe in the the priſon, ſhall be removed into the King's Bench, where the reſt ſhall be proceeded againſt. 2 Hawk. P. C. 156.

At Common law neither plaintiff nor defendant in any appeal whatever, could make an attorney except in ſome ſpecial caſes, but now by the 3 H. 7. cap. 1. it is enacted, that the appellant in any appeals of murder, or death of a man, where battle by the courſe of the Common law lies not, may make an attorney, and appear in the ſame, in the ſaid appeals, after they be commenced, to the end of the ſuit and execution of the ſame. 2 Inſt. 313. 2 Hawk. P. C. 175.

But it ſeems that the appellant cannot make an attorney till he has once appeared in proper perſon, and that if the plaintiff or defendant appear or plead by attorney where they ought not, and the court receive the plea, and adjourn the cauſe, it ſeems that the appeal is diſcontinued, becauſe ſuch appearance was merely void in law. 1 Salk. 61. Carth. 394. Skin. 48, 670.

Where an appeal is commenced in the court below, and removed into the King's Bench, the appellee is to be arraigned de novo on the ſame bill of appeal, and it is not neceſſary to exhibit a new bill againſt him in cuſtodia mareſchalli; and if the appellant will not appear to proſecute his appeal, the appellee may ſue out a ſcire facias reciting the whole matter, warning him to appear at a certain day; and if he make default on that day, the court on demand will nonſuit him; but the appellant may appear gratis, and proſecute without any ſcire facias. 1 Rol. Abr. 131. 2 Bulſt. 19. Skin. 670. Carth. 394, 395.

The appellant may be nonſuited for not appearing when demanded, at any day of continuance, except a verdict hath been given againſt him; in which caſe by the 2 H. 4. cap. 7. he cannot be nonſuited. Noy 88. Latch 173. Moor 407. Cro. Eliz. 465.

3. Where an appeal of death may be abated, or not.

The writ in an appeal is an original iſſuing out of Chancery, returnable into the King's Bench only; before the return thereof the court of Chancery only can ſuperſede or ſet it aſide, where it appears to have iſſued erronice or improvide, by ſome error extrinſick to the writ itſelf; but for any error or defect on the face of it may be quaſhed after it is returned into the King's Bench. Abr. Eq. 416.

The court ex officio will quaſh the writ for apparent faults appearing on the face of the writ; as where the ſenſe is defective for want of a material word, or where it wants thoſe words of art which the law has appropriated for the deſcription of the offence. 2 Hawk. P. C. 184.

So if in a writ of appeal brought by huſband and wife, the concluſion is in the name of the wife only; or if the writ omits either the name of baptiſm, or ſurname of the appellant or appellee, being under the degree of nobility, it ſhall be abated. 2 Hawk. P. C. 185.

Alſo the court will abate the writ when the declaration varies from the writ in ſome material point, either as to the reign of the King, or as to the county wherein the fact is laid, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 184.

On the exception of the party the court will abate the writ; as if he ſhews that there are not 15 days between the teſte and return of the writ; but this he muſt do before he has pleaded in chief, without taking advantage of it. 1 Salk. 63. 1 Vent. 7.

If the writ or declaration miſtake either the name of baptiſm, or ſurname, or addition of the appellant or appellee, the appellee before imparlance may plead it in abatement. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 184.

But the omiſſion or inſufficiency of an addition, are ſalved by the appellee's coming in and pleading, without taking any advantage of ſuch defect, but by his bare appearance. 2 Hawk. P. C. 190.

The defendant may at the ſame time plead as many pleas in abatement as he pleaſes, together with matter in bar, and the general iſſue, if he can do it without repugnancy; and if he be ſuffered to plead any ſuch plea without pleading with it the general iſſue, the finding it againſt him doth not conclude him from pleading the general iſſue afterwards. 2 Hawk. P. C. 191, 192.

A man was found guilty upon an indictment for the murder of B. B. and immediately his wife brought an appeal of the death of her huſband, to which the defendant pleaded, that after the death of her firſt huſband ſhe had married another at R. &c. the plaintiff replied, and the matter depending a year, and more, all theſe proceedings were removed into B. R. by a certiorari, and the court demanded of him what he could ſay why judgment ſhould not be given againſt him upon his former conviction; he pleaded, that the appeal was ſtill depending; but it being brought in another county than where the indictment was laid, and there being no continuances entered from one term to another, the plaintiff in appeal was nonſuit, and ſo the court gave judgment upon the indictment Dyer 296.

A woman poiſoned her huſband, which is treaſon by the ſtatute 31 H. 8. the heir brought an appeal of murder againſt his mother; adjudged, that it did not lie becauſe it was not murder, but treaſon, and the greater offence drowns the leſs. Dyer 50.

There were three brothers and the middle brother was killed, the eldeſt died within the year, and no appeal brought, it was a queſtion, whether the younger ſhould have an appeal; it was not reſolved, tho' Forteſcue, 20 H. 6. 43. held he ſhould not, but the 16 H. 7. 15. 'tis held he ſhould. Dyer 69.

A man was wounded in one county, died in another, and the heir brought an appeal in the county where his anceſtor died; Upon Not guilty pleaded, it was adjudged, that the viſne ſhould come out of each county. Dyer 46.

Appeal of murder: Upon Not guilty pleaded, a ſpecial verdict was found, that the appellee was not guilty de felonia & murdro Tho. Newman; but ſays, that the ſaid Thomas and others firſt aſſaulted the appellee on his own ground near the highway, and drove him to a wall, ſo that he could go no farther; and thereupon he wounded the ſaid Thomas in defence of his life, of which wound he died, &c. It was objected againſt this verdict, that the jury did not find that the appellee was aſſaulted near the highway ad ipſum murdrandum, and therefore he ſhall forfeit his goods, which he ſhould not if thoſe words had been found, and this by virtue of the ſtatute 24 H. 8. cap. 5. but this verdict is void and repugnant in itſelf; firſt 'tis found, that the defendant was not guilty of the felony and murder, and afterwards ſpecial matter was found, which proves him guilty, but excuſes it. 1 And. 41.

In an appeal of murder brought by the brother for the death of his brother Henry; the defendant pleaded, that he was indicted for the death of the ſaid Henry, which he ſet forth; upon which he was arraigned, and confeſſed the ſame, and praying his clergy and pleaded over to the felony and murder Not guilty; and upon a demurrer to this plea, the court conſidered the ſtatute 3 H. 7. cap. 1. by which it is enacted, that if the perſon indicted ſhall be arraigned within a year, &c. acquitted or attainted, yet the party may have an appeal; but in this caſe the defendant was neither acquitted or attainted, therefore an appeal would not lie. 1 And. 68.

In an appeal by the wife for the death of her huſband, ſhe declared, that the defendant gave him a mortal wound at B. &c. of which wound he died at W. &c. and ſo the defendant at B. aforeſaid, in manner and form aforeſaid, murdered her huſband; adjudged, that the writ ſhould abate, for the murder ought to be laid at the place where he died, and not at the place where the ſtroke was given. Cro. Eliz. 196.

Appeal of murder againſt four, and all of them appeared at bar at the return of the writ; adjudged, that their appearance doth not make them in cuſtodia mareſchalli; unleſs there is a record committitur mareſchallo, or that they put in bail. So that in this caſe there being no appearance, and the plaintiff being nonſuit for a default in the writ, becauſe there was no addition to one of the defendants names, it was held, that ſuch nonſuit before appearance of the defendants, was peremptory. Cro. Eliz. 605.

In Bullware's caſe, it was held, that if a ſtroke be in one county and the death in another, the appeal may be brought in either county; for tho' the defendant did nothing in that county where the party died, yet the death ſhall have relation to the ſtroke, and ſhall make it felony in that county where he died. 7 Rep. 2.

Appeal of murder brought by the wife; the caſe was, Sir Charles Blunt came to the houſe of Clements the deceaſed, and demanded a dog, and in entering the houſe, being oppoſed by Clements, they fought, and Clements was killed; and this appearing upon evidence to the coroners inqueſt; the queſtion was, whether the diſpoſitions of thoſe witneſſes ſhould be given in evidence upon this appeal; it was objected, that they ſhould not, becauſe not between the ſame parties, for the coroner is an officer for the King, but the appeal is between party and party. 2 Rol. Rep. 460.

Appeal of murder, removed by certiorari into B. R. and the appellant moved to waive his old declaration, and to declare de novo in cuſtodia marſchalli; but per Keeling, clerk of the crown, the appellee ſhall be arraigned upon the old declaration. 2 Rol. Rep. 478.

Appeal of murder; the defendant pleaded, that another time he was acquitted of the murder, but found guilty of manſlaughter; and now the queſtion was, whether the plaintiff in appeal might be nonſuited; and adjudged, that he might not. Moor 407.

An infant of the age of nine years was admitted per guardianum, to bring an appeal for the murder of his brother. Moor 461.

Appeal of murder brought by the widow for the death of her huſband: Upon Not guilty pleaded, the defendant was found guilty of manſlaughter; then the queſtion was, whether the burning in the hand was pardoned by the general pardon; adjudged, that it could not be pardoned, either by a general or ſpecial pardon, becauſe the conviction was at the ſuit of the party. Moor 571.

In an appeal of murder brought by the widow, the caſe upon the evidence was, one Calfeild was a priſoner in the compter upon an execution, and eſcaped; the keeper of the compter coming to the place where he was, and endeavouring to retake him, and he reſiſting was killed, the keeper not going back as far as he could, this was held manſlaughter only, becauſe the perſon ſlain was in execution for debt; but if he had been in priſon for felony and eſcaped, 'tis murder, unleſs he went back as far as he could. 1 Rol. Rep. 189.

An infant brought an appeal of murder by his guardian, and upon the return of the writ, the guardian being ſick, the court was moved to give a farther day for his appearance; but it was denied, it never being allowed in an appeal; and therefore the plaintiff being demanded, and not appearing, he was nonſuit, and the defendant diſcharged. Latch. 171.

The huſband was killed at M. in Montgomeryſhire, the wife brought an appeal in Shropſhire, being the next Engliſh county; and upon Not guilty pleaded, it was tried by a Shropſhire jury, and the plaintiff had a verdict. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the appeal ought to have been brought in Montgomeryſhire where the fact was done, and ſo it was adjudged. Cro. Car. 247.

Appeal of murder of her huſband brought by the wife againſt one Coſſett: It appeared by the evidence, that ſeveral were drinking in the room when the man was killed with a blow on the head with a quart pot, but it was not proved which of them gave the blow, but that they were all preſent and abetting to the murder: It was inſiſted, that the abettors were principal murderers; therefore it was material, whether Coſſett, againſt whom the appeal was brought, gave the ſtroke or not, ſince he was preſent and abetting: It was then moved, that they all be indicted, ſince in an appeal of murder the defendant could not be found guilty of manſlaughter, as he might upon an indictment; but nothing was done in it. Latch. 126.

Appeal of murder brought by the widow, and upon the return of the writ, the appellee appeared; and it was prayed, that the appellant might be admitted to proſecute per attornatum, and a warrant of attorney under her hand and ſeal was produced and acknowledged by her in perſon (for otherwiſe it muſt have been proved), and thereupon ſhe was admitted to proſecute accordingly, and the warrant of attorney was filed, and the appeal was arraigned at bar in French; and the appellee being at the bar was arraigned by the clerk of the civil pleas, and pleaded Not guilty, and was bailed corpus pro corpore to appear the laſt day of the term, and de die in diem. T. Jones 210.

In an appeal of murder the appellant declared, that one Offley did aſſault her huſband, and wounded him in the county of Huntingdon, of which wound he died in Cambridgeſhire, and that one Lippon was aſſiſting; the jury found, that Lippon gave the wound, and that Offley was aſſiſting: It was objected, that the declaration and the verdict muſt be certain, otherwiſe no judgment could be given; but here the verdict found another perſon gave the ſtroke, and not him againſt whom the appellant had declared. Per curiam, The ſame objection may be made to an indictment, which ought to be as certain as a count in appeal; but he who gives the ſtroke and he who aſſiſts, are both equally guilty: Then it was objected, that the trial was by a jury of Cambridgeſhire, when it ought to be of both counties. Sed per curiam, By the ſtatute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 24. an indictment found by a jury of the county where the death happens, ſhall be as effectual in the law, as if the ſtroke had been in the ſame county where the party died. 3 Mod. 121.

An infant by J. S. his prochein amy, was admitted to bring an appeal of murder againſt the defendant, and this as next heir to C. C. who was murdered: At the day of return, B. R. was moved againſt the ſheriff, that he might return the writ, who acquainted the court, that the infant, who was the appellant, and ſome of his relations, required him to deliver the writ back to them, which he did, and that it was uſual ſo to do, for an infant may diſavow his guardian or his ſuit; but adjudged, that both the writ and ſuit are ſubject to the direction of the guardian, and that the infant can no more diſpoſe of the writ than he can proſecute it; 'tis true, he may be nonſuit either before or after appearance, but the appellee muſt be arraigned at the ſuit of the King; he may likewiſe diſavow the ſuit, and then the court may diſcharge the guardian, but 'tis a contempt in the ſheriff to deliver the writ back without any authority; and he was fined and committed, tho' the clerk in court offer'd to undertake for the fine; and the chancery being moved for a new writ of appeal, it was denied. 1 Salk. 176.

4. Pleadings in appeal of death, and puniſhment for a falſe appeal.

In appeal of murder the appellant muſt declare the fact; (2) in what place of the body; (3) the year; (4) the day; (5) the hour; (6) the time of the fact; (7) the town or place where the deed was done; (8) with what weapon; therefore where it was ſaid circa horam undecimam, &c. an appeal of murder was abated; it ſhall alſo be abated for falſe latin, omiſſion, or any other matter of form, in favorem vitæ Egerton verſus Morgan. 1 Bulſt. 69.

By the ſtatute of Glouceſter, cap. 9. if an appeal declare the deed, the year, the day, the hour, the time of the King, and the town where the deed was done, and with what weapon, it ſhall ſtand in effect.

The declaration muſt ſet forth the offence with the utmoſt certainty, and likewiſe deſcribe it by ſuch word of art as the law has appropriated to the purpoſe; therefore if the words felonice in any appeal, murdravit in an appeal of murder, rapuit in an appeal of rape, cepit in an appeal of larceny, mayhemiavit in an appeal of mayhem, be omitted, they cannot be ſupplied by any circumlocution.

The declaration muſt ſet forth in what part of the body the wound was given; and therefore if it only ſays, that the wound was given circa pectus, it is vicious; but it is certain enough by ſhewing that the wound was given in the left part of the belly or of the ſide, or in the left leg, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 177.

If the appellant wants any of thoſe requiſites required by law in a perſon who brings an appeal, it will be a good good plea; as that a woman was never lawfully married, that A. B. is heir at law, and not the appellant, &c. 2 Hawk. 193.

Auterfoits convict of manſlaughter is a good plea to an appeal of murder for the ſame killing. Carth. 17.

A retraxit of an appeal is a good bar of another for the ſame thing, and ſo alſo is a nonſuit; and according to ſome opinions, ſo is a diſcontinuance after appearance, but not before. 1 Salk. 64. Cro. Eliz. 605. 1 Sid. 32. 1 Bulſt. 141. Cro. Jac. 283. Yelv. 204. 2 Hawk. P. C. 196.

A releaſe of all manner of actions, or of all actions criminal, or of all actions concerning pleas of the crown, or of all appeals, or of all demands, is a good bar of any appeal; but a releaſe of all perſonal actions does not bar an appeal of felony, being an action of an higher nature. Cro. Jac. 283. Yelv. 204. 2 Hawk. P.C. 196.

If the appellee pleads a ſpecial plea, which does not amount to a confeſſion of the fact, he muſt at the ſame time plead over to the felony, except in ſpecial caſes; as were ſuch plea would be prejudicial to him, or where ſuch plea declines the juriſdiction of the court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 196. Carth. 56.

In an appeal upon the death of her huſband againſt ſeveral defendants, who pleaded ſeveral pleas, and ſeveral iſſues being joined, the plaintiff was nonſuit as to one of them; adjudged, that ſhe ſhall be diſcharged, and that the others, who were not tried upon this appeal, ſhall be arraigned upon an indictment at the ſuit of the King. Cro. Eliz. 460.

In an appeal of murder brought by the wife againſt ſeveral perſons for the death of her huſband; it was adjudged, that both principal and acceſſaries muſt be joined in the appeal, and there muſt be but one appeal; for if more than one is brought, all but the firſt ſhall abate; and if one appeal is brought againſt ſeveral, and they all make default excepting one, yet the plaintiff muſt declare againſt them all. 4 Rep. 47.

In an appeal of murder of the death of her huſband, brought againſt Margaret Oldcaſtle, ſpinſter, ſhe, before the return of the exigent, appeared and pleaded, that ſhe was a gentlewoman, and not a ſpinſter, for in truth ſhe was the daughter of Sir Edward George, and her huſband was likewiſe a gentleman; adjudged this was not a ſufficient addition, but becauſe ſhe had appeared and brought a ſuperſedeas to the exigent, ſhe was now eſtopped to plead this miſnomer to the appeal. Dyer 188.

In appeal of murder brought by the wife for the death of her huſband; the appellee pleaded, that ſhe was never lawfully married to her huſband, but did not plead over to the felony; adjudged, that this plea being to be tried by the ordinary upon his certificate, whether the marriage was lawful or not, in ſuch caſe the defendant need not plead over to the felony; but where the plea is triable by the Common law, he muſt plead over to the felony. Cro. Eliz. 224.

The wife brought an appeal againſt the defendant for the murder of her huſband, and it was againſt W. W. late of the pariſh of St. James, Weſtminſter; the defendant in his proper perſon craved oyer of the writ and the return, and then per T. S. attornatum ſuum pleads in abatement, that there is a pariſh named St. James's within the liberty of Weſtminſter, but no pariſh named St. James's, Weſtminſter only; and upon demurrer to this plea, the defendant had judgment, becauſe the plaintiff by his demurrer had confeſſed there was no ſuch pariſh, therefore the plea is good; but it being pleaded per attornatum, it ought not to have been received; but it being received, 'tis void, and of conſequence this cauſe being adjourned till the next term, it was diſcontinued by that adjournment. 1 Salk. 59.

The Lady Gray brought an appeal of murder of her huſband againſt the Earl of Southeſke; and it was agreed in this caſe, that a nonſuit of the appellant after appearance in proper perſon is peremptory, but not before appearance; but Kelynge, ſerjeant, inſiſted, that there was no difference, becauſe the appearance of the appellant is never entered on record, for he ought always to be ready in propria, perſona, and is demandable every hour, and ſhall be nonſuit if he doth not appear, and therefore prayed, that the Lady Gray might be demanded. Sid. 32.

In an appeal of murder, the defendant pleaded a conviction of manſlaughter at the goal delivery at the Old Bailey, and that he was allowed his clergy, but did not ſhew by what authority the court at the Old Bailey was held; and now it was moved to amend it, for iſſue was not joined, and there was no demurrer: Sed per curiam, The appellant cannot amend, and the reaſon is the ſame why the appellee ſhould not; in this caſe, if he amends he makes a new roll, whereas in other caſes the amendments are all in paper, and no ſtatute extends to amendments in appeal. 4 Mod. 158.

In an appeal of murder againſt John Laws, brought by Wilſon the brother of the deceaſed, who counted againſt the defendant, for that he in parochia of St. Giles in the Fields, &c. on ſuch a day, circa horam primam, &c. did aſſault, &c. and in et ſuper ſuperiorem partem of his belly near his breaſt, and the middle part of his body percuſſit, pupugit & inforavit, dans ei vulnus mortale, &c. the defendant craved oyer of the writ and return, and then demurred in abatement, and pleaded over to the felony; adjudged, that circa horam primam is certain enough, for the law will not tie a man up to an exact minute, that in & ſuper ſuperiorem partem was likewiſe a ſufficient deſcription of the wound, and that percuſſit, pupugit & inforavit, dans ei mortale vulnus, was more certain than dedit; and tho' 'tis required by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, that a vill ſhould be ſet forth, yet the fact is well alledged to be done in a pariſh, for it ſhall be intended a vill, tho' there may be more than one in a pariſh; but Trin. 11 Anne. as to this laſt point it was otherwiſe; adjudged in the caſe of Widdrington verſus Charleton. 1 Salk. 59.

Liſle was tried at the aſſiſes in Cumberland for the murder of one Armſtrong, and found guilty of manſlaughter, and immediately the brother of the deceaſed lodged a bill of appeal of the murder, and prayed that it might be filed, and that the defendant might be arraigned; whereupon Liſle prayed the benefit of clergy, then the bill was read by the counſel, and Liſle appeared, to be bailed, but would not plead to it, ſo he was remanded to goal quouſq; &c. afterwards all theſe proceedings being removed by a certiorari into B. R. in Hil. 8 Will. 3. and Liſle being brought to the bar by habeas corpus, and after the return thereof was read, the appellant moved for a copy before it was filed, but it was denied till filed; and as ſoon as that was done, Liſle prayed his clergy, to hinder which the appellant took exceptions to the indictment, trial and conviction, but he was not allowed to do it, becauſe this was the King's record, and the appellant was no party to it, and it did not appear but that Liſle might have releaſed errors to the King; then he moved to be bailed, which the appellant oppoſed, unleſs he might be permitted to arraign the appeal, or unleſs Liſle would give bail to it; for if he ſhould be at large before the arraignment, the appellant could have no proceſs to bring him in again; beſides, he was found guilty of manſlaughter, and for that reaſon could not be bailed, which is very true, by juſtices of oyer and terminer, but B. R. may bail him, and accordingly he was bailed on the crown ſide to appear de die in diem; and at another day the King's ſolicitor moved for judgment againſt him upon the indictment, he prayed his clergy; adjudged, that if he had prayed it at the aſſiſes, it ought not to be denied to him there; 'tis true, it was prayed there, but not in a regular manner, becauſe he was never called by the court to judgment; ſo that it being now prayed again, the court cannot proceed to judgment without aſking him what he hath to ſay why judgment ſhould not be given; and this being now aſked by the court, his clergy was allowed, and the ordinary returned quod legit; whereupon he was burnt in the hand, and then moved to be diſcharged, but that was denied, for he muſt ſtill ſtand upon his recognizance, and that he ought to ſue out a ſcire facias againſt the appellant, if he would have the appeal diſcharged, and nonſuit him if he did not appear; whereupon he brought a ſcire facias returnable on a common day; and the ſheriff not making any return, he moved again to be diſcharged, which was denied, till he could procure a return, or get the appellant gratis to appear, who afterwards appeared accordingly, and the appeal was read de novo in French by the appellant's counſel; and the clerk of the crown being likewiſe to arraign him upon the roll, he objected, that the appeal being commenced before the judges of oyer and terminer at the aſſiſes, and not determined by them, it was now diſcontinued, and by conſequence no appeal depending now in court; but adjudged, that it was not diſcontinued, becauſe by the return of the certiorari it was continued, and becauſe it came in by certiorari it was arraigned on the crown ſide; and it being a queſtion in what manner the appellant ought to appear and proſecute, it was adjudged, that every appeal muſt be commenced in perſon, but may be proſecuted per attornatum, for which there muſt be a ſpecial warrant of attorney filed; and that if the plaintiff appear by attorney, when he ought not, 'tis a diſcontinuance; and now Liſle moving again to be bailed, he was committed to the marſhal upon the appeal, and ruled, that a recognizance muſt be taken to the King, in which the bail muſt be bail body for body; but Liſle perceiving the opinion of the court, deſired to ſtand upon his old recognizance till another day, that he might have time to find bail and plead; which was granted, and at that day he pleaded the indictment and conviction of manſlaughter at the aſſiſes, and that it was removed into B. R. judgment being given upon it; that at the time of the conviction he was, and yet is, a clerk, and that he then prayed his clergy, and offered to read as clerk, if the court would have admitted him to it, and that die lunæ, &c. poſt craſtinum Pur. laſt, being demanded by this court, why judgment ſhould not be given againſt him, he prayed his clergy, which was allowed, and that he read as clerk, was burnt in the hand, prout per recordum, &c. with the uſual averments; and as to the felony and murder, he pleaded Not guilty. The appellant replied, That he demanded the appellee to plead at the aſſiſes, which he refuſed; and upon demurrer to this replication, the queſtion was upon the plea in bar, whether a conviction of manſlaughter, on an indictment for murder, and clergy allowed, could be pleaded in bar to an appeal precedent or concurrent with the indictment? The counſel for the appellee inſiſted that this was a caſe at Common law, and not within the ſtatute 3 Hen. 7. c. 1. becauſe that ſtatute extends only to an appeal ſubſequent to the indictment; but this appeal is current with the indictment, and precedent to the conviction, becauſe the ſeſſions being as one day in law, both the indictment and the appeal are returned as of one ſeſſions, and this makes one current with the other; but adjudged, that at Common law auterfoits acquit or convict, was a good plea in bar to an appeal, and the law would ſtill have been the ſame, if it had not been altered by that ſtatute, by which this is made no plea, unleſs clergy be thereupon had: Now this ſtatute extends to all appeals in general; and praying the clergy, is having it within the meaning of the ſtatute, becauſe by ſuch prayer the appellee hath done all in his power to do, and the default of the court, in not granting it when they ought, ſhall not turn to his prejudice; therefore this plea was adjudged good. 1 Salk. 60.

In an appeal of murder by writ, there were but eleven days between the teſte and return; the defendant pleaded a conviction of manſlaughter, and clergy had, and afterwards would have taken advantage of this defect, for there ought to be fifteen days between the teſte and return; but adjudged, that this is cured by his appearing and pleading in chief; for the reaſon of the fifteen days is, becauſe the defendant may have ſufficient time to come into court, computing twenty miles to a day's journey, according to which computation the defendant may come hither from the moſt diſtant part of England; therefore he ſhould have pleaded this ſpecially, before he had pleaded in chief. 1 Salk. 60.

In appeal of murder the counſel offered a warrant of attorney for the appellant, but it was diſallowed, becauſe he muſt count in propria perſona, then the counſel arraigned the appeal in French, and delivered the roll in Latin, and it was per attornatum; 'tis true, the appellant was preſent in court; but if he had not been preſent, it would not have been peremptory, becauſe 'tis only a nonſuit before appearance; but being preſent, the court allowed the words per attornatum to be ſtruck out of the roll, becauſe it made the declaration agreeable to the truth of the fact. 1 Salk. 64.

By Common law a defendant may recover damages for a falſe and malicious appeal, againſt the appellant and his abettors, by a writ of conſpiracy or action on the caſe. Co. Lit. 283.

And by ſtat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 12. it is enacted as followeth, "For as much as many through malice, intending to grieve others, do procure falſe appeals to be made of homicides and other felonies, by appellors having nothing to ſatisfy the King for their falſe appeal, nor to the parties appealed for their damages; it is ordained, that when any being appealed of felony ſurmiſed upon him, doth acquit himſelf in the King's court in due manner, either at the ſuit of the appellor or our lord the King, the juſtices before whom the appeal ſhall be heard, ſhall puniſh the appellor by a year's impriſonment, and the appellor ſhall nevertheleſs reſtore to the parties appealed their damages, according to the diſcretion of the juſtices, having reſpect to the impriſonment or arreſtment that the party appealed hath ſuſtained by reaſon of ſuch appeals, and to the infamy that they have incurred by the impriſonment or otherwiſe; and ſhall nevertheleſs make a grievous fine unto the King; and if peradventure ſuch appellor be not able to recompence the damages, it ſhall be inquired by whoſe abetment by malice the appeal was commenced, if the party appealed deſire it; and if it be found by the ſame inqueſt, that any man is an abettor through malice, he ſhall be diſtrained by a judicial writ at the ſuit of the party appealed, to come before the juſtices; and if he be lawfully convicted of ſuch malicious abetment, he ſhall be puniſhed by impriſonment and reſtitution of damages, as before is ſaid of the appellor."

Mr. ſerjeant Hawkins ſays, there is no doubt but that by the expreſs words of this ſtatute, wherever the appellant or his abettors are by the purport thereof to render damages to an appellee, they are alſo to be fined to the King and impriſoned for a year. Alſo it ſeems clear from the general purport of the books, that an appellant appearing to have brought an ill-grounded appeal, whether of felony or maihem, ſhall be fined in many caſes wherein he is not liable to render damages by the ſtatute abovementioned; as where he is nonſuit, either againſt all or part of the appellees only, whether after, or as ſome have holden, before appearance; or where the writ abates thro' the default of the appellant in wilfully ſuing by a wrong name or a vitious writ, &c. and even a feme covert ſuing an appeal known by her to be groundleſs, as for the death of a huſband whom ſhe knows to be alive, ſhall be fined. But it is certain that were a writ abates by the act of God, or for any other cauſe no way imputable to the appellant, he ſhall neither be fined nor amerced. Alſo it is certain, that an infant in no caſe is to be fined for a falſe appeal; but ſome have holden that he may be amerced, which is contradicted by others, who ſay that an infant in no caſe can be amerced. 2 *H. Appeal of maihem, Is the accuſing one that hath maimed another: but this being generally no felony, it is in a manner but an action of treſpaſs; and nothing is recovered by it but damages. In action of aſſault and maiming, the court may increaſe damages, on view of the maihem, &c. and though maihem is not felony, in appeals and indictments of maihem the words felonice maihemavit are neceſſary. 3 Inſt. 63. Bracton calls appeal of maihem appellum de plagis et mahemio, and writes a whole chapter upon it. Lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 24. In an appeal of maihem the defendants plead, that the plaintiff had brought an action of treſpaſs againſt him, for the ſame wounding, and had recovered, and damages given, &c. and this was a good plea in bar of the appeal; becauſe in both actions damages only are to be recovered. 4 Rep. 43.

In appeal of maihem againſt ſeveral defendants, one of them pleaded, that there was no ſuch perſon as one of the appellees, and if it ſhould be found, that there was ſuch a perſon, then he pleaded Not guilty to the maihem; adjudged, that the pleading over was ill, and therefore the plea not guilty ſhall ſtand. Poph. 105.

In an appeal of maihem, the defendant pleaded, that the ſame plaintiff had brought an action of aſſault, battery and wounding againſt him, and had judgment and execution, and ſatisfaction acknowledged on record for 200 marks damages in that action, and averred, that the ſtroke and wounding in the action of treſpaſs, and that in the appeal of maihem, was the ſame: upon demurrer to this plea, it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that the plea was not good, for tho' the defendant had averred, that the ſtroke and wound was the ſame, &c. he had not averred, that any damages were given for the maihem, or that it was given in evidence; but adjudged, that in an action of aſſault the jury is to give damages according to the hurt which was done; and it ſhall be intended a maihem at that time; and therefore it was held, that this appeal did not lie. 1 Leon. 318.

In an appeal of maihem, the appellee pleaded in abatement to the writ, and likewiſe pleaded over to the maihem; adjudged, that he hath by this means loſt the benefit of his plea to the writ, becauſe he ought not to have pleaded over to the maihem, nor in any caſe but where his life is in danger. Moor 628.

Appeal of rape, Lies where a rape is committed on the body of a woman. 3 Inſt. 30.

By the common law, any virgin, wife or widow, might bring an appeal of rape againſt any one who had raviſhed her, though ſhe were his nief; but a lawful wife could never bring ſuch appeal without her huſband; and by the Common law, the raviſher was to ſuffer death. 2 Inſt. 180. Co. Lit. 123.

But by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. cap. 13. the offence of committing a rape was reduced to a treſpaſs, and puniſhable in the ſame manner with other treſpaſſes, till the making of the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 34. by which it is enacted, That whoever raviſhes any woman, where ſhe did not conſent before or after, ſhall have judgment of life and member; and tho' ſhe do conſent after, ſhe ſhall have judgment of attaint at the King's ſuit; but it is obſervable, that this ſtatute does not reſtore the old Common law in relation to ſuch appeals, as it would have done if it had only repealed the ſaid ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. but makes a new law concerning them; from whence it follows, that all appeals of rape, which are impliedly given by this ſtatute, muſt conclude contra formam ſtatuti. 2 Hawk. P. C. 172.

In appeal of rape, the defendant was found guilty, and being in priſon, ſeveral exceptions were taken to the declaration, (viz.) for that it ſet forth, that the defendant on ſuch a day, &c. felonice rapuit the appellant, & eam defloravit & carnaliter cognovit, but did not ſay felonice & carnaliter cognovit; beſides, it was not averred, that ſhe did not conſent before nor after the fact; but thoſe points were not reſolved; however it was held, that tho' formerly the defendant might have his clergy, 'tis now taken away by the ſtatute 18 Eliz. c. 17. but the Queen may pardon the impriſonment, and burn in the hand. 5 Rep. 150.

A feme covert, without her huſband, may bring appeal of rape: and the ſtatute 11 Hen. 4. cap. 13. gives power where a woman is raviſhed, and afterwards conſents to it, for a huſband, or a father, or next of kin, there being no huſband, to bring appeal of rape; alſo the criminal in ſuch caſe, may be attainted at the ſuit of the King. 3 Inſt. 131. 6 R. 2. cap. 6. And if a woman conſent after, ſhe is diſabled to challenge any inheritance, dower, &c. by ſtat. 6 R. 2.

The ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. c. 13. enacts, that appeal of rape ſhall be brought within forty days; but by ſtat. Weſtm. 2. c. 34. relating to this offence, no time is limited for the proſecution, ſo that it may be brought in any reaſonable time. H. P. C. 186. Appeal of rape is to be be commenced in the county where committed; and if a woman be aſſaulted in one county and raviſhed in another, the appeal of rape lies in that county where ſhe was raviſhed. *H. Appeal of robbery, Is an action which a perſon robbed of goods may bring againſt the felon, in which there ſhall be a reſtitution of the goods, and the offender is to ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as if he were convicted at the ſuit of the King. H. P. C. 184. Latch 127.

An appeal of robbery is a remedy given by Common law, where a perſon is robbed of his goods, &c. to have reſtitution of the goods ſtolen; as they could not be reſtored by indictment at the King's ſuit, this appeal was judged neceſſary. 3 Inſt. 242.

In every appeal of robbery, it is neceſſary to ſet forth whoſe the goods were that were ſtolen, and what the price of them was, and that the words felonice cepit be made uſe of. 2 Hawk. P. C. 177.

They who are robbed of goods, in which they have a ſpecial property, as churchwardens, carriers, &c. may maintain an appeal of larceny, and may either bring it generally for their own goods, or ſpecially for the goods of J. S. &c. in their cuſtody. 2 Hawk. P. C. 167.

If a man robbed make freſh purſuit after, and apprehend and proſecute the felon, he may bring appeal of robbery at any time afterwards. Staundf. 62.

And if one man robs ſeveral perſons, every one of them may have an appeal: Likewiſe if the robber be attainted at the ſuit of one, he ſhall be tried at the ſuit of the reſt, ſo as their appeals were commenced before the attainder. Danv. Abr. 494. In appeal of robbery, the plaintiff muſt declare of all the things whereof he is robbed, or they ſhall be forfeited to the King; for the appellant can have reſtitution for no more than is mentioned in his appeal. 3 Inſt. 227.

A perſon robbed preferred an indictment againſt the robber within a week after the robbery was committed, and within a month afterwards he brought an appeal againſt him for the ſaid robbery; upon which he was outlawed, and thereupon he moved the court to have reſtitution of his goods: Cook vouched the year-book 21 Ed. 1. 16. where the reſtitution was granted upon an outlawry in an appeal for robbery; but the principal caſe was not reſolved. 2 Leon. 108.

Appeal of robbery againſt two acceſſaries, brought in the county of W. where the robbery was done, in which the plaintiff ſet forth, that the principals named in the writ, and who were attainted, did commit the robbery in the county of W. and that the defendants did felonioufly abet them in London; it ſhould have been in ſome place in the county of W. and for that reaſon it was adjudged, that the appeal ſhould abate. Dyer 38.

Adjudged, that an appeal for robbery may be brought by the party robbed twenty years after the offence committed, and that he ſhall not be bound to bring it within a year and a day, as he muſt do in an appeal of murder. 4 Leon. 16.

Appeal of burglary againſt B. B. he was found guilty, and before judgment was given the appellant died; it was moved, that judgment might be given for the Queen upon that verdict, and that the declaration in the appeal might ſtand inſtead of an indictment: it was not reſolved. 2 Leon. 83. Brook's caſe; but my Lord Coke, who reports the ſame caſe, tells us, that it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the count was inſufficient, becauſe the appellant had ſet forth, that the defendant burgaliter did break and enter, which is a word of no ſignification, it ought to have been burglariter or burgulariter, and for that reaſon it was held ill, and that the party ſhould be diſcharged; reſolved alſo, that if the count had been ſufficient, and the defendant had been convicted at the ſuit of the party upon the appeal, he ſhall not again be impeached for the ſame offence at the ſuit of the King. 4 Rep. 39.

If the count or declaration in appeal of burglary be ſufficient, and the defendant is convicted at the ſuit of the party upon the appeal; he ſhall not be again impeached for the ſame offence at the King's ſuit. 4 Rep. 39. By ſtatute 21 Hen. 8. cap. 11. the like reſtitution of ſtolen goods may be had on indictments after attainder, as on appeals: and appeals of rape and robbery are now much out of uſe; but the appeal of murder ſtill continues, and is often brought.

Appeal, Is frequently uſed for the removal of a cauſe from an inferior court or judge to a ſuperior. Cowel.

Appealing to Rome was ever eſteemed ſo great an interruption to national juſtice, that even at the time the Roman Catholick religion took place in this kingdom, it was prohibited. By the ſtat. 24. Hen. 8. cap. 12. ſect. 1. it is enacted, that "All cauſes teſtamentary, cauſes of matrimony and divorce, rights of tithes, oblations and obventions, ſhall be heard, adjudged and determined, within the King's juriſdiction; alſo all ſpiritual prelates, paſtors, miniſters and curates, within this realm, ſhall miniſter all ſacraments, divine ſervices and other things within the realm, to all the ſubjects of the ſame; any former citations, inhibitions, ſuſpenſions, interdictions, excommunications or appeals, for any of the cauſes aforeſaid from or to the ſee of Rome notwithſtanding."

Sect. 3. "If any ſpiritual perſons, by occaſion of the ſaid fulminations, refuſe to miniſter the ſacraments and other divine ſervices, they ſhall have one year's impriſonment, and make fine and ranſom at the King's pleaſure."

Sect. 4. "If any perſons in any the cauſes aforeſaid, attempt or procure any foreign proceſs, inhibitions, appeals, ſentences, ſuſpenſions, interdictions, excommunications or judgments, or execute any of the ſame, or do any act to the derogation of any proceſs, ſen ence, judgment or determination, had in any courts of the King's dominions for the cauſes aforeſaid; every ſuch perſon and their fautors, comforters, abettors, procurers, executors and counſellors, being convict, ſhall incur the penalties of the ſtatute of proviſion and præmunire, 16. Rich. 2. cap. 5.

Sect. 5. "In caſes where the King's ſubjects have uſed to purſue any appeal to the ſee of Rome, and in all other caſes of appeals for any of the cauſes aforeſaid, they may have their appeals within this realm, viz. from the archdeacon or his official to the biſhop dioceſan."

Sect. 6. "If it be commenced before the biſhop dioceſan or his commiſſary, within fifteen days next enſuing the ſentence, to the archbiſhop of the province."

Sect. 7. "If the matter be commenced before the archdeacon of any archbiſhop or his commiſſary, the party grieved may take his appeal within fifteen days after ſentence to the court of the arches or audience of the archbiſhop, and from the ſaid court within fifteen days after ſentence to the archbiſhop of the province, to be finally determined without any farther appeal."

Sect. 8. "Every cauſe that ſhall be commenced for any of the cauſes aforeſaid before any of the archbiſhops, ſhall be before the ſame archbiſhop definitively determined without any other appeal or foreign proceſs out of this realm, otherwiſe than is by this act appointed; ſaving the prerogative of the archbiſhop and church of Canterbury, in all the ſaid cauſes of appeals, in ſuch wiſe as they have been accuſtomed."

Sect. 9. "In caſe any cauſe ſhall come in contention for any of the ſame cauſes in the aforeſaid courts which may touch the King, the party grieved may appeal from any of the ſaid courts, to the ſpiritual prelates of the upper houſe in the convocation next enſuing within the province, ſo that ſuch appeal be taken within fifteen days after ſentence given."

Sect. 10. "If any perſon ſhall purſue any appeal contrary to this act, or refuſe to obſerve the ſame concerning appeals and foreign proceſſes for the cauſes aforeſaid, ſuch perſons, their procurers, fautors, advocates, counſellors, and abettors, ſhall incur the penalties in the ſtatute 16 Rich. 2. cap. 5."——Revived 1 Eliz. cap. 1.

25 Hen. 8. cap. 19. ſect. 3. "No appeals ſhall be made out of the King's dominions to the biſhop or ſee of Rome, in any cauſe, beginning in any courts within the King's dominions, but all appeals, what cauſe ſoever they concern, ſhall be made as is limited for appeals in cauſes of matrimony, tithes, &c. by 24 Hen. 8. cap. 12.

Sect.

Sect. 4. "For lack of juſtice in the courts of the archbiſhops, it ſhall be lawful to appeal to the King's court of Chancery; and upon ſuch appeal a commiſſion ſhall be directed to perſons named by the King, like as in caſe of appeal from the admiral court, to hear and determine ſuch appeals; and ſuch ſentence as the commiſſioners ſhall decree ſhall be definitive; and no further appeals to be had."

Sect. 5. "If any perſons ſue any appeals to the biſhop or ſee of Rome, or procure or execute any proceſs from the ſee of Rome to the derogation of this act, ſuch perſons, their aiders, counſellors and abettors, ſhall incur the penalties in the act of proviſion and præmunire, 16 R. 2. cap. 5.

Sect. 6. "Appeals to be made from the juriſdictions of any heads of houſes and places exempt, in ſuch caſes as they might afore this act have immediately any appeal to the ſee of Rome, ſuch perſons may take their appeals immediately to the King in the court of Chancery; which appeals ſhall be definitively determined by authority of the King's commiſſion as above mentioned."——— Revived 1 Eliz. cap. 1.

By ſtat. 13 Eliz. c. 12. Appealing to Rome is made high treaſon.

There were no appeals to the pope out of England before the reign of King Stephen, when they were introduced by Henry de Blois, biſhop of Wincheſter, the pope's legate. Not but attempts had been made before that time, to carry appeals to Rome, which were vigorouſly withſtood by the nation; as appears by the complaint of the pope in the reign of Henry the Firſt, that the King would ſuffer no appeals to be made to him; and before that, in the reign of William Rufus, the biſhops and barons told Anſelm (who was attempting it) that it was a thing unheard of for any one to go to Rome (that is, by way of appeal) without the King's leave. And tho' this point was yielded in the reign of King Stephen, yet his ſucceſſor Henry the Second, reſumed and maintained it, as appears by the conſtitutions of Clarendon, which provide for the courſe of appeals within the realm, ſo as that further proceſs be not made, without the King's aſſent; and afterwards, in the parliament of Northampton, the conſtitutions of Clarendon were renewed; and in the reigns of Richard the Firſt and King John, we find new complaints of the little regard paid to thoſe appeals; for which alſo divers perſons were impriſoned in the reigns of Edward the Firſt, Edward the Second, and Edward the Third. Gibſ. Cod. 83. 4 Inſt. 341.

The above ſtat. of 25 Hen. 8. cap. 19. gives appeals from the archbiſhops courts to the King in Chancery, who thereupon appoints commiſſioners finally to determine the cauſe; and this is called the court of delegates: There is alſo a court of commiſſioners of review; which commiſſion the King may grant as ſupreme head of the church, to review the definitive ſentence on appeal in the court of delegates. On taking away the ſupremacy of the pope in this kingdom, this power was lodged in the crown, as originally belonging to it. 4 Inſt. 340.

The dean of Wells was deprived of his deanry by the commiſſary of the biſhop of Bath and Wells, from which ſentence the dean appealed to the archbiſhop, who affirmed it; and thereupon he exhibited an appeal to the King in Chancery, but found no relief, for the King granted the deanry to one Turner. But anno. 1 Mar. the deprived dean obtained another commiſſion to the delegates, and by their ſentence was reſtored to his deanry: And after the death of Queen Mary, 1 Eliz. Turner had a commiſſion of review, and he was reſtored, though it was inſiſted, there ought to be no farther appeal. Dyer 273.

In the 39th year of Queen Elizabeth, ſentence being given in an eccleſiaſtical cauſe, the party againſt whom had, appealed to the archbiſhop, &c. who affirmed the ſentence; then he appealed to the delegates, and they repealed both the former ſentences; on which the Queen granted a commiſſion ad revidendum the ſentence of the delegates, and it was held lawful. Cro. Eliz. 571.

The biſhop of Winton is made viſitor of Magdalen college in Oxford by the founder, and exempted from ordinary juriſdiction; Dr. Coveney, who was preſident of the ſaid college, was deprived by the viſitor, and from his ſentence the doctor appealed to the Queen in Chancery; adjudged, the appeal doth not lie, for 'tis out of the ſtatutes 24 & 25 Hen. 8. cap. 12. and he hath no remedy but an aſſiſe. Dyer 289. Coveney's caſe.

The words in Doctor Coveney's caſe laſt mentioned are, that no appeal will lie, ex hoc ſequitur that an aſſiſe will lie; but that conſequence was denied to be law per Holt Ch. Juſt. in the caſe of Philips verſus Bury, becauſe the head of a college cannot maintain an aſſiſe; for he hath no ſole ſeiſin, he hath not an eſtate to maintain a real action; he is only a viſible perſon of the body aggregate, but hath not the leaſt title to the rents or profits of the college till a dividend is made. 4 Mod. 112.

A fellow of a college was deprived, who appealed to the biſhop of Exeter as viſitor, who came in perſon to viſit, and Doctor Bury, the rector of the college, being ſummoned to appear, but he refuſing, was pronounced contumax, and thereupon was deprived; and in ejectment, and a ſpecial verdict found, the queſtion was, whether deprivation was examinable in B. R. in a collateral action? and by three judges it was; ſed per Holt Ch. Juſt. it is not; for where a proper court hath an original juriſdiction, no other court will examine their judgment after ſentence given; ſo it was reſolved in Bunting's caſe, (4 Rep. 29.) and ſo likewiſe in Keen's caſe (7 Rep.): Now in the principal caſe the viſitor was the proper judge, and therefore his ſentence is definitive; the college is an eleemoſynary corporation, and the members of it ſubſiſt by the charity of the founder, therefore 'tis very reaſonable, that they ſhould receive it ſubject to ſuch limitations as the founder hath impoſed: now he hath appointed a perſon to viſit them; he hath made ſuch viſitor fidei commiſſarium, whoſe ſentence ſhall be preſumed to be the ſentence of the founder himſelf, if he had been living, which cannot be thought unjuſt, eſpecially by thoſe to whom his charity is extended, and if not unjuſt, then not to be examined elſewhere. There are two ſorts of corporations aggregate, one for the publick adminiſtration of juſtice, the other for private charities; the one is to be regulated by the courts of law in Weſtminſter, becauſe it ſubſiſts by letters patent, and hath on other founder viſitor; but a college is not ſuch a corporation; the other is for private charities, and there the founder and his heirs are viſitors, where he himſelf hath appointed no particular perſon; but where he hath appointed a viſitor, then he is to ſupply any defective conſtitution in a corporation which ſubſiſts by his charity; and thoſe who are ſupported by it, muſt be regulated by ſuch particular laws as have been enjoined by him, and not by the methods and rules of the Common law, which ſeldom or never interpoſes in ſuch caſes; for it hath been the conſtant method to deny a mandamus to reſtore any perſon deprived from being a member of ſuch a corporation, and there is no precedent in the old books of any reſtitution in ſuch caſes, either to a monk or prior; and according to this opinion of the chief juſtice, the judgment of the other three judges was reverſed in the houſe of peers. 4 Mod. 106.

After an adminiſtration granted by the ordinary, the party who pretended a right to it, appealed to the archbiſhop in curia prærogativæ ſuæ de arcubus, and there the grant was affirmed; in ſuch caſe it muſt be remitted to that court from whence the appeal was made; but if the adminiſtration had been repealed, then the court from which the appeal was brought, hath no longer any juriſdiction of the cauſe, and that court where it was repealed may grant a new adminiſtration, for they have authority by the ſtatute ſo to do. Latch 85.

In a prohibition, the caſe was, H. Pollexfen died inteſtate, and the ordinary granted adminiſtration to his brother Andrew; one who pretended to be wife of the inteſtate, upon ſuggeſtion of bona notabilia, procured a prerogative adminiſtration; then Andrew appealed to the delegates, and died pending the appeal; then H. his ſon and heir gets the prerogative adminiſtration repealed, and adminiſtration was granted to him; thereupon the wife prayed a prohibition, ſuppoſing that the commiſſion of the delegates was determined by the death of one of the parties; 'tis true, if one of them die ante litis conteſtationem, it ſhall abate; but both by the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical law the ſuit ſhall continue after the death of either party, for the commiſſion is to determine the cauſe. 1 Vent. 133.

Appearance, In the law ſignifieth the defendant's filing common or ſpecial bail, when he is arreſted on, or ſerved with any proceſs out of the courts at Weſtminſter. There are four ways for defendants to appear to actions; in perſon, by attorney, by guardian, and by next friend. 1 Show. Rep. 165.

1. Who may, and may not, appear by attorney.
2. Where an attorney may be compelled to appear, and of appearing without authority.
3. Where appearance is good, and where not.

1. Who may, and may not, appear by attorney.

By the Common law, the plaintiff or defendant, demandant or tenant, could not appear by attorney without the King's ſpecial warrant by writ or letters patent, but ought to follow his ſuit in his own proper perſon; by reaſon whereof there were but few ſuits. Co. Lit. 128. 2 Inſt. 249. But it is now the common courſe for the plaintiff or defendant, in all manner of actions where there may be an attorney, to appear by attorney, and put in his warrant without any writ. And therefore, generally, in all actions real, perſonal, and mixt, the demandant or plaintiff, tenant or defendant, may appear by attorney. F. N. B. 26.

But in every caſe, where the party ſtands in contempt, the court will not admit him to appear by attorney, but oblige him to appear in perſon. As if he comes in by a cepi corpus upon an exigent. F. N. B. Or, if he be outlawed. 2 Cro. 462, 616.

But now by the ſtatute 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 18. in outlawry, except for treaſon or felony, the defendant may appear and reverſe it by attorney, without putting in ſpecial bail, unleſs where required by the court. So upon an attachment, after a return of a reſcous, he ſhall not make an attorney. F. N. B. 26. H. So if the defendant comes in upon a cepi corpus, he ſhall not make any attorney, till plea pleaded. F. N. B.

Where the preſence of the party is neceſſary, he cannot appear by attorney: as, in an appeal of maihem, the plaintiff cannot appear by attorney; for the defendant may demand oyer of the maihem. 2 Inſt. 313.

If a man appears by attorney, where by reaſon of a contempt, &c. he ought to appear in perſon, it is error; for the court may diſpenſe with a contempt to themſelves. 8 Co. 58. b.

In a capital caſe the party muſt always appear in perſon, and cannot plead by attorney: alſo in criminal offences, where an act of parliament requires that the party ſhould appear in perſon; and likewiſe in appeal, or on attachment. 2 Hawk. P. C. 141, 373.

On an indictment, information or action, for any crime whatſoever under the degree of capital, the defendant may, by the favour of the court, appear by attorney; and this he may do as well before plea pleaded, as in the proceeding after, till conviction. 1 Lev. 146. Kelw. 165. Dyer 346. Cro. Jac. 462.

If huſband and wife are ſued, the huſband is to make attorney for her. 2 Sand. 213.

If an ideot doth ſue or defend, he cannot appear by guardian, prochein amie, or attorney, but muſt appear in proper perſon; but otherwiſe of him who becomes non compos mentis; for he ſhall appear by guardian if within age, or by attorney if of full age. Co. Lit. 135. b. 2 Inſt. 390. 4 Co. 124.

A corporation aggregate of many perſons, cannot appear in perſon, but by attorney, and ſuch appearance is good. 10 Rep. 32. in the caſe of Sutton's Hoſpital.

The plaintiff had a verdict in C. B. in an action of treſpaſs, and his attorney entered remittit damna, as to part, and had judgment for the reſt; adjudged, that by making him attorney, he had power to remit the damages, for that need not be in propria perſona, as a retraxit muſt be. 1 Salk. 89.

Debt upon bond; the defendant pleaded payment at the day upon which they were at iſſue, and it was found for the plaintiff; afterwards the plaintiff by his attorney came into court, and fatetur ſe in curia hic ulterius nolle proſequi; upon which, judgment was given, that the defendant eat inde ſine die, &c. and upon a writ of error brought, the judgment was reverſed, becauſe a retraxit cannot be per attornatum; for it being in nature of a releaſe, it muſt be done by the plaintiff himſelf in perſon. 8 Rep. Beecher's caſe.

Homage and fealty are things inſeparably annexed to the perſon, and therefore cannot be done by attorney.

2. Where an attorney may be compelled to appear, and of appearing without authority.

An attorney is not compellable to appear for any one, unleſs he take his fee, or back the warrant; after which the court will compel him to appear. 1 Salk. 87.

An attorney, on ſight of a writ againſt huſband and wife, undertook to appear for them, but after would not do it; the declaration was delivered, which he received de bene eſſe, and judgment was entered for want of a plea; and the court ſet it aſide for irregularity, but ordered the attorney to be laid by the heels; and it was ſaid, that if an attorney undertakes to appear, and after will not do it, upon a ſummons before a judge, he ſhall be compelled to do it. 6. Mod. 86.

If before a writ be taken out, an attorney promiſe to appear to it, and afterwards it is taken out and ſhewed to him, he ought to appear, but that is no actual appearance; but if ſuch undertaking be after it is actually taken out, it is an appearance. 6 Mod. 42. Per Holt Ch. J.

An adminiſtrator muſt give bond to the ſheriff of penalty of 40*l.* for his appearance at the return of the writ; and the ſheriff is not obliged to diſcharge him upon the attorney's promiſe to appear; but if an attorney of this court or of the Common Pleas do make ſuch promiſe, the court will compel him to perform it. Comb. 299.

Where an attorney takes upon him to appear, the court looks no farther, but proceeds as if the attorney had ſufficient authority, and leaves the party to his action againſt him. 1 Salk. 86.

If an attorney appears, and judgment is entered againſt his client, the court will not ſet aſide the judgment, tho' the attorney had no warrant, if the attorney be able and reſponſible; for the judgment is regular, and the plaintiff is not to ſuffer when in no default; but if the attorney be not reſponſible or ſuſpicious, the judgment will be ſet aſide; for otherwiſe the defendant has no remedy, and any one may be undone by that means. 1 Salk. 86.

Attachment denied by the court againſt an attorney, who appeared for the plaintiff without a warrant; but ſaid an action on the caſe lies. Comb. 2.

An action was brought againſt Squire, an attorney, and two others, for appearing for the plaintiff without a warrant: the cauſe was carried down to be tried at the aſſizes; and the defendant did promiſe, that in conſideration the plaintiff would not proſecute the action, that he would pay 10*l.* and coſts of ſuit; and now an action was brought againſt the defendant upon this promiſe: the queſtion was, whether this was a void promiſe by the ſtatute of frauds, being made in behalf of another, and not in writing?

writing? Which ſtatute enacts, that no action ſhall be brought to charge the defendant upon any ſpecial promiſe to anſwer for the debt, default, or miſcarriage of another perſon, unleſs it be in writing. But the court were of opinion, that this cannot be ſaid to be a promiſe for another perſon, but for his own debt, and therefore not within this ſtatute. 5 Mod. 205.

The bailiff, who had a writ againſt the defendant, came to Mr. Stapleton, an attorney, and told him the defendant deſired he would back the writ, and appear for him, and afterwards upon the plaintiff's attorney's applying to him, he told him he had ſent orders to his agent to appear, and he believed he had done it. Whereupon the plaintiff's attorney delivered a declaration and ſigned judgment for want of plea. Upon motion to ſet it aſide it appeared the bailiff went of his own accord to Mr. Stapleton, without the direction of the defendant, and that Mr. Stapleton diſcovering this, had countermanded the orders for appearing, and that in fact there was no appearance. But the court refuſed to ſet it aſide, and ſaid they would oblige Mr. Stapleton to file common bail according to his undertaking, in order to make the proceedings regular, there being no fault in the plaintiff's attorney. Strange 693.

In caſe the defendant's attorney doth receive a declaration againſt his client from the plaintiff's attorney; this obliges the attorney to appear to it: And if an attorney has a warrant from the defendant to be his attorney in a ſuit depending in B. R. and he files common bail accordingly; it has been held, that he muſt appear by that warrant in all ſuits againſt the defendant in the ſame term; provided declarations are filed in the office, and copies delivered to the defendant, or his attorney, who filed the bail, before the end of the term his bail is filed. For the defendant being, after appearance and bail put in, ſuppoſed to be in cuſtody of the marſhal, the attorney that appears for him is bound to receive any declaration that is brought againſt him during that term. Comp. Attorn. Attornies ſubſcribing warrants to appear, are liable to a penalty of 5*l.* and attachment, upon non-appearance. And where an attorney promiſes to appear for his client, the court will compel him to appear and put in common bail, in ſuch time as is uſual by the courſe of the court; and that although the attorney ſay he hath no warrant for appearance: Nor ſhall repealing a warrant of attorney, to delay proceedings, excuſe the attorney for his not appearing, who may be compelled by the court. 1 Lill. 83, 84.

3. Where appearance is good, and where not.

J. S. had a warrant to appear for the defendant, and afterwards there was judgment againſt him; and upon a ſcire facias againſt the bail, the defendant ſtill appeared by his old attorney, who acted as ſuch thro' the whole cauſe, and execution was awarded againſt the bail; and now upon a writ of error brought, the record of the principal judgment being certified, it was adjudged that as ſoon as the ſcire facias was returned, then the plea began, and then a new warrant of attorney ought to have been entered thus; (viz.) That the plaintiff ponit loco ſuo, &c. for the warrant to appear in the principal action, is no warrant to appear in the ſcire facias againſt the bail, becauſe 'tis a new cauſe, and a different record. 1 Salk. 89.

In a quid juris clamat, the defendant upon a ſuggeſtion that he was old and weak, had a dedimus directed to the chief juſtice to make an attorney; and accordingly the appearance by attorney was held good. Dyer 126.

In audita querela, a writ was awarded out of the Common Pleas againſt the defendant ad reſpondendum; to which writ he appeared by attorney, and held good. Dyer 297.

Huſband and wife tenant in tail, remainder to the right heirs of the huſband; they had iſſue a daughter, and the huſband died; afterwards the wife ſold the lands in fee, and the daughter and her huſband joined in a fine to confirm the ſale to the purchaſer; the daughter died without iſſue; a writ of error was brought to reverſe this fine, and the wife who ſold the eſtate, and the huſband of the daughter who joined in the fine, appeared by attorney and joined gratis with the plaintiff in error, and their appearance by attorney was held good. Dyer 89. b.

Error in debt, &c. an error aſſigned was, that the defendant appeared by G. D. his attorney, and there was judgment againſt him by default, but the ſaid G. D. was not an attorney of the court at the time of his appearance, nor at any time in that term when the judgment was entered; the defendant pleaded in nullo eſt erratum, and becauſe it was plain that the defendant had only appeared by the ſaid G. D. but had imparled to another term, ſo that the court had admitted him to be an attorney, 'tis now againſt the record to ſay he was none, for that doth implicitly admit he was an attorney. 2 Cro. 521.

The defendant's attorney is to file his warrant the ſame term he appears, and the plaintiff the term he declares, under penalties by ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16.

In actions original, appearances muſt be entered with the filazer of the county; and if by bill, they ſhall be entered with the prothonotary: appearances and common bail are to be entered and filed by the defendant within eight days after the return of the proceſs, on which he was arreſted, &c. on pain of forfeiting 5*l.* to the plaintiff, for which the court ſhall forthwith award judgment and execution. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 21.

If the defendant does not appear and find bail, the plaintiff's attorney is to call upon the ſheriff for the return of the writ, whether the defendant be arreſted, or not; and proceed accordingly. On two nihils returned upon a ſcire et alias ſcire facias, they amount to a ſcire feci, and the plaintiff giving rule, the defendant is to appear, or judgment ſhall be had againſt him by default: And where a defendant doth not plead after appearance, judgment may be had againſt him. Style 208.

Where the firſt proceſs in an inferior court is a capias, which ought not to be, it is ſalved and made good by appearance; for the defendant hath by his appearing admitted the writ to be legal. Lutw. 954.

And upon appearance a writ hath had its end, and the plaintiff ſhall declare: Alſo an appearance takes away all diſcontinuance, and bad proceſs before it. Jenk. Cent. 57.

If judgment is given by default, when the defendant doth not appear, the writ ought to be according to law; but if he appears and pleads, he ſlips his advantage of excepting thereto. Ibid 341.

By late ſtatutes, where a defendant is ſerved with a copy of proceſs in actions of debt, &c. under 10*l.* a common appearance ſhall be entered, or common bail filed by the plaintiff, if the defendant doth not appear within eight days after the return of the writ, on affidavit made of the ſervice of the proceſs. Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 26.

And a notice ſhall be indorſed on the copy of the proceſs, of the intent and meaning of the ſervice, for the defendant to appear, &c. by 5. Geo. 2. c. 17.

Form of a notice upon proceſs to appear.

Appendant, (Appendens) Is any inheritance belonging to another that is ſuperior or more worthy. In law it is called pertinens, quaſi invicem tenens, holding one another; a word indifferent both to things appendant, and things appurtenant; the quality and nature of the things do make the difference. Co. Lit. 121. b.

Appendants

Appendants are ever by preſcription, but appurtenances may be created in ſome caſes at this day; as if a man at this day grant to a man and his heirs, common in ſuch a moor for his beaſts levant or couching upon his manor; or if he grant to another common of eſtovers or turbary in fee-ſimple, to be burnt or ſpent within his manor; by theſe grants, theſe commons are appurtenant to the manor, and ſhall paſs by the grant thereof; in the Civil law it is called adjunctum. Co. Lit. 121. b.

If A. be ſeiſed of a manor whereunto the franchiſe of waif and ſtray, and ſuch like, are appendant, and the King purchaſeth the manor without the appurtenances; now are the royal franchiſes reunited to the crown, and not appendant to the manor; but if he grant the manor in as large and ample manner as A. had, &c. it is ſaid, that the franchiſe ſhall be appendant (or rather appurtenant) to the manor. Co. Lit. 120. b.

Concerning things appendant and appurtenant, two things are implied; firſt, that preſcription (which regularly is the mother thereof) doth not make any thing appendant or appurtenant, unleſs the thing appendant or appurtenant agree in quality and nature to the thing whereunto it is appendant or appurtenant; as a thing corporeal cannot properly be appendant to a thing corporeal, nor a thing incorporeal to a thing incorporeal; but things incorporeal which lie in grant, as advowſons, villeins, commons, and the like, may be appendant to things corporeal, as a manor, houſe, or lands; or things corporeal to things incorporeal, as lands to an office: But yet, as hath been ſaid, they muſt agree in nature and quality; for common of turbary or of eſtovers cannot be appendant or appurtenant to land, but to a houſe, to be ſpent there; nor a leet, that is temporal, to a church or chapel, which is eccleſiaſtical. Neither can a nobleman, eſquire, &c. claim a ſeat in a church by preſcription, as appendant or belonging to land, but to a houſe, for that ſuch a ſeat belongeth to the houſe in reſpect of the inhabitancy thereof; and therefore, if the houſe be part of a manor, yet in that caſe he may claim the ſeat as appendant to the houſe, for the reaſon aforeſaid.

Secondly, that nothing can be properly appendant or appurtenant to any thing, unleſs the principal or ſuperior thing be of perpetual ſubſiſtence and continuance: For example, an advowſon that is ſaid to be appendant to a manor, is in rei veritate appendant to the demeſnes of the manor, which are of perpetual ſubſiſtence and continuance, and not to rents or ſervices, which are ſubject to extinguiſhment and deſtruction. Co. Lit. 122. a.

An advowſon is appendant to the manor of Dale, of which manor the manor of Sale is holden; the manor of Sale is made parcel of the manor of Dale by way of eſcheat, the advowſon is only appendant to the manor of Dale. Co. Lit. 122.

And where it is ſaid, that a chamber may be parcel of a corody, and paſs by the name of the corody, which may be extinguiſhed, there he that hath the corody hath but his habitation in the chamber, as a fellow in Trinity college in Cambridge hath in his chamber, or as one that had a corody and a chamber in a houſe of religion, he had but his habitation only; as for offices of fee whereunto land may appertain, they are of perpetual ſubſiſtence, either being in eſſe or in that they are grantable over. Co. Lit. 122. a.

Note; that an advowſon at one turn may be appendant, and at another time in groſs: As if the manor be divided between coparceners, and every one hath a part of the manor, without ſaying any thing of the advowſon appendant, the advowſon remains in coparcenary; and yet in every of their turns it is appendant to that part which they have: And ſo it is if they make compoſition to preſent againſt common right, yet it remains appendant: But if upon ſuch a partition an expreſs exception be made of the advowſon, then the advowſon remains in coparcenary and in groſs. Co. Lit. 122.

Appendant is always by preſcription, but then it muſt agree in quality and nature to that to which 'tis appendant, and therefore land cannot be appendant to a meſſuage. Plowd. 168. Dyer 130. S. P. 4 Rep. 37.

Lands may be appendant to a grange or to a farm. Dyer 331 and 374.

An advowſon may be appendant to a manor, and ſo may one manor to another; an advowſon may be likewiſe appendant to an acre of land parcel of the manor, or to the demeſnes of a manor. Dyer 44 and 70.

An advowſon of a vicarage may be appendant to a rectory, and therefore by a grant of the rectory, & omnia hæreditamenta to the ſame appertaining, the advowſon of the vicarage did paſs. Dyer 350.

One office may be appendant and incident to another office; as the office of Exigenter of London to the office of Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, and therefore a grant thereof made by Queen Mary was adjudged void. 2 Eliz. Dyer 175. So the office of county clerk is appendant and incident to the office of ſheriff, and a grant made thereof by Queen Elizabeth, was likewiſe adjudged void for that reaſon. 4 Rep. 32.

Tithes cannot be appendant to a manor, becauſe they are ſpiritual things, and therefore cannot be appendant to a manor which is temporal, unleſs ſome ſpecial matter be alledged. Winchcomb's caſe, vouched in 2 Rep. the biſhop of Winton's caſe.

Common of turbary cannot be appendant to land. 4 Rep. 37. in Terringham's caſe.

An advowſon in poſſeſſion cannot be appendant to a reverſion expectant upon an eſtate for life. 11 Rep. 46. Liford's caſe.

Common of turbary may be appendant to a houſe; and ſo eſtovers out of a wood, may by preſcription be appendant to a houſe; and if he alter the rooms, the eſtovers are ſtill appendant; but if he build new chimnies, or make a new addition to his houſe, he cannot ſpend the eſtovers in that new part, or in thoſe new chimnies. Hob. 39.

Waiſes and eſtrays may be appendant to a leet, and a leet may be appendant to a manor. 4 Rep. 36. 10 Rep. 64. A fair may be appendant to a manor, and a court of pie-powders to a fair. 4 Rep. 31.

Appennage, Or apennage, (Fr.) Is derived from appendendo, or the German word apanage, ſignifying a portion. It is uſed for a child's part or portion, and is properly the portion of the King's younger children in France; where by a fundamental law, called the law of apenages, the King's younger ſons have dutchies, counties, or baronies granted to them and their heirs, &c. the reverſion being reſerved to the crown, and all matters of regality as to coinage, and levying taxes in ſuch territories. Apportionment, (Apportionamentum) Is a dividing of a rent into parts, according as the land, whence the whole rent iſſues, is divided among two or more; as if a man have a rent-ſervice iſſuing out of land, and he purchaſeth part of the land, the rent ſhall be apportioned according to the value of the land. So if a man let lands for years, reſerving rent, and after a ſtranger recovers part of the land, the rent ſhall be apportioned; but a rent-charge cannot be apportioned, nor things that are intire; as if one holds land by ſervice, to pay to his lord yearly at ſuch a feaſt, a horſe, or a roſe; there, if the lord purchaſe part of the land, this ſervice is totally extinct; becauſe ſuch things cannot be divided without hurt to the whole; yet in ſome caſes a rent-charge ſhall be apportioned, as if a man hath a rent-charge iſſuing out of land, and his father purchaſeth part of the land charged in fee, and dies, and this parcel deſcends to his ſon, who hath the rent-charge; there this charge ſhall be apportioned, according to the value of the land; becauſe ſuch portion of the land, purchaſed by the father, comes not to the ſon by his own act, but by deſcent and courſe of law. Common appendant is of common right, and ſeverable; and though the commoner, in ſuch caſe, purchaſe parcel of the land, wherein the common is appendant, yet the common ſhall be apportioned; but in this caſe, common appurtenant, and not appendant, by ſuch purchaſe is extinct. Termes de la ley. 8 Co. 79.

Where the leſſor recovers part of the land; or enters for a forfeiture into part thereof; the rent ſhall be apportioned. 1 Inſt. 148.

Leſſee for years leaſes for years, rendring rent, and after deviſes this rent to three perſons, this rent may be apportioned. Danv. Abr. 505.

If a leſſee for life or years under rent, ſurrenders part of the land, the rent ſhall be apportioned: But where the grantee of a rent-charge purchaſes part of the land, there all is extinct. Moor, c. 231.

A rent-charge iſſuing out of land, may not be apportioned: Nor ſhall things entire; as if one holds lands by ſervice to pay yearly to the lord, at ſuch a feaſt, a horſe, &c. 1 Inſt. 149.

But if part of the land out of which a rent-charge iſſues, deſcends to the grantee of the rent this ſhall be apportioned. Danv. 507.

A grantee of a rent releaſes part of the rent to the grantor, this doth not extinguiſh the reſidue, but it ſhall be apportioned; for here the grantee dealeth not with the land, but with the rent. Co. Lit. 148.

On partition of lands out of which a rent is iſſuing, the rent ſhall be apportioned. Danv. Abr. 507.

And where lands held by leaſe, rendring rent, are extended upon elegit, one moiety of the rent ſhall be apportioned to the leſſor. Danv. Abr. 509.

If part of the land leaſed is ſurrounded by freſh water, there ſhall be no apportionment of rent; but if it be ſurrounded with the ſea, there ſhall be an apportionment of the rent. Dyer 56.

A man purchaſeth part of the land where he hath common appendant, the common ſhall be apportioned; of common appurtenant it is otherwiſe, and if by the act of the party, the common is extinct. 8 Rep. 79.

Common appendant and appurtenant may be apportioned on alienation of part of the land to which it is appendant or appurtenant. Wood's Inſt. 199.

If where a perſon has common of paſture ſans number, part of the lands deſcends to him, this being intire and uncertain cannot be apportioned; but if it had been common certain, it ſhould have been apportioned. 1 Inſt. 149.

A contract may not be divided or apportioned, ſo as to ſubject a man to two actions. 1 Salk. 65.

Common appendant may be apportioned, becauſe 'tis of common right, and therefore, if a man purchaſe part of the lands to which the common is appendant, the common ſhall be apportioned to that part; but common appurtenant cannot be apportioned by the act of the party, and therefore by the purchaſe of part of the lands, the whole common is extinct. 4 Rep. Terringham's caſe. 8 Rep. 79. Hob. 25. S. P.

And yet it hath been adjudged, that where a man hath common appurtenant to ten acres of land, for all his beaſts levant and couchant on the ſame, and afterwards he ſells part of thoſe ten acres, that the common ſhall be apportioned, and the vendee ſhall have common on that part which he purchaſed; for theſe things are intire in ſeveral degrees, (i. e.) ſome things are ſo intire, that they cannot be divided by the act of the party; ſuch as warranties, conditions, &c. tho' they may be apportioned by act of law; but commons are not ſo ſtrictly intire, but that they may be apportioned, it being a common caſe, and therefore ought to be extended for the general good. Hob. 235.

Conditions, generally ſpeaking, are intire, and cannot be apportioned by the act of the party; as for inſtance, the maſter and ſcholars of Corpus Chriſti in Oxford, made a leaſe of lands; proviſo, the leſſee ſhould not alien, &c. without ſpecial licence; afterwards they gave the leſſee a ſpecial licence to alien, who aſſigned his term to B. B. and he by will deviſed the lands to his ſon, and the leſſor entered for the condition broken; adjudged, that the licence given to B. B. to alien, had deſtroyed the condition, for the leſſors would not diſperſe with it, as to him, and retain it, as to others; for a condition being an intire thing, cannot be apportioned by the act of the party, tho' it may be by act of law. 4 Rep. 119. Damport's caſe.

An agreement in writing between the teſtator and J. S. that he ſhould receive all the teſtator's rents, for which ſervice he promiſed to pay J. B. but upon a writ of error brought in B. R. it was reverſed, becauſe this agreement was in nature of a condition precedent, and that nothing was due without a full year's ſervice; 'tis like a leaſe for years, rendring 20*l.* rent yearly, and before the year is ended, the leſſee is evicted, the leſſor ſhall have no rent, for that cannot be apportioned in reſpect of time. 1 Salk. 65. Counteſs of Plymouth verſ. Throgmorton. See 2 Salk. 778. the pleadings.

Apprentice, Apprentitius, (French apprentif, from apprendre, to learn; whence the French apprentiſſage, and our apprenticeſhip) Signifies with us one that is bound in word or writing, to ſerve another man of trade for certain years, upon condition that the artificer or maſter ſhall in that mean time endeavour to inſtruct him in his art or miſtery. Smith de Rep. Ang. lib. 3. cap. 8. ſaith, they are a kind of bondmen, differing only, that they are ſervants by covenant, and for a time. Under this head is conſidered,

1. Who are capable of binding themſelves apprentices.
2. Manner of binding, and who are compellable to be bound apprentices; and of ſettling differences between maſters and apprentices.
3. Who may take, and are compellable to receive and provide for apprentices; and of refunding the money given with them, and delivering up their indentures.
4. Of ſetting up a trade; and the neceſſity of ſerving an apprenticeſhip; what trades are prohibited to be followed, and the offence and puniſhment of exerciſing a trade within the meaning of the ſtat. 5 Eliz.
5. Of aſſigning apprentices, making them free, and how they are to be taken care of if their maſters happen to die.
6. Offences committed by apprentices.
7. Settlement of apprentices.
8. Pleadings in actions brought by and againſt maſters and apprentices.

1. Who are capable of binding themſelves apprentices.

It is ſaid, that if a married man and his wife do bind themſelves to ſerve, they ſhall be compelled thereto, according to their covenant or agreement; and that if a woman who is a ſervant ſhall marry, yet ſhe muſt ſerve out her time; and her huſband cannot take her out of her maſter's ſervice. Dalt. c. 58.

It ſeems clearly agreed that by the common law infants, or perſons under the age of twenty-one years, cannot bind themſelves apprentices, in ſuch a manner as to intitle their maſters to an action of covenant, or other action for departing from their ſervice, or other breaches of their indentures; which makes it neceſſary, according to the uſual practice, to get ſome of their friends to be bound for the faithful diſcharge of their offices, according to the terms agreed on. 11 Co. 89. b. 2 Inſt. 379, 580. 3 Leon. 63. Fareſt. 15.

But by the 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 42, 43. it is enacted in the words following, "And becauſe there hath been, and is ſome queſtion and ſcruple moved, whether any perſon being within the age of twenty-one years, and bounden to ſerve as an apprentice, in another place than in the ſaid city of London, ſhall be bounden, accepted and taken as an appentice; for the reſolution of the ſaid ſcruple and doubt, be it enacted by the authority of this preſent parliament, that all and every ſuch perſon or perſons, that at any time or times from henceforth ſhall be bounden by indenture to ſerve as an apprentice in any art, ſcience, occupation or labour, according to the tenour of this eſtatute, and in manner and form aforeſaid, albeit the ſame apprentices or any of them, ſhall be within the age of twenty-one years at the time of making their ſeveral indentures, ſhall be bounden to ſerve for the years in their ſeveral indentures contained, as amply and largely to every intent, as if the ſame apprentice were of full age at the time of making ſuch indentures; any law, &c."

But notwithſtanding this ſtatute, it hath been held, that no action of covenant lies againſt an apprentice, for departing from his maſter's ſervice without licence, within the time of his apprenticeſhip; where the defendant pleaded, that at the time of making the indenture he was within age; and on demurrer to this plea, it was argued, that this indenture ſhould bind the infant, becauſe it was for his advantage to be bound apprentice, to be inſtructed in a trade; it was alſo urged, that he was compellable by the 5 Eliz. ſupra, to be bound out an apprentice; but all the court reſolved, that although an infant may voluntarily bind himſelf an apprentice, and if he continue an apprentice for ſeven years, he may have the benefit to uſe his trade; and yet neither at the Common law, nor by any words of the abovementioned ſtatute, a covenant or obligation of an infant, for his apprenticeſhip, ſhall bind him; but if he miſbehave himſelf, the maſter may correct him in his ſervice, or complain to a juſtice of peace, to have him puniſhed according to the ſtatute; but no remedy lieth againſt an infant upon ſuch covenant. Cro. Car. 179. Cro. Jac. 194. S. P.

By the cuſtom of London, an infant unmarried, and above the age of fourteen, may bind himſelf apprentice to a freeman of London, by indenture with proper covenants; which covenants, by the cuſtom of London, ſhall be as binding as if he were of full age. Moor 134. 2 Bulſt. 192. 2 Rol. Rep. 305. Palm. 361. 1 Mod. 271. 2 Keb. 687.

2. Manner of binding, and who are compellable to be bound apprentices; and of ſettling differences between maſters and apprentices.

A perſon cannot be bound an apprentice without deed. 1 Salk. 68.

And an apprentice muſt be retained by the name of an apprentice expreſly, otherwiſe he is no apprentice, tho' he be bound. Dalt. c. 58.

And as an apprentice can only be bound by deed, ſo it is neceſſary, according to the cuſtom of ſome places, that ſuch deed or indenture be inrolled; as in London, if the indentures be not inrolled before the chamberlain within a year, upon a petition to the mayor and aldermen, &c. a ſcire fac' ſhall iſſue to the maſter, to ſhew cauſe why not inrolled; and if it was through the maſter's default, the apprentice may ſue out his indentures, and be diſcharged; otherwiſe if through the fault of the apprentice; as if he would not come to preſent himſelf before the chamberlain, &c. for it cannot be inrolled, unleſs the apprentice be in court and acknowledges it. 2 Rol. Rep. 305. Palm. 361. 1 Mod. 271.

But it hath been held, that this cuſtom does not extend to one bound 'prentice to a waterman, under twenty-one years of age; for the company of watermen are but a voluntary ſociety, and being free of that does not make one free of London. 6 Mod. 69.

By the ſtatute 5 El. c. 4. ſect. 25. an apprentice muſt be bound by deed indented.

An action was brought againſt the defendant, for inticing away and detaining the plaintiff's apprentice, who had agreed by writing to ſerve the plaintiff for ſeven years. Upon evidence it appeared, that the ſtile of the writing began, This indenture, &c. but in fact the parchment was not indented, but was a deed poll. On exception taken to the deed, it was inſiſted that the young man was not an apprentice, becauſe he was not bound by indenture. An infant can be bound no other way than as the ſtatute of 5 El. directs, which is by indenture, and nothing can make this good. The deed cannot now be indented, for that would be forgery. Therefore unleſs the plaintiff ſhews the apprentice to be of full age at the time of ſigning ſuch deed, he cannot be acconnted his apprentice, and by conſequence no action can lie for detaining the apprentice; neither can the plaintiff prove him to be his ſervant by this deed, for he has declared for an apprentice, and muſt prove him ſo to be. Therefore the plaintiff was nonſuited. Seſſ. Ca. vol. 1. 222.

By ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. ſect. 39, 41. all indentures, covenants, promiſes, and bargains, for having or taking apprentices otherwiſe than by the ſtatute of 5 El. ſhall be clearly void in the law to all intents and purpoſes; and every every perſon that ſhall take any apprentice contrary to the ſaid act, ſhall forfeit 10*l.* half to the King, and half to him that ſhall ſue in the ſeſſions, or other court of record; or if it is in a town corporate, then to the uſe of ſuch town as by the charter.

By the ſeveral ſtamp acts, the binding (except it be of pariſh apprentices) ſhall be on a two ſhilling and ſixpenny ſtamped paper or parchment; and the ſame ſhall not be given in evidence in any court till it be ſtamped, and the duties paid.

And by the ſtat. 8 An. c. 9. ſect. 32. beſides the ſaid ſtamps and duties, there ſhall be paid the duty of ſixpence for every 20*s.* of every ſum of 50*l.* or under; and the duty of one ſhilling for every 20*s.* of every ſum above 50*l.* given with any apprentice; and proportionably for greater or leſſer ſums; to be paid by the maſter.

And by ſect. 45. of the ſame ſtatute, where any thing, not being money, ſhall be given with ſuch apprentice, the duties ſhall be anſwered for the value thereof.

But by ſect. 48. this ſhall not extend to any apprentice put out at the common charge of any pariſh or townſhip, or out of any publick charity.

Sect. 35. The full ſum ſhall be inſerted in the indenture in words at length, and ſhall bear date on the day of the execution thereof; on pain that the maſter forfeit double, half to the King, and half with full coſts to him that ſhall ſue.

Sect. 36. The ſaid indentures, within the bills, ſhall be brought to the head office to be ſtamped with a ſtamp for that purpoſe, and the duties paid within one month after date.

Sect. 37. And in other places the ſaid indentures ſhall be brought either to the head office within the bills, or to a collector of the ſtamp duties out of the ſaid limits, in two months after date, and the duties thereupon ſhall be paid, and the indenture ſtamped, if it be at the ſaid head office; otherwiſe ſuch collector ſhall indorſe on the indenture, a receipt for the duties in words at length, and ſubſcribe his name thereto.

Sect. 38. And if it is within 50 miles of the limits of the bills of mortality, the indenture ſhall within three months after date, and elſewhere within ſix months, be brought to the head office to be ſtamped.

Sect. 39. And all ſuch indentures, wherein ſhall not be inſerted the full ſum directly or indirectly given, or whereupon the duties ſhall not be paid, or which ſhall not be ſtamped within the time limited, ſhall be void, and not available in any court or place, or to any purpoſe whatſoever; and the apprentice ſhall be incapable of exerciſing the ſaid trade.

Sect. 43. And no ſuch indenture ſhall be given in evidence in any ſuit to be brought by any of the parties thereunto, unleſs ſuch party on whoſe behalf the ſame ſhall be given in evidence, do firſt make oath, that to the beſt of his knowledge, the ſum therein inſerted was really and truly all that was directly or indirectly to be given with ſuch apprentice.

By the ſtat. 9 An. cap. 21. If the maſter ſhall neglect to pay the duties within the time limited, he ſhall forfeit 50*l.* half to the King, and half, with full coſts, to him who ſhall ſue.

And by the ſtat. 18 Geo. 2. cap. 22. ſect. 23, 24. If he ſhall neglect to pay the ſame as aforeſaid, he ſhall, beſides all other penalties, forfeit double duty.

But by the ſtat. 30 Geo. 2. cap. 19. For the relief of perſons who have omitted to pay the ſaid duties, or to inſert the ſaid ſums in words at length; upon payment of the ſaid duties on or before Sep. 1. 1757, and tendring the indentures to be ſtamped at the ſame time, or at any time on or before Sep. 29. 1757. (of which timely notice ſhall be given in the Gazette) the ſaid indentures ſhall be good and valid, and may be given in evidence.

And there is the like indemnifying clauſe in ſome act every two or three years.

By the 20 G. 2. cap. 45. ſect. 5. If any maſter, having forfeited the double duty, ſhall pay the ſame, and tender the indenture to be ſtamped, within two years after the determination of the apprenticeſhip, and before ſuit hath been commenced for the penalties, the indenture ſhall be valid, and the penalties diſcharged.

Sect. 6, 7. And if after the maſter ſhall have forfeited the double duty, the apprentice ſhall in the preſence of, or by writing under his hand ſigned in the preſence of one witneſs, require his maſter to pay the ſame, and the maſter ſhall not do it in three months; and ſuch apprentice ſhall at any time within two years after the determination of his apprenticeſhip pay the double duty, he may in three months after ſuch payment, demand of his maſter double the ſum contracted for in the indenture; and if not paid in three months after, may recover the ſame by action at law, with full coſts. And the apprentice immediately after payment of the ſaid double duties, (if his apprenticeſhip ſhall not be then expired) and ſignifying by writing under his hand, that he deſires to be diſcharged from his apprenticeſhip, ſhall be diſcharged accordingly, and ſhall have the ſame benefit of the time he hath ſerved as he would have had in caſe he had been aſſigned, or turned over to a new maſter.

Sect. 8. And where any proſecution ſhall be commenced againſt the maſter for the penalties, if the apprentice ſhall pay the double duty at any time in two years after the end of his apprenticeſhip, he may thereupon exerciſe his trade, and the indenture ſhall be valid, and may be given in evidence.

As to compelling perſons to be bound apprentices, by ſtatute 5 Eliz. c. 4. ſect. 35. it is enacted, "That if any perſon ſhall be required by any houſholder, having and uſing half a plow-land at the leaſt in tillage, to be an apprentice, and to ſerve in huſbandry, or in any other kind of art, miſtery or ſcience before expreſſed, and ſhall refuſe ſo to do, that then, upon complaint of ſuch houſekeeper, made to one juſtice of the peace of the county where the ſaid refuſal is or ſhall be made, or of ſuch houſholder inhabiting in any city, town corporate, or market town, to the mayor, bailiffs, or head officer of the ſaid city, town corporate, or market town, if any ſuch refuſal ſhall be there, they ſhall have full power and authority by virtue hereof, to ſend for the ſame perſon ſo refuſing; and if the juſtice, or the ſaid mayor or head officer, ſhall think the ſaid perſon meet and convenient to ſerve as an apprentice in that art, labour, ſcience, or miſtery, wherein he ſhall be ſo then required to ſerve, that then the ſaid juſtice, or the ſaid mayor or head officer, ſhall have power and authority by virtue hereof, if the ſaid perſon refuſe to be bound as an apprentice, to commit him unto ward, there to remain until he be contented, and will be bounden to ſerve as an apprentice ſhould ſerve, according to the true intent and meaning of this preſent act; and if any ſuch maſter ſhall miſuſe or evil intreat his apprentice, or that the ſaid apprentice ſhall have any juſt cauſe to complain, or the apprentice do not his duty to his maſter, then the ſaid maſter, or apprentice, being grieved, and having cauſe to complain, ſhall repair unto one juſtice of peace within the ſaid county, or to the mayor or other head officer of the ſaid city, town corporate, market town, or other place where the ſaid maſter dwelleth, who ſhall, by his wiſdom and diſcretion, take ſuch order and direction between the ſaid maſter and his apprentice, as the equity of the cauſe ſhall require; and if for want of good conformity in the maſter, the ſaid juſtice of peace, or the ſaid mayor or head officer, cannot compound and agree the matter between him and his apprentice, then the ſaid juſtice, or the ſaid mayor or other head officer, ſhall take bond of the ſaid maſter to appear at the next ſeſſions then to be holden in the ſaid county, or within the ſaid city, town corporate, or market town, if the ſaid maſter dwell within any ſuch; and upon his appearance, and hearing of the matter before the ſaid juſtices, or the ſaid mayor or other head officer, if it be thought meet unto them to diſcharge the ſaid apprentice of his apprenticehood, that the ſaid juſtices, or four of them at the leaſt, whereof one of them to be of the quorum, or the ſaid mayor or other head officer, with the conſent of three other of his brethren, or men of beſt reputation within the ſaid city, town corporate or market town, ſhall have power, by authority hereof, in writing under their hands and ſeals, to pronounce and declare, that they have diſcharged the ſaid apprentice of his apprenticehood, and the cauſe thereof; and the ſaid writing, ſo being made and

Sect. 36. "Provided, That no perſon ſhall by force or colour of this ſtatute, be bounden to enter into any apprenticeſhip, other than ſuch as be under the age of twenty-one years."

By the ſtatute 43 Eliz. cap. 2. ſect. 5. it is enacted, "That it ſhall be lawful for the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, or the greater part of them, by the aſſent of any two juſtices of the peace, to bind poor children apprentices, where they ſhall ſee convenient, 'till ſuch man child ſhall come to the age of twenty-four years, and ſuch woman child to the age of twenty-one years, or the time of their marriage; the ſame to be as effectual to all purpoſes, as if ſuch child were of full age, and by indenture of covenant bound him or herſelf."

By the ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. cap. 25. ſect. 23. this laſt-mentioned act is continued, with this further addition, "That all perſons, to whom the overſeers of the poor ſhall, according to this act, bind any children apprentices, may take and receive and keep them as apprentices; any former ſtatute to the contrary notwithſtanding."

It hath been held, that by the ſaid ſtatute 5 Eliz. the juſtices of the peace might bind a poor perſon to huſbandry againſt the conſent of his maſter; but that neither by that ſtatute, nor the ſtatute 43 Eliz. which impowers the churchwardens, &c. to raiſe a ſtock of money, by way of aſſeſſment on the pariſh, for that purpoſe, they could impoſe an apprentice on a tradeſman againſt his conſent, but muſt aſſeſs and raiſe money to bind him out. Raym. 65, 177. 1 Sid. 99. 1 Lev. 84. 1 Vent. 325. S. P. cont. Carth. 94. Comb. 165. 3 Mod. 269. 1 Show. 76.

As by the ſtat. 5 Eliz. the juſtices of peace have a power of impoſing an apprentice on a maſter, in conſequence thereof an indictment lies for diſobedience to their orders, either in not receiving, or receiving and after turning off, or not providing for ſuch apprentice; for tho' an act of parliament preſcribes an eaſier way of proceeding by complaint, yet that does not exclude the remedy by indictment. 6 Mod. 163. 1 Salk. 381.

The juſtices of peace may diſcharge an apprentice not only on the default of the maſter, but alſo on his own default; but it hath been holden, that their juriſdiction herein extends only to ſuch apprentices as were bound to trades within the ſtatute, and were compellable by them to ſerve; for that in ſuch caſe it is but reaſonable that the contracts, which were made by their authority, ſhould be diſſolved by the ſame power, but that they cannot diſcharge any voluntary agreements made between the parties. Skin. 108. 5 Mod. 139. 2 Salk. 471.

Therefore where an order of ſeſſions was made to diſcharge a ſurgeon's apprentice from his maſter, for not inſtructing him in the art of ſurgery; but the maſter being a mountebank kept the apprentice for a tumbler on the ſtage; the order was quaſhed for want of juriſdiction in the juſtices, becauſe a ſurgeon is not one of the trades mentioned in the 5 Eliz. and here it was held, that the juſtices have power only over ſuch apprentices who are bound to the trades therein named, and not over apprentices to other trades. Carth. 366. 5 Mod. 138. 2 Salk. 471.

And yet it hath been reſolved, that the juſtices may not only diſcharge a merchant's apprentice, (which has been agreed not to be a trade within the ſtatute 5 Eliz.) but alſo oblige the maſter to refund part of the money which he had with him; and this doctrine of refunding ſeems to be now eſtabliſhed, as founded on great reaſon, tho' not expreſsly mentioned in the act; for the juſtices being authorized to diſcharge according to their diſcretions, where the end of the apprenticeſhip cannot be attained with one perſon, it is but juſtice the maſter ſhould return part of the money he has received with his apprentice, to place him out with a new maſter. 1 Sand. 314. 1 Salk. 67. Skin. 108.

The order of diſcharge muſt be under the hands and ſeals of the juſtices, according to the expreſs appointment of the ſtatute; but it is ſaid, that in a certiorari to remove the order, it is ſufficient in the return to take notice of the order ſo made; for it is not neceſſary to certify the diſcharge itſelf. 1 Sand. 316. Carth. 199. Comb. 344.

It hath been held, that an order on the maſter to return money is good, tho' it is not averred that he had any with the apprentice; for the order being to return money, is as neceſſary a proof of the receipt of it, as if it had been expreſsly alledged; and in this caſe the court ſeemed to be of opinion, that the juſtices had juriſdiction as to diſcharging and obliging the maſter to refund, as well in other trades as thoſe mentioned in the ſtatute; and that the juſtices are not obliged in their orders to ſet forth all the ſteps they take in their proceeding, there being nothing in the act which makes it neceſſary, and that there was a known and eſtabliſhed diſtinction between orders and convictions. Trin. 7 Geo. 2. in B. R. The King v. Amies.

It hath formerly been held, that the ſeſſions cannot make an original order of diſcharge; but that, according to the ſtatute, the parties ought firſt to apply themſelves to a juſtice of peace; and if he cannot compound the matter, then he is to bind the maſter to appear at the next ſeſſions; but it hath been ruled of late, [ſee the preceding caſe] and it ſeems now eſtabliſhed, that an order on an original application is good, and that the previous application to the juſtice is only diſcretionary. 1 Sand. 316. Carth. 198. 1 Salk. 68. 5 Mod. 138.

If the maſter, being bound to anſwer at the ſeſſions, does not appear, it is a forfeiture of his recognizance; but yet at the ſame time the juſtices may proceed to make an order againſt him. 1 Salk. 67.

An order reciting, that Joſeph Higgin was bound out by indenture, as the ſtatute requires, to John Parks, and being lame, and having the King's evil, and in the opinion of ſurgeons incurable; therefore the juſtices diſcharged the maſter from his apprentice. It was moved to confirm the order, becauſe the maſter cannot now have the end of the binding, which was, the ſervice of his apprentice; but it was anſwered, that the ſtatute only impowers the juſtices to diſcharge for miſbehaviour and not for ſickneſs, and quaſhed by the court; for the maſter takes the apprentice for better and worſe, and is to provide for him in ſickneſs and in health. Strange 99. Trin. 4 Geo. 1.

An apprentice was diſcharged, the maſter having uſed him unkindly, and refuſing to provide for and entertain him: but by the court, This is not a good ground for the diſcharge; for there is a power to oblige the maſter to receive and entertain the apprentice, and uſing him unkindly is too looſe. Strange 1014.

Stat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſect. 3. It ſhall be lawful for any two or more juſtices, upon any complaint or application by any apprentice put out by the pariſh, or any other apprentice, upon whoſe binding out no larger a ſum than five pounds were paid, touching or concerning any miſuſage, refuſal of neceſſary proviſion, cruelty, or other ill treatment of or towards ſuch apprentice, by his or her maſter or miſtreſs, to ſummon ſuch maſter or miſtreſs to appear before ſuch juſtices at a reaſonable time to be named in ſuch ſummons; and ſuch juſtices ſhall and may examine into the matter of ſuch complaint; and upon proof thereof made upon oath, to their ſatisfaction, (whether the maſter or miſtreſs be preſent or not, if ſervice of the ſummons be alſo, upon oath, proved) the ſaid juſtices may diſcharge ſuch apprentice, by warrant or certificate under their hands and ſeals; for which warrant or certificate no fees ſhall be paid.

Sect. 4. And ſuch juſtices, upon application or complaint made, upon oath, by any maſter or miſtreſs, againſt ſuch apprentice, touching or concerning any miſdemeanour, miſcarriage, or ill behaviour, in ſuch his or her ſervice (which oath ſuch juſtices are hereby impowered ered to adminiſter) to hear, examine, and determine the ſame, and to puniſh the offender by commitment to the houſe of correction, there to remain and be corrected, and held to hard labour for a reaſonable time, not exceeding one kalendar month, or otherwiſe by diſcharging ſuch apprentice, in manner and form before mentioned.

Sect. 5. Perſons aggrieved by ſuch determination, order, or warrant of ſuch juſtice or juſtices as aforeſaid (ſave and except any order of commitment) he, ſhe, or they may appeal to the next general quarter ſeſſions of the peace to be held for the county, riding, liberty, city, town corporate, or place where ſuch determination or order ſhall be made; which ſaid next general quarter ſeſſions is hereby impowered to hear and finally determine the ſame, and to give and award ſuch coſts to any of the reſpective perſons appellant or reſpondent, as the ſaid ſeſſions ſhall judge reaſonable, not exceeding forty ſhillings; the ſame to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale, in manner before mentioned.

Sect. 6. And no certiorari ſhall iſſue or be iſſuable to remove any proceedings whatſoever, had in purſuance of this act, into any of his majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter.

3. Who may take, and are compellable to receive and provide for apprentices; of refunding the money given with them, and delivering up their indentures.

Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 25. Every perſon being an houſholder, and having and uſing half a plough-land in tillage, may take any apprentice above the age of ten years, and under eighteen, to ſerve in huſbandry till twenty-one at the leaſt, or till twenty-four, as the parties can agree.

Sect. 26. Every perſon being an houſholder, and 24 years old at leaſt, dwelling in any city or town corporate, and exerciſing any art, miſtery, or manual occupation there, may retain the ſon of any freeman, not occupying huſbandry, nor being a labourer, and inhabiting in the ſame, or in any other city or town corporate, to ſerve and be bound as an apprentice after the cuſtom and order of the city of London, for ſeven years at leaſt, ſo as ſuch apprenticeſhip do not expire before the apprentice ſhall be 24 years of age.

Sect. 27. But no perſon dwelling in any city or town corporate, being a merchant, mercer, draper, goldſmith, ironmonger, imbroiderer, or clothier, ſhall take any apprentice, except he is his ſon, or elſe that the father and mother of ſuch apprentice ſhall have an eſtate of inheritance or freehold of forty ſhillings a year, to be certified under the hands and ſeals of three juſtices where the lands lie, to the mayor of that city or town corporate, and to be inrolled among the records there.

Sect. 28. Every perſon being an houſholder, and 24 years old at the leaſt, and not occupying huſbandry, nor being a labourer, dwelling in any market town not corporate, and exerciſing any art, miſtery, or manual occupation, may have to apprentice the child or children of any other artificer, not occupying huſbandry, nor being a labourer, inhabiting the ſame or any other ſuch market town in the ſame ſhire.

Sect. 29. But no perſon dwelling in any ſuch market town, being a merchant, mercer, draper, goldſmith, ironmonger, or clothier, ſhall take any apprentice except he be his ſon, or elſe that his father and mother ſhall have an eſtate of inheritance or freehold of three pounds, to be certified under the hands and ſeals of three juſtices of the ſhire where the lands lie, to the head officer of ſuch market-town where ſuch apprentice ſhall be taken, there to be inrolled for a record.

Sect. 30. Any perſon uſing the art of a ſmith, wheelwright, plough-wright, mill-wright, carpenter, rough maſon, plaiſterer, ſawyer, lime-burner, brick-maker, bricklayer, tyler, ſlater, helier, tyle-maker, linen weaver, turner, cooper, miller, earthen potter, woollen weaver, weaving houſhold cloth only, fuller, otherwiſe called tucker or walker, burner of oar and wood aſhes, thatcher, or ſhingler, whereſoever he ſhall dwell, may take the ſon of any perſon as apprentice, albeit his parents have no land.

By the 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. reciting, That whereas by an act made in the 43 Eliz. it is among other things enacted, That it ſhall be lawful for the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor of any pariſh, or the greater part of them, by the aſſent of two juſtices of the peace, whereof one to be of the quorum, to bind poor children apprentices where they ſhall ſee convenient; but there being doubts, whether the perſons, to whom ſuch children are to be bound, are compellable to receive ſuch children as apprentices, that law hath failed of its due execution; therefore it is enacted and declared, "That where any poor children ſhall be appointed to be bound apprentices purſuant to the ſaid act, the perſon or perſons, to whom they are ſo appointed to be bound, ſhall receive and provide for them, according to the indenture ſigned and confirmed by the two juſtices of the peace, and alſo execute the other part of the ſaid indentures; and if he or ſhe ſhall refuſe ſo to do, oath being thereof made by one of the churchwardens or overſeers of the poor, before any two of the juſtices of the peace for the county, liberty or riding, he or ſhe ſhall for every ſuch offence, forfeit the ſum of 10l. to be levied by diſtreſs; the ſame to be applied to the uſe of the poor of that pariſh or place where ſuch offence was committed; ſaving always to the perſon to whom any poor child ſhall be appointed to be an apprentice as aforeſaid, if he or ſhe ſhall think themſelves aggrieved thereby, his or her appeal to the next general or quarter ſeſſions of the peace for that county or riding, whoſe order therein ſhall be final, and conclude all parties."

Tho' by the ſtatute 8 & 9 W. 3. the maſter is bound under the penalty of 10l. to keep an apprentice bound to him purſuant to the ſtatute 43 Eliz. yet if two juſtices bind a poor girl to a merchant, and he appeals to the ſeſſions, where the order is reverſed, it being thought unfit to compel a merchant to take an apprentice; the court of King's Bench, on removing the order before them, may confirm the order of ſeſſions, (as they did in this caſe); for the ſtatute having given an appeal to the ſeſſions, they are made thereby proper judges, whether the perſon be a proper perſon to impoſe an apprentice on or not. 2 Salk. 491.

The churchwardens and overſeers need not aver, that the parents were not able to maintain the child, for they have a diſcretionary power by the ſtatute, of determining that. Comb. 289.

By the ſtat. 7 Jac. 1. cap. 3. ſect. 2. it is enacted, that money given to be continually employed to put out poor children apprentices, ſhall be employed in corporate towns by the corporations, and in other places by the parſon or vicar, together with the conſtables, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor, or the moſt part of them; who ſhall have the nomination and placing of ſuch apprentices; and if they ſhall wilfully forbear or refuſe to employ the ſame accordingly, they ſhall forfeit five marks each of them ſo making default, to be divided betwixt the poor of the pariſh and the proſecutor.

Sect. 3. The party receiving money with ſuch an apprentice ſhall give ſecurity by obligation, to repay it at the end of 7 years next enſuing the date of the ſaid obligation, or within three months next after the end of the ſaid ſeven years; and if ſuch apprentice ſhall die within the ſeven years, then within one year after his death; and if the maſter, miſtreſs, or dame, happen to die within the ſeven years, then within one year after their death, ſo as the money may be employed in placing the apprentice with ſome other of the ſame trade, to ſerve out his time, at the diſcretion of the parties truſted as aforeſaid.

Sect. 4. The money ſo given ſhall be employed within three months after the receipt thereof; and if there ſhall not be apt perſons found to be apprentices in the places where it is given, it ſhall be employed in the pariſhes next adjoining by the parties that are truſted with it, in the places where it was ſo given, and there alſo bond ſhall be taken, as is before declared.

and enrolled by the clerk of the peace, or town clerk, amongſt the records that he keepeth, ſhall be a ſufficient diſcharge for the ſaid apprentice againſt his maſter, his executors and adminiſtrators, the indenture of the ſaid apprenticehood, or any law or cuſtom to the contrary notwithſtanding; and if the default ſhall be found to be in the apprentice, then the ſaid juſtices, or the ſaid mayor, or other head officer, with the aſſiſtance aforeſaid, ſhall cauſe ſuch due correction and puniſhment to be miniſtred unto him, as by their wiſdom and diſcretion ſhall be thought meet."

Sect. 36. "Provided, That no perſon ſhall by force or colour of this ſtatute, be bounden to enter into any apprenticeſhip, other than ſuch as be under the age of twenty-one years."

By the ſtatute 43 Eliz. cap. 2. ſect. 5. it is enacted, "That it ſhall be lawful for the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, or the greater part of them, by the aſſent of any two juſtices of the peace, to bind poor children apprentices, where they ſhall ſee convenient, 'till ſuch man child ſhall come to the age of twenty-four years, and ſuch woman child to the age of twenty-one years, or the time of their marriage; the ſame to be as effectual to all purpoſes, as if ſuch child were of full age, and by indenture of covenant bound him or herſelf."

By the ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. cap. 25. ſect. 23. this laſt-mentioned act is continued, with this further addition, "That all perſons, to whom the overſeers of the poor ſhall, according to this act, bind any children apprentices, may take and receive and keep them as apprentices; any former ſtatute to the contrary notwithſtanding."

It hath been held, that by the ſaid ſtatute 5 Eliz. the juſtices of the peace might bind a poor perſon to huſbandry againſt the conſent of his maſter; but that neither by that ſtatute, nor the ſtatute 43 Eliz. which impowers the churchwardens, &c. to raiſe a ſtock of money, by way of aſſeſſment on the pariſh, for that purpoſe, they could impoſe an apprentice on a tradeſman againſt his conſent, but muſt aſſeſs and raiſe money to bind him out. Raym. 65, 177. 1 Sid. 99. 1 Lev. 84. 1 Vent. 325. S. P. cont. Carth. 94. Comb. 165. 3 Mod. 269. 1 Show. 76.

As by the ſtat. 5 Eliz. the juſtices of peace have a power of impoſing an apprentice on a maſter, in conſequence thereof an indictment lies for diſobedience to their orders, either in not receiving, or receiving and after turning off, or not providing for ſuch apprentice; for tho' an act of parliament preſcribes an eaſier way of proceeding by complaint, yet that does not exclude the remedy by indictment. 6 Mod. 163. 1 Salk. 381.

The juſtices of peace may diſcharge an apprentice not only on the default of the maſter, but alſo on his own default; but it hath been holden, that their juriſdiction herein extends only to ſuch apprentices as were bound to trades within the ſtatute, and were compellable by them to ſerve; for that in ſuch caſe it is but reaſonable that the contracts, which were made by their authority, ſhould be diſſolved by the ſame power, but that they cannot diſcharge any voluntary agreements made between the parties. Skin. 108. 5 Mod. 139. 2 Salk. 471.

Therefore where an order of ſeſſions was made to diſcharge a ſurgeon's apprentice from his maſter, for not inſtructing him in the art of ſurgery; but the maſter being a mountebank kept the apprentice for a tumbler on the ſtage; the order was quaſhed for want of juriſdiction in the juſtices, becauſe a ſurgeon is not one of the trades mentioned in the 5 Eliz. and here it was held, that the juſtices have power only over ſuch apprentices who are bound to the trades therein named, and not over apprentices to other trades. Carth. 366. 5 Mod. 138. 2 Salk. 471.

And yet it hath been reſolved, that the juſtices may not only diſcharge a merchant's apprentice, (which has been agreed not to be a trade within the ſtatute 5 Eliz.) but alſo oblige the maſter to refund part of the money which he had with him; and this doctrine of refunding ſeems to be now eſtabliſhed, as founded on great reaſon, tho' not expreſsly mentioned in the act; for the juſtices being authorized to diſcharge according to their diſcretions, where the end of the apprenticeſhip cannot be attained with one perſon, it is but juſtice the maſter ſhould return part of the money he has received with his apprentice, to place him out with a new maſter. 1 Sand. 314. 1 Salk. 67. Skin. 108.

The order of diſcharge muſt be under the hands and ſeals of the juſtices, according to the expreſs appointment of the ſtatute; but it is ſaid, that in a certiorari to remove the order, it is ſufficient in the return to take notice of the order ſo made; for it is not neceſſary to certify the diſcharge itſelf. 1 Sand. 316. Carth. 199. Comb. 344.

It hath been held, that an order on the maſter to return money is good, tho' it is not averred that he had any with the apprentice; for the order being to return money, is as neceſſary a proof of the receipt of it, as if it had been expreſsly alledged; and in this caſe the court ſeemed to be of opinion, that the juſtices had juriſdiction as to diſcharging and obliging the maſter to refund, as well in other trades as thoſe mentioned in the ſtatute; and that the juſtices are not obliged in their orders to ſet forth all the ſteps they take in their proceeding, there being nothing in the act which makes it neceſſary, and that there was a known and eſtabliſhed diſtinction between orders and convictions. Trin. 7 Geo. 2. in B. R. The King v. Amies.

It hath formerly been held, that the ſeſſions cannot make an original order of diſcharge; but that, according to the ſtatute, the parties ought firſt to apply themſelves to a juſtice of peace; and if he cannot compound the matter, then he is to bind the maſter to appear at the next ſeſſions; but it hath been ruled of late, [ſee the preceding caſe] and it ſeems now eſtabliſhed, that an order on an original application is good, and that the previous application to the juſtice is only diſcretionary. 1 Sand. 316. Carth. 198. 1 Salk. 68. 5 Mod. 138.

If the maſter, being bound to anſwer at the ſeſſions, does not appear, it is a forfeiture of his recognizance; but yet at the ſame time the juſtices may proceed to make an order againſt him. 1 Salk. 67.

An order reciting, that Joſeph Higgin was bound out by indenture, as the ſtatute requires, to John Parks, and being lame, and having the King's evil, and in the opinion of ſurgeons incurable; therefore the juſtices diſcharged the maſter from his apprentice. It was moved to confirm the order, becauſe the maſter cannot now have the end of the binding, which was, the ſervice of his apprentice; but it was anſwered, that the ſtatute only impowers the juſtices to diſcharge for miſbehaviour and not for ſickneſs, and quaſhed by the court; for the maſter takes the apprentice for better and worſe, and is to provide for him in ſickneſs and in health. Strange 99. Trin. 4 Geo. 1.

An apprentice was diſcharged, the maſter having uſed him unkindly, and refuſing to provide for and entertain him: but by the court, This is not a good ground for the diſcharge; for there is a power to oblige the maſter to receive and entertain the apprentice, and uſing him unkindly is too looſe. Strange 1014.

Stat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſect. 3. It ſhall be lawful for any two or more juſtices, upon any complaint or application by any apprentice put out by the pariſh, or any other apprentice, upon whoſe binding out no larger a ſum than five pounds were paid, touching or concerning any miſuſage, refuſal of neceſſary proviſion, cruelty, or other ill treatment of or towards ſuch apprentice, by his or her maſter or miſtreſs, to ſummon ſuch maſter or miſtreſs to appear before ſuch juſtices at a reaſonable time to be named in ſuch ſummons; and ſuch juſtices ſhall and may examine into the matter of ſuch complaint; and upon proof thereof made upon oath, to their ſatisfaction, (whether the maſter or miſtreſs be preſent or not, if ſervice of the ſummons be alſo, upon oath, proved) the ſaid juſtices may diſcharge ſuch apprentice, by warrant or certificate under their hands and ſeals; for which warrant or certificate no fees ſhall be paid.

Sect. 4. And ſuch juſtices, upon application or complaint made, upon oath, by any maſter or miſtreſs, againſt ſuch apprentice, touching or concerning any miſdemeanour, miſcarriage, or ill behaviour, in ſuch his or her ſervice (which oath ſuch juſtices are hereby impowered ered to adminiſter) to hear, examine, and determine the ſame, and to puniſh the offender by commitment to the houſe of correction, there to remain and be corrected, and held to hard labour for a reaſonable time, not exceeding one kalendar month, or otherwiſe by diſcharging ſuch apprentice, in manner and form before mentioned.

Sect. 5. Perſons aggrieved by ſuch determination, order, or warrant of ſuch juſtice or juſtices as aforeſaid (ſave and except any order of commitment) he, ſhe, or they may appeal to the next general quarter ſeſſions of the peace to be held for the county, riding, liberty, city, town corporate, or place where ſuch determination or order ſhall be made; which ſaid next general quarter ſeſſions is hereby impowered to hear and finally determine the ſame, and to give and award ſuch coſts to any of the reſpective perſons appellant or reſpondent, as the ſaid ſeſſions ſhall judge reaſonable, not exceeding forty ſhillings; the ſame to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale, in manner before mentioned.

Sect. 6. And no certiorari ſhall iſſue or be iſſuable to remove any proceedings whatſoever, had in purſuance of this act, into any of his majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter.

3. Who may take, and are compellable to receive and provide for apprentices; of refunding the money given with them, and delivering up their indentures.

Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 25. Every perſon being an houſholder, and having and uſing half a plough-land in tillage, may take any apprentice above the age of ten years, and under eighteen, to ſerve in huſbandry till twenty-one at the leaſt, or till twenty-four, as the parties can agree.

Sect. 26. Every perſon being an houſholder, and 24 years old at leaſt, dwelling in any city or town corporate, and exerciſing any art, miſtery, or manual occupation there, may retain the ſon of any freeman, not occupying huſbandry, nor being a labourer, and inhabiting in the ſame, or in any other city or town corporate, to ſerve and be bound as an apprentice after the cuſtom and order of the city of London, for ſeven years at leaſt, ſo as ſuch apprenticeſhip do not expire before the apprentice ſhall be 24 years of age.

Sect. 27. But no perſon dwelling in any city or town corporate, being a merchant, mercer, draper, goldſmith, ironmonger, imbroiderer, or clothier, ſhall take any apprentice, except he is his ſon, or elſe that the father and mother of ſuch apprentice ſhall have an eſtate of inheritance or freehold of forty ſhillings a year, to be certified under the hands and ſeals of three juſtices where the lands lie, to the mayor of that city or town corporate, and to be inrolled among the records there.

Sect. 28. Every perſon being an houſholder, and 24 years old at the leaſt, and not occupying huſbandry, nor being a labourer, dwelling in any market town not corporate, and exerciſing any art, miſtery, or manual occupation, may have to apprentice the child or children of any other artificer, not occupying huſbandry, nor being a labourer, inhabiting the ſame or any other ſuch market town in the ſame ſhire.

Sect. 29. But no perſon dwelling in any ſuch market town, being a merchant, mercer, draper, goldſmith, ironmonger, or clothier, ſhall take any apprentice except he be his ſon, or elſe that his father and mother ſhall have an eſtate of inheritance or freehold of three pounds, to be certified under the hands and ſeals of three juſtices of the ſhire where the lands lie, to the head officer of ſuch market-town where ſuch apprentice ſhall be taken, there to be inrolled for a record.

Sect. 30. Any perſon uſing the art of a ſmith, wheelwright, plough-wright, mill-wright, carpenter, rough maſon, plaiſterer, ſawyer, lime-burner, brick-maker, bricklayer, tyler, ſlater, helier, tyle-maker, linen weaver, turner, cooper, miller, earthen potter, woollen weaver, weaving houſhold cloth only, fuller, otherwiſe called tucker or walker, burner of oar and wood aſhes, thatcher, or ſhingler, whereſoever he ſhall dwell, may take the ſon of any perſon as apprentice, albeit his parents have no land.

By the 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. reciting, That whereas by an act made in the 43 Eliz. it is among other things enacted, That it ſhall be lawful for the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor of any pariſh, or the greater part of them, by the aſſent of two juſtices of the peace, whereof one to be of the quorum, to bind poor children apprentices where they ſhall ſee convenient; but there being doubts, whether the perſons, to whom ſuch children are to be bound, are compellable to receive ſuch children as apprentices, that law hath failed of its due execution; therefore it is enacted and declared, "That where any poor children ſhall be appointed to be bound apprentices purſuant to the ſaid act, the perſon or perſons, to whom they are ſo appointed to be bound, ſhall receive and provide for them, according to the indenture ſigned and confirmed by the two juſtices of the peace, and alſo execute the other part of the ſaid indentures; and if he or ſhe ſhall refuſe ſo to do, oath being thereof made by one of the churchwardens or overſeers of the poor, before any two of the juſtices of the peace for the county, liberty or riding, he or ſhe ſhall for every ſuch offence, forfeit the ſum of 10l. to be levied by diſtreſs; the ſame to be applied to the uſe of the poor of that pariſh or place where ſuch offence was committed; ſaving always to the perſon to whom any poor child ſhall be appointed to be an apprentice as aforeſaid, if he or ſhe ſhall think themſelves aggrieved thereby, his or her appeal to the next general or quarter ſeſſions of the peace for that county or riding, whoſe order therein ſhall be final, and conclude all parties."

Tho' by the ſtatute 8 & 9 W. 3. the maſter is bound under the penalty of 10l. to keep an apprentice bound to him purſuant to the ſtatute 43 Eliz. yet if two juſtices bind a poor girl to a merchant, and he appeals to the ſeſſions, where the order is reverſed, it being thought unfit to compel a merchant to take an apprentice; the court of King's Bench, on removing the order before them, may confirm the order of ſeſſions, (as they did in this caſe); for the ſtatute having given an appeal to the ſeſſions, they are made thereby proper judges, whether the perſon be a proper perſon to impoſe an apprentice on or not. 2 Salk. 491.

The churchwardens and overſeers need not aver, that the parents were not able to maintain the child, for they have a diſcretionary power by the ſtatute, of determining that. Comb. 289.

By the ſtat. 7 Jac. 1. cap. 3. ſect. 2. it is enacted, that money given to be continually employed to put out poor children apprentices, ſhall be employed in corporate towns by the corporations, and in other places by the parſon or vicar, together with the conſtables, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor, or the moſt part of them; who ſhall have the nomination and placing of ſuch apprentices; and if they ſhall wilfully forbear or refuſe to employ the ſame accordingly, they ſhall forfeit five marks each of them ſo making default, to be divided betwixt the poor of the pariſh and the proſecutor.

Sect. 4. The money ſo given ſhall be employed within three months after the receipt thereof; and if there ſhall not be apt perſons found to be apprentices in the places where it is given, it ſhall be employed in the pariſhes next adjoining by the parties that are truſted with it, in the places where it was ſo given, and there alſo bond ſhall be taken, as is before declared.

Sect. 5. The choice of apprentices ſhall be out of the pooreſt ſort of children, whoſe parents are leaſt able to relieve them; and no ſuch apprentice ſhall be above the age of fifteen years when he or ſhe is firſt bound.

Sect. 6. The parties appointed by this act as aforeſaid in any town or pariſh not corporate, ſhall yearly, in Eaſter week, or within one month after Eaſter, account before two or more of the next juſtices of the peace. And if there be any obligations, or money remaining in their hands, they ſhall upon ſuch account (or within ten days after) deliver the ſame unto their ſurveyors.

Sect. 7. If any party ſo truſted ſhall break the truſt repoſed in him, miſemploy the ſame money, or do any thing contrary to this act, for which there is not by this act any penalty appointed, the lord chancellor or keeper ſhall upon the petition of any perſon, award a commiſſion to ſuch as he ſhall think fit, to enquire, hear, and determine ſuch offences: And if the commiſſioners ſhall find money ſo miſemployed, they ſhall, in places not corporate, have power to rate and collect it upon the parties ſo offending, or otherwiſe upon the able inhabitants of the city, town, or pariſh ſo in default, as the ſaid commiſſioners, or the greateſt part of them, ſhall think fit, and ſhall return the ſaid commiſſion, together with the manner of executing the ſame, in the Chancery within three months next after ſuch execution thereof.

Bill by a merchant againſt one that was his apprentice, for on account of goods and money which he was intruſted with, both during his apprenticeſhip and after, as his factor and agent; the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitations 21 Jac. the plea was allowed good as to the goods, &c. received during his apprenticeſhip, and till he was made free, but not after his apprenticeſhip ended; ſo ordered to anſwer that part of the bill but without coſts. Fin. Rep. 370. Trin. 30. Car. 2. Fincham v. Hobbs.

The maſter received with the apprentice 250*l.* and died within two years, the apprentice having for that time been employed only in inferior affairs; decreed, after debts and ſpecialties paid, that the executors repay the 250*l.* as a debt due on ſimple contract, deducting after the rate of 20*l. per ann.* for the maintenance of the apprentice during the time he lived with his maſter. Fin. Rep. 396. Mich. 30 Car. 2. Soam v. Bowden and Eyles.

A. placed his ſon clerk to an attorney, and gave with him 120*l.* the maſter agrees to return 60*l.* of the money, if the maſter died within a year; the maſter was ſick at the time, and of that ſickneſs died within three weeks. Jefferies C. decreed 100 guineas to be paid back to A. Vern. Rep. 460. pl. 437. Newton v. Rouſe.

Indentures of apprenticeſhip were decreed in the mayor's court of London, whither the cauſe was ſent back out of Chancery, to be deliver'd up, becauſe not inroll'd, tho' the non-inrollment was at the inſtance of the mother, which could not excuſe the maſter, who had covenanted to inroll the indentures; and altho' the apprentice was bound for 7 years, yet he covenanted to make him free at the end of five years. 2 Vern. 492. pl. 443. Hill. 1704. Stephenſon v. Houlditch.

A. puts his ſon apprentice to B. and gives 1000*l.* bond for his fidelity, and at the ſame time B. covenants with A. to ſee the apprentice make up his caſh once a month at leaſt. Per Wright K. the meaning is, that B. not only ſee the figures right, but the caſh effectually made up, ſo that B's pretence that the apprentice had inſerted bank-notes, &c. as remaining, when he had diſpoſed of them, is no excuſe, and the bond and covenant are as one agreement, that the plaintiff A. would be anſwerable monthly, provided accounts were taken monthly, and would be liable but for one month's imbezilment, and decreed to A. to anſwer no more than B. proved imbeziled in the firſt month, when the imbezilment began. 2 Vern. 518. pl. 468. Montague, executor of Ewer v. Tidcombe and Hoſkings.

An apothecary turned away his apprentice for negligence and miſdemeanors laid to his charge; but the court decreed the maſter to refund 30*l. of the money* he had with him, and the rather, becauſe the indentures were not inrolled, ſo as the matter was not properly cognizable before the chamberlain of London. 2 Vern. 64. pl. 57. Trin. 1688. Thorman v. Abell.

A bond of 50*l.* given by one apprentice to another apprentice for money won at play, decreed to be delivered up. 2 Vern. Rep. 291. pl. 281. Trin. 1693. Woodroff v. Farnham.

4. Of ſetting up a trade; the neceſſity of ſerving an apprenticeſhip, and what trades are prohibited to be followed within the meaning of the ſtatute 5 Eliz. and alſo the offence and puniſhment of following a trade without being qualified.

At Common law, every perſon might follow what lawful trade he pleaſed; which being inconvenient in many inſtances, and a detriment to the publick, in permitting perſons to exerciſe trades in which they had little or no ſkill or experience; to prevent which miſchief, and the better to train up and enure perſons to labour and induſtry from their youth, and thereby make them more ſkilful and expert, the following ſtatute was made. 11 Co. 53. 2 Bulſt. 191. Skin. 133. 1 Sand. 312.

It is enacted by the 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 31. "That it ſhall not be lawful to any perſon or perſons, other than ſuch as now do lawfully uſe or exerciſe any art, miſtery or manual occupation, to ſet up, occupy, uſe or exerciſe any craft, miſtery or occupation, now uſed or occupied within the realm of England or Wales, except he ſhall have been brought up therein ſeven years, at the leaſt, as an apprentice, in manner and form aboveſaid; nor to ſet any perſon on work in ſuch miſtery, art or occupation, being not a workman at this day, except he ſhall have been apprentice, as is aforeſaid; or elſe having ſerved as an apprentice, as is aforeſaid, ſhall or will become a journeyman, or hired by the year; upon pain that every perſon willingly offending, or doing the contrary, ſhall forfeit and loſe for every default forty ſhillings for every month."

It hath been ruled, that there are many trades within the general words and equity of this act, beſides thoſe which are particularly enumerated therein; yet it ſeems agreed, and hath frequently been adjudged, that in every indictment, &c. it muſt be alledged, that it was a trade at the time of making the ſtatute, for the words thereof are, any craft, miſtery or occupation, now uſed, &c. from whence it ſeems to follow, that a new manufacture, which to all other purpoſes may be called a trade, is yet not a trade within this ſtatute. 2 Salk. 611. Palm. 528. 1 Sid. 175.

Alſo it ſeems agreed, that the act only extends to ſuch trades as imply miſtery and craft, and require ſkill and experience; that therefore merchants, huſbandmen, gardeners, &c. are not within the ſtatute; and on this foundation it hath been held, that a hemp-dreſſer is not within the ſtatute, as not requiring much learning or ſkill, and being what every huſbandman doth uſe for his neceſſary occaſions. 8 Co. 130. 2 Bulſt. 190. Cro. Car. 499.

It is ſaid in 2 Bulſt. 186. to have been adjudged, that an upholſter is not a trade within the ſtatute, as not requiring ſkill; but this hath been contradicted by a later reſolution, [2 Lev. 243.] wherein it is ſaid to have been reſolved, that a barber and taylor were trades within the ſtatute.

Alſo it is ſaid in 2 Bulſt. 190. that a pippin-monger is not within the ſtatute, becauſe there is no miſtery in buying of apples, and all his ſkill is in ſo laying his apples as to keep them from rotting; but this likewiſe hath been doubted doubted in a late caſe, [2 Lev. 206.] where it was debated, whether the uſing of the trade of a coſtermonger or fruiterer be within the ſtatute; but there is no reſolution.

It is clearly agreed, that the following the common trade of a brewer, baker, or cook, is within the ſtatute, as unſkilfulneſs herein may be very prejudicial to the lives and healths of his majeſty's ſubjects; but it is at the ſame time agreed, that the exerciſing of any of theſe trades in a man's own houſe or family, or in a private perſon's houſe, is not within the reſtraint of the ſtatute. 11. Co. 54. a. Cro. Car. 499. Hob. 183, 211. Moor 886. 8 Co. 129. Palm. 542. Lit. Rep. 251. Bridg. 141.

On motion to quaſh an indictment for uſing the trade of a ſellmonger, it was urged, that this was a buſineſs which required no ſkill, but that it was only to pull the wooll from the ſkin, but per Holt Ch. Juſtice; If in the indictment it be averred to be a trade at the time of making the ſtatute, we will not quaſh it; for whether it was a trade then or no, or whether any ſkill be requiſite to the exerciſe of it, is a matter of fact proper for the trial of a jury. 2 Salk. 611.

So the court refuſed to quaſh an indictment for uſing the trade of a ſeamſtreſs, not having ſerved as apprentice; becauſe it was ſet forth in the indictment to be a trade in England at the time of making the act; ſo that if this trade of a ſeamſtreſs be not within the act, defendant will have the advantage of it on the trial. 2 Salk. 611.

But it is ſaid, that the court had quaſhed an indictment for following the trade of a merchant taylor, becauſe they did not know what was meant by it, and it ſeemed to them nonſenſe and unintelligible. 2 Salk. 611.

It ſeems agreed, that the following a trade within the ſtatute, muſt be ſuch whereby the party gets his livelihood; and that therefore the uſing of the trade of a brewer, baker, cook, taylor, &c. in one's own houſe, or in the private family of another, without any reward, is not within the ſtatute. 11 Co. 54 Hob. 183.

But in an action for uſing the trade of a clothier, not having been apprentice to that trade; where by ſpecial verdict it was found, that A. was a Turkey merchant, and exported great quantities of Engliſh cloth into the Levant; and for this purpoſe only he hired ſeveral cloth-workers, who had been all apprentices to the ſame trade, and kept alſo a maſter workman of that trade to inſpect their work; and that by thoſe men he made great quantities of Engliſh cloth, all which he tranſported; and that he the ſaid A. kept a dye-houſe, and hired men of that trade to dye his own cloths, and no other: It was reſolved to be within the reſtraint of the ſtatute, tho' the cloth was made for his own merchandize only, and tho' made by perſons who had been apprentices; for here they are not traders but hirelings, and he is the tradeſman who hath all the profit, as A. in this caſe has. Carth. 162. 2 Salk. 610. 3 Mod. 313.

So if a man keeps journeymen ſhoemakers to make ſhoes for tranſportation, this is an exerciſing the trade of a ſhoemaker within the ſtatute. Carth. 164.

But it hath been held, that this ſtatute doth not reſtrain a man from uſing ſeveral trades, ſo as he had been an apprentice to all; wherefore it indemnifies all petty chapmen in little towns and villages, becauſe their maſters kept the ſame mixed trades there before. Carth. 163.

If a coachmaker keeps ſervants to make his wheels, and workmen to curry his own leather, this is againſt the ſtatute, becauſe it is he only who receives all the profits of the ſeveral trades, and the wheelwright and currier are but his ſervants. Carth. 163, 164.

So in a caſe upon this ſtatute, proſecuted by the horners company againſt a combmaker in London, for uſing the trade of a horner, viz. in preſſing horn for making combs, which preſſing did not belong to their trade; and this was adjudged a breach of the ſtatute, for a horner is a particular trade, and a very ancient company in London. Carth. 162.

It hath been reſolved, that there is no occaſion for any actual binding, but that the following a trade for ſeven years, is a ſufficient qualification within the ſtatute. 1 Salk. 67. 2 Salk. 613.

So where an action was brought on this ſtatute, and upon Not guilty pleaded, it appeared that the defendant's father kept the ſame trade, and that he the defendant for ſeveral years had been employed by his father therein; and it was held, that he might lawfully uſe that trade, for that he had been quaſi an apprentice to it, which was ſufficient to ſatisfy the ſtatute. Carth. 163.

So if a man lives with another, that uſes a trade which the other is not qualified for uſing, ſeven years, he may ſet up the trade as well as if he had lived with one never ſo well qualified. Caſ. in Law and Eq. 71.

Alſo it hath been held, that the ſervice need not be in any particular country; and therefore an indictment for uſing the trade of a taylor, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip ſeven years, was quaſhed, becauſe only ſaid, not having ſerved as an apprentice infra regnum Angliæ aut Walliam; for it may be he did ſo beyond ſea; and if it were any where it ſuffices. 1 Salk. 67.

So it hath been held, that ſerving five years to a trade out of England and two in England, is ſufficient to ſatisfy the ſtatute; but that there muſt be a ſervice of a full time either in England or out of England; and therefore ſerving five years in any country, where by the law of the country more is not required, will not qualify a man to uſe the trade in England. Ca. in Law and Eq. 70.

By the ſtatute 31 Eliz. cap. 5. ſect. 7. it is enacted, "That all ſuits for uſing a trade without having been brought up in it, ſhall be ſued and proſecuted in the general quarter ſeſſions of the peace, or aſſiſes in the ſame county where the offence ſhall be commited, or otherwiſe inquired of, heard and determined in the aſſiſes, or general quarter ſeſſions of the peace in the ſame county where ſuch offence ſhall be committed, or in the leet within which it ſhall happen, and not in any wiſe out of the ſame county where ſuch offence ſhall happen or be committed."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it hath been held, that it reſtrains not a ſuit in the King's Bench or Exchequer, for ſuch offence happening in the ſame county where theſe courts are ſitting; for the negative words of the ſtatute are not, that ſuch ſuits ſhall not be brought in any other court, but that they ſhall not be brought in any other county; and the prerogative of theſe high courts ſhall not be reſtrained without expreſs words. Cro. Jac. 178. Hob. 184. 1 Salk. 373.

But where the offence is in a different county, ſuch ſuits in theſe, or any other cou.ts out of the proper county, ſeem to be within the expreſs words of the ſtatute. Hob. 184, 327. Cro. Jac. 85.

Yet it hath been doubted, whether an action of debt, or information in the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, were not to be conſtrued to be out of the meaning of the ſtatute; but it ſeems to be now ſettled, in the conſtruction of the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. cap. 4. which provides, that no action of debt or information, or other ſuit whatever, can be brought in any court of Weſtminſter-Hall on any penal ſtatute, made before the ſaid ſtatute of 21 Jac. 1. for any offence therein excepted, for which the offender may be proſecuted in the country, unleſs ſuch offence ſhall be committed in the ſame county in which the court ſhall ſit. 1 Sid. 303. 1 Keb. 584. 2 Lev. 204. 1 Salk. 372. 5 Mod. 425.

But theſe ſtatutes hinder not the removal of any indictment into the King's Bench by certiorari, after which it may be tried there, or in the county by niſi prius 1 Jon. 193.

It hath been held, that quarter ſeſſions of boroughs may receive indictments on the 5 Eliz. as well as thoſe of the county at large, in that there is no danger of oppreſſion, becauſe a certiorari lies. 6 Mod. 220. 1 Salk. 317.

The plaintiff, in an action on this ſtatute 5 Eliz. muſt alledge in his declaration, that the defendant did not uſe the trade at the time of making the ſtatute; for tho' it cannot be preſumed that he did, after ſuch a length of time, yet as it is, the ſtatute makes him liable, and ſubjects him to a penalty; the proſecutor muſt ſhew that he has tranſgreſſed the law, and that he is intitled to his action. 1 Sid. 302.

It has been held, that an indictment againſt two or more, for following a joint-trade, without having ſerved a ſeven years apprenticeſhip required by the ſtatute, is naught, in that it would be abſurd to charge them jointly, becauſe the offence of each defendant ariſes from the defect peculiar to himſelf. 1 Rol. Abr. 8. 5 Mod. 180. 1 Salk. 382.

5. Of aſſigning apprentices, making them free, and how to be taken care of if their maſters happen to die.

The placing out an apprentice to a particular perſon, ariſes from an eſteem, and a good opinion of the party to whom he is ſo committed; that he will not only inſtruct him in his trade or calling, but will alſo be careful of his health and ſafety; and therefore the law has made it ſuch a perſonal truſt or confidence, which the maſter cannot aſſign, or transfer over to another; he muſt alſo have him under his own care and inſpection, and cannot ſend him abroad, tho' under the pretence of improvement; unleſs by expreſs agreement, and unleſs the nature of his buſineſs requires it, and implies ſuch a power as that of a merchant-adventurer, ſailor, &c. are ſaid to do; therefore it hath been adjudged, that a ſurgeon ſending his apprentice a voyage to the Eaſt-Indies, tho' in company with other ſurgeons, and the better to inſtruct him in the art of ſurgery, was a breach of his covenant, whereby he bound himſelf to retain, teach, keep and employ the ſaid apprentice in his own houſe and ſervice, &c. Hob. 134.

But by the cuſtom of London, a freeman of London may turn over his apprentice to another maſter, being a freeman; and ſuch ſecond maſter ſhall have the ſame benefit of the apprentice's covenants, as ſhall the apprentice of the covenants on the ſide of the maſter, as if he had been originally bound to him. March 3. 1 Keb. 250.

But it hath been held, that tho' juſtices of peace have a juriſdiction of diſcharging apprentices, an may bind them to other maſters, that they cannot turn them over; and therefore an order that an apprentice, whoſe maſter was dead, ſhould ſerve the remainder of his time with his maſter's widow's ſecond huſband, was quaſhed; becauſe the juſtices have nothing to do about turning over an apprentice; and that tho' he applied to them, that could not give them a juriſdiction. Comb. 324.

Order returned on a certiorari: It is reſolved by the juſtices at the ſeſſions, where a perſon was bound an apprentice to Barnes by the pariſh officers, and Barnes had aſſigned him to another, that the aſſignment is void, and they directed Barnes to take his apprentice again. But by the court; The ſeſſions had no power to judge of the validity of a deed, or to hinder a man from aſſigning his apprentice; the covenant to provide for him is well performed, if the perſon to whom he is bound aſſigns him to another to provide for him; wherefore the order was quaſhed. Foley 155. Strange 48.

The juriſdiction of the juſtices extends no farther than to compel the maſter to take care of his apprentice; but in what manner he does it, whether in his own houſe or otherwiſe, is nothing to them; but if the aſſignee of the apprentice doth not provide for him, the firſt maſter may be compelled to do it, and he may take his remedy over. Seſſ. Ca. vol. 1. 110.

Wherever by the cuſtom of any town, borough, &c. the ſerving an apprenticeſhip intitles the party to his freedom, the perſons to admit him refuſing, without ſufficient cauſe, may be compelled thereto by mandamus. 1 Sid. 107. 2 Show. 154.

Therefore, whereto a mandamus to the mayor, &c. of Oxford, to admit a perſon to be free of that city, who had ſerved ſeven years apprenticeſhip; to which it was returned, that he put himſelf apprentice ſeven years according to the cuſtom, and that he covenanted to ſerve ſeven years, and not to marry within the time, and that within the firſt two years he married, and ſo broke his covenant; and that his maſter accepted of him to ſerve for the reſidue of the time, which he did, but not as an apprentice, but rather as a journeyman; and tho' it was urged, that by his breach of covenant he loſt his right of freedom, yet the court held the contrary; and that tho' an action of covenant might lie, yet that it was no loſs of his freedom; and therefore awarded a peremptory mandamus to admit him. 1 Lev. 91. 1 Sid. 107. 1 Keb. 458, 470, 659.

So where a mandamus to the mayor, &c. of Lincoln, to admit A. to his freedom, he having ſerved an apprenticeſhip there; and the mayor returned, that A. (being a quaker) refuſed to take the uſual oath, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid city, but offered to take the ſolemn affirmation and declaration; and the court held this ſufficient to intitle him to his freedom, within the ſtatute 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 34. 5 Mod. 402.

Alſo it is frequent for maſters to bind themſelves to make their apprentices free at the end of their time, which they perform according to their covenants. 6 Mod. 227, 260.

It ſeems agreed, that if a man be bound to inſtruct an apprentice in a trade for ſeven years, and the maſter dies, that the condition is diſpenſed with, being a thing perſonal; but if he be bound further, that in the mean time he will find him in meat, drink, and cloathing and other neceſſaries, here the death of the maſter doth not diſpenſe with the condition, but his executors ſhall be bound to perform it, as far as they have aſſets. 1 Sid. 216. 1 Keb. 761, 820. 1 Lev. 177.

But if a perſon is bound apprentice by a juſtice of peace, and the maſter happens to die before the term expired, the juſtices have no power to oblige his executor, by their order, to receive ſuch apprentice and maintain him; for by this method the executor is deprived of the liberty of pleading plene adminiſtravit, which he may do, in caſe covenant be brought againſt him, and muſt maintain the apprentice, whether he hath aſſets or not. Carth. 231. 1 Salk. 66. 1 Show. 405.

But it is ſaid, that in this caſe of the maſter's dying, by the cuſtom of London the executor muſt put the apprentice to another maſter of the ſame trade. 1 Salk. 66. Per. Holt. Ch. J.

In debt on bond, conditioned for Matthias Anderſon's performance of the covenants in an indenture of apprenticeſhip, whereby he was bound to the plaintiff's teſtator, who was a mariner: the defendant pleaded, that Anderſon ſerved faithfully to the death of the teſtator: the plaintiff replied, that ſince the death of the teſtator, Anderſon had abſented from her ſervice: to which there was a demurrer. And after argument at bar, Lee Ch. J. delivered the reſolution of the court, viz. that they were all of opinion, the defendant ſhould have judgment, and that the executrix could maintain no ſuch action; the binding was to the man, to learn his art, and ſerve him, without any mention of executrix. And as the words are confined, ſo is the nature of the contract; for it is fiduciary, and the apprentice is bound from a perſonal knowledge of the integrity and ability of the maſter. H. 8 Ann. Horne and Blake. An award that an apprentice ſhould be aſſigned, was held void; unleſs there was a cuſtom, or the concurrence of the apprentice. And they held, it was not material, that according to Cro. Eliz. 553. the aſſets were liable on the maſter's covenant to maintain. Therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Strange 1266.

Note, the words in Cro. Eliz. 553 are theſe: A covenant lies againſt an executor in every caſe, altho' he be not named; unleſs it be ſuch a covenant as is to be performed by the perſon of the teſtator, which they cannot perform.

But in the caſe of K. and Eaſt-Bridgeford, in Trin. 12 Geo. 2. upon a ſpecial order it was ſtated, that an apprentice upon the death of his maſter, was with his own conſent turned over by the widow (who had taken no adminiſtration) to another maſter whom he ſerved. And the court held it a good ſettlement in the pariſh, within the reaſon of thoſe caſes, where an apprentice was bound to a perſon in one pariſh, but with the conſent of his maſter ſerved with another perſon in another pariſh, and there gained a ſettlement. Strange 1155.

6. Of

6. Of offences committed by apprentices.

At Common law, a ſervant or apprentice, without any regard to age, may be guilty of felony in felonioufly taking away the goods of their maſter, tho' they were goods under their charge, as a ſhepherd, butler, &c. and may this day for any ſuch offence be indicted, as for felony at Common law; but at Common law, if a man had delivered goods to his ſervant to keep, or carry for him, and he carried them away animo furandi; this was conſidered only a breach of truſt, but not felony. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 505, 666.

But now by the ſtatute of 21 H. 8. cap. 7. it is enacted, "That all and ſingular ſervants, to whom any caſkets, jewels, money, goods or chattles by his or their maſters or miſtreſſes ſhall from henceforth be delivered to keep, that if any ſuch ſervant or ſervants withdraw themſelves from their maſters or miſtreſſes, and go away with caſkets, jewels, money, goods or chattles, or any part thereof, to the intent to ſteal the ſame, and defraud his or their maſters or miſtreſſes thereof, contrary to the truſt and confidence to him or them put by his or their maſters or miſtreſſes, or elſe being in the ſervice of his or their maſters or miſtreſſes, without any aſſent or commandment of his maſter or miſtreſs, imbezil the ſame caſkets, jewels, money, goods or chattles or any part thereof, or otherwiſe convert the ſame to his own uſe, with like purpoſe to ſteal it; that if the ſaid caſket, jewel, money, goods or chattles, that any ſuch ſervant ſhall go away with, or which he ſhall imbezil, with purpoſe to ſteal as aforeſaid, be of the value 40*l.* or above, that then the ſame falſe, fraudulent, or untrue act and demeanor ſhall from henceforth be deemed and adjudged felony, &c. provided it extend not to apprentices, nor to any perſon under the age of eighteen years; but every ſuch apprentice, or perſon within that age doing that act, ſhall be, and ſtand in the like caſe, as they were before the making this act.

By the act of 27 H. 8. cap. 17. Clergy was taken away in this caſe, if the indictment were laid ſpecially upon the act of 21 H. 8. and purſuant to the ſame, and by the act 28 H. 8. cap. 2. this act of 21 H. 8. was made perpetual; but by the act of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 12. theſe acts were both repealed; but again, by the act of 5 Eliz. cap. 10. this act of 27 H. 8. was re-enacted and revived; but it did not revive the act of 27 H. 8. for taking away clergy. But now by 12 Ann. cap. 7. clergy in ſuch caſe is taken from facts committed in any houſe or out-houſe, except as to apprentices under the age of fifteen years robbing their maſters 1 Hale's P. C. 666, 667.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute the following opinions have been holden.

1. That it extends only to ſuch as were ſervants to the owner of the goods, both at the time they were delivered, and alſo at the time when they were ſtolen. 1 Haw. P. C. 92.

2. That it is ſtrictly confined to ſuch goods as are delivered to keep; and therefore that a receiver, who having received his maſter's rents runs away with them, or a ſervant, who being intruſted to ſell goods, or to receive money due on a bond, ſells the goods, &c. and departs with the money, is not within the ſtatute; but that a ſervant who receives his maſter's goods from another ſervant, to keep for the maſter, is as much guilty as if he had received them from the maſter's own hands; becauſe ſuch a delivery is looked upon as a delivery by the maſter. Dyer 5. pl. 2, 3. 3 Inſt. 105. 1 Hawk. P. C. 92.

3. That it includes not the waſting or conſuming of goods, howſoever willful it may be; nor the taking away of an obligation, or another bare choſe in action. 1 Hawk. P. C. 92.

4. That it extends not to the taking of ſuch things, whereof the actual property is not in the maſter at the time; and therefore, that if a ſervant having money or corn, &c. delivered to him, melt down the money of his own head, without the command of his maſter, into a piece of plate, or turn the corn into malt, and then run away with them, that he is not within the ſtatute; becauſe the property of theſe things is ſo far changed, by altering them in ſuch a manner, that they cannot be known again, and the maſter cannot afterwards take them, without being a treſpaſſer; but it is agreed, that if a ſervant make a ſuit of clothes of cloth, or a pair of ſhoes of leather, delivered to him by the maſter, and then he run away with them, that he is within the ſtatute; becauſe the property is no way altered; and even in the firſt caſe Hawkins ſeems to be of opinion, that the taking of the plate and malt is within the ſtatute; and the whole act of the ſervant, taken together, ſhould be deemed a converſion of the maſter's goods to his own uſe, with an intent to ſteal them, which brings it within the expreſs letter of the ſtatute; and on which foundation it hath been reſolved, that a ſervant who changes his maſter's money from ſilver to gold, and then runs away with it, is within the ſtatute. Crompt. 50. Dalt. c. 102. 1 Hawk. P. C. 92.

7. Settlement of apprentices.

By ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. On complaint by the churchwardens or overſeers within 40 days after any perſon ſhall come to ſettle in any pariſh, on any tenement, under 10*l.* a year; two juſtices (one of whom to be of the quorum) may remove him to the place where he was laſt legally ſettled, either as a native, houſholder, ſojourner, apprentice or ſervant, for the ſpace of 40 days at the leaſt.

By the ſtat. 1 Jac. 2. c. 17. the ſaid 40 days ſhall be reckoned not from the time of his coming to inhabit, but from the time of his delivering notice in writing of the houſe of his abode, and the number of his family, to one of the churchwardens or overſeers of the poor of the pariſh to which they ſhall remove.

And by the ſaid ſtatute of 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 11. ſect. 8. if any perſon ſhall be bound an apprentice by indenture, and inhabit in any town or pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall be adjudged a good ſettlement, though no ſuch notice in writing be delivered and publiſhed.

By ſtatute 12 Ann. ſt. 1. c. 18. ſect. 2. if any perſon ſhall be an apprentice bound by indenture, to any perſon reſiding under a certificate, in any pariſh, townſhip, or place, and not afterwards having gained a legal ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, townſhip or place; ſuch apprentice, by virtue of ſuch apprenticeſhip, indenture or binding, ſhall not gain any ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, townſhip or place; but every ſuch apprentice ſhall have his ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, townſhip, or place, as if he had not been bound apprentice.

A. puts B. apprentice to C. but B. is no party to the deed; B. continued a year with C. adjudged, that this makes no ſettlement in the pariſh C. is of; becauſe 'twas no ſervice, and B. was no more than a boarder there for his education, which is no ſervice to make a ſettlement. 2 Salk. 479.

Miſſerden ſent J. H. his wife and children to Pauſwick, and the ſeſſions on the appeal diſcharged the order; then the ſame perſons were ſent by another order to Brimſfield, as the place of their birth; Brimsfield appealed, and the ſeſſions order recited the whole matter of fact; which was, that J. H. was an apprentice by deed, to one J. S. a butcher, and there was a parol agreement to live one fortnight at his father's houſe, and another fortnight at his maſter's. The order took notice, that he did not live 40 days at one time in one place, but concluded, that he was ſettled at Pauſwick, different to the former ſeſſions order. It was moved to quaſh the ſeſſions order, it being on an erroneous notion, and the concluſion will not warrant the premiſſes; for the ſtatute ſays there muſt be an inhabitancy as well as an apprenticeſhip for 40 days at leaſt; the court was of opinion to quaſh the ſeſſions order, and a rule was made to ſhew cauſe the firſt day of the next term. Ca. of Settlements 63. pl. 85.

A poor child being bound apprentice at A. was aſſigned over to another maſter that lived in B. held he ſhould gain a ſettlement at B. where his ſecond maſter lived. 1 Salk. 68. pl. 7. Mich. 13. W. 3. B. R. Caſtor v. Aicles pariſh.

The ſon was bound an apprentice to his father, and the father gave up his indenture to the ſon, and bound him out to a ſervice into another pariſh for a year, where he ſerved, but did not cancel the indenture, and becoming poor, the juſtices ordered him laſt legally ſettled in the pariſh where the father lived, becauſe the indenture being ſtill in force, his apprenticeſhip continued; per cur. The indenture not being cancelled, the obligation of the apprentice continues; and if the father ſhould get the indenture into his hands again uncancelled, and ſue the ſon thereupon, the aforeſaid agreement would not be a good plea for the ſon. 6 Mod. 190, 191.

Apprentice may gain a ſettlement by ſerving a lodger, tho' the maſter has no ſettlement there. 2 Salk. 553. pl. 21. Hil. 4 Ann. B. R. Pariſh of St. Bride's v. St. Saviour's.

B. was bound apprentice for four years to J. S. and lived out theſe four years at St. Bride's with him; J. S. was only a lodger, and had no ſettlement there, and the court held the apprentice was well ſettled at St. Bride's; for he was not a perſon removable, nor does his ſettlement depend on his maſter, as that of a wife on her huſband for a ſettlement, but he gains a ſettlement for himſelf within 14 Car. 2. by 40 days inhabitation; and ſo of a hired ſervant. 2 Salk. 533.

Where a perſon is bound apprentice by indenture, wherever this apprentice continues 40 days in the ſervice of his maſter or miſtreſs, there ſuch apprentice gains a ſettlement; and where any perſon ſerves the laſt 40 days of his apprenticeſhip, that is the place of his laſt legal ſettlement; and ſo it is likewiſe of an hired ſervant. Ca. of Settlements 58.

A gardener took an apprentice, but having no work for him, made an agreement with a man who lived in another pariſh, that his apprentice ſhould work with him for wages, which he accordingly did, and the maſter had the wages. Powis J. was of opinion at Dorcheſter aſſizes, Lent 1709, that this apprentice did not gain a ſettlement by this ſervice in the pariſh where he worked; this matter coming in queſtion before him upon a caſe ſtated. 3 Vin. 29. cites *MS. A. was bound apprentice to one D. who was an inhabitant and ſettled in All Saints, and there dwelt with him above a year, the man removed to W. and lived there five years, but gained no ſettlement. The queſtion was upon a ſpecial order, whether the apprentice was to be ſettled where he was bound and lived the firſt year with his maſter, or where he lived the laſt five years with his maſter; and per cur. whether the maſter has a ſettlement or not, the apprentice gains a ſettlement by his ſervice. 3 Vin. 29. *MS. A perſon was bound apprentice to a cobler, who lived in one pariſh, and his ſtall was in another; the apprentice lived with his father in a third pariſh; and it was held per cur. that he gained no ſettlement as an apprentice. Caſes of Settlements 80. pl. 106. Paſch. 1717. the pariſh of St. Olave Jury's caſe.

One G. was an apprentice to J. S. a ſeafaring man; who lived in the pariſh of St. Olave Jury; the apprentice lived with his maſter three months, but always on ſhip board out of the pariſh. Prat J. ſaid it does not appear that he was ſent by his maſter to watch on ſhip board; if it had, it had been on his maſter's buſineſs, and continuing in his ſervice, and doing his duty. The court adjudged he was not ſettled in the pariſh; for there muſt not only be an apprenticeſhip, but a reſidency. And a man is deemed to be reſident where he lodges. Caſes of Settlements 79. pl. 105.

One born in A. is put apprentice in B. where he ſerved two years, and then his maſter died, when he went back to A. and married, had children, and died; the wife and children ſhall be ſent back to B. 8 Mod. 169. 9 Geo. 1. St. Giles in Reading v. Everſly Blackwater.

Where one is bound apprentice by indenture, it cannot be diſcharged but by deed, or by ſeſſions, and a hiring after he is bound, or any conſequences ariſing upon ſuch hiring, are intirely void whilſt the indenture ſubſiſts, and till it is defeaſanced; for when an apprentice ſerves 40 days, by virtue of the indenture, he cannot gain another ſettlement, tho' his maſter conſents, becauſe he had a ſettlement by the ſervice under the indenture. Admitted per cur. 8 Mod. 236. Paſch. 10 Geo. Buckington pariſh v. Sevington.

One J. W. was bound apprentice to J. P. of St. John's pariſh in the Devizes, hoſier. The ſaid *J. A. was bound apprentice to B. who lived in St. Olave's, afterwards A. by his maſter's conſent, lived with another perſon in Allhallows. And per cur. He gained a ſettlement in the laſt place; for a perſon may ſerve his maſter in another place or pariſh, and although he ſerves another man, yet it is by conſent of his maſter, and the benefit accrues to the maſter. Caſes of Settlements 114. pl. 153. The pariſh of St. Olaves Southwark v. Allhallows.

A perſon was bound apprentice to a gentleman, who made uſe of him as his huntſmen, and lived with him three quarters of a year, and then ran away; per cur. Here is a living for 40 days, and ſo the perſon gains a ſettlement. It was objected, that he ſerved a gentleman, and conſequently of no trade; but per cur. He is put as an apprentice, and the maſter may make uſe of him in what manner he pleaſes, and therefore held a ſettlement accordingly. Caſes of Settlements 122. pl. 166. Trin. 1726. The King v. The inhabitants of Whitchurch.

Upon the appeal of St. George's againſt an order of two juſtices, whereby Alice Wheeler, a ſingle woman, who was likely to become chargeable to St. James's, Weſtminſter, was removed from thence to St. George's, as the place of her laſt legal ſettlement; and the ſeſſions ſtate the matter ſpecially, and the ſaid A. W. was bound by indenture a pariſh apprentice in the ſaid pariſh of St. George, to George Leſter, where ſhe lived and gained a ſettlement, by ſerving the ſpace of 40 days under the ſaid indenture; and that afterwards, and during the time of her apprenticeſhip, ſhe was by parol agreement hired out by the ſaid maſter G. L. to one J. Hall in the pariſh of St. Mary le Bone, and there lived and lodged above 40 days, viz. for the ſpace of one year and upwards, the ſaid apprenticeſhip continuing; that the ſaid G. L. her maſter received her wages from the ſaid J. H. and found her clothes; and on debate the queſtion was, whether the ſaid A. W. by her reſidence above 40 days in St. Mary le Bone, Bone, gained a ſettlement in that pariſh or not? The ſeſſions held, that the laſt ſervice gained her no ſettlement, and conſequently ſhe was ſettled at St. George's. But the court quaſhed the order, being of opinion, that there was no difference between the maſter hiring of her out, and her own act; and that it was like the caſe of a binding to A. and ſerving B. where it has been always held to be a ſettlement in B's pariſh. So the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed. Seſſ. Ca. vol. 2. caſe 138. 2 Strange 1001. Mich. 8 Geo. 2.

Upon a ſpecial order of ſeſſions the caſe was ſtated, that an apprentice was bound to A. in one pariſh, but by agreement ſerved B. in another pariſh, and the ſeſſions ſettled him with B. and by the court; He gains a ſettlement in the laſt place; for a perſon may ſerve his maſter in another pariſh or place; and altho' he ſerves another man, yet it is by conſent of his maſter, and the benefit accrues to his maſter. Stran. 554. Caſes of S. 153. Trin. 9. Geo. 1. Between the pariſhes of Allhallows on the Wall and St. Olave in Surry.

Parker Ch. J. delivered the reſolution of the court: This is an order for the removal of one Ferrer from the pariſh of Holy Trinity to Shoreditch: by which it appears, that Ferrer was bound an apprentice to one Truby with intent that he ſhould ſerve Green; which he did for 3 years. And it has been inſiſted, that he being bound to Truby, who lives in Trinity pariſh, his ſettlement is there, and not in Shoreditch where his ſervice was; but we are of opinion, the juſtices have done right in ſending him to Shoreditch, where the ſervice actually was. It is the ſame thing as if Truby had turned him over to Green, in which caſe there would have been no queſtion but he had gained a ſettlement in Green's pariſh. If the maſter removes out of one pariſh into another, the apprentice gains a ſettlement if he lives there forty days; the turning over an apprentice is like the ſigning any deed; in this caſe Truby was only a truſtee. There is a great deal of difference between apprentices and other ſervants; for apprentices are not preſumed to become chargeable, becauſe the trade and miſtery they learn is their eſtate; therefore the order muſt be confirmed. Strange 10. Mich. 3 Geo. 1. Pariſhes of Holy Trinity and Shoreditch.

Upon a ſpecial order the caſe was ſtated, that A was bound an apprentice, and ſerved and inhabited two years, till a commiſſion of bankruptcy was taken out againſt the maſter, at which time the apprentice, without having the indenture delivered up, or any diſcharge at the ſeſſions, hires himſelf as a common ſervant into another pariſh and ſerved a year. The ſeſſions adjudged this to be no diſſolution of the apprenticeſhip, and conſequently, that the ſettlement of the apprentice was in the firſt pariſh where he was bound. And by the court, their judgment is right. There could be no diſſolution of the contract, unleſs the indenture had been delivered up, or the ſeſſions had diſcharged him; as no doubt they would have done, if they had been applied to; and then, as the firſt contract had continuance, the apprentice had no power to hire himſelf; and the ſervice afterwards for a year was void, as to any pretence of giving him a ſettlement. That ſervice muſt be taken as a ſervice to the maſter, who by law was intitled to the wages, and therefore the order muſt be confirmed. Strange 582. Eaſt. 10 Geo. 1.

It was ſtated, that an apprentice was bound in the pariſh of A. and lived there, off and on, for three quarters of a year. Exception was taken, that it was no ſettlement, ſince he might not inhabit forty days together. But by the court: That is not neceſſary; and the order for making it a ſettlement was confirmed. Strange 579. Hill. 10 Geo. 1. The King againſt The inhabitants of Ciranceſter.

Upon a ſpecial order of ſettlement it was ſtated, that a poor boy was bound out apprentice by indenture, and the maſter had 20*s.* paid him; and he ſerved three years; but that the maſter never paid the duty of 6*d.* in the pound according to 8 Ann. c. 9. ſect. 39. which ſays, that if the duty be not paid, the indenture ſhall be void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever. The caſe was referred to Forteſcue juſtice, who went the circuit; and he held it a ſettlement, becauſe the maſter had ſix months to pay the duty in, ſo that during thoſe ſix months a ſettlement was gained; and it ſhould not be in the power of the maſter to defeat it by matter ex poſt facto; and purſuant to this opinion, the ſeſſions held it a ſettlement. But upon debate in B. R. the order was quaſhed; for they ſaid, it was making the indenture good to one purpoſe, when the act of parliament had made it void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever; and tho' it was a hard caſe, he could not break through the poſitive words of the act. Str. 903. Eaſt. 4 Geo. 2. Between the pariſhes of Curenden and Layland in Lancaſhire.

Upon a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that James Blyth in 1706, was put apprentice to St. Peter's for four years by indenture, and that he lived there, and ſerved the time; but inaſmuch as he was not bound for ſeven years, as 5 Eliz. c. 4. requires, the ſeſſions adjudged it no ſettlement; and the 41ſt ſection of the ſtatute was inſiſted on to ſupport the order, which declares, "That all indentures, covenants and bargains, of or for the having or taking any apprentice, otherwiſe to be made or taken, than is by that ſtatute ordained, ſhall be clearly void in law to all intents and purpoſes;" and one of the former regulations is that the binding ſhall be for ſeven years. And the caſe of Curenden and Layland [the preceeding caſe] was relied on, where the apprenticeſhip was for ſeven years, but the indentures never ſtampt, and held to be no ſettlement. But notwithſtanding this, the court was of opinion, there was a ſettlement, and quaſhed the order. It appears, that between the 26th and 41ſt ſections, there are many regulations, what ſort of perſons ſhall take apprentices, and what not; which are never regarded; and it would be of miſchievous conſequence now to refer this laſt ſection back to all the reſt. They ſaid the word void muſt be conſtrued voidable; as on the ſtatute Weſt. 2. finis ipſo jure ſit nullus, it is yet a diſcontinuance. Hob. 166. and on 23 H. 6. c. 10. You muſt plead ſpecially, and cannot avoid a bail bond on non eſt factum. Here the indenture has had its effect, and neither maſter nor ſervant has taken advantage of the objection; and as to the caſe of Curenden and Layland, on the 8 Ann. c. 9. there were words prohibiting the giving the indenture in evidence; and admitting improper evidence is always a ground to quaſh. Stra. 1066. Mich. 10 Geo. 2. Between the pariſhes of St. Nicholas and St. Peter in Ipſwich.

A. is bound to B. a cobler, who keeps a ſtall in one pariſh, lies in another, and the boy in a third; and the ſeſſions adjudged the ſettlement where the ſtall is, becauſe the ſervice is there. By the court; The boy has gained no ſettlement in either of the three pariſhes; for the ſtall is not ſufficient to give him one, the maſter lying in another pariſh; order quaſhed. Stra. 51. Eaſt. 3. Geo. 1. The King againſt The inhabitants of St. Olave Jury.

A. is bound apprentice to a ſeafaring man, and ſerved him for a quarter of a year in the day-time on land, in the pariſh of St. Mary Colechurch, but lay every night on ſhip-board in Radcliff; but the juſtices apprehending the ſettlement to be where the ſervice was, ſend him thither. Corbit moved to quaſh this order, and likened it to the caſe of the cobler laſt mentioned. Chief Juſtice: A man properly inhabits where he lies; as in the caſe where the houſe is in two leets, he is to be ſummoned to that in which his bed is; order quaſhed. Strange 60. Trin. 3 Geo. 1. Pariſhes of St. Mary Colechurch and Radcliff.

Upon a ſpecial order it was ſtated, that the pauper was bound to a certificate-man in Tenterden, and after living with him there two years, was by him aſſigned over to a pariſhioner of Lidd, with whom he inhabited and ſerved the remainder of the ſeven years. And the queſtion aroſe on 12 Ann. ſt. 1. c. 18. which ſays, the apprentice of a certificate-man ſhall gain no ſettlement, whether the aſſignment could give him one; and the court were all of opinion, he had gained a ſettlement in Lidd; for the act had not made the binding void, but has only taken away one of the conſequences of ſuch binding for the ſake of the certificated pariſh. It never intended to meddle with the caſe of a legal pariſhioner's apprentice, and when once there is an aſſignment to ſuch an one, it is the ſame as if it it had been an original binding; the true conſtruction of the ſtatute is, that in reſpect to the certificated pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall give no ſettlement. Str. 1147. Mich. 14 Geo. 2. The King againſt The inhabitants of Petham.

Upon a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the caſe was ſtated for the opinion of the court; that in 1702 one Richard Plower was bound apprentice to John Emerton, who was legally ſettled in Ivinghoe; that he ſerved part of his time there, and then the maſter went with all his family as a certificate-man to Stone-Bridge, where he purchaſed an eſtate of the value of 60l. and after ſuch purchaſe the apprentice lived with him ſix months till the apprenticeſhip expired; and becauſe the ſtatute 12 Ann. c. 18. provides that the apprentice of a certificate-man ſhall gain no ſettlement in the pariſh to which the maſter goes by certificate; therefore the judges adjudged the ſettlement at Ivinghoe, where the binding and great part of the ſervice was. And by the court, The order muſt be quaſhed; for as the apprenticeſhip expired in 1709, the ſtatute 12 Ann. is out of the caſe, not being made with any retroſpect; and then the caſe is no more, than that an apprentice of a certificate-man lives forty days in Stone-Bridge, which before that ſtatute was enough to gain him a ſettlement; but if this had been a caſe ſince the ſtatute, yet we think the ſettlement would lie in Stone-Bridge, for according to the caſe of Burclear and Eaſtwoodhay, Eaſt. 5 Geo. 1. in B. R. when a certificate-man makes a purchaſe, he immediately ceaſes to be there in nature of a certificate-man, and becomes a ſettled inhabitant; ſo that laying the ſtatute out of the caſe (as we muſt do, it being nothing to the purpoſe) in this view here is a ſervice for ſix months as an apprentice, in a pariſh where the maſter was legally ſettled, which is now more than ſufficient to give a ſettlement to the apprentice. Stra. 265. Hill. 6 Geo. 1. Between the pariſhes of Ivinghoe and Stone-Bridge.

Stat. 31 Geo. 2. c. 11. ſect. 11. Whereas by an act made in the third year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, intitled, An act for the better explanation and ſupplying the defects of the former laws for the ſettlement of the poor, it is enacted, That if any perſon ſhall be bound an apprentice by indenture, and inhabit in any town or pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall be adjudged a good ſettlement; and whereas ſince the making the ſaid act, great numbers of perſons having been unwarily bound apprentice, by certain deeds, writings or contracts, not indented, by which binding many of them have ſuffered great loſs and damage, on account of their having been refuſed a ſettlement in ſuch town or pariſh, where they have been ſo bound and reſided forty days, and have been removed to the pariſh or place where their laſt legal ſettlement was before ſuch apprenticeſhip, where they had no encouragement to exerciſe their trades, or opportunity to gain a livelihood by their ſaid trades to which they were ſo bound apprentices: for relief therefore of ſuch apprentices, and for preventing the like miſchief for the future; Be it enacted, &c. That no perſon who ſhall have been an apprentice, or who ſhall hereafter be bound an apprentice by any deed, writing, or contract, not indented, being firſt legally ſtampt, ſhall be liable to be removed from the town, pariſh or place, where he or ſhe ſhall have been ſo bound an apprentice and reſident forty days, by virtue of any order of removal, granted by two juſtices of the peace of any county, riding, diviſion, city, town corporate or place; or by virtue of any order of the juſtices, at their general or quarter ſeſſions, by reaſon, or on account of ſuch deed, writing, or contract not being indented only.

8. Pleadings in actions brought by and againſt maſters and apprentices.

Action on the caſe by A. againſt B. for inticing his apprentice (A. being a tradeſman in London) to depart from his ſervice for ſix days, and divers times to take money out of the box of the ſhop, and play at cards with B. and that B. cozen'd the apprentice: the court thought A. might well have an action for the departure, and loſing the money is a damage to A. and the cozenage is but an aggravation of the offence, and for that the apprentice himſelf only ſhall have an action; but in this caſe, becauſe the damages were intire with reſpect to the cozenage as well as to the departure, A. could not have judgment by the better opinion of the court. Noy 105.

Indictment for cauſing an apprentice to abſent himſelf from his maſter, and keeping and detaining him in that abſence. It was moved to quaſh it, becauſe not a thing of a publick nature, being no other than an action on the caſe; but the court ſaid, it was a great offence, and would not quaſh it; but left the party to demur if he would. 12 Mod. 195.

An indictment was for procuring an apprentice to depart unlawfully from his maſter, and ſeducing him to take and carry away his maſter's goods. The defendant was found guilty; and it was moved that this was only a private injury, for which caſe lies, and not in its nature publick to maintain an indictment; beſides, no fact is laid to be done in purſuance of this inticing, and as to the carrying away the goods, no venue is laid where the goods were taken away; and judgment was arreſted. 1 Salk. 380.

A common action of treſpaſs will not lie for inticing an apprentice or ſervant from his maſter; but if one will take away my apprentice or ſervant with force, treſpaſs will lie for the maſter, declaring upon the force, per quod ſervitium amiſit; per tot. cur'. 6 Mod. 182.

If a man knows that an apprentice ran away from his maſter, and he keeps and employs him, the proper remedy is to bring an action for ſo much money paid to the plaintiff's apprentice in wrong of the plaintiff; per the Ch. J. Barnard. Rep. in B. R. Paſch. 2 Geo. 2. at the ſittings at Guildhall, Aynſworth v. Wood.

One of the age of ſixteen years put himſelf apprentice in London by indenture, with the uſual covenants, and afterwards ran away with his maſter's money, whereupon he brought an action of covenant: the defendant pleaded nonage; the plaintiff replied, that by the cuſtom of London an infant may bind himſelf apprentice, and in ſuch covenants as are comprized in this indenture, and that he ſhould be bound, &c. as if he was at full age, &c. and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that this cuſtom is pleadable only in the court of London, and not in the Common Pleas, or elſewhere; but adjudged otherwiſe. Moor 135.

Covenant againſt the defendant, being an apprentice, for imbezilling his maſter's goods: the defendant pleaded infancy when he became bound; the plaintiff replied, that the cuſtom of London is, that one may bind himſelf apprentice at the age of fourteen years, &c. the defendant rejoined, that the cuſtom is, that if one may bind himſelf apprentice at that age, and the indenture is inrolled in Guildhall, then it ſhall bind, and traverſed the cuſtom as alledged by the plaintiff: Upon which they were at iſſue, and the court ſent to the lord mayor and aldermen, who certified by the mouth of their recorder, that the cuſtom was as the plaintiff had declared. Palm. 361.

Error of a judgment upon the ſtatute for uſing a trade, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip, &c. the action was brought in Newbury, and the error aſſigned was, that it ought to be brought in one of the courts at Weſtminſter; and for that cauſe the judgment was reverſed. Style 383.

Covenant upon an indenture of an apprentice, wherein he bound himſelf to ſerve the plaintiff for ſeven years; the plaintiff ſet forth the cuſtom of London, that any perſon above fourteen and under twenty-one, and unmarried, might bind himſelf apprentice, &c. according to the cuſtom, and that the maſter might have tale remedium againſt him, as if he had been twenty-one, and alledges, that the defendant did depart from his ſervice per quod he loſt his ſervice for that term, which was not yet expired: the defendant pleaded a frivolous plea; and upon a demurrer, it was adjudged, that tho' ſuch a covenant would not bind an infant, either at Common law, or by the ſtatute 5 Eliz. yet by cuſtom it ſhall bind him; 'tis true, here the plaintiff declared for the loſs of the defendant's ſervice for ſeven years, part of which was yet to come, which had been nought after a verdict, but 'tis good upon a demurrer, becauſe the plaintiff may take damages for the departure only, and not for the loſs of the ſervice during that time. 1 Mod. 271.

Covenant by an apprentice, for that the defendant's teſtator had covenanted to inſtruct him (the plaintiff) in the art of a ſadler for ſeven years, and to find him in meat and drink during that term, and aſſigned the breach, for that after the death of the teſtator, the defendant, who was his executor, turned him (the plaintiff) out of doors, and out of his ſervice, et ſic did not find him meat and drink; and upon demurrer, the court inclined at firſt, that et ſic was not a ſufficient averment of the breach of covenant; but afterwards they held et ſic to be only matter of form, and that the apprentice remains to the executor; for tho' he might not inſtruct him, he muſt find him in meat and drink. 1 Sid. 216.

The plaintiff declared upon an indenture of apprenticeſhip; the defendant pleaded, that at the time of the executing the ſaid indenture he was an infant; the plaintiff replies, that by the cuſtom of the city of London, if one under age binds himſelf apprentice, it ſhall oblige him; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that it was ill, becauſe a departure from the declaration, for that is at Common law, and by the replication he hath enabled himſelf by a cuſtom; and ſo is the abbot of Bokefaſt's caſe, Keilw. 75. B. but adjudged no departure, for the action is founded on a covenant, and in the replication he only anſwers the diſability in the plea. Raym. 16.

Covenant by an infant per guardianum, for that he being apprentice to the defendant by indenture, he did not keep, maintain and teach him the trade of a woollen-draper, as he ought by his covenant, but turned him away: The defendant pleaded an order of ſeſſions, by which he was diſcharged from the plaintiff for his diſorderly living, and that the order was inrolled; and upon demurrer to the plea, it was held, that the maſter might be diſcharged from his apprentice by an order of ſeſſions; but it was a queſtion, whether he ought firſt to make application to one juſtice, and not to the ſeſſions per ſaltum. 1 Vent. 174.

In Covenant, the plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of London, that time out of mind, every freeman ſolebat to take and apprentice, who by cuſtom, &c. are bound by their covenants faithfully to ſerve; and that he (the plaintiff) took the defendant apprentice by indenture, in which he covenanted to ſerve ſeven years, which he had not done; upon which they were at iſſue, and the plaintiff had a verdict: It was inſiſted in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, becauſe it was in the ſolet alone, when it ought to be in the debet and ſolet; for if he is bound to ſerve, it muſt be by the cuſtom, becauſe he is an infant; and if by the cuſtom, then it muſt be debet & ſolet; but adjudged, that he is bound by the covenant, and that the cuſtom is only inducement. 1 Lev. 12.

The teſtator covenanted to teach an apprentice his trade; and in an action of covenant againſt his executor, it was inſiſted, after a verdict for the plaintiff, that the covenant was perſonal, and did not oblige the executor; but adjudged, that it did, and if the executor is not of the ſame trade, he ought to provide another maſter, who is. 1 Lev. 176.

In debt on apprentice's bond, that if apprentice ſhould imbezil, &c. and if within twenty days after notice given thereof to defendant and one A. and proof to them made, &c. ſhewing to defendant and A. a confeſſion under hand of the apprentice is not proof ſufficient, the apprentice being not fide dignus, and notice and proof ought to be given them both together, and not to one at one time, and the other at another time; plaintiff ſhould ſhew in what place he became apprentice, and that he was ſuch a perſon as might be apprentice by 5 Eliz. and tho' the ſtatute is not pleaded, defendant ſhall take advantage thereof, becauſe it is a general ſtatute. Cro. Eliz. 723. pl. 55.

Bond was given for the truth and honeſty of an apprentice; the maſter pretended goods were loſt, and got the apprentice to ſign a note as for particulars of the goods loſt and the value of them, but let the note ſleep for two or three years without acquainting the obligor with it: A bill was exhibited againſt the maſter to be relieved againſt the bond, and an iſſue was directed on a quantum damnificatus, but the note not to be given in evidence; and afterwards the defendant, the maſter, who was plaintiff in the action at law, being nonſuit upon full evidence, a perpetual injunction was decreed againſt the bond for all breaches paſt before the action brought by the maſter at law. Finch Rep. 47.

A. a father, on putting out his ſon apprentice to B. was bound in a bond of 1000*l. penalty for his ſon's fidelity*; the ſon imbezils 203*l. which A. paid*, but deſired B. to truſt the ſon no more with caſh, or but very ſparingly. About a year after the ſon imbezilled about 300*l.* more, and ſo it ſtood for ſeveral years, when upon account it appeared he had imbezilled 2750*l.* but of this B. gave no notice to A. till two years after apprenticeſhip ended. The maſter of the Rolls decreed A. to pay 1000*l.* over and above the 203*l.* before paid; but Lord Ch. J. King, decreed the payment of ſo much as would make it in all 1000*l.* and the 203*l.* to be as part of it. 2 P. Williams 288.

An indenture of apprenticeſhip.

THIS Indenture made the day and year, &c. Witneſſeth, That A. B. ſon of, &c. Hath of his own free and voluntary will, placed and bound himſelf apprentice unto C. And the maſter his ſaid apprentice the ſaid trade, ſcience, or occupation of, &c. which he now uſeth, with all things thereto belonging, ſhall and will teach and inſtruct, or cauſe to be well and ſufficiently taught and inſtructed, after the beſt way and manner that he can; and ſhall and will alſo find and allow unto his ſaid apprentice, meat, drink, waſhing, lodging and apparel, both linen and woollen, and all other neceſſaries fit and convenient for ſuch an apprentice, during the term aforeſaid; and at the end of the ſaid term ſhall and will give to the ſaid apprentice one new ſuit of apparel, &c.* In Witneſs, &c.

Appropriation, Appropriatio, (from the French approprier, i. e. aptare, accommodare, to appropriate, to adapt, to fit, to apply) properly ſignifieth in the law of England, a ſevering of a benefice eccleſiaſtical, which originally, and in nature is juris divini & in patrimonio nullius, to the proper and perpetual uſe of ſome religious houſe, or dean and chapter, biſhop or college; and the reaſon of the name may be this; becauſe, as parſons are not commonly accounted domini, but uſufructuarii, having no right of fee ſimple; ſo theſe by reaſon of their perpetuity, are accounted owners of the fee ſimple, and therefore are called proprietarii. *Cowell. 1. Of endowing vicarages upon appropriation; and where, and by what acts appropriation is good.

Before the time of Richard 2. it was lawful (as it ſeems) to appropriate the whole fruits of a benefice to an abby or priory, they finding one to ſerve the cure. But it had been an original binding; the true conſtruction of the ſtatute is, that in reſpect to the certificated pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall give no ſettlement. Str. 1147. Mich. 14 Geo. 2. The King againſt The inhabitants of Petham.

Upon a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the caſe was ſtated for the opinion of the court; that in 1702 one Richard Plower was bound apprentice to John Emerton, who was legally ſettled in Ivinghoe; that he ſerved part of his time there, and then the maſter went with all his family as a certificate-man to Stone-Bridge, where he purchaſed an eſtate of the value of 60l. and after ſuch purchaſe the apprentice lived with him ſix months till the apprenticeſhip expired; and becauſe the ſtatute 12 Ann. c. 18. provides that the apprentice of a certificate-man ſhall gain no ſettlement in the pariſh to which the maſter goes by certificate; therefore the judges adjudged the ſettlement at Ivinghoe, where the binding and great part of the ſervice was. And by the court, The order muſt be quaſhed; for as the apprenticeſhip expired in 1709, the ſtatute 12 Ann. is out of the caſe, not being made with any retroſpect; and then the caſe is no more, than that an apprentice of a certificate-man lives forty days in Stone-Bridge, which before that ſtatute was enough to gain him a ſettlement; but if this had been a caſe ſince the ſtatute, yet we think the ſettlement would lie in Stone-Bridge, for according to the caſe of Burclear and Eaſtwoodhay, Eaſt. 5 Geo. 1. in B. R. when a certificate-man makes a purchaſe, he immediately ceaſes to be there in nature of a certificate-man, and becomes a ſettled inhabitant; ſo that laying the ſtatute out of the caſe (as we muſt do, it being nothing to the purpoſe) in this view here is a ſervice for ſix months as an apprentice, in a pariſh where the maſter was legally ſettled, which is now more than ſufficient to give a ſettlement to the apprentice. Stra. 265. Hill. 6 Geo. 1. Between the pariſhes of Ivinghoe and Stone-Bridge.

Stat. 31 Geo. 2. c. 11. ſect. 11. Whereas by an act made in the third year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, intitled, An act for the better explanation and ſupplying the defects of the former laws for the ſettlement of the poor, it is enacted, That if any perſon ſhall be bound an apprentice by indenture, and inhabit in any town or pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall be adjudged a good ſettlement; and whereas ſince the making the ſaid act, great numbers of perſons having been unwarily bound apprentice, by certain deeds, writings or contracts, not indented, by which binding many of them have ſuffered great loſs and damage, on account of their having been refuſed a ſettlement in ſuch town or pariſh, where they have been ſo bound and reſided forty days, and have been removed to the pariſh or place where their laſt legal ſettlement was before ſuch apprenticeſhip, where they had no encouragement to exerciſe their trades, or opportunity to gain a livelihood by their ſaid trades to which they were ſo bound apprentices: for relief therefore of ſuch apprentices, and for preventing the like miſchief for the future; Be it enacted, &c. That no perſon who ſhall have been an apprentice, or who ſhall hereafter be bound an apprentice by any deed, writing, or contract, not indented, being firſt legally ſtampt, ſhall be liable to be removed from the town, pariſh or place, where he or ſhe ſhall have been ſo bound an apprentice and reſident forty days, by virtue of any order of removal, granted by two juſtices of the peace of any county, riding, diviſion, city, town corporate or place; or by virtue of any order of the juſtices, at their general or quarter ſeſſions, by reaſon, or on account of ſuch deed, writing, or contract not being indented only.

8. Pleadings in actions brought by and againſt maſters and apprentices.

Action on the caſe by A. againſt B. for inticing his apprentice (A. being a tradeſman in London) to depart from his ſervice for ſix days, and divers times to take money out of the box of the ſhop, and play at cards with B. and that B. cozen'd the apprentice: the court thought A. might well have an action for the departure, and loſing the money is a damage to A. and the cozenage is but an aggravation of the offence, and for that the apprentice himſelf only ſhall have an action; but in this caſe, becauſe the damages were intire with reſpect to the cozenage as well as to the departure, A. could not have judgment by the better opinion of the court. Noy 105.

Indictment for cauſing an apprentice to abſent himſelf from his maſter, and keeping and detaining him in that abſence. It was moved to quaſh it, becauſe not a thing of a publick nature, being no other than an action on the caſe; but the court ſaid, it was a great offence, and would not quaſh it; but left the party to demur if he would. 12 Mod. 195.

An indictment was for procuring an apprentice to depart unlawfully from his maſter, and ſeducing him to take and carry away his maſter's goods. The defendant was found guilty; and it was moved that this was only a private injury, for which caſe lies, and not in its nature publick to maintain an indictment; beſides, no fact is laid to be done in purſuance of this inticing, and as to the carrying away the goods, no venue is laid where the goods were taken away; and judgment was arreſted. 1 Salk. 380.

A common action of treſpaſs will not lie for inticing an apprentice or ſervant from his maſter; but if one will take away my apprentice or ſervant with force, treſpaſs will lie for the maſter, declaring upon the force, per quod ſervitium amiſit; per tot. cur'. 6 Mod. 182.

If a man knows that an apprentice ran away from his maſter, and he keeps and employs him, the proper remedy is to bring an action for ſo much money paid to the plaintiff's apprentice in wrong of the plaintiff; per the Ch. J. Barnard. Rep. in B. R. Paſch. 2 Geo. 2. at the ſittings at Guildhall, Aynſworth v. Wood.

One of the age of ſixteen years put himſelf apprentice in London by indenture, with the uſual covenants, and afterwards ran away with his maſter's money, whereupon he brought an action of covenant: the defendant pleaded nonage; the plaintiff replied, that by the cuſtom of London an infant may bind himſelf apprentice, and in ſuch covenants as are comprized in this indenture, and that he ſhould be bound, &c. as if he was at full age, &c. and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that this cuſtom is pleadable only in the court of London, and not in the Common Pleas, or elſewhere; but adjudged otherwiſe. Moor 135.

Covenant againſt the defendant, being an apprentice, for imbezilling his maſter's goods: the defendant pleaded infancy when he became bound; the plaintiff replied, that the cuſtom of London is, that one may bind himſelf apprentice at the age of fourteen years, &c. the defendant rejoined, that the cuſtom is, that if one may bind himſelf apprentice at that age, and the indenture is inrolled in Guildhall, then it ſhall bind, and traverſed the cuſtom as alledged by the plaintiff: Upon which they were at iſſue, and the court ſent to the lord mayor and aldermen, who certified by the mouth of their recorder, that the cuſtom was as the plaintiff had declared. Palm. 361.

Error of a judgment upon the ſtatute for uſing a trade, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip, &c. the action was brought in Newbury, and the error aſſigned was, that it ought to be brought in one of the courts at Weſtminſter; and for that cauſe the judgment was reverſed. Style 383.

Covenant upon an indenture of an apprentice, wherein he bound himſelf to ſerve the plaintiff for ſeven years; the plaintiff ſet forth the cuſtom of London, that any perſon above fourteen and under twenty-one, and unmarried, might bind himſelf apprentice, &c. according to the cuſtom, and that the maſter might have tale remedium againſt him, as if he had been twenty-one, and alledges, that the defendant did depart from his ſervice per quod he loſt his ſervice for that term, which was not yet expired: the defendant pleaded a frivolous plea; and upon a demurrer, it was adjudged, that tho' ſuch a covenant would not bind an infant, either at Common law, or by the ſtatute 5 Eliz. yet by cuſtom it ſhall bind him; 'tis true, here the plaintiff declared for the loſs of the defendant's ſervice for ſeven years, part of which was yet to come, which had been nought after a verdict, but 'tis good upon a demurrer, becauſe the plaintiff may take damages for the departure only, and not for the loſs of the ſervice during that time. 1 Mod. 271.

Covenant by an apprentice, for that the defendant's teſtator had covenanted to inſtruct him (the plaintiff) in the art of a ſadler for ſeven years, and to find him in meat and drink during that term, and aſſigned the breach, for that after the death of the teſtator, the defendant, who was his executor, turned him (the plaintiff) out of doors, and out of his ſervice, et ſic did not find him meat and drink; and upon demurrer, the court inclined at firſt, that et ſic was not a ſufficient averment of the breach of covenant; but afterwards they held et ſic to be only matter of form, and that the apprentice remains to the executor; for tho' he might not inſtruct him, he muſt find him in meat and drink. 1 Sid. 216.

The plaintiff declared upon an indenture of apprenticeſhip; the defendant pleaded, that at the time of the executing the ſaid indenture he was an infant; the plaintiff replies, that by the cuſtom of the city of London, if one under age binds himſelf apprentice, it ſhall oblige him; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that it was ill, becauſe a departure from the declaration, for that is at Common law, and by the replication he hath enabled himſelf by a cuſtom; and ſo is the abbot of Bokefaſt's caſe, Keilw. 75. B. but adjudged no departure, for the action is founded on a covenant, and in the replication he only anſwers the diſability in the plea. Raym. 16.

Covenant by an infant per guardianum, for that he being apprentice to the defendant by indenture, he did not keep, maintain and teach him the trade of a woollen-draper, as he ought by his covenant, but turned him away: The defendant pleaded an order of ſeſſions, by which he was diſcharged from the plaintiff for his diſorderly living, and that the order was inrolled; and upon demurrer to the plea, it was held, that the maſter might be diſcharged from his apprentice by an order of ſeſſions; but it was a queſtion, whether he ought firſt to make application to one juſtice, and not to the ſeſſions per ſaltum. 1 Vent. 174.

In Covenant, the plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of London, that time out of mind, every freeman ſolebat to take and apprentice, who by cuſtom, &c. are bound by their covenants faithfully to ſerve; and that he (the plaintiff) took the defendant apprentice by indenture, in which he covenanted to ſerve ſeven years, which he had not done; upon which they were at iſſue, and the plaintiff had a verdict: It was inſiſted in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, becauſe it was in the ſolet alone, when it ought to be in the debet and ſolet; for if he is bound to ſerve, it muſt be by the cuſtom, becauſe he is an infant; and if by the cuſtom, then it muſt be debet & ſolet; but adjudged, that he is bound by the covenant, and that the cuſtom is only inducement. 1 Lev. 12.

The teſtator covenanted to teach an apprentice his trade; and in an action of covenant againſt his executor, it was inſiſted, after a verdict for the plaintiff, that the covenant was perſonal, and did not oblige the executor; but adjudged, that it did, and if the executor is not of the ſame trade, he ought to provide another maſter, who is. 1 Lev. 176.

1. Of endowing vicarages upon appropriation; and where, and by what acts appropriation is good.

Before the time of Richard 2. it was lawful (as it ſeems) to appropriate the whole fruits of a benefice to an abby or priory, they finding one to ſerve the cure. But that King redreſſed that evil by a good law, whereby he ordained, that "In every licence to be made in the Chancery, of the appropriation of any pariſh church, it ſhall be expreſly contained, that the dioceſan of the place, upon the appropriation of ſuch churches, ſhall ordain according to the value of ſuch churches, a convenient ſum of money to be paid and diſtributed yearly of the fruits and profits of the ſame churches, by thoſe that will have the ſame churches in proper uſe, and by their ſucceſſors, to the poor pariſhioners of the ſaid churches, in aid of their living and ſuſtenance for ever; and alſo that the vicar be well and ſufficiently endowed." Stat. 15 Rich. 2. c. 6. And by the ſtatute of 4 Hen. 4. c. 12. it is enacted, that "From henceforth, in every church appropriated, there ſhall be a ſecular perſon ordained vicar perpetual, canonically inſtituted and inducted, and covenably endowed by the diſcretion of the ordinary, to do divine ſervice, and to inform the people, and to keep hoſpitality there: And no religious ſhall in any wiſe be made vicar in any church appropriated."

From henceforth] This ſtatute extendeth not to appropriations made before this time. 2 Rol. Rep. 127.

There ſhall be a ſecular perſon ordained perpetual] In the caſe of Bonſey and Lee, Trin. 1684; it was decreed, that where there is no vicarage endowed, the impropriator of the ſmall tithes is bound to maintain a prieſt; and upon an information by the attorney general for that purpoſe, the King may aſſign to the curate ſuch an allowance or proportion of the ſmall tithes as he ſhall think fit: but otherwiſe it is, where the vicar is endowed, tho' but of never ſo ſmall matter. 1 Vern. 247.

Covenably endowed] So that without endowment, the appropriation was not good. 12 Co. 4.

By the diſcretion of the ordinary] Before this, it could not be done but with the conſent of the patron; but there was no neceſſity of the licence of the King (as in the caſe of appropriation) becauſe no damage accrued to the crown. 2 Rol. Abr. 334.

No religious ſhall in any wiſe be made vicar in any church appropriated] But if the benefice was given ad menſam monachorum, and ſo not appropriated in the common form, but granted by way of union pleno jure; in that caſe, it was ſerved by a monk of their own body, who was removable at their own pleaſure. This is the foundation of ſtipendiary curacies, where the impropriators are bound to provide divine ſervice, but may do it by a curate, not inſtituted, but only licenſed by the biſhop. So the monks ſerved them; and becauſe the acts of diſſolution gave the lands to the King in ſuch manner and form as the monks held them, they who derive from the crown have reckoned themſelves under no reſtraint to preſent a vicar to the biſhop for inſtitution. But tho' the Canon law is clear, that ſuch benefices as were united menſæ monachorum might be ſerved by monks, without inſtitution; yet the law alſo was, that in caſe ſuch cures were ſupplied by ſeculars, they muſt have inſtitution; and there being now no ſupply but by ſeculars, it ſeems to follow, that by law no benefices can be now ſerved by ſtipendiary curates, without inſtitution: but the received practice is otherwiſe. Gibſ. 717.

The act of endowment by the biſhop might be made, either in the act of appropriation, or by a ſubſequent act and a ſeparate inſtrument; which is mentioned in this place, that in ſearching for endowments in the regiſtries of biſhops, or the court of augmentations, neither the one nor the other ſhould be neglected; for altho' a ſeparate act or inſtrument of endowment may not be found, yet it is poſſible the endowment may have been made in the act of appropriation. Gibſ. 719.

If the body corporate be now in being to which the church is appropriated, as all the old cathedrals are; or if the impropriation were, at the diſſolution of the monaſtery, given to any cathedral or collegiate church that now is; the moſt probable place to find the endowment of it is in the archives of that church: if not, perhaps it may be found in the augmentation office. But it is to be feared, that moſt of the endowments are now loſt, at leaſt to us, by being carried to Rome at the diſſolution of monaſteries. Johnſ. 239.

Upon the making an appropriation, an annual penſion was reſerved to the biſhop and his ſucceſſors, commonly called an indemnity, and payable by the body to whom the appropriation was made. The ground of which reſervation, in an ancient appropriation in the regiſtry of the archbiſhop of Canterbury, is expreſſed to be, for a recompence of the profits which the biſhop would otherwiſe have received during the vacation of ſuch churches. Gibſ. 719.

A vicarage by endowment becomes a benefice diſtinct from the parſonage. As the vicar is endowed with ſeparate revenues, and is now enabled by the law to recover his temporal rights without aid of parſon or patron; ſo hath he the whole cure of ſouls transferred to him, by inſtitution from the biſhop. It is true, in ſome places, both the parſon and the vicar do receive inſtitution from the biſhop to the ſame church, as it is in the caſe of ſinecures; the original of which was thus: the rector (with proper conſent) had a power to intitle a vicar in his church, to officiate under him; and this was often done; and by this means, two perſons were inſtituted to the ſame church, and both to the cure of ſouls, and both did actually officiate. So that however the rectors of ſinecures, by having been long excuſed from reſidence, are in the common opinion diſcharged from the cure of ſouls (which is the reaſon of the name) and however the cure is ſaid in the law books to be in them habitualiter only; yet in ſtrictneſs of law, and with regard to their original inſtitution, the cure is in them actualiter, as much as it is in the vicar. Gibſ. 719.

The parſon, by making the endowment, acquires the patronage of the vicarage. For in order to the appropriation of a parſonage, the inheritance of the advowſon was to be transferred to the corporation to which the church was to be appropriated; and then, the vicarage being derived out of the parſonage, the parſon of common right muſt be patron thereof. So that if the parſon makes a leaſe of the parſonage, (without making a ſpecial reſervation to himſelf of the right of preſenting to the vicarage) the patronage of the vicarage paſſeth as incident to it. But it was held in the 21. Ja. that the pariſhioners may preſcribe for the choice of a vicar. And before that, in the 16 Ja. in the caſe of Shirley and Underhill, it was declared by the court, that tho' the advowſon of the vicarage of common right is appendant to the rectory, yet it may be appendant to a manor; as having been reſerved ſpecially upon the appropriation. Gibſ. 719.

All appropriations to priories or other religious houſes, which were under the value of 200*l. per annum*, were given to the King by the Statute 27 H. 8. as well as thoſe appropriations to abbies above the value of 200*l. per annum* were given to him by the ſtatute 31 H. 8. for the ſtatute 27 H. 8. gives him the churches, chapels, advowſons and patronages of theſe monaſteries, &c. which muſt be underſtood the churches appropriate as well as the advowſons and churches which were preſentative, for the words eccleſia and rectoria are ſynonymous; beſides, the ſtatute gives the King all thoſe monaſteries whereof the poſſeſſions did not exceed 200*l. per annum*, ſo that whatever contributed to the yearly revenue was given to the King; now 'tis plain, that a great part of their poſſeſſions and yearly profits did conſiſt in appropriations, for it was eaſy for them to get advowſons, and as eaſy afterwards to get them appropriated, and appropriations, tho' they were only ſo in reputation, paſſed to the King by both theſe ſtatutes; ſo adjudged 11 Rep. 13. in Priddle and Napier's caſe, and in Hob. 306. Wright and Gerard's caſe, and 148. Colt and the biſhop of Coventry's caſe.

The abbot of S. held the parſonage of J. appropriate, which came as ſuch to H. 8. by the ſtatute of diſſolutions, &c. the King granted it in fee to B. under which grant the plaintiff claimed; the defendant had obtained a preſentation to the church of L. from the King, ſuppoſing it to be void by lapſe, and to deſtroy the appropriation, he ſet forth the original of it, which was anno 22 Ed. 4. with a condition, that a vicarage ſhould be perpetually endowed; and alledged, that their never was any vicarage endowed, and therefore the appropriation was void, and by conſequence the rectory could not come to King H. 8. as appropriate to the abbot of S. but adjudged, that ſince it had been taken to be appropriate ever ſince the reign of Ed. 4. and a vicar had ever ſince been inſtituted and inducted, it ſhall be preſumed that the vicarage was endowed originally. 12 Rep. 4. Grimes verſus Smith. 2 Cro. 210. Hunſton verſus Cocket, *S. King Ed. 1. anno 12 of his reign, granted to the biſhop of St. David's, and his ſucceſſors, thirty-four churches in his dioceſe in Wales, ſo as he or they might appropriate them, or any of them, to the church of St. David's, or make new prebends in any of the ſaid churches; afterwards the biſhop with the aſſent of the king, and the dean and chapter of St. David's created a collegiate church out of one of the thirty-four churches ſo granted to him as aforeſaid, and made thirteen prebendaries, and appropriated thirteen of the ſaid churches to the ſaid prebendaries; King Edward 3. confirmed the premiſſes, &c. adjudged, that theſe appropriations were well made, and that this was a good college and given to the King by the ſtatute 1 Ed. 6. for tho' there was no endowment of a vicar, which ought to be upon every appropriation, yet that ſtatute gives the commiſſioners power to eſtabliſh a vicar in every college, which was formerly a parochial church. 4 Rep. 107. in Adams and Lambert's caſe. Mich. 10 Eliz. Dyer 267. S. P.

King Ed. 1. being ſeiſed of the manor of Kimbolton, to which the advowſon of the church was appendant, granted the ſaid manor cum pertinentiis to H. B. in tail; after the death of the tenant in tail, his iſſue in tail, anno 4 Ed. 3. granted the ſaid advowſon to the prior of Stonely, who, after the death of the incumbent had the ſame appropriated to him and his convent; and ſo it continued till the diſſolution anno 27 H. 8. then the King granted the impropriation to another in fee; afterwards, anno 37 Eliz. one Beard obtained from the Queen a preſentation to this church, ſuppoſing ſhe had a title by lapſe, for that the church was not lawfully appropriated to the prior of Stonely; and the reaſon was, becauſe the iſſue in tail had nothing in it, and by conſequence he could not grant it to the priory, becauſe it did not paſs to his anceſtor by the grant of the manor cum pertinentiis; adjudged, that tho' the advowſon in ſtrictneſs of law did not paſs by the words cum pertinentiis, yet becauſe of the long and continued poſſeſſion in the prior and convent, it ſhall be intended there was a lawful grant thereof made by the King to H. B. and all ſhall be preſumed to be done which might make this ancient appropriation good, and it ſhall not be drawn in queſtion after ſo many ſucceſſions of ages, during all which time it hath been taken, that the church was rightfully appropriated to the priory. 12 Rep. 5. Priddle verſus Beard & al'. 12 Rep. 3. Lord St. John of Bletſoe and Dean and chapter of Glouceſter, *S. 2. Where appropriation is not good.

King Ed. 6. being patron of the church of B. which was then full of an incumbent, granted the ſame to the biſhop of Coventry, &c. and that after the avoidance it ſhall be appropriate to the ſaid biſhop and his ſucceſſors; the biſhop made a leaſe thereof for ſixty years, to commence upon the next avoidance, which leaſe was confirmed by the dean and chapter; adjudged, that this leaſe was void, becauſe the biſhop had nothing in the parſonage during the life of the incumbent; and the reaſon was, becauſe the appropriation was made to him by theſe words, (viz.) that after the next avoidance he ſhould hold the church in proprios uſus, by which it appears, that an appropriation cannot be made to a church which is full but by ſpecial words. Mich. 8 Eliz. Dyer 244. Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield's caſe, and Jobſon and Michael's caſe, S. P.

In quare impedit againſt the biſhop and the dean and chapter of Worceſter, to preſent to the church of Dean; the biſhop pretended, that he claimed nothing but as ordinary, and that the dean and chapter pleaded a plea, to which the plaintiff demurred, and the caſe upon the pleadings was thus: King Ed. 6. was ſeiſed of the advowſon of the ſaid church in fee, and in the firſt year of his reign, the church being then full of an incumbent, granted the ſame to the dean and chapter, and their ſucceſſors, and gave them licence to retain it in proprios uſus, upon the next avoidance; and by the ſame grant did appropriate and incorporate it to them; and the incumbent died, then King Ed. 6. preſented one Chamberlaine, who was admitted, inſtituted and inducted, then the King died, and after his death Queen Mary granted the advowſon to B. B. in fee, who granted over to Tho. Grendon, and from him it deſcended to Roger Grendon, the plaintiff: In this caſe it was adjudged, that none is capable of an appropriation, but a body ſpiritual, corporate or politick, which hath a ſucceſſion; for the effect of an appropriation is to make ſuch a ſpiritual body perpetual incumbent, and to have the rectory with cure of ſouls, and for that reaſon he muſt be a ſpiritual perſon; that the ordinary, patron and King ought to be aſſenting to every appropriation where a common perſon is patron; but that the King where he is patron may make an appropriation without the aſſent of the biſhop; and laſtly, that an appropriation may be made, even when the church is full, but not by ſuch words, as in this caſe, but by apt and proper words, ſuch as theſe, viz, that the parſon, who is a ſpiritual perſon, may, after the death of the incumbent, retain the glebe and the fruits of the church to his proper uſe, and not by ſuch words as in this caſe, (viz.) that the parſon, after the death of the incumbent, may retain the advowſon to his own uſe. Plow. Com. 496. Grendon's caſe.

An appropriation cannot regularly be granted over, neither can it endure longer than the body ſpiritual to which it was at firſt appropriated, becauſe by the appropriation not only the glebe and tithes do paſs, which might be granted away if that could be granted over, but it alſo giveth the perſon, to whom the appropriation is made, a ſpiritual function; it makes him parſon of the church, and ſupplieth inſtitution and induction, which being the higheſt parts of a truſt, cannot for that reaſon be aſſigned over, and therefore every inſtrument of appropriation runs thus, (viz.) that they and their ſucceſſors ſhall be parſons, and not they and their aſſigns; for by the uſual words, that they ſhall hold the church to their own uſe, they are made parſons. Hob. 307. Wright verſus Gerard.

Appropriations have been judged an abuſe and robbery of the church and prieſts. See Kennet's Parochial Antiquities 433.

Approvement, Is where a man hath common in the lord's waſte, and he makes an incloſure of part of the waſte for himſelf, leaving ſufficient common with egreſs and regreſs for the commoners. Reg. Jud. 8, 9. If there be not ſufficient common left for the tenant, he may have a writ of aſſiſe, and ſhall recover treble damages. Stat. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 3. and a commoner may break down an incloſure, if the lord doth incloſe part of the common, and not leave ſufficient room in the reſidue; but if any, upon juſt title of approvement, do make a hedge or ditch for that purpoſe, which afterwards is thrown down in the night by perſons unknown, the towns adjoining may be diſtrained to make ſuch hedge, &c. for which there is a nocſtanter writ. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 46. 2 Inſt. 474. Approvement is to be only by incloſure; and the lord may not by the ſtatutes of approvement dig pits for gravel or coal, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 90, 405. 9 Rep. 112. Approvement may be made between neighbour and neighbour, tho' one of them dwell in another town, if the commons join together; and if the lord hath common in the tenant's ground, the tenant may approve. 2 Inſt. 475. The common is to be common appendant or appurtenant, to be ſubject to approvement, and not common in groſs to a certain number. The word approvement is alſo uſed for the profits of lands themſelves. Cromp. Juriſd. 152. and the ſtatute of Merton, 2 H. 8. makes mention of land newly approved. F. N. B. 71.

Stat. 20 Hen. 3. c. 4. Whenſoever feoffees bring an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin for their common of paſture, and it is ſo cognized before the juſtices, that they have as much paſture as ſufficeth for their hold, and that they have free egreſs and regreſs from their hold unto the paſture, then let them be contented therewith, and they on whom they have complained ſhall go quit, for that they have made their profit of their lands, waſte, woods, and paſtures; and if they alledge that they have not ſufficient paſture, or not ſufficient egreſs and regreſs as appertaineth to their hold, then let the truth be inquired by aſſiſe; and if it be found by aſſiſe, that the ſame deforceors have diſturbed them of their egreſs or regreſs, or that they have not ſufficient paſture, then they ſhall recover their ſeiſin by the view of inqueſt, ſo that by their diſcretion and oath, the plaintiffs ſhall have ſufficient paſture, and egreſs and regreſs, and the diſſeiſors ſhall be amerced, and yield damages. And if it be found by the aſſiſe, that the plaintiffs have ſufficient paſture, and ſufficient egreſs and regreſs, let the other make their commodity of the reſidue, and go quit.

Stat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 46. the ſtatute of Merton, provided between the lord and his tenant, ſhall hold place between lords of waſte, woods, and paſtures, and neighbours; ſaving ſufficient paſture to their tenants and neighbours, ſo that the lords of ſuch waſtes, woods, and paſtures, may make improvements of the reſidue. And this ſhall be obſerved for ſuch as claim paſture as pertaining to their hold: But if any claim common of paſture by ſpecial feoffment or grant, for a certain number of beaſts, or otherwiſe than he ought to have of common right; he ſhall have ſuch recovery as he ought by form of the grant made unto him, by occaſion of a wind-mill, ſheepcote, dairy, enlarging of a court or courtilage. No man ſhall be grieved by aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin of common of paſture.

And whereas ſometimes it chanceth, that one having right to improve, doth levy a ditch or an hedge, and ſome by night, or when they hope not to be eſpied, do overthrow the hedge or ditch, and it cannot be known by verdict of the aſſiſe or jury, who did overthrow the hedge or ditch, and men of the towns near will not indict ſuch as be guilty; the towns near adjoining ſhall be diſtrained, to raiſe up the hedge or ditch again at their own coſt, and to yield damages. And where one uſurpeth common in the time that heirs are within age, or a woman is covert, or whilſt the paſture is in the hands of tenants in dower, or of other particular eſtates; they who have ſuch entry from time in which the writ of mortd' anceſtor runneth, if they had no common before, ſhall have no recovery by writ of novel diſſeiſin if they be deforced.

Stat. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 3. ſect. 4. All ſuch perſons as ſhall bring aſſiſe upon an article of the ſtatutes Mert. 20. H. 3. cap. 4. and Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 46. and have judgment to recover, ſhall have their damages treble.

Sect. 5. And where there have been built upon commons houſes, with ground under the quantity of three acres incloſed, and in ſome places there is incloſed a garden, orchard, or pond, out of ſuch waſtes, which exceed not two acres, the ſaid two former acts ſhall not extend to any ſuch houſes.

Sect. 6. If there be above three acres incloſed, then the houſe and three acres ſhall remain, as it now doth, and the overplus of the ſaid three acres may be laid open by the owner of the waſtes.

See title Incloſure, and Stat. 29 Geo. 2. c. 36. by which commons may be incloſed for planting timber, with the conſent of lords and tenants.

Appover, or in Latin, probator, is one who being indicted of treaſon or felony, for which he is in priſon, confeſſes the indictment; and being ſworn to reveal all the treaſons and felonies he knows, enters before a coroner his appeal againſt all his partners in the crime within the realm. Hale's P. C. 192. 3 Inſt. 129. Staund. P. C. 14.

All perſons may be approvers, except peers of the realm, perſons attainted of treaſon or felony, or outlawed, infants, women, perſons non compos, or in holy orders. 3 Inſt. 129. Hal. P. C. 192.

The court is not bound of right to admit any perſon whatſoever to be an approver, nor will any perſon be admitted, unleſs he be actually indicted of treaſon or felony, and confeſſes the indictment; neither ſhall a perſon indicted of felony continue to be an approver after an appeal exhibited againſt him for the ſame felony; neither ſhall the appellee of an approver be himſelf an approver; for it would falſify the appeal of the firſt approver, in ſuppoſing that he had omitted ſome of his partners, but alſo, becauſe it would cauſe an infinite delay; for the appellee of ſuch an approver might as well become an approver of others, and ſo on. 3 Inſt. 139. Staund. P. C. 144. 2 Hawk. P. C. 205.

A man can only approve others of the very ſame crime with that for which he is indicted, and therefore no man can approve another with having been an acceſſary to himſelf, becauſe it is an offence of which it is not poſſible that he himſelf can be guilty; but inaſmuch as an approver is ſworn to reveal all the treaſons and felonies he knows, if he accuſe perſons of crimes different from his own, ſuch accuſation ſeems a reaſonable ground to carry on a proſecution againſt them for ſuch crimes, tho' it be not of itſelf ſufficient to put them on their trials. 2 Inſt. 629. Fitz. Coron. 127. 2 Hawk. P. C. 206.

If it appear either by the confeſſion of the approver, or by the return of the ſheriff, or the teſtimony of perſons of credit, that there are no ſuch perſons as ſome of thoſe appealed in rerum natura, or in the realm, or in the county whereof they are named in the appeal, he ſhall be hanged, unleſs the court in mercy ſpare him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 206.

The juſtices of the King's Bench, and juſtices of goal delivery, and juſtices in eyre, may admit a man to be an an approver, becauſe ſuch juſtices may aſſign a coroner to take the appeal; but juſtices of the peace cannot admit a man to be an approver, becauſe they cannot aſſign a coroner. 3 Inſt. 130. H. P. C. 194.

As ſoon as a perſon has confeſſed the indictment with an intent to become an approver, he puts it in the diſcretion of the juſtices, either to give judgment and award execution againſt him, or to reſpite him till he hath convicted his partners; if the juſtices think fit to admit him to be an approver, they will aſſign a coroner to receive his appeal, and will take his oath to diſcover all the treaſons and felonies he knows, and will aſſign him a certain number of days to make his appeal in, during which he ſhall be at liberty, and ſhall have from the King a penny a day; alſo he muſt make his appeal before the coroner on each day during the time limited, and muſt at laſt repeat it verbatim in court, and if the coroner record his failure of making his appeal on any of the days, or the leaſt variation in his repeating it in court, he ſhall have judgment of death. 3 Inſt. 129. H. P. C. 144. 2 Inſt. 629. 2 Hawk. P. C. 207.

The coroner may award proceſs againſt the appellee to the ſheriff of his own county, till he come to the exigent, from the award whereof he ſeems to be reſtrained by Magna Charta, cap. 17. The King's Bench and juſtices in eyre, and juſtices of goal delivery, may award proceſs into any county to apprehend and try the appellee; but it ſeems queſtionable, whether juſtices of goal delivery can award proceſſes of outlawry in a foreign county, as the King's Bench and juſtices of oyer clearly may. 2 Hawk. P. C. 208.

It is at the election of the appellee, either to put himſelf on his country, or wage battle with the approver; and if ſeveral perſons be appealed by one approver, every one of them has his election, either to put himſelf on his country, or to wage battle with the approver, who muſt fight them all, or at leaſt till one of them have vanquiſhed him; after which he cannot maintain his appeal againſt the reſt; but if a perſon appealed of the ſame felony by ſeveral approvers vanquiſh one of them, he ſhall be diſcharged againſt all the reſt. 2 Hawk. P. C. 208.

If the King pardon either the approver or appellee, hanging the appeal, the approvement ceaſes, and the appellee ſhall be diſcharged; in the firſt caſe, becauſe by the pardon the felony is extinct, and the approver is no longer liable to be condemned; in the ſecond, becauſe the approvement is in truth the ſuit of the King, and therefore as much in his power as an indictment. Hal. P. C. 201. 3 Inſt. 130. Staund. P. C. 149.

Neither the approver's confeſſing his appeal to be falſe, nor the conviction of the appellee, exclude them from the benefit of the clergy. 2 Hawk. P. C. 208.

If an approver convict all the appellees, whether by battle or verdict, the King ex merito juſtitiæ is to pardon him as to his life, and alſo give him his wages from the time of the appeal to the time of the conviction; but anciently he was not ſuffered to continue in the kingdom. It is recited by 5 H. 4. cap. 2. "That divers notorious felons, for ſafeguard of their lives, had become provers to the intent in the mean time, by brokeage and great gifts to purſue and have their pardons, and then after their deliverance, had become more notorious felons than they were before; and thereupon it is enacted, That if any perſon pray or purſue, or cauſe to be prayed or purſued, for any ſuch felon ſo attainted by his own confeſſion, to have any charter of pardon, the name of him that purſues ſuch charter, be put in the ſame charter, making mention that the ſame charter is granted at his inſtance; and if he to whom ſuch charter is granted become a felon again, the party who purſued the charter ſhall forfeit 100*l.*

By ſtat. 5 Ann. cap. 31. ſect. 4. it is enacted, That if any perſon being out of priſon ſhall committ burglary, or ſhall be guilty of the felonious breaking and entering any houſe in the day-time, and after diſcover two who ſhall have committed ſuch burglaries or felons, ſo as they be convict, ſuch diſcoverer ſhall have 40*l.* and ſhall be entitled to a pardon of all burglaries and felonies, except murder and treaſon; which pardon ſhall be a bar to any appeal for the ſame.

Approvers. In Stat. 9 Hen. 6. c. 10. bailiffs of lords in their franchiſes are called approvers. But by the ſtatute 2 Ed. 3. c. 12. approvers are ſuch as are ſent into counties to increaſe the farm of hundreds and wapentakes, which were formerly ſet at a certain rate to the ſheriffs, who likewiſe demiſed them to others, the county court excepted. Cowel.

Approvers of the King, (Approbatores regis) Are thoſe that have the letting of the King's demeſnes in ſmall manors, to his beſt advantage. Stat. 51. Hen. 3. ſt. 5. And in the ſtat. 1. Ed. 3. c. 8. the ſheriffs did call themſelves King's approvers, that is, the collectors of the King's profits. Cowel.

Appuare, To take to his own uſe or profit, viz. Domini vaſtorum & boſcorum, &c. Appruare ſe poſſunt de vaſtis, &c. Weſt. 2. c. 50. Cowel.

Appurtenances, (Pertinentia) Derived from the Fr. appertenir, to belong to, ſignify things both corporeal and incoporeal appertaining unto another thing as principal: as hamlets to a chief manor; and common of paſture, piſcary, &c. alſo liberties and ſervices of tenants. Brit. cap. 39. If a man grant common of eſtovers to be burnt in his manor, theſe are appurtenant to the manor; for things appurtenant may be granted at this day. Co. Lit. 121. Common appurtenant may be to a houſe, paſture, &c. outhouſes, yards, orchards, and gardens are appurtenant to a meſſuage; but lands cannot properly be ſaid to be appurtenant to a meſſuage. 1 Lill. Abr. 91. And the meſſuage cannot be appurtenant to another. Ibid. Lands cannot, according to the right ſenſe of the words cum pertinentiis, be appurtenant to the houſe; but the word pertinens may be taken in the ſenſe of uſually letten or occupied with the houſe. Plowd. 170. Lands ſhall paſs in a leaſe or deviſe of a houſe with the appurtenances, as pertaining to the ſame, when it hath been uſed and occupied with it ten years or more; which is judged a ſufficient time to make it appertaining to the houſe. Cro. El. 704. Lands, a common, &c. may be appurtenant to a houſe, though not a way. 3 Salk. 40. Grant of a manor, with the words cum pertinentiis, 'tis ſaid will paſs all things belonging to the manor. Owen's Rep. 31.

Adjudged, that where a man hath a thing appertaining to a houſe or mill, the moſt durable thing is the land, being the foundation on which 'tis built, therefore tho' the houſe or mill falls by the act of the owner or another, yet becauſe the moſt durable part remains, he may build it again without the loſs of the appendancy or appurtenance, but then it muſt be built upon the old foundation. 4 Rep. 86. Lutterell's caſe.

So a deviſe of an houſe, with the appurtenances, and the deviſee claimed ſome land in the field by virtue of this deviſe; and adjudged that he might have it, if it had been uſed with the houſe for the ſpace of ten years, or more, for that ſhall be ſufficient time to make it appertaining to the houſe. Cro. Eliz. 704. Yates verſus Clanrickard. Moor 221. Higham verſus Horwood, S. P. 1 Leon. 34. S. C. Godbolt 40. *S. C. Cro. Three coparceners of a manor to which a leet did appertain; the King purchaſed two parts of the manor with the appurtenances: Adjudged, that the leet is not extinguiſhed, but remains appendant to the other third part; for the King had not all the leet by the alienation of the two ſiſters, but ſhall hold court with the third. 1 And. 26.

Treſpaſs for entering his cloſe, and taking and carrying away his hay; the defendant juſtified under a title to the land where the hay did grow; for that there was a chapel diſſolved in the reign of Edw. 6. and the poſſeſſions thereof (of which this land was parcel) deſcended to the Queen, who in the 32d year of her reign made a leaſe thereof by the name of all that chapel de A. fundatum in eccleſia de B. cum pertinentiis, under which leaſe the defendant claimed the tithes; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was objected, that it was ill, becauſe 'tis not ſaid, that the tithes did grow on the lands belonging to the chapel: Sed per curiam, By the grant of the chapel cum pertinentiis all the tithes belonging to it ſhall paſs. 2 Rol. Rep. 150. Grubham verſus Grate.

A copyholder for life, who had right of common in the lord's waſte, purchaſed the freehold, which was granted to him with the appurtenances; adjudged, that by making it a freehold, the common which was annexed to the cuſtomary eſtate was deſtroyed, and that by his own act, and that it ſhall not be revived by thoſe general words in the grant cum pertinentiis, without ſome ſpecial words to paſs it again. 2 Cro. 253. Marſham verſ. Hunter. Poſtea Common. (E. 2.) S. C. Cro. Eliz. 794. contra.

In replevin, &c. the defendant avowed, that G. D. was ſeiſed of an houſe in C. in fee, and of ſeveral lands, &c. to the ſame appertaining, whereof the locus in quo was parcel; exception was taken to this avowry, becauſe land cannot properly be ſaid to appertain to an houſe; 'tis true, it may paſs by ſuch words in a deed, but in pleading it ought not to be ſo alledged; and ſo it was adjudged. Cro. Eliz. 919. Willmott verſus Carne.

Certain lands came to H. 8. upon the diſſolution of a priory, who demiſed the ſame to B. B. for years; the leſſee built an houſe upon theſe lands, which afterwards came to Queen Elizabeth, and ſhe granted all that meſſuage, and the lands thereunto belonging: Adjudged, that tho' the houſe was not built on the lands when demiſed by H. 8. but afterwards, and before the Queen granted the ſame, yet the grant is good, and the *lands may be properly ſaid to be appertaining to a houſe, when they have been let and enjoyed with the houſe a convenient time. In ejectment, &c. the caſe was, a copyholder in fee of a tenement called Heyſham's, built a new building on ſix foot of the waſte, which he did by encroachment, and afterwards the lord of the manor made a leaſe of the ſix foot ſo built on by the copyholder for 100 years; this leaſe was made anno 33 Eliz. and afterwards the copyholder anno 1 Jac. ſurrendered the ſaid tenement called Heyſham's, to the uſe of B. B. and his heirs, and anno 5 Jac. aſſigned all his term in the ſaid ſix foot to the ſaid B. B. who by indenture anno 19 Jac. made a leaſe of the ſaid tenement called Heyſham's, with the appurtenances, to E. W. for ſeventy years: Adjudged, that the new building on the ſix foot of waſte ground did not paſs by the word appurtenances; for it being built anno 33 Eliz. and it being not found that it had been uſed altogether with the tenement, or reputed as parcel thereof, nothing paſſed but what was parcel of the tenement at that time; but in a deviſe it might have been otherwiſe. Cro. Car. 12. Brian verſus Witherland.

By the later authorities, lands will not paſs by the word appurtenances, but only ſuch things which do properly belong to the houſe; as where a man was ſeiſed of two houſes and of eighty acres of land belonging to one of them, known by a particular name, and made a feoffment of the houſe and eighty acres to B. B. who made another feoffment to the ſaid feoffor, by which he took back the ſame houſe and lands, and forty acres more by another name; and about ten years afterwards he deviſed this houſe and all the lands thereunto appertaining, to his youngeſt ſon; adjudged, that tho' he uſed thoſe forty acres with the houſe for ten years and more, yet it would not paſs by theſe words thereunto appertaining, becauſe they were conveyed to him by a new name. Palm. 375. Loftus verſus Baker. Godb. 352. S. C. reported by the name of Knight's caſe. Cro. Car. 57. Hearn verſus Allen, S. P. Hutt. 85. S. C. Lit. Rep. 8. S. C.

Upon a demurrer to an Engliſh bill, in the Exchequer, it was held by Hale chief baron, that return of writs may be claimed by preſcription as appertaining to a manor, but more eſpecially it may as appertaining to an honour, becauſe thoſe have larger incidents than manors, and that where the pernor of the profits is ſued, the plaintiff need not ſhew how he claims this privilege; but in a quo warranto, where the defendant muſt make a title, he muſt ſhew how he claims it. Hardres 423. Counteſs of Pembroke verſus Lord Burlington.

The teſtator had a houſe and a kiln built upon diſtant parts of a cloſe, and alſo two mills to make oatmeal adjoining to the ſaid cloſe, which were uſed with the houſe for ſeveral years, but were lately divided; then he ſold the houſe with the appurtenances and part of the cloſe to one, and deviſed the mills with the appurtenances to another: Adjudged, that the kiln did not paſs, for by the grant of the houſe with the appurtenances, nothing paſſed but what properly belonged to the houſe. 1 Lev. 131. Archer verſus Bennet.

Treſpaſs for digging turfs in his ſoil, the defendant juſtified by a grant of the lord of the manor to T. S. and his heirs, to dig turfs there to be burned in his houſe, and that T. S. granted the houſe cum pertinentiis to the defendant and his heirs: Adjudged, that the turbary paſſed by theſe words, without being ſpecially named, as common appurtenant may, becauſe it paſſed with the lands to which 'tis appurtenant. 3 Lev. 165. Solmes verſus Bullock.

In a ſpecial verdict in ejectment the caſe was, That 1 Auguſt 1606. King James was ſeiſed in fee in right of the crown of a pool of water and three gardens, in the pariſh of St. Margaret, Weſtminſter, and that a water-work was then erected in the ſaid gardens, and that the pool was uſed with the water-work till 12 March 11 Jac. and then the King by letters patent did grant the gardens and water-works with the appurtenances, & omnia ſtagna, gurgites, &c. to the premiſes appertaining; the queſtion, whether the ſoil paſſed by the words ſtagnum or gurgites, or either of them; if it did, then whether it paſſed as appertaining to the water-work, built anno 6 Jac. and paſſed away with the pool as appertaining to it, anno 11 Jac. or as appertaining to the gardens; which ſeems in a ſhort time to gain a reputation, as appertaining, &c. Adjudged, that by the word ſtagnum the water and ſoil paſſeth; and as to the word appertaining, a thing may be ſaid to be appertaining in relation to the extent of the grant, or in relation to the nature of the thing granted; and firſt as to the extent of the grant, as where an ancient meſſuage is granted with the lands thereunto belonging; now, if ſome lands were of late years occupied with that meſſuage, it may be a queſtion, whether thoſe lands paſs by the word appertaining, but 'tis a queſtion only what was intended to paſs, and that relates to the extent of the grant; but in the principal caſe the word appertaining relates to the thing granted, and without which it could not be uſed, and in ſuch caſe 'tis appertaining immediately, and as ſoon as 'tis annexed to it; and therefore the jury having found that the water-work could not work ſine ſtagno prædict', they find that the water and ſoil, which is comprehended by the word ſtagnum, was neceſſary for the work, and it could not work without it. Vaugh. 107. 110. Price verſus Braham.

Arbitrator, (Lat.) Is a private extraordinary judge between party and party, choſen by their mutual conſents, to determine controverſies between them. Weſt. Symb. part. 2. tit. Compromiſe, ſect. 21. And arbitrators are ſo called, becauſe they have an arbitrary power; for if they obſerve the ſubmiſſion, and keep within due bounds, their ſentences are definitive, from which there lies no appeal. 1 Rol. Abr. 251. The award of arbitrators is definitive, and being choſen by the parties, they are not tied to ſuch formalities of law as judges in other caſes are; and yet they have as great power as other judges to determine the matters in variance; but their determination muſt be certain, and it is to be according to the expreſs condition of the bond by which the parties ſubmit themſelves to their judgment. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 234. Dyer 356. The chancery will not give relief againſt the award of the arbitrators; except it be for corruption, &c. and where their award is not ſtrictly binding by the rules of law, the court of equity can decree a performance. Chan. Rep. 279. 1 Vern. 24.

1. What things may be ſubmitted to arbitration; and of the ſubmiſſion and revocation thereof.

All perſonal actions and things of an uncertain nature may be determined by arbitrament. So a debt on a ſpecialty or record, tho' certain, may be ſubmitted and transferred by an award, amongſt other things, but not by itſelf. 1 Lev. 192. But freehold, or inheritance of lands cannot be determined by arbitrament; and therefore, there cannot be a partition by an award; for freehold doth not paſs without livery. 1 Rol. Abr. 242. So the intereſt of an eſtate for years cannot be transferred by an award; for it is a chattel real. 1 Rol. Abr. 242. contr. Dyer 183. a. in marg. 2 Leon. 104. Cro. Eliz. 223.

If a man be bound to ſtand to an award, and the arbitrators make an award, that land ſhall be conveyed; if the party refuſes the conveyance, he forfeits the obligation. 1 Rol. Abr. 244. So, if an award be, that one ſhall pay ſo much in ſatisfaction of a ſpecialty; though the ſpecialty is not thereby diſcharged, yet if he commences an action upon the ſpecialty afterwards, he forfeits his obligation. 1 Rol. Abr. 242. 2 Cro. 447.

An annuity is not determinable by award, for it is reckoned in nature of a freehold, and therefore cannot paſs without the deed of the party. 9 Hen. 6. 60. 14 Hen. 4. 19. 3 Hen. 4. 6. 1 Rol. Abr. 266.

Partition cannot be made by award, for a freehold cannot paſs without livery and ſeiſin. 1 Rol. Abr. 242.

It has been doubted, whether leaſes for years, being chattles real, could be transferred by award; therefore it ſeems ſafeſt when the controverſy relates to theſe, that the parties be bound in mutual obligations to perform the award, and then if the arbitrators award that one ſhall aſſign, transfer, &c. the leaſe to the other, if he refuſes, he forfeits his obligation. 1 Rol. Abr. 242. 9 Co. 78. 6 Co. 41.

Cauſes criminal are not arbitrable, becauſe they ought to be puniſhed for the common good. Weſt. Symb. part 2. ſect. 33.

Alſo cauſes matrimonial ſeem not arbitrable, becauſe marriage ought to be free, and religion diſallows the ſevering thoſe whom the church hath joined. Weſt. Symb. part. 2. ſect. 33. 1 Rol. Abr. 252. But the damages a perſon ſuſtained by a promiſe of marriage, or any thing relating to a marriage portion, may be ſubmitted. 16 Ed. 4. 2.

Debts due by ſpecialty cannot be diſcharged by naked award; but if the ſubmiſſion were by bond the award would be a good bar, for one ſpecialty may be diſſolved by another. 1 Hen. 7. 16. b. Dyer 51. 6 Co. 44.

A certain and fixed debt is not diſcharged by an award, but the end and deſign of an arbitration is to reduce uncertain debts and duties to a certainty; and to award a man a certain debt is to give him no more, nor do any greater thing for him than was done before, for now he can have but an action, and that he might have before, and to give him leſs than he had before is to do him a manifeſt injuſtice, which the arbitrator cannot do. Cro. Jac. 99, 447, 647. 3 Hen. 4. 4. 4 Hen. 7. 6. 10 Hen. 7. 4. 1 Rol. Abr. 264.

It is held clearly, that all chattles perſonal, and perſonal actions, ſuch as treſpaſs, conſpiracy, maintenance, &c. may be determined by arbitration, and the right transferred by naked award, though the ſubmiſſion were not by deed; for theſe being transferrable by the party himſelf without any ſolemnity, whatever the parties themſelves could do, may be done by the arbitrators, who are their ſubſtitutes, and ſtand in their place; and if on theſe ſubmiſſions without deed, the arbitrators award one party a ſum certain, he may bring an action of debt for it; but if the award be of doing ſome other thing, which is beneficial to him, he muſt have his action on the caſe. 22 Hen. 6. 39. 9 Co. 78. 1 Roll. Abr. 242.

The arbitrators cannot make an award of matters different from thoſe which were ſubmitted; therefore if the ſubmiſſion be of ewes with lamb, and after the ſubmiſſion the lambs are yeaned, they cannot arbitrate concerning the lambs. 1 Keb. 600. Weſt. Sym. part 2. ſect. 32.

The ſubmiſſion is the authority given by the parties in controverſy to the arbitrators, to determine and end their grievances; and this being a contract or agreement muſt not be taken ſtrictly, but largely, and according to he intent of the parties ſubmitting. Weſt. Symb. part 2. ſect. 1, 2.

This ſubmiſſion may be by word or deed; if the ſubmiſſion be by word, there is no remedy to enforce the party to perform the award, but reciprocal actions on the caſe, and an action of debt will lie, if money be awarded, for it is in nature of a ſimple contract. 5 Ed. 4. 7. 1 Keb. 600. 2 Keb. 238. 3 Keb. 64.

If the ſubmiſſion be without deed, it may be revoked without deed, and the party ſhall loſe nothing, for ex nuda ſubmiſſione non oritur actio. 21 Hen. 6. 10. 8 Co. 81, 82.

If there be a ſubmiſſion of all actions and complaints; cauſes of action are ſubmitted. 1 Rol. Abr. 245.

If there be a ſubmiſſion of actions perſonal, ac ſectis et querelis; actions real are ſubmitted. 1 Rol. Abr. 246.

If there be a ſubmiſſion of all matters between them two; an action by one of them and his wife againſt the other, is not ſubmitted. 1 Rol. Abr.

If there be a ſubmiſſion of all debts; ſpecialties and judgments for them may be releaſed. 2 Sand. 190.

By a ſubmiſſion of all actions, cauſes of action are not ſubmitted. 1 Rol. Abr. 245.

But by a ſubmiſſion of all actions perſonal, ſuits and complaints, actions real are not ſubmitted; for perſonal refers to the whole. 1 Rol. Abr. 246.

By a ſubmiſſion by A. and B. of the one part, and C. of the other, of all matters between them, an action by A. alone againſt C. is ſubmitted; for it ſhall be taken diſtributively. 1 Rol. Abr. 246.

By a ſubmiſſion of A. of all matters, a debt, due from the wife of A. as executrix, is ſubmitted. 2 Cro. 447.

Submiſſions are likewiſe general; as of all controverſies, debts, dues, &c. and here the arbitrators are not obliged to determine all matters diſcloſed, but their arbitration of ſome things will be good, tho' they leave other things undone; but where the ſubmiſſion is ſpecial or conditional, ita quod an award be made of all controverſies depending, they ought to determine all matters whereof they have notice, becauſe here by the expreſs words of the authority, I do not own his determination, unleſs all matters in controverſy are ſettled; and therefore to determine termine one without the others, is to act contrary to the authority; but if upon ſuch a ſubmiſſion, the arbitrators make an award but of one thing, it ſhall be intended there were no others to make an award of, unleſs the other ſide ſhew there was, and that the arbitrators had notice thereof. Cro. Eliz. 839. Cro. Jac. 200, 355. 8 Co. 98. Dyer 216. 1 Rol. Abr. 257. 1 Sand. 32. 1 Brownl. 63.

Alſo a ſubmiſſion may be made a rule of court, purſuant to the ſtatute 9 & 10 W. 3. and it is ſaid, that although the ſubmiſſion be by bond, yet the party may have it made a rule of court; in which caſe, it is ſaid, he may proceed on the bond, and likewiſe have an attachment for not performing the award. 1 Salk. 73.

By the ſtatute 9 & 10 W. 3. cap. 15. it is enacted, "That it ſhall and may be lawful for all merchants and traders, and others deſirous to end any controverſy, ſuit or quarrel, for which their is no other remedy but by perſonal action, or ſuit in equity by arbitration, to agree that their ſubmiſſion of the ſuit to the award or umpirage of any perſon or perſons ſhould be made a rule of any of his majeſty's courts of record which the parties ſhall chooſe, and to inſert ſuch their agreement in their ſubmiſſion, or the condition of the bond or promiſe, whereby they oblige themſelves reſpectively to ſubmit to the award or umpirage of any perſon or perſons; which agreement being ſo made and inſerted in their ſubmiſſion, or promiſe, or condition of their reſpective bonds, ſhall or may, upon producing an affidavit thereof made by the witneſſes thereunto, or any one of them, in the court of which the ſame is agreed to be made a rule, and reading and filing the ſaid affidavit in court, be entered of record in ſuch court, and a rule ſhall thereupon be made by the ſaid court, that the parties ſhall ſubmit to, and finally be concluded by the arbitration or umpirage which ſhall be made concerning them by the arbitrators or umpire, purſuant to ſuch ſubmiſſion; and in caſe of diſobedience to ſuch arbitration or umpirage, the party refuſing or neglecting to perform and execute the ſame, or any part thereof, ſhall be ſubject to all the penalties of contemning a rule of court, where he is a ſuitor or defendant in ſuch court, and the court, on motion, ſhall iſſue proceſs accordingly, which proceſs ſhall not be ſtopped or delayed in its execution, by any order, rule, command or proceſs of any other court, either of law or equity; unleſs it ſhall be made appear on oath to ſuch court, that the arbitrators or umpire miſbehaved themſelves, and that ſuch award, arbitration or umpirage, was procured by corruption or other undue means: And that any arbitration or umpirage, procured by corruption or other undue means, ſhall be judged and eſteemed void and of none effect, and accordingly be ſet aſide by any court of law or equity; ſo as complaint of ſuch corruption or undue practice be made in the court where the rule is made for ſubmiſſion to ſuch arbitration or umpirage, before the laſt day of the next term after ſuch arbitration or umpirage made and publiſhed to the parties."

An arbitration bond had theſe words, and if the obligor ſhall conſent that his ſubmiſſion ſhall be made a rule of court, that then, &c. Upon motion to make this ſubmiſſion a rule of court, it was objected, that theſe words did not imply his conſent, but if he would forfeit his bond, he need not let it be made a rule of court; yet becauſe this clauſe could be inſerted for no other purpoſe, the court took theſe conditional words to be a ſufficient indication of conſent. 1 Salk. 72.

If one of the parties revokes the ſubmiſſion, or hinders the arbitrators from proceeding to the award, the court will grant an attachment. 1 Salk. 73.

But if the party dies, there is no remedy by attachment againſt his repreſentative, for the contempt dies with him. 2 Vern. 444.

If the party excepts to the award, tho' it be affirmed, an attachment will not be granted; for the non-performance of it, while the matter was ſub judice, was no contempt. 1 Salk. 73.

Alſo the party muſt be required perſonally to perform the award, and ſuch perſonal demand muſt be made out by affidavit; otherwiſe the court will not grant an attachment. 1 Salk. 83.

On motion to ſet aſide an award, becauſe the arbitrators went on without giving the party time to be heard, or produce a witneſs, Holt ſaid, that the arbitrators being judges of the party's own chooſing, he ſhall not come and ſay, that they have not done him juſtice, and put the court to examine it; aliter when they exceed their authority. 1 Salk. 73.

But awards have been frequently ſet aſide, eſpecially in equity, where the arbitrators have appeared to have been miſtaken, or have been guilty of corruption or partiality; as if they have an intereſt in the thing in controverſy. 2 Vern. 251.

So where there are three arbitrators, and two of them by fraud or force exclude the other, or if they have private meetings, and admit one of the parties, and give no notice to the other. 2 Vern. 514.

So, where they awarded 495*l.* againſt one of the parties for calling the other, who was a butcher, a bankrupt knave, to repair his honour, as they called it. 3 Chan. Rep. 76. 2 Vern. 251. See 1 Vern. 157.

So, where the ſubmiſſion was to arbitrators, and they had power to chooſe an umpire, which they did, by throwing croſs and pile who ſhould name him, and for this the court ſet aſide the award. 2 Vern. 485.

If there be a ſubmiſſion to an award, it may be revoked before the award made. 1 Sid. 281.

If two ſubmit on one part, and one on the other; one of thoſe two may revoke without the other. 1 Rol. Abr. 331.

If there be a ſubmiſſion by a feme ſole, who marries before an award made, it will be a revocation. So, if the woman and B. ſubmit to one part, and the woman marries, it will be a revocation as to B. alſo. 1 Rol. Abr. 331.

But if there be a ſubmiſſion, and a bond is given to ſtand to an award, if the obligor revoke, he forfeits his bond. 1 Rol. Abr. 331. So if a ſubmiſſion be revoked, it is of no avail 'till notice of the revocation to the arbitrators. 1 Rol. Abr. 331.

If the arbitrators are made commiſſioners by order of the Chancery to determine the difference, it is no revocation of the ſubmiſſion of the parties. 1 Rol. Abr. 331.

If the ſubmiſſion be by deed, it is of its own nature countermandable, though made irrevocable by the expreſs words of the deed, for the arbitrators being conſtituted and put in the place of the parties, by their conſent, to act for them, they can no longer act than they have ſuch conſent. 8 Co. 82. 1 Sid. 281. 1 Brownl. 62. 2 Brownl. 290.

But when a man obliges himſelf to ſtand to an award, if the party revokes it according to his power, he hath forfeited his obligation; for the making the award becomes impoſſible by his own default, and therefore the obligation is ſimple; but if it be without obligation he forfeits nothing. 8 Co. 82, 83. 1 Brownl. 62.

If ſeveral plaintiffs or defendants ſubmit themſelves to an award, one cannot revoke the ſubmiſſion without the other, for joint acts are conſidered as the acts of one perſon, and there can be no revocation without the act of that perſon that made the ſubmiſſion. 38 Hen. 6. 6. 1 Brownl. 62.

If a feme ſole ſubmits to arbitration, and afterwards marries, this is a revocation of the ſubmiſſion; and if it be by bond the bond is forfeited. 2 Keb. 865. 1 Jones 388.

If one have judgment in an ejectment, and then they ſubmit the controverſy to arbitration, but before any award be made he ſues out execution, it is a forfeiture of the bond, for he is the cauſe no award can be made. T. Jones 134.

In debt upon a bond to perform an award, and oyer of the condition, the defendant pleads non ſubmiſit, the plaintiff need not aſſign a breach; for the defendant puts the whoſe ſtreſs of his cauſe upon a matter antecedent to the alledging a breach; for if there was no ſubmiſſion there could be no award, and conſequently no breach of it. 1 Sid. 290.

2. Who may ſubmit to arbitration; and of the power of the arbitrators and umpire.

Perſons that cannot contract, cannot ſubmit to arbitration, therefore femes covert, perſons compelled by threats and impriſonment, perſons profeſſed in religion, cannot ſubmit. 9 Ed. 3. 23. 10 Hen. 6. 14, 19. Latch. 27.

The huſband may ſubmit the chattles he hath in right of his wife to an award, for he may diſpoſe of them. Style 351. March 77, 78.

If the huſband ſubmits to arbitration the chattles the wife has as executrix or adminiſtratrix, this ſhall bind the wife, becauſe the wife cannot perſonate any one without the huſband during coverture. 21 Hen. 7. 29. 1 Rol. Rep. 269. Cro. Jac. 447.

If an infant ſubmit to arbitration, he may execute or avoid it at his election, as he may all other his contracts. 13 Hen. 4. 12. 10 H. 6. 14. March 111, 141. 1 Jones 164. 1 Lev. 17. 1 Rol. Abr. 730.

Perſons attainted or outlawed cannot ſubmit to arbitration, for they have no property, and cannot by the law controvert any thing. 3 Hen. 6. 26. 5 Hen. 7. 16.

A dean without the chapter, a mayor without his commonalty, the maſter of a college or hoſpital without his fellows, cannot ſubmit to an award, for the ſubmiſſion has the force of a contract, and they cannot contract without them. 21 Ed. 4. 13.

If one party and the deputy or attorney of the other party ſubmit to an award, this is well enough, for the act of my deputy is my own act. Dyer 21. 1 Rol. Abr. 244. 2 Mod. 228.

If ſeveral perſons do a treſpaſs, and one of the wrongdoers and the party to whom it is done ſubmit to arbitration, and an award is made, the other perſons ſhall take advantage of it by way of extinguiſhment of the treſpaſs; the ſame law where the party releaſes to one of them; for in both caſes a ſatisfaction really is, or is preſumed to be made, and a man cannot receive a double compenſation for the ſame wrong. 1 Salk. 70. Carth. 412. 20 Hen. 6. 12. a. 41. a. Rol. Abr. 268.

The arbitrators are perſons indifferently choſen, to determine the matters in controverſy according to their own minds, whether they be matters of law or fact; infants, perſons excommunicate, outlawed, &c. may be arbitrators; for every perſon muſt uſe his own diſcretion in the choice of his judges, and being at liberty to chuſe whom he likes beſt, cannot afterwards object the want of honeſty or underſtanding to them, or that they have not done him juſtice. Weſt. Symb. 2. part, ſect. 27.

The arbitrators are perſons truſted with the authority, and it is not within their power to aſſign it; therefore if an award be to ſtand to the determination of a ſtranger, this is void; but if the award be, that an arbitrament made by J. S. ſhall ſtand, this is good, becauſe it is their own award, though it refers to the act of another; but though the arbitrators cannot transfer their power, yet they may award that others ſhall do a miniſterial act in ſubſerviency to their award; for what is done by ſuch perſons, is done by them as ſervants and inſtruments of the arbitrators, and is the act of the arbitrator himſelf; as that ſuch a conveyance ſhould be made as counſel ſhould direct; ſuch coſt paid as the prothonotary ſhould tax, is a good award. 5 Co. 78. 1 Rol. Abr. 251. Cro. Eliz. 726. Palm. 146. 2 Rol. Rep. 214. 1 Sid. 258. Hard. 45.

Neither natural or legal diſabilities do hinder any one from being an arbitrator; if they are incompetent judges, the fault is in thoſe that chuſe them. They are called arbitrators, becauſe they have an arbitrary power, if their judgment be according to the ſubmiſſion. If they obſerve their commiſſion, and keep within their juriſdiction, their ſentences are definitive, from which there lies no appeal. 3 Vin. 41.

A bond is given to J. S. to ſtand to his award by the parties in difference, being J. D. and J. R. adjudged by the court that it was good; tho' it was objected that the referee would make an unreaſonable award, to intitle himſelf to the penalty of the bond. Comb. 100.

Submiſſion was to the plaintiff himſelf and another; an this being objected in arreſt of judgment was held good per cur. Comb. 218.

Dolben J. ſaid, he remembered a caſe where a gentleman's ſteward brought an action in his maſter's name, and defendant entered into rule by conſent to pay what the plaintiff ſhould think fit; and my Lord Hale held it to be a good ſubmiſſion. Comb. 218. 4 Mod. 226. ſays Dolben J. cited it as Serjeant Ward's caſe, and that it was thus, viz. The ſerjeant took a horſe from the archbiſhop of Canterbury's ſteward for a deodand, and that the archbiſhop brought his action; and it coming to trial at the aſſiſes in Kent, the ſerjeant by rule of court referr'd it to the archbiſhop to ſet the price of the horſe, which he did; and the ſerjeant afterwards moved the court to ſet aſide the award, becauſe the ſubmiſſion was to the plaintiff himſelf; but it was denied by my Lord Hale and the whole court.

If ſeveral perſons on the one part, and ſeveral on the other ſubmit generally to any award, the arbitrators have not only power to determine matters between them jointly, but ſeverally and diſtinctly alſo; and an award between one only of the one ſide and another of the other ſide is good; for this is not doing leſs than the commiſſion warrants, ſince their is an attorney in it to determine matters diſtinctly between them, for the ſubmiſſion is of all matters, ſo that it contains as well all things ſeverally between each of them, as jointly between them all, and perhaps there may be no cauſe of award between the others. 2 Rich. 3. 18. 2 Keb. 886. 12 Ed. 25. Latch 208. 1 Rol. Rep. 298. 1 Brownl. 112. Yelv. 203. 3 Bulſt. 6. Cro. Car. 433. Style 471. 1 Rol. Abr. 261.

The arbitrators cannot make their award by parcels at ſeveral times, for when they have made an award they have executed their authority, and can do no more; and therefore if two ſubmit all debts, treſpaſſes, &c. and the arbitrators one day make an award of the debts, and of the treſpaſſes another day, this is not good as to the treſpaſſes, but they may deliberate of one thing one day, and of another the other day, and then make an intire award of the whole; alſo an award made in the night is good, for the party's attendance is not requiſite; but where an act cannot be done without perſonal attendance of a third perſon, it cannot be in the night. 1 Rol. Abr. 250. Cro. Eliz. 676.

If there be a ſubmiſſion to arbitration, and if they cannot agree before the firſt of May, then the ſubmiſſion is made to J. S. to be the umpire, the award to be made before a certain day then next to come; if the arbitrators never diſcourſe about the matter, ſo as there is no diſagreement between them, yet if they make no award before the day, the umpire may determine the matter; for theſe words, if they cannot agree, are not to be taken literally, but only that if they do make no award, that then, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 261.

If the condition of an obligation be to ſtand to the award of certain perſons, A. and B. and J. S. being umpire for both parties, in this caſe an award by A. and B. is good; for umpire, in the common ſignification of the word, denotes a perſon that is to make an end of the matter, if the others cannot. 1 Rol. Abr. 261, 262.

Where there were four arbitrators choſen, who were to make their award to be delivered in writing on or before the 20*th of* July, and if they could not agree, then to ſuch umpire as they ſhould name, ſo as the umpirage be made before the 25*th of* July following. The arbitrators made no award on or before the 20*th of* July, but on the 18*th of* July three of the arbitrators, and to which the fourth agreed on the 21*ſt of* July, by their writing dated the 18*th of* July nominated J. S. umpire; who before the 25*th of* July made an award ſuper præmiſſis; reſolved, that here was no compleat nomination till the agreement of the fourth arbitrator with the other three, viz. on the 21ſt of July, and the writing is not to have effect till that time, and it is no writing by intendment till ſealed, tho' it be dated before. And if they had nominated the umpire before the time expired of making their arbitrament, yet it is good enough when no arbitrament is made by them within the time; and judgment for the plaintiff. Cro. Car. 263. pl. 10.

Debt upon a bond for performance of an award of J. S. and J. N. ſo that they make it before or upon the 1ſt day of July, and if not, then to the umpirage of J. D. ſo as he make it on or before the 2d day of July; the arbitrators made no award, but J. N. made his umpirage on the 1ſt day of July; and upon demurrer it was objected, that it was made before the time allotted by the ſubmiſſion, becauſe the arbitrators had all the whole day, (viz.) the 1ſt day of July to make their award, and cited the caſe of Rol. Abr. 262. pl. 6. Sed per curiam, This umpirage is good, for the parties have expreſly given the umpire the 1ſt day for executing his authority; and they did not think the reaſon of the reſolution of the caſe cited to be of any force, viz. that the court would be in confuſion to adjudge which ſhould be good in caſe the arbitrators and the umpire had made ſeveral awards; for the award of the arbitrators, if they had made any, ſhould be adjudged good, but if they had not, then the umpirage ſhould bind, and there would be no confuſion upon concurrence of authority as to the time; for the umpire had not an abſolute but only a conditional concurrence, viz. if the arbitrators make no award within the time, and they thought the caſe in Rol. Abr. was not good law. 2 Jo. 167, 168.

If the condition of an obligation be to ſtand to the award of A. B. C. and D. ita quod the ſaid award before ſuch a day be made in writing by the ſaid A. B. C. and D. or any two of them, under their hands, &c. any two of the arbitrators, without the reſt, may make an award; for though by the firſt part they are bound to ſtand to the award of thoſe four, yet their power is divided by the ſubſequent words, and the ita quod is but an explanation of the condition, and the whole makes but one ſentence. Yelv. 203. See 1 Vent. 50. 2 Keb. 57. Cro. Jac 400.

If the arbitrators and umpire have the ſame time allotted them to make their award in the ſubmiſſion, as to the umpire it is not abſolutely void; for if one of the arbitrators die, or abſolutely refuſe to meddle, then the umpire may determine the matters; otherwiſe not; for two different judges cannot have a concurrent juriſdiction of the ſame thing; and a diſagreement between the arbitrators at their firſt meeting, gives no power to the umpire to interpoſe, becauſe, though they do not agree at their firſt meeting, they may at the next. 2 Sand. 131. 1 Sid. 428, 455. 1 Rol. Abr. 261. 1 Sid. 428. Godb. 241. 2 Sand. 132.

The arbitrators may chooſe the umpire before their own time is expired, for that is no relinquiſhing the arbitration, but a prudent proviſion in caſe they ſhould diſagree; and therefore an award by them at any time before their time expired is good, and an award by the umpire in that time is void. 1 Rol. Abr. 261. Cro. Car. 263. 2 Sand. 132.

If the arbitrators have time to the 10th of June, and if they agree not, to nominate one to determine it by the ſaid 10th; here if the arbitrators chooſe an umpire, that determines their power; for it ſeems plainly the deſign of the parties, that either one or the other may determine it by that time, and not that both ſhall have concurrent juriſdictions. 1 Rol. Abr. 261. 1 Sid. 428. Godb. 241. 2 Sand. 132.

If the arbitrators make an award of part, during their time, the umpire cannot make an award of the reſt, unleſs the ſubmiſſion be, that if the arbitrators make an award of part, or of none, then the umpire may make an accord of the part remaining, or the whole. 1 Rol. Abr. 262.

Umpire by the ſubmiſſion was to make his award the ſame day as was limited to the arbitrators, if the arbitrators did not make theirs; 'tis not good. 2 Vern. 100. pl. 95.

Submiſſion was ita quod the award be made by the arbitrators on or before the 21ſt of May, and if not made before that day, then to ſtand to the award of an umpire, &c. the arbitrators made no award, but choſe an umpire on the 20th of May, who awarded, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 40*l.* before the 11th of June following; it was objected, that they had no power to chooſe an umpire on the 20th of May, becauſe the arbitrators themſelves had power till the end of the 21ſt of May to make their award; ſed non allocatur; for the arbitrators not having made any award, the award of the umpire is good; and judgment for the plaintiff. Lutw. 541, 544.

An award made by the umpire, was (amongſt other things) that the defendant ſhould deliver to the plaintiff ſeveral goods particularly named, and that if any of thoſe goods ſhould be loſt, then the defendant to pay the value of them, to be appraiſed by the arbitrators and umpire; it was moved, that the umpire was void, becauſe of the umpire's reſerving to himſelf and the two arbitrators (who were elected to determine the matters before him) to make a valuation of the goods loſt or miſlaid. Trevor Ch. J. and Blencow, held that this was a thing judicial, and not merely miniſterial, and therefore the award was void; but Powell J. was of another opinion. Lutw. 550, 554.

If the condition of an obligation be to ſtand to the award of A. and B. ſo as the ſaid award be made before ſuch a day; and if they make no award, then to ſtand to the award of ſuch umpire as the ſaid A. and B. ſhall nominate, ſo as the ſaid umpire do make his award before another day, and the arbitrators before the firſt day make no award, but afterwards name C. to be umpire, who thereupon immediately refuſes, and the arbitrators afterwards nominate D. who before the laſt day makes an award; this is a good award; for the nomination of C. to be umpire did not make him ſo; but when he refuſed, it amounted to no more than a bare propoſal to him; and the form of pleading always is ſuſcepto ſuper ſe onere arbitri; ſo that it is the acceptance makes him umpire. 2 Vent. 113, 114.

If the condition of an obligation be, that whereas A. and his ſon, of one part, &c. have ſubmitted to the award of B. and C. ita quod, &c. 1 May; and if they make none, to the award of ſuch umpire as they ſhould chuſe to be made before the 1 June; and the arbitrators make no award, but chooſe an umpire who makes an award, but quoad the ſon awards nothing; this is a void award; for though the ita quod be in the clauſe referring to the arbitrators, and the award is made by the umpire, yet the ita quod relates by conſtruction to the umpire as well as to the arbitrators. 1 Lev. 139, 140.

Submiſſion to two, and an umpire in caſe they ſhould differ; the arbitrators meet, and one of them declared himſelf not clear; the other was for the appellant, upon which the umpire made his award. The queſtion was, whether the umpire had any power in this cauſe, for it was not come to him till the arbitrators differed; which they had not yet, and might ſtill make their award; but the objection was over-ruled. 3 Vin. 97.

It is ſettled that arbitrators cannot proceed on a reference, after they have once named an umpire, for then their authority ceaſes, tho' the time for making the award is not expired. Rep. of Pract. in C. B. 116.

3. Things eſſential to a good award.

Here we muſt obſerve, that the courts of juſtice have of late been more liberal in the conſtruction of awards than formerly, and many of the niceſt diſtinctions to be met with in the books, are by no means to be admitted as precedents in expounding awards at this day; and this the courts do in furtherance of juſtice, and for quieting of controverſies; however, as an award is a judgment, and can only be expounded by itſelf, without the aid of any averment of matters dehors to explain the meaning of the arbitrators, it is neceſſary that in making it five things ſhould be obſerved. Firſt; That it be according to the very ſubmiſſion in reſpect of the perſons and the things ſubmitted: For to award a thing to be done by a ſtranger, and ſometimes to a ſtranger, who is not party to the ſubmiſſion, or to make an award upon another thing that is not ſubmitted, is void: But where the award is of ſeveral things, part within the ſubmiſſion, and part out of it, it is voidable for that which is out of the ſubmiſſion, and good for the reſidue. Secondly; It ought to be equal, and not on one ſide only; for it muſt appoint either party to give or do ſomething beneficial or advantageous. Thirdly; The performance of the award muſt be poſſible and lawful. Fourthly; There muſt be a means by law to attain unto the thing awarded: This is chiefly meant where ſubmiſſion is without bond. Fifthly; It ought to be certain and final, and make an end of all controverſies ſubmitted; or if it is good only in reference to part of the things ſubmitted, it muſt be final as to that part, or elſe it will be void. 21 Ed. 4. 39. b. 10 Co. 57. Dyer 242. Weſt's Symb. 2 part, p. 167. ſect. 44. 5 Rep. 78. 1 Rep. 98. 10 Rep. 131, 132. 1 Rol. Abr. 242, 243, 244, 245, 247, 248, 249, 252, 253. 1 Inſt. 206. a. & b. Noy's Max. 110. Theſe things being obſerved, an award ſhall not be unravelled in a court of equity, unleſs there was corruption in the arbitrators. 1 Chan. Rep. 279.

to

Firſt, An award ought to be according to the ſubmiſſion.

If an award be made of any other thing than what is contained in the ſubmiſſion, it is void; for no acts are my own, or binding to me, unleſs done by me or by commiſſion from me. Plow. 396. Dyer 242.

If arbitrators award to do an act to a ſtranger, this is good; for the ſtranger is put by the arbitrators in the place of the party, and they have power to award this act, ſince it is not impoſſible or unequal, and it is relating to the ſubmiſſion. Mo. 3, 359. 10 Co. 131. 3 Leon. 62. 1 Rol. Abr. 248. Hard. 46. 1 Leon. 316.

But an award that an act ſhould be done by a ſtranger, is void; becauſe he is not within the ſubmiſſion. Hard. 46.

Debt upon an obligation to ſtand to the award of J. S. of all controverſies between them; J. S. awarded, that the defendant ſhould deliver to the plaintiff ſix Kentiſh cloths, which were bartered by J. D. for the thread of the plaintiff; it was objected to be out of the ſubmiſſion; the court ſaid, it ſhall be intended to be in controverſy, if the contrary be not ſhewn, and that they were in the hands of the defendant; and judgment for the plaintiff. Cro. Eliz. 177. pl. 5.

A ſubmiſſion was of controverſies between the plaintiff and defendant and his wife, for divers ſums of money laid out for the defendant at her requeſt, dum ſola fuit. The award was, that the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 340*l.* for all monies laid out by him for the wife, dum ſola fuit; and all the ſuits between them ſhould ceaſe. Action was brought in the Common Pleas upon this award; and judgment for the plaintiff; but upon a writ of error, the court of B. R. held the award void, it being to pay 340*l. for all ſums laid out for the feme (omitting the words*, viz. at her requeſt) and ſo is more than was ſubmitted; and ſo judgment was reverſed. Cro. Jac. 639.

An award was made 8th Feb. de & ſuper præmiſſis, that the defendant, within a week after the award, ſhould pay the plaintiff 7l. 10s. in ſatisfaction of all demands; and that upon payment thereof, each ſhould releaſe to the other all demands; after the ſubmiſſion, and before the award, a new controverſy did ariſe, (viz.) on the 6th Feb. for that the defendant did break and enter the plaintiff's cloſe called B. whereof the arbitrators had notice; after argument, it was reſolved, per tot. cur', That the award was good; and a diverſity taken where the award is in ſatisfaction of all demands till the award, or a releaſe of all demands till the award, this is ill: but where the award is general, without limitation to what time, and made de & ſuper præmiſſis, it ſhall be intended till the time of the ſubmiſſion, which is good; and judgment for the plaintiff. 3 Lev. 168.

If two ſubmit to an award all actions, and the arbitrators award a releaſe of all actions till the time of the award, ſome books have ſaid, that this is void for the whole, becauſe it extends to things partly in the ſubmiſſion and partly to things out of it, and it is one intire act; for ſay they, to do that act they are not obliged, becauſe not within the ſubmiſſion; and to do an act relating only to things contained in the ſubmiſſion, is another act from what is awarded; others have ſaid, that this is not void, unleſs there are ſhewn on the other ſide, cauſes of action ariſing between the time of making the award, otherwiſe none ſhall be intended; and then the releaſe only relates to the things in ſubmiſſion. 10 Co. 131, 132. 1 Rol. Rep. 45, 162, 270. 1 Rol. Abr. 242. Cro. Eliz. 809. Cro. Jac. 353, 447. Poph. 137. 1 Sid. 365. 2 Mod. 169.

But it has been reſolved, and ſeems now ſettled, that the act is not intire; for he may releaſe all actions to the time of the ſubmiſſion; for though there is one deed of releaſe awarded, yet that deed relates to ſeveral things that are dividable in their own nature one from another, and ſo it ſhall be good for what is in the ſubmiſſion, and void for the reſidue. 3 Lev. 188. 2 Mod. 169. 1 Salk. 74. 3 Lev. 413. 2 Lev. 3.

Submiſſion was of all actions, &c. between the plaintiff and defendant. In debt on the bond, the defendant pleaded no award; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award of all actions between the plaintiff and defendant and his wife, and that the defendant pay the plaintiff 20*l. in ſatisfaction of law charges due to him by the defendant's wife, as executrix of &c.* It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the ſubmiſſion ſhould have been of all actions between the plaintiff and the defendant and his wife; but it was held, that it was good as it is, becauſe upon the defendant's inter marriage with his wife, who was the widow and executrix of her former huſband, the plaintiff had an immediate demand on him; and the court being of that opinion, held the award good; and ſo the judgment was confirmed. 8 Mod. 212.

Submiſſion was of all debts, treſpaſſes, and injuries. The award was for the defendant to pay, &c. and to releaſe all actions, debts, duties, treſpaſſes and demands. It was objected, that the words (duties and demands) extend further than the words in the ſubmiſſion, and ſo the award exceeds the ſubmiſſion, and therefore void. Doderidge and Whitlock J. held the award well made, and according to the ſubmiſſion. Jones J. thought the award more large than the ſubmiſſion. But the breach being aſſigned in the non-payment of the money according to the award, the whole court agreed that this is within the ſubmiſſion, and ſo good; and judgment for the plaintiff. 3 Bulſt. 311.

The arbitrators cannot bind a man's liberty or right to real things, where perſonal things are ſubmitted; and therefore if they award ſervice for two years, or a releaſe of the right of lands in ſatisfaction for a treſpaſs, this is void; for no body can be ſuppoſed to ſubmit more than his perſonal eſtate to anſwer a perſonal injury, for that only might be taken in execution for it by the common law; but his perſonal eſtate may be bound to anſwer it; therefore if the arbitrators award a horſe, money, or wine in ſatisfaction for a treſpaſs, this is good; for here a new perſonal duty is raiſed inſtead of the former, and to ſatisfy out of the perſonal eſtate is neceſſarily implied in the ſubmiſſion; for this is a means neceſſary to quiet the matters. 9 Ed. 4. 44. 1 Rol. Abr. 243. 6 Mod. 221. 1 Salk. 76. 1 Rol. Abr. 243. cont.

If two ſubmit all quarrels concerning tithes in a place certain, and the arbitrator awards that one ſhall pay to the other 20*l.* and the other ſhould releaſe to him all actions, this ſhall be intended all actions concerning tithes, unleſs the contrary appear on the other ſide, and the actions may be ſevered; and this ſhall be good for the acts in the ſubmiſſion, and void for the reſt. Palm. 167. 1 Rol. Rep. 362. Cro. Jac. 66.

A ſubmiſſion was of all debts, ſums of money, claims, and demands, &c. The award was, that the plaintiff releaſe to the defendant all bonds, ſpecialties, judgments, executions and extents. It was objected, that this exceeds the ſubmiſſion; ſed non allocatur; for debts, ſums of money, and demands, whether due by bond, judgment, execution, or extent, are within the ſubmiſſion, and conſequently the arbitrators may award a releaſe of them. 2 Saund. 188.

Upon a ſubmiſſion to ſtand to an award touching all matters in difference between the parties, the award was, that they make general releaſes to each other of all demands. Upon error brought, it was inſiſted, that the word (demands) is of a larger ſignification than the word (differences.) But Roll Ch. J. anſwered, that if the releaſe be more large in words, yet it is good enough; for it ſhall be intended only of all matters in debate between the parties, ties, and the court will not intend other matters, unleſs ſhewn in pleading; and to this the judges agreed, and judgment for the plaintiff, niſi, &c. Sty. 170.

Where the ſubmiſſion is general and conditional to end all controverſies, an indictment for a battery is not a controverſy between the parties, within the meaning of the ſubmiſſion, for that is the King's ſuit; and if the arbitrators award the ceaſing of ſuch a proſecution, it would be void, becauſe it would be to obſtruct juſtice. Reſolved, Freem. Rep. 204. pl. 208.

A ſubmiſſion of all debts and demands, and a releaſe of all judgments, executions and extents awarded, is a good award. 2 Sand. 190.

A ſubmiſſion of all matters between the plaintiff and another, and an award made of things that the party hath in right of his wife, is good; for theſe things are comprehended under the words all matters. 10 Hen. 6. 18. 3 Bulſt. 65.

A ſubmiſſion of all injuries; an award of all debts, duties and treſpaſſes, a good award; for whatever is againſt law is an injury. 3 Bulſt. 312, 313.

A ſubmiſſion of all actions now depending, and an award of all actions, good; for it ſhall be intended actions depending. Cro. Eliz. 66, 858.

There is a controverſy between A. and B. on one part, and C. D. and E. on the other part, and C. for himſelf, and D. and E. ſubmits the matter, and promiſes to ſtand to the award; if the award be that C. ſhall pay ſo much in ſatisfaction of the controverſy, it ſhall bind him, though it concerns D. and E. who are ſtrangers to the ſubmiſſion, inaſmuch as the thing awarded, is to be done by him, and not by the ſtrangers to the ſubmiſſion. 1 Rol. Abr. 244.

Debt upon a bond of ſubmiſſion, dated the 13 January, of all quarrels depending, &c. the defendant pleaded nullum arbitrium; the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award made 14 April de & ſuper premiſſis, that defendant ſhould pay him 20*l.* &c. in full ſatisfaction of all demands till the day of the award; and upon demurrer to this replication it was objected, that the bond only extended to all quarrels and demands then depending; but the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe it ſhall not be intended that there were any new demands between them between the date of the bond and the day of the making the award. Hob. 191.

If there be a controverſy between the parſon and his pariſhioners, whether tithes ſhall be paid in ſpecie or not, and they ſubmit all controverſies, and the arbitrators award that they ſhall pay ſo much a year for tithes, this is good; for that was the debate on the award. 1 Rol. Abr. 254.

If the ſubmiſſion be of all controverſies to the time of the ſubmiſſion, and the award be that one of them ſhould deliver up an obligation made ſince the ſubmiſſion, in ſatisfaction of all matters, &c. this is good; becauſe the bond is given only in ſatisfaction. 1 Rol. Abr. 246.

An award may be good, though part of it be made of a thing not within the ſubmiſſion; as if an award be to pay 1000*l.* and to procure a perſon to be bound to pay 22*l. per ann.* the plaintiff muſt lay the breach in not paying the 1000*l.* for as to the other part it is wholly void. See 1 Leon. 304, 305. Cro. Jac. 149. Poph. 134. 10 Co. 131. 5 Co. 78.

So to an award, which was that one ſhall ceaſe all ſuits, and that he ſhall procure a ſtranger to the ſubmiſſion to be bound in a bond with him to make a feoffment, &c. of his manor of D. all which was out of the ſubmiſſion: Now in this caſe the firſt thing was good, (viz.) to ceaſe all ſuits; but the ſecond was illegal, and out of the ſubmiſſion; yet the award being good in part, ought to be performed. 2 Bulſt. 39.

The ſubmiſſion was to four arbitrators, and to the umpirage of the fifth, and all five made the award; adjudged good, and that they might all join in making it; but it had been otherwiſe, if the ſubmiſſion had been divided, (viz.) to the arbitration of four, and if they did not agree, then to an umpire; for in ſuch caſe they could not all join in making the award. 1 Bulſt. 184.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award; the defendant pleaded, that the ſubmiſſion was of all actions depending between him and the plaintiff, and the arbitrators awarded, that he (the defendant) ſhould releaſe all ſuits to the plaintiff, which he averred he had done; the plaintiff in his replication confeſſed, that ſuch an award was made, but that the arbitrators farther awarded, that the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 15*l.* on ſuch a day, at the houſe of W. R. a ſtranger, which he had not paid; and traverſed, that they awarded only as the defendant had alledged in his plea: There was an ill rejoinder, to which there was a demurrer; and it was objected, that both the plea and the award were naught, becauſe the ſubmiſſion was of all ſuits depending, and the arbitrators awarded a releaſe of all ſuits generally whether depending or not, which releaſe is not good; and if ſo the award is not good for the 15*l.* but adjudged, that tho' it was void in part, yet that did not make the whole award void: Then it was objected againſt the replication, that the plaintiff had traverſed, that the arbitrators made ſuch an award only as the defendant had ſet forth in his plea, when in truth, what is not expreſly alledged, ſhall never be traverſed; but adjudged, that the traverſe was good, for when the defendant alledged, that the award was for him to releaſe all ſuits, that ſhall be intended the whole award; but when the plaintiff had ſhewed, that ſomething more was awarded, he muſt traverſe what was alledged by the defendant, and after ſuch a traverſe he muſt conclude to the country. 2 Bulſt. 33.

If the arbitrators award on one ſide an act contained in the ſubmiſſion, and on the other ſide an act out of it, this is a void award for the whole; for this is unequal, becauſe there is ſomething on the one ſide awarded only, and nothing on the other; for what they intended to balance it with on the other, appears to be void. Poph. 134. Cro. Jac. 149. 3 Mod. 372.

If the arbitrators award 10*l.* to one of the parties, and 5*l.* to a ſtranger, this is good as to the party himſelf, and void for the ſtranger. 2 Saund. 293.

An award may be good, though made of leſs than is contained in the ſubmiſſion; as if the ſubmiſſion be of all actions, treſpaſſes, demands and controverſies, and the award be made of ſome only, this is good; for no more ſhall be ſuppoſed to be made known to the arbitrator; and if there be other cauſes of action in being, and they be made known to the arbitrator, they muſt be ſhewn on the other ſide; and this as well where the ſubmiſſion is conditional by ita quod, as where it is abſolute; for the award being made de præmiſſis ſhall be ſuppoſed to ſettle all things. Hob. 49. 8 Co. 98. Cro. Jac. 278, 235. 1 Sand. 32. 1 Brownl. 63. 2 Brownl. 310. 1 Sid. 12. 1 Sand. 32. Dyer 216, 242. Hard. 45.

The ſubmiſſion was to four arbitrators, and the award was made by three of them, and yet adjudged good by all the judges in the Exchequer-Chamber; for it ſhall be taken to be a ſubmiſſion to four, or any three of them, becauſe the ſubmiſſion was conditional, (viz.) ſo that they, or any three of them, made the award, &c. Bridgm. 90.

The bond of ſubmiſſion was of all ſuits, &c. and it was dated on the 29*th of December*, and the award was to be made before the 6*th day of January* following; and accordingly on the 5*th day of January* the award was made de & ſuper præmiſſis, by which the defendant was awarded to pay 72*l.* to the plaintiff, and that each of them ſhould releaſe the other of all ſuits before the 28*th of December* laſt paſt: After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the award was void, becauſe there might be ſuits depending between the parties on the 29*th of December*; but adjudged, that the award being made de & ſuper præmiſſis, it ſhall not be intended, that any new action ſhould ariſe between the parties, after the 28*th and before the* 29*th of December*. Cro. Car. 157.

If the award be conditioned to be delivered in writing under hand and ſeal, the circumſtances muſt be obſerved, or the award is void; and therefore if it be delivered under the ſeal only, it is not ſufficient. Dyer 243. 2 Rol. Rep. 24. 1 Bulſt. 110. 1 Rol. Abr. 245. Cro. Jac. 277.

If two ſubmit all actions till the ninth of June, ita quod arbitrium fiat de præmiſſis, and an award is made of all actions till the ſeventh, ſome have ſaid this is leſs than the the ſubmiſſion, and void; but the better opinion is, that this is well enough, eſpecially, unleſs there be ſhewn on the other ſide an action ariſing between the ſeventh and ninth. 1 Rol. Rep. 362. 2 Rol. Rep. 12, 193. Cro. Car. 216, 217.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award to be made by arbitrators choſen by the plaintiff and defendant, and one Nathaniel Hilliard, to determine all controverſies between them, or either of them, &c. the defendant pleaded no award; the plaintiff replied and ſet forth an award, and amongſt other things, that the parties ſhould ſign mutual releaſes; and upon demurrer to this replication it was objected, that the award was void, for by the bond of ſubmiſſion it muſt be intended, that there were ſome controverſies between all the parties, but Hilliard is not appointed to do any thing; and yet he will take advantage of this releaſe, if he ſhould be concerned in intereſt with the plaintiff or defendant; but it was held, that the ſubmiſſion being to determine all controverſies between the parties, or either of them, by theſe words it muſt be intended, than an award ſhould be made between ſome of them, tho' it might not be between them all, therefore either of them in this place ſhall be taken ſeverally and not jointly; and ſo is Hungate's caſe, if the words had been between any of them, it had been no queſtion. 2 Lutw. 1625.

The bond of ſubmiſſion was of all controverſies depending, &c. The award was, that all ſuits now depending between the parties ſhall ceaſe, and that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 10*l.* in full of all demands, and ſhould releaſe all demands to the plaintiff to the time of the award; and that upon payment of the 10*l.* to the plaintiff he ſhould execute a releaſe to the defendant; adjudged, upon a writ of error in B. R. on a judgment for the plaintiff in C. B. that an award that all ſuits, &c. ſhall ceaſe, is final, for if the ſuit fails he has no remedy to come at his right; that an award of a releaſe of all demands to the time of the award, is good, becauſe no new demands ſhall be intended to ariſe after the ſubmiſſion and before the award made; therefore 'tis a good performance of it to tender a releaſe of all demands to the time of the ſubmiſſion, for if there were any new demands afterwards, thoſe are not within the ſubmiſſion; and laſtly, if the plaintiff would not receive the 10*l.* becauſe he muſt then give a releaſe; in ſuch caſe, upon the tender and refuſal of the money, he is as much obliged to give a releaſe as if he had actually received it. 1 Salk. 74.

The ſubmiſſion was of all demands, ſo as the award was made before the 10*th day of* December, &c. Upon nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award made on the 9*th day of* December, &c. that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 14*l.* at ſeveral days, and that upon the laſt day of payment the parties ſhould give to each other general releaſes; it was objected, that nothing could be releaſed, but what was before the 10*th day of* December, that being the day on which the bond was dated; but here every thing was to be releaſed between the parties before the laſt day of the payment of 14*l.* to which they never ſubmitted, and therefore the award was void; adjudged, that it was good, for it ſhall not be intended that there were any matters in controverſy between them after the date of the bond, and before the laſt day of payment of the money. Hutt. 29.

Secondly, An award ought to be equal, and not on one ſide only.

Awards muſt not be on one ſide only; this muſt be underſtood thus; that all controverſies being between two parties, that which is awarded to be done to one muſt be an advantage to both, ſo as to end the controverſy, and diſcharge one as well as give ſatisfaction to the other; for if it doth not, it is manifeſtly unjuſt; and therefore whenever it appears to the court that, notwithſtanding the award, the thing remains a duty as before, and is not diſcharged, that apparently is an award on one ſide, and conſequently is void; not that where one party is by the award to have ſomething paid him, or the like, and not the other, that that award ſhould be naught; for perhaps nothing may be due to him, and he might be the only treſpaſſor in the caſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 253. 8 Co. 98.

Thus in caſe of a treſpaſs ſubmitted, the arbitrators award that one ſhall pay the other 3*l.* this is void, becauſe only on one ſide; for it is not ſaid for what, and ſo the treſpaſs is not diſcharged, and then the other party hath no advantage by the award; but if it were awarded de et ſuper præmiſſis, it would be well enough; likewiſe if the award had been that he ſhall pay 3*l.* for a treſpaſs, it had been good, and yet one only was to do an act, but then the treſpaſs by that award had been diſcharged. 1 Rol. Abr. 253, 254. Hob. 49.

The ſubmiſſion was of all ſuits and demands, &c. and in an action of debt brought on the bond, the defendant pleaded nullum arbitrium; the plaintiff replied, ſhewing an award de et ſuper præmiſſis, that whereas there was a ſuit depending between them for 20*l.* which ſum the defendant promiſed to pay, the arbitrator did award, that it being long due, the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 22*l.* adjudged, that this was a good award on both parties, for the one received his debt, and the other, by paying it, was diſcharged of his promiſe. 9 Rep. 97.

Submiſſion was of all ſuits between the parties then depending in the ſpiritual court, concerning tithes; the award was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 40*s. on ſuch a day for the* tithes, &c. adjudged, that the award was void, becauſe there was not any thing awarded for the defendant to have, or that he be freed from the ſuit, and ſo he has no advantage thereby. Cro. Eliz. 904.

Upon a ſubmiſſion of all treſpaſſes, duties, and demands, the award was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff, in ſatisfaction of all treſpaſſes done to him by the defendant before the day of the ſubmiſſion, ſo much. In debt upon this award defendant demurred to the declaration, and inſiſted that the award was void, it being of one ſide; for the plaintiff was to do nothing. But adjudged good; for by the payment of the money he is acquitted of all treſpaſſes done to the plaintiff, and it is a good bar againſt him, and it ſhall not be intended that the arbitrators had notice that the defendant had any cauſe of action againſt the plaintiff, unleſs ſhewn on the defendant's part; and judgment for the plaintiff, Houghton hæſitante. Cro. Jac. 354.

If an award be, that an obligor in a ſingle obligation ſhall pay the debt, this is no award, unleſs it be provided that he be diſcharged; for payment in that caſe is no diſcharge. Hob. 49. pl. 55.

But if the award be, that the one ſhall pay 10*l. for treſpaſs*, it is good; for a ſatisfaction implies a diſcharge, and that is the reaſon of the judgment in Baſpool's caſe. Hob. 49.

A. and B. ſubmit all actions had by A. againſt B. and all actions by B. againſt A. and the arbitrators awarded that A. ſhall go quit of all actions had by B. againſt him, this is naught; becauſe they ſay nothing as to the other actions. 7 Hen. 6. 40. 1 Rol. Abr. 253.

An award that one ſhould have ſuch trees, and that the other ſhould give him ſecurity to pay 16*l.* is void, becauſe it is not certain what ſecurity; and then that part of the award being void, the other part muſt be void too; for elſe it would be an advantage to one only. Cro. Jac. 314.

If one party alone be ordered to do ſomethiug, and nothing elſe appears to the court, it ſhall be preſumed that he alone was the wrong doer, and the award is good, if it appears that he is by the award diſcharged of all actions that might be brought againſt him for that wrong; but when it appears that they deſign both parties ſatisfaction for the wrong done each of them, there if the ſatisfaction deſigned one be not well awarded, the whole ſhall be void for the partiality. 1 Rol. Abr. 253.

A naked award is no good plea in treſpaſs, unleſs ſomething be awarded to the plaintiff in amends; for if there be no treſpaſs there is nothing about which an award can be made; and if there be one, and they do not award ſatisfaction, they do not act according to the deſign of their inſtitution, for they are not indifferent, and ſo their is no good award. 1 Brownl. 63. Cro. Eliz. 904. 1 Rol. Abr. 251.

An award that one ſhall pay money, and the other ſhall execute a releaſe to him who paid it, is a void award; but this muſt be intended where the ſubmiſſion is by word; for in ſuch caſe the award is void, becauſe it is of one ſide; for when the money is paid, the other hath no remedy to enforce the execution of a releaſe; for he cannot have an action on the caſe, and the reaſon why it will not lie upon an award is, becauſe that is in nature of a judgment. Poph. 134.

Award was, that the defendant pay the plaintiff 10l. and that the plaintiff pay the defendant the expences at making the award, and upon all this being done, each ſhall give the other a general releaſe. It was objected, that the award was void becauſe nothing is awarded to the defendant but the releaſe, and that is not to be made till all be perform'd, which cannot be, becauſe the award of the expences at the making the award, which the plaintiff is to pay, is ſubſequent matter, and out of the ſubmiſſion; but Hale Ch. J. inclined that the releaſe ſhall be made upon the performance of what is well awarded, and not ſtay till that be performed, which is void, and ſo the award may be good. Sed adjornatur. 2 Lev. 3.

If treſpaſs be of beaſts taken and detained, and they arbitrate that the owner ſhall have the beaſts again, this is void; for it is againſt natural juſtice to give him his own again without ſatisfaction for the unjuſt taking and detention. 1 Rol. Abr. 251.

An award that one ſhall go to Rome or Paul's not good, becauſe to no body's advantage. 1 Rol. Abr. 252.

An award that two ſhall intermarry, no good award; for that ought to be at the parties choice; and the bodies of the parties are not ſubmitted to the power of the arbitrators. 9 Ed. 4. 44. 1 Rol. Abr. 252.

If the award give ſatisfaction for ſlanderous words ſpoke of a man about a crime which it appears was pardoned, that award is void; for if the crime be pardoned, no harm could come to him by ſpeaking them, therefore the award is unequal. 1 Sid. 178.

Award was, that the defendant ſhould be bound with ſureties, ſuch as the plaintiff ſhall approve, in the ſum of 150l to be paid to him at ſuch a time, and that then they ſhould ſeal mutual releaſes. It was moved that the ſureties are ſtrangers to the ſubmiſſion, and ſo the defendant not bound to procure them; and per cur. The award is void, it being ſuch as the plaintiff ſhould approve; whereas if he does not like the ſecurity given, then he is not to ſeal a releaſe, and then the award is only of one ſide. 3 Mod. 272.

H. and W. ſubmit to the award of J. S. who awards that H. ſhall pay to W. 15l. which he adjudged the ſaid W. to have ſuſtained in coſts and damages, by reaſon of a ſuit without cauſe commenced by H. againſt W. and that all ſuits and differences between them, depending before the date of the bond ſhall ceaſe. It was argued, that it does not appear that any difference was between the parties except the ſuit on which the 15l. coſts were awarded, which was H.'s own ſuit, and ſo no benefit to him to ſtay it, and pay 15*l.* coſts. It was anſwered, that other differences might be intended, tho' not ſet forth, and that this award ſtops H. from applying for coſts, which W. might be ſubject to in the action mentioned in the award; and the court inclined that the award was good; ſed adjornatur. 2 Vent. 221.

If an award be, that if one will make his law that he did not treſpaſs, that then he ſhall go quit, not good; for that cannot be pleaded in bar of an action; for it ſuppoſes contrary to the ſubmiſſion, that there was no treſpaſs; neither can it be averred that the award was for the ſame treſpaſs the action was brought for; for it ſuppoſes no treſpaſs. 43 E. 3. 28. 19 Hen. 6. 37. 1 Rol. Abr. 251. Dyer 356.

There are controverſies between A. and B. and A. and C. as attorney to B. ſubmit to an award; the arbitrators award ſo much money to A. and that A. and C. ſhall releaſe to each other, to the uſe of each other, this is void, becauſe the award is on one ſide, for B. cannot take advantage of the releaſe, for that is to the uſe of C. Carth. 412.

The award may be beneficial to the party, though a thing is awarded to be done to a ſtranger to the ſubmiſſion; as if the arbitrators award that one of the parties ſhall pay money to the ſervant of the other. 3 Leon. 62.

If an award be to pay ſo much money in diſcharge of all actions, a releaſe ſhall be intended to be awarded, unleſs the contrary be ſhewn on the other ſide. 2 Rol. Rep. 1.

Award was, that the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 7l. 15s. (but did not ſay in ſatisfaction of all demands) and that both of them ſhould be at equal charge at the payment of the money, &c. and upon a demurrer to this plea it was objected that the award was void, it being only of one ſide; for the money was not awarded to be paid in ſatisfaction or diſcharge of any thing; and judgment for the plaintiff, per tot. cur'. Lutw. 281, 283.

Two ſubmit to an award. Nothing was awarded as to one, but only that all actions ſhall ceaſe; yet the court held this to be a good award. Comb. 212.

A ſubmiſſion to award was of all matters in controverſy by rule of court; and award was made, that ſo much money ſhould be paid on one ſide, and nothing was awarded of the other ſide; and moved to ſet it aſide as being an award only ex parte. Per Holt, The common exceptions againſt an award will not hold here, it being an award upon ſubmiſſion by rule of court; for tho' there be no releaſe awarded of one ſide, yet the ſubmiſſion was of all matters in controverſy; and we will not grant an attachment before they tender a releaſe; for if one comes to have aid of the court, he ſhall do that which is fair and equitable before he has it. 12 Mod. 234.

Thirdly, The performance of the award muſt be poſſible and lawful.

If the arbitrators award a thing impoſſible ex natura rei, it is void; as if they award a ſum of money to be paid at a day paſt, it is void. 8 Ed. 4. 1. b. But if they award a thing which cannot be done, but is not in the nature of the act itſelf contradictory or repugnant; this may be a good award; for there is no conſtruction to be made of the award, but by the words thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 248.

If an award be, that one ſhall make a feoffment to another of an acre, and immediately after deliver the charters, this is good, becauſe they may be delivered in the ſame inſtant. 1 Rol. Abr. 248. Moor 3, 359.

If A. and B. merchants of a ſhip on the one part, and C. and D. part-owners with all other part-owners, and mariners of the ſhip, on the other part, ſubmit to the award of J. S. of all matters concerning a prize taken, by way of repriſal, and A. and B. enter into an obligation, and C. and D. in another obligation to perform the award, and J. S. awards that A. and B. the merchants, ſhall pay 1000*l.* to C. and D. for the uſe of them, and the reſidue of the part-owners and mariners; this is a good award, for if A. and B. do not pay the money, the part-owners and mariners may have an action of debt againſt them in as much as all have ſubmitted to the award, and if they pay the money to C. and D. to the uſe of them, and the reſidue of the part-owners and mariners, though it be not divided how much each ſhall have, yet in as much as they have jointly ſubmitted, it may be jointly awarded to be paid to them; and tho' it be to be paid to C. and D. for the uſe of them and the reſidue of the part-owners and mariners; and it was objected, that the reſidue of the part-owners and mariners had no remedy for their part, but by action, yet this is a good award; for it is a good award to award that one ſhall enter into an obligation to pay a ſum, which is but a thing in action, and the reſt of the part-owners and mariners may have remedy, at the leaſt in Chancery, againſt C. and D. if not at Common law. Mich. 24 Car. B. R. Between Wood and others plaintiffs, and Thompſon and Clement defendants, adjudged, upon demurrer. 1 Rol. Abr. 249.

Upon a ſubmiſſion between the parſon and pariſhioners, as to tithes, &c. the award was, that when the pariſhioners clip the ſheep, they ſhould give notice to the parſon, ſo that he or his ſervants may be there. Hutton J. thought it unreaſonable for the pariſhioners to be ſeeking every where after the parſon; but Crooke J. held it good, and that the parſon is always reſident on the parſonage; and judgment was given accordingly for the plaintiff. Palm. 30.

An award that a ſtranger ſhall do an act is void, becauſe another in his natural freedom is not ſuppoſed within my power. 1 Leon. 316. 3 Leon. 62. Hard. 46.

An

An award to levy a fine is good; for though it is an act of the court, yet by the law and publick juſtice of the kingdom, it is not to be refuſed to any man; but if the award be to command the juſtices to do it, this is no good award; for the parties in effect pray leave to agree from the King himſelf, which is quite different from the nature of a command. 1 Rol. Abr. 249.

An award to pay ſo much apud domum J. S. good; for he is not bound to pay it in the houſe, but as near as he can to it, or it ſhall be intended a common inn; and if the party will not let him pay there, it has been ſaid that the endeavour is ſufficient; for they cannot award any thing that will make the party a treſpaſſer. 1 Rol. Abr. 249. 1 Rol. Rep. 6. Cro. Car. 226. 2 Bulſt. 39. 3 Lev. 153.

An award that one of the parties ſhould diſcharge the other of a bond in which both were bound to a ſtranger, this is a good award; for it ſhall be intended that the money was to be paid at a day to come; and therefore he might then tender it and acquit the other; and if the day of payment be paſt, he may pay the penalty and compel the other to give a releaſe in a court of equity. 1 Jones 431. Cro. Car. 541.

An award that one of the parties ſhall do a thing out of his power, as to deliver up a deed which is in the cuſtody of J. S. is void; agreed per cur'. 12 Mod. 585.

If an arbitrator awards a thing againſt law, this is void. 1 Rol. Abr. 249.

An award was, that intereſt ſhould be paid to the plaintiff for money, &c. defendant demurred, for that the award was void, becauſe it was for payment of intereſt, and uſury is a thing unlawful; but it was anſwered, that it ſhall not be taken for uſury, but rather for damages for forbearance of the money; but admitting it was for intereſt in the proper ſignification of the word, yet 'tis good; for by the ſtatutes, &c. contracts for intereſt-money are not void, ſo as they did not exceed ſo much as is limited by thoſe laws; and the opinion of the court was, That the award was good; for an arbitrament ſhall not be taken abſolutely upon the bare words. No judgment was given. Win. 114, 120.

An award that one of the parties ſhall diſcharge the other from his undertaking to pay a debt to a third perſon, a good award; for by the award he is ſet in the place of the other perſon, and the creditor upon payment is compellable in equity to give a releaſe. 1 Mod. Rep. 9.

An award the tenth day of the term to ſtay the ſuit and judgment given in the action that term; in an action for non-performance; and non aſſumpſit pleaded; it was moved in arreſt, that every judgment given was of the firſt day of the term, and ſo the award to ſtay the ſuit then was altogether impoſſible; but it was held, that though this might have been a good objection upon a ſpecial demurrer, where it is ſhewn for cauſe, yet now the court muſt give judgment on this record only; and it doth appear on this record when judgment was given on the other. Yelv. 35.

If A. and B. ſubmit to the award of J. S. and he awards that A. ſhall pay to B. 30*l.* within two months next following, and that upon payment they ſhall give mutual releaſes to one another, and within the ſaid two months B. dies, the money ſhall be paid to his executor, who thereupon muſt releaſe; for the award creates a duty. 2 Vent. 249.

Award to pay 450l to an infant, and that guardian ſhall give bond that infant at his full age convey the lands in queſtion, was ſet aſide becauſe unreaſonable; per Finch C. 1 Chan. Caſes 280. Trin. 28 Car. 2. Cavendiſh's caſe.

A. and B. where partners; A. in behalf of himſelf and partner, referred all differences, &c. between them and the plaintiff to J. S. and promiſed to perform his award; J. S. awarded, that all ſuits proſecuted by the plaintiff againſt the defendant ſhould ceaſe, and that he pay the plaintiff, &c. Exception was taken, becauſe the ſubmiſſion was only of matters concerning the partnerſhip, where the award is, that all ſuits ſhall ceaſe; and alſo that it was of all ſuits between the plaintiff and partner, and the award is, that all ſuits proſecuted againſt the defendant only ſhall ceaſe; and likewiſe that B. the other partner, is no party to the ſubmiſſion. Sed non allocatur; for no difference ſhall be intended, but what concerned the plaintiff and defendant, as the defendant was concerned with B. in trade only, unleſs the contrary appears, and if ſo it ſhould be ſhewn on the other ſide; and it ſhall be likewiſe intended, that all ſuits ſhall ceaſe only between the plaintiff and defendant, and that was an award on both ſides, becauſe it has the effect of a releaſe; and alſo A. the defendant may undertake for B. his partner, and having promiſed that he ſhould perform the award on his part (tho' B. be not bound) yet if B. refuſes, it is a breach of A's promiſe, and ſo the plaintiff had judgment upon the firſt argument. 2 Mod. 227.

Fourthly, There muſt be a means by law to attain unto the thing awarded.

If it be awarded, that a perſon ſhall procure a ſtranger to do a thing, and he hath no means by law to compel the ſtranger to do it, the award is void; but if he has any means to compel the ſtranger to do it, either by the Common law or in Chancery, he is bound hereby. 1 Rol. Abr. 248.

So an award that he ſhall be bound with ſureties, is void as to the ſureties. 1 Rol. Abr. 248. But the party himſelf may be awarded to pay any thing, tho' he hath it not. 1 Rol. Abr. 248.

Though a man may bind himſelf by obligation upon condition to cauſe a ſtranger to infeoff the obligee, this is his folly; but an arbitrator is a judge intended to be indifferent, and therefore he ſhall not award that a man ſhall do a thing which does not lie in his power; for he has no means to compel the ſtranger to be bound. Br. Arbitrament, pl. 39.

If the award be, that he ſhall levy a fine before the juſtices de banco before ſuch a day, it is good, though this cannot be done without the act of the court. 1 Rol. Abr. 248. But if the award be, that one ſhall command the juſtices de banco to make him to levy a fine before a certain day, this is void, becauſe it is not in his power. 1 Rol. Abr. 249.

Fifthly, An award ought to be certain and final; and make an end of all controverſies.

An award is in nature of a judgment, it ought to be wholly deciſive, for if it doth not determine the matter, it becomes a new controverſy; therefore if the arbitrators award a bond for quiet enjoyment of lands, without appointing a certain ſum, this is a void award, and the party is not obliged to give bond to the value of the land; for then the ſenſe of the award muſt be ſupplied by averment; now if it hath the credit of a judgment, there can be no interpretation made of the award, but by the words of the award itſelf; for if it receives its meaning from any matters out of the award, the mind of the arbitrators is only gueſt at, and not expreſs'd; but the parties intended to be obliged only by what the arbitrators themſelves declared to be their award, and the bond to be according to the value, they cannot aſſign their power to any perſon to aſſeſs the value. 5 Co. 77. Cro. Eliz. 432. 1 Rol. Abr. 263. Moor 359. 1 Rol. Rep. 271. Dyer 242. Yelv. 78.

So if the arbitrators award that one party ſhall give ſecurity to the other, for the payment of 16*l.* this is not a good award, becauſe it doth not appear what ſecurity, whether by bond or otherwiſe. Cro. Jac. 314.

An award was, that the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 3*l.* 10*s.* but it was not ſaid for what; per Hobart Ch. J. This can imply nothing, nor can it be holpen by any averment. But if another action were brought for the treſpaſs, no doubt this award may be pleaded with an averment; he ſays there was no judgment in this caſe, for tho' he was and is clear of that opinion, and the reſt concurr'd, yet there was ſome varying after, and ſo it hung, and he thinks it was compounded; for he heard no more of it. Hob. 49, 50.

An award was to pay money, but expreſs'd no place where it ſhould be paid. Reſolved, that in law this ſhould have a reaſonable conſtruction, and the party ought to have a reaſonable time for the payment; but Foſter conceived it not good, becauſe in ſuch caſe the bond of ſubmiſſion would would be immediately forfeited, becauſe there was neither time nor place where the money ſhould be paid; but in anſwer to this were cited 3 H. 7. and 16 E. 4. where it is ſaid, that if an arbitrator awards that one party ſhall pay ſo much ſuch a day, and keeps the award in his pocket till the day be paſt, yet the bond ſhall not be forfeited; and ſo it was adjudged by all the other juſtices. 2 Brownl. 211.

An infant ſubmitted himſelf to an arbitrament, and the award was, that the infant ſhould pay 5*l. for quit rents, and other ſmall things*, and it doth not appear what thoſe ſmall things were; ſo that it might be for ſuch things for which the infant by the law was not chargeable, and therefore it is void for the uncertainty; per Heath J. and Bramſton Ch. J. but by Bramſton, if it had appear'd certainly that the things had been ſuch for which the infant is by the law chargeable, perhaps it had been good. Mar. 144, 145.

The award was, that one ſhall keep and enjoy the goods, paying ſo much money to the other. It was objected, that this was void, becauſe they have not awarded, that the money ſhall be paid, but that they ſhall have the goods, paying, &c. But Windham J. held the award good, for tho' it is not expreſsly to pay, yet it ſhall be taken according to the intent, which without doubt was, that money ſhould be paid. Sid. 54. pl. 20.

If the condition of an obligation be to ſubmit to an award all controverſies between A. and B. and an award is made that A. ſhall permit B. to enjoy certain leaſes of lands purchaſed from J. S. and that B. ſhall pay the rents, and perform the covenants, and deliver to A. a true copy of the leaſes, and pay the arrears to the time of the purchaſe from J. S. this is a good award as to the rents and covenants, though not particularly ſpecified; for it is true, an award is to be interpreted by its own words, and not by any matter out of the aw.rd which doth not appear in the words; but when the words of an award have relation to things certain out of the award, theſe things may be averred; for that is the expreſs mind of the arbitrators, which they have expreſsly referred to; but as to the arrears the award is void, becauſe they have not referred to any matter that falls within the conuzance of B. for he cannot compel A. or J. S. to ſet the time of the purchaſe; and an award of what cannot be certainly done is not a certain determination. 1 Rol. Abr. 264.

If an award be, that one ſhall acquit the other of an obligation of 200*l. aut eo circiter*, and the party is bound in an obligation of 105*l. aut eo circiter*, this is a good award. 1 Rol. Abr. 263.

If an award be, that one ſhall pay the other 6*l.* on the twenty-firſt of May, and the other ſhould releaſe his right in certain lands prædict' primo die Maii, omitting viceſimo, not good, becauſe there was not any former day before mentioned, and ſo the mind of the arbitrators not underſtood. 1 Rol. Abr. 263.

Award was, that one ſhould pay to the other for taſk-work and day-work, but did not mention how much. This is void by reaſon of the uncertainty; and the averment that the taſk-work and day-work amounted to ſo much, will not help it. 2 Saund. 292, 293.

An award was, that the defendant ſhould pay two-thirds of all the plaintiff's coſts to his attorney or bailiff, in & circa ſectam prædictam. It was objected to be uncertain; for tho' an award to pay coſts to be taxed by the prothonotary has been allowed, 1 Sid. 358. yet here no perſon is named who is to tax the coſts, and therefore an award to pay coſts of ſuit in an inferior court is void, 1 Salk. 75. and here it is to pay coſts to the bailiff, and therefore is like the caſe in 3 Lev. 413. to pay all reaſonable expences in ſuch a ſuit, which was held to be void. Sed non allocatur; for an award to pay coſts in ſuch a ſuit is ſufficient, without ſaying any thing more; for they may be aſcertained. Comyns's Rep. 329, 330.

If A. and B. merchants, and C. and D. with all the other owners and mariners, ſubmit to the award of J. S. concerning a ſhip taken by way of reprizal, and A. and B. enter into an obligation on one ſide, and C. and D. on the other, and 1000*l.* is awarded to C. and D. to the uſe of themſelves and the reſt of the owners and mariners, that is a good award, though every man has not a certain allotment, for C. and D. ſubmit jointly in the name of the reſt; and therefore an award of any thing to them as one perſon, without ſubdiviſion, is good; and C. and D. being intruſted for the reſt, they are bound to make a reaſonable diviſion; if not at Common law, at leaſt in Chancery. 1 Rol. Abr. 249.

If an award be made that A. ſhall pay B. his days work, and taſk-work, and B ſhould then pay 25*l.* to A. and then they ſhould make each other general releaſes, this is a void award, and cannot be helped by averment that he paid ſuch a certain ſum for days work and taſk-work, becauſe the award is void in itſelf, by not ſettling the certain ſum; and if that is void upon which the ſubſequent payment and releaſes are to be made, the whole award muſt be void. 2 Sand. 293.

Submiſſion was of all differences, &c. concerning a piece of ground uſed as a wharf, and all erections thereon, which were nuſances to the plaintiff's houſe. The defendant pleaded No award; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth the award; by which it was awarded that the defendant ſhould enjoy the wharf, and that the erections ſhould be pull'd down within 58 days from the date of the award. And upon demurrer it was objected againſt the replication, by reaſon of thoſe omiſſions; but per cur. The day of the making the award is the day of the date; and by 3 juſtices, The erections ſhall be pull'd down by him on whoſe ground they ſtand; but as to this laſt point, Holt Ch. J. ſeem'd e contra. 1 Salk. 76.

Award was to pay 20*l.* the one moiety in hand preſently, and the other moiety within ſix months after the date of the award, this is good, and ſhall refer to the time of the award made or given up, altho' without any date; and in this caſe by the ſubmiſſion they are not bound to make any award in writing. 3 Bulſt. 311.

An award that one ſhall pay part of the charge of the voyage, and allow his part of the loſs, that ſhall come to the ſhip upon account, this is good; for it may be reduced to certainty. 1 Rol. Abr. 251.

If the ſubmiſſion be of 200 acres, called Kelſtorne Ling, and the award be concerning the waſte lands in the town of K. this award is void, and cannot be helped out with an averment; ſo if money be awarded to be paid by one, and it is ſaid in ſatisfaction of what he owes the other, that cannot be averred. Dyer 242. 1 Rol. Abr. 263. 231.

If an award be that one of the parties ſhall pay to the other ſo much as is due in conſcience, this is a void award. Style 28.

Five pounds awarded for quit rents, void for the uncertainty. March 144.

If A. commits a nuſance to B. by erecting ſcaffolds on his own ground, and the arbitrators award that the ſcaffolds ſhall be removed, it muſt be underſtood that they are to be removed by A. on whoſe grounds they are; for tho' any perſon may by law remove a nuſance, yet the arbitrators, who are judges of equity as well as law, muſt be underſtood to intend it of him who committed the nuſance, and therefore the award not void for uncertainty. 6 Mod. 244.

An award to pay the charges of ſuch a ſuit is good, becauſe it is the intent of the arbitrators it ſhould be reduced to a certainty by the attorney's bill, who is the only perſon can know the certainty. Cro. Car. 383. 2 Vent. 242. 3 Lev. 18. 1 Sid. 12.

An award was, that one of the parties, he or his executors ſhould releaſe; and my lord Holt inclined to think that it may be conſtrued that he and his executors ſhould releaſe. 1 Salk. 69.

An award is made of 40*l.* and mutual releaſes; but if it ſhall appear to the arbitrators that one of them ſtands obliged, &c. that then ſo much ſhall be deducted, this makes the whole award void; for it is uncertain how much will be due; but if the award had been that if any bill of debt appears, that ſhould be deducted, that it ſeems would be a good award; and though he awards mutual releaſes, which would make a final end of all, yet it appears that was to be after payment; and therefore that

that part of the award ſhall not ſtand alone, for that is contrary to the intent of the award; ſo if the arbitrators make an award with a proviſo at the end of it, that if they do ſuch an act the whole award ſhall be void; for the award ought in preſent to be certain. Cro. Jac. 584.

The award was, that one of the parties ſhould pay unto the other a certain ſum on ſuch a day, and that in conſideration thereof, the other ſhould acquit him of a bond, in which they were both bound to a third perſon in an hundred pounds or thereabouts; it was objected, that this award was uncertain, it being made to diſcharge a man of an hundred pounds, or thereabouts; but adjudged good, becauſe it doth not lie in the power of the arbitrator to know the very ſum; but if an award is made, that one ſhall be bound in a bond to another, and doth not ſhew in what ſum, 'tis void for the uncertainty. March 18.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award; the defendant pleaded no award made; the plaintiff replied and ſhewed an award for the defendant to pay 20*s.* upon condition, that each ſhould acquit the other, &c. and that the defendant ſhould pay the charge of a ſuit now depending, and the plaintiff gave the defendant a bill of the charges amounting to 40*s.* which the defendant had not paid: and upon a demurer, it was objected, that this award was void, becauſe it was conditional, viz. upon condition that each ſhould acquit the other; beſides, it doth not aſcertain the charges, but refers them to the bill; but adjudged, that an award upon condition to acquit, is an award to acquit, and that the charges are aſcertained by the bill delivered. 3 Lev. 18.

An award may be good for part only, but then it muſt be final as to that part. 19 Hen. 6. 36. 8 Ed. 4. 10.

An award that all ſuits ſhall ceaſe is a final award; ſo an award that one of the parties ſhall not ſue an obligation; for this amounts to an extinguiſhment of the debt. An award that a ſuit in Chancery ſhall be diſmiſſed, is a final award; ſo if the arbitrators award a retraxit, or an award that one ſhall not proſecute nor proceed in ſuch a term, ſeems to be good; but an award that one of the parties ſhall be nonſuit is not good, becauſe the party may begin again, ſo that each party ſhall diſcontinue their actions which they have againſt each other; for this is not a final determination. 2 Mod. 227. 1 Lev. 58. 1 Rol. Abr. 54. 1 Salk. 75. 6 Mod. 282.

The award was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff ſo much money, and whereas the plaintiff had alledged, that the defendant was indebted to him in ſeveral ſums of money, which the defendant alledged he had paid; if the ſaid defendant, at, or before the feaſt of St. Andrew next, ſhould prove to the arbitrators, or either of them, that he had paid any of the ſums, that then ſo much ſhould be deducted out of the 9*l.* now awarded; it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that this award was void, becauſe it was not final, but left the matter in ſuſpence; it was not adjudged. Hob. 218.

If the arbitrators award that A. ſhall beg B.'s pardon in ſuch a manner and at ſuch a place as B. ſhall appoint; as to this part the award is void, for the arbitrators ought to have made a final determination of the matter themſelves, and not to have left the manner and place of begging pardon, which is a kind of ſatisfaction, and makes the moſt conſiderable part of the judgment of B. 1 Salk. 71.

When the arbitrators award a thing not ſubmitted, with a reſervation to themſelves of a future power of judging of the matter, and they award a thing within the ſubmiſſion, this is good for the thing within the ſubmiſſion; for as to that it is final, and void for the reſidue. Palm. 146. Cro. Jac. 315, 584.

If they arbitrate that all controverſies ſhall ceaſe, except that concerning one bond, this is final; for as to the bond, they arbitrate that it ſhall continue in force. Cro. Jac. 277, 400.

The award was, that within four days next enſuing the parties ſhould execute general and mutual releaſes of all demands, &c. before the date of the bond; proviſo, that if either of them ſhall not be contented with the award within twenty days after, &c. that then upon payment of 10*s. to the other, by him who thinks himſelf grieved, the award ſhall be void*; adjudged, that this award was not final, becauſe within four days in which they were to execute releaſes, the parties had power to defeat it by the payment of 10*s.* to each other. Poph. 15.

A conditional award not good, becauſe not final to determine matters in difference; the ſame law where any thing is referred to the arbitrator's future judgment or expoſition. 1 Sid. 59. Cro. Ja. 508. Hob. 218. Palm. 110.

If the arbitrators award general releaſes within four days after the award, and if in ten days after the releaſes ſo made the party diſlike the award, upon payment of ten ſhillings, the award ſhall be diſcharged; here the award is good; and the proviſo to make void the award after ſuch releaſes, is altogether void and repugnant; for if the obligation be once forfeited by nonperformance of the award, it can never be diſcharged by the award itſelf; but if the arbitrators award general releaſes within four days after the award; and if ten days after the award made the parties diſlike the award, &c. the award ſhall be void; this award is not good, becauſe not final and deciſive; for the parties may diſlike the award within the four days. Poph. 15, 16. 2 Rol. Rep. 189.

The award was, that the defendant ſhould give bond to the plaintiff, that he the ſaid plaintiff and his wife ſhould have and enjoy ſuch lands in controverſy then between them; adjudged, this award was void, becauſe it was to give bond, not mentioning in what ſum; and becauſe it was, that the wife ſhould enjoy the lands, and ſhe was no party to the ſubmiſſion. Cro. Eliz. 432.

An award to give ſuch a releaſe as counſel, &c. ſhould adviſe, is good, for this is only a miniſterial, and not a judicial act. Style 219.

An award to pay all coſts, which ſhould be taxed by a prothonotary, &c. not good, becauſe not final. Sid. 358.

4. What ſhall be deemed a good award in general.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award; the arbitrators awarded, that the defendant ſhould enjoy ſuch a houſe, of which the plaintiff had a leaſe for years, and that the defendant ſhould pay to him yearly 20*s. during the term*; afterwards an action of debt was brought on this bond, for that the 20*s.* was in arrear for one year; and adjudged, that the action did lie, for it was part of the award. Cro. Eliz. 211.

And yet where the award was, that the obligor ſhall make a leaſe to the obligee, rendring rent, and a leaſe was made accordingly, and afterwards the obligee did not pay the rent, it was held, that an action did not lie upon this bond for the arrears of rent, becauſe the obligor had another remedy, (viz.) by diſtreſs, and that the making the leaſe was the effect of the award; but if it had been that the obligee ſhould make a leaſe, and that for ſuch leaſe the obligor ſhould pay ſuch a certain ſum, there the obligee may recover it upon this bond. Bendl. 4.

The controverſy was between the parties, concerning a leaſe of lands; the award was, that one of them ſhall have the lands; adjudged, that this was a good award of the intereſt of the leaſe; but if it had been, that he ſhould permit the other to enjoy the term, this would not be an award of the intereſt. Cro. Eliz. 223.

Debt, &c. to perform an award, which was, that the now plaintiff ſhould not proſecute or proceed in ſuch an action, and in ſuch a term; this was adjudged a good award, and that the entering of a continuance from that term to another, by his attorney, was no breach of the award. 2 Cro. 525.

An award is to receive a liberal conſtruction, and to be governed by the intent of the arbitrators, where no inconvenience will enſue; therefore if the arbitrators award a thing to be done, without ſaying within what time, the party ſhall have reaſonable time; becauſe they muſt intend all things neceſſary to the doing the thing they award. 2 Brownl. 311.

If the award be to pay money to J. S. if he dies, the money ſhall be paid to his executors; a ſubmiſſion of all actions, and an award of a releaſe of all actions, except a bond, this is an award that the bond ſhall ſtand. 2 Vent. 249. 1 Rol. Abr. 257. Cro. Jac. 277. Yelv. 203.

An award that one ſhall enjoy ſuch a houſe and pay the rent, or elſe the award for enjoying the houſe to be void, is a good award; for the award is abſolute, unleſs upon his own fault; and the thing is reſerved to the future judgment of the arbitrators. Cro. Jac. 423. 1 Rol. Abr. 250.

The condition of the bond of ſubmiſſion was, that the parties ſhould put themſelves to the arbitrament of G. D. of all matters between them till the 9th day of March 18 Jac. and the award was, that each of them ſhould releaſe to the other all matters, &c. till the 9th day of March, &c. It was objected, that by this releaſe the bond upon which the action was brought, was diſcharged; but adjudged a good award, for tho' it was void as to that part, it was good for the reſt. Winch. 1.

Debt, &c. on bond, for performance of an award; the defendant pleaded Nullum arbitrium; the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed the award, by which the arbitrator amongſt other things, awarded intereſt to be paid to him for money, &c. and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that the award was void, becauſe it was for payment of intereſt, and uſury is a thing unlawful; but the award was adjudged good, for it ſhall not be taken for uſury, but rather for damages for forbearance of the money; but admitting it was for intereſt in the proper ſignification of the word, yet 'tis good; for by the ſtatutes, &c. contracts for intereſt-money are not void, ſo as they did not exceed ſo much as is limitted by thoſe laws. Winch. 114.

If a battery is ſubmitted, and the award is, that one ſhall releaſe, and the other pay him 10*l.* the releaſe muſt only be underſtood of the battery, and muſt be firſt performed before the 10*l.* ſhall be paid. 3 Bulſt. 111, 117. 21 H. 7. 28.

If an award be, that one ſhall make a leaſe to the other, rendring rent; the leaſe is made, but the rent not paid, the obligation is not forfeited; for the award did not reach to the payment of the rent, which muſt be recovered by diſtreſs or action of debt; but if the award had been that he ſhould pay the rents at ſuch ſet times, the obligation would have been forfeited if they had not been paid; and in ſuch caſe it is a ſum in groſs, and payable without demand; for the party muſt offer it to ſave his obligation. Moor 3. Cro. Eliz. 211. cont. Cro. 423.

It is an eſtabliſhed rule, that an award may be good in part, though void as to the other parts of it; and that the party is obliged to perform that which is well awarded, and excuſed as to that only which is void; but if an award is good as to one part, and void as to what is awarded to the other party, the award is void in the whole. 8 Co. 98. 1 Sand. 32. 1 Rol. Rep. 362. 1 Rol. Abr. 256. 1 Lev. 58. 1 Leon. 72. 1 Rol. Abr. 244. Hob. 218. 2 Lev. 3. 3 Lev. 413.

If the arbitrators award one thing on the one part, and the time expires before they award any thing on the other part, this is altogether void, and contrary to their authority; becauſe it doth not finally determine the things contained in the ſubmiſſion equally on both parts. 36 H. 6. 12. 7 H. 6. 40.

If it be provided by the ſubmiſſion, that the award ſhould be notified or delivered to the parties in writing, it is no award till notified or delivered, becauſe it is not according to the power in the ſubmiſſion. 8 Ed. 4. 11, 21. 1 H. 7. 5. 1 Vent. 193.

The parties who ſubmitted to an award were jointly bound in a bond, conditioned to pay 50*l. to G. D.* and the award was, that one of them ſhould acquit and diſcharge the other from it; it was inſiſted for the defendant, that this award was void, becauſe it was to acquit and diſcharge the plaintiff of a bond made to a ſtranger to the ſubmiſſion, and it was not in his power to procure ſuch a diſcharge; but adjudged, that the defendant might very well diſcharge the plaintiff from this bond, if the money was to be paid at a future day, not yet come, and ſo the bond not forfeited; as in this caſe it ſhall be intended that it was not. Cro. Car. 389.

If ſeveral perſons of the one part, and ſeveral of the other part, ſubmit themſelves to arbitrament, provided the arbitrator deliver the award to the parties, or one of them, he is not obliged to deliver the award to one of each party; but it is ſufficient to deliver it to any of the ſaid parties. Dyer 218.

But if two on the one part, and one of the other ſubmit to an award, ita quod arbitrium fiat & deliberetur utrique partium prædict', the delivery of the award to one on the one part, and to the other of the other part, is not ſufficient; for each party is each an intire party; for each, by non-performance, incurs the penalty, and each provides in order to his performance, that it ſhould be made known to him; if the ſubmiſſion be by two, ſo that it be delivered to one only, that is to be underſtood to both; and a delivery to one only, is not good. 5 Co. 103. Moor 642. Cro. Eliz. 885.

If two men ſubmit to an award, ſo that it be paratum deliberare partibus ſuch a day, it need not be averred that it is paratum deliberare, &c. at that day, for the publication of the award itſelf is ſufficient. Hard. 399. Cro. Car. 541.

If the ſubmiſſion be general, that the award ſhall be delivered before ſuch a day, it may as well be delivered by word as by deed, and therefore non deliberavit in ſcriptis in ſuch caſe is no good plea. Dyer 218. 1 Salk. 75.

Debt upon an award by word only, is within the ſtatute of 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. of limitations, and muſt be ſued within ſix years; otherwiſe it is of an award by ſpecialty. 2 Keb. 462.

Debt on a bond for performance of an award, which was, that all ſuits ſhould ceaſe depending between the parties, and that the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 20*l. at the houſe of G. D.* It was objected, that this award was void, becauſe it was to do a thing upon the land of another, which he cannot lawfully do, if he ſhould be denied entrance; but adjudged, that the award is good, becauſe he was not to pay the money in the houſe of another man, but at the houſe, and it might be that the houſe was adjoining to the highway; but if it was not, he might come as near the houſe as he could without being a treſpaſſer, and there tender the money; or he might get leave to come near, or into the houſe. 10 Rep. in Oſborne's caſe.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award; the defendant pleaded no award made; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth the award, and aſſigned the breach; the defendant demurred to the replication, that the award was, that one ſhould pay, and the other ſhall give ſuch a general releaſe, &c. as counſel ſhall adviſe; ſo as here the counſel is made the arbitrator, for a judicial act is referred to him; adjudged, that was a miniſterial, and not a judicial act, to refer the form of the releaſe to counſel, and ſo the plaintiff had judgment. Style 217.

If there be an obligation to ſtand to an award, each ought to perform it on his part, at the peril of his obligation. 21 Hen. 7. 28. b.

If money be awarded and not paid, the party may either have his firſt action or action of debt; for if there be payment, the firſt wrong was determined; but otherwiſe he cannot plead the award as a determination and bar of the wrong; for ſince the award of arbitrators doth not bind any man's property, as judgments at law do, it is fit the party when he pleads it in bar, ſhould ſhew an execution at the time appointed. 4 Hen. 6. 1. a. 25. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 267. See 1 Salk. 69, 76. Carth. 117.

Though an award cannot be made, part at one time and part at another, yet it may be performed part at one time and part at another, for the nature of the thing may require performance at different times and places. 18 Ed. 4. 10.

An award for one party to deliver a releaſe or bond to the other, if that one party delivers it to A. who delivers it to B. who tenders it to the other party, who refuſes, this is a good performance of the award. 2 Leon. 110, 181.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award between the plaintiff and the defendant and his wife, &c. or any of them, ſo as the award, &c. and ready to be delivered to the parties on or before ſuch a day: The defendants pleaded no award made; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award, by which the defendant was to pay to the plaintiff plaintiff 16*l.* in recompence of all charges in ſuch a ſuit, and that the plaintiff ſhould releaſe to the defendant all demands to the time of making the ſubmiſſion, and that the defendant ſhould releaſe to the plaintiff all demands to the time of making the award; adjudged, that tho' this laſt part of the award was void in law, becauſe the releaſe would over-reach the bond of ſubmiſſion; yet becauſe there were other matters awarded on both ſides which were good, that made the award ſo too, and that it was good, tho' nothing was awarded as to the defendant's wife, becauſe the words of the ſubmiſſion were, to an award to be made between the parties and the wife of the defendant, or any of them. Hardr. 399.

If the ſubmiſſion be of a Chancery ſuit, and the arbitrators award that the ſuit ſhall ſtay, and that one be quit againſt the other for all matters in the bill, it is a ſufficient performance to ſay that the other ſtetit quietus; and tho' he did not procure an actual diſcharge; but where one by deed is obliged to quit another of ſuch a debt or ſuch a ſuit, it is not ſufficient to ſave him harmleſs, but he muſt procure an actual diſcharge; but the award here being quod ſtaret quietus, means no more than that the party ſhould be acquitted by force of the award itſelf, and not that another diſcharge ſhould be procured; and in this caſe, if a new bill be exhibited, yet that is no diſturbance to forfeit, without proceſs iſſuing out as the ſubpœna, for till proceſs the party is not actually moleſted. 1 R l. Rep. 7, 8. 2 Bulſt. 93 to 96. Cro. Jac. 340.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award, which was, that one of the parties ſhould diſcharge the other from his undertaking to pay a debt to W. R. who was no party to the ſubmiſſion, and ſo not compellable to give a diſcharge; and for this reaſon it was objected, that the award was void; but adjudged, that he was compellable in equity to give a releaſe, and ſo the award was good. 1 Mod. 9.

Debt upon bond conditioned to perform an award; Upon Nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award, and aſſigned the breach, and had judgment; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this award was void, becauſe it was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff ſuch coſts as the prothonotary ſhould tax in ſuch an action now depending, &c. whereas a prothonotary is not to tax coſts but upon a nonſuit or a verdict; beſides, the arbitrators cannot award, that he ſhall do any act in his private capacity, nor is there any means to compel him, if they did; but adjudged, that the award is good, for the prothonotary is a publick officer, and 'tis as well as if they had awarded one of the parties to execute ſuch a conveyance as the counſel of the other ſhall adviſe; or that he ſhall pay ſuch an attorney's bill. Sid. 358.

But if a man ſubmits a rent-charge to arbitration, and the arbitrators award quod ſtaret quietus of the rent, he who hath the rent ought to releaſe the ſame to the other, in performance of this award, for to be quit of the rent ſuppoſes the demand not in being. 2 Buſt. 96.

An award that the plaintiff ſhall not proſecute or proceed in a ſuit the ſame term, the entry of a continuance is no breach of this award, for otherwiſe the party can never afterwards go on in the action. Cro. Jac. 525.

An award is made to infeoff J. S. J. S comes and deſires the party to infeoff J. M. and him to the uſe of himſelf; this is a good performance of the award, for though the conſtruction of the ſenſe of the award is to be taken on the expreſs words, yet what is a performance of the award is to be taken according to the intent of the abitrators. 3 Bulſt. 65.

An award reciting, that ſeveral differences had been between the parties concerning an houſe, and arrears of rent, they (the arbitrators) to make a final end of all, did award that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 4*l.* for all the ſaid arrears of rent; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that the award was not mutual, becauſe it was not of all differences; but adjudged good, becauſe to pay 4*l.* for all arrears of rent is mutual; for 'tis in ſatisfaction of the arrears, and the defendant is diſcharged thereof. 1 Lev. 132.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award, ſo as it be ready to be delivered to the parties on or before ſuch a day; the defendant pleaded, no award made; the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award ready to be delivered to the defendant, that he ſhould pay to the plaintiff 5*l.* and aſſigned the breach in not paying it; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that the plaintiff ought to ſhew, that it was ready to be delivered to both parties, and not to the defendant only; but adjudged, it ſhall be intended to be ready to be delivered to both, and that the defendant ought to have pleaded this matter at firſt. 1 Lev. 133.

Debt upon bond, for performance of an award; upon Nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth the award, which was, that the defendant, &c. ſhould pay the plaintiff ſo much, in, or at the dwelling-houſe of J. S. in H. and upon demurrer to the replication, the plaintiff had judgment, for tho' J. S. is a ſtranger, yet the defendant may pay the money at the door of his houſe, if he cannot get leave to go in. 3 Lev. 453.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, dated the 1ſt of Decemb. 35 Car. ſo as it be made before the laſt day of Hillary term, &c. Upon Nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award made 8 Feb. de et ſuper præmiſſis, that the defendant within a week after the award, ſhould pay the plaintiff 7*l.* 10*s.* in ſatisfaction of all demands; and that upon payment thereof each ſhould give the other a general releaſe of all demands; and averred, that no new controverſy did ariſe within a week after the award; the defendant rejoined, and confeſſed the award, but ſaid, that after the ſubmiſſion and before the award, a new controverſy did ariſe, (viz.) on 6 Feb. for that the defendant did break and enter the plaintiff's cloſe called B. whereof the arbitrators had notice, and ſo they made no award; and upon demurrer it was objected, that this award was void, becauſe it was for payment of money in ſatisfaction of all demands generally, which extends to the time of the award made, and ſo out of the ſubmiſſion; beſides, the releaſe in this caſe muſt refer to the time when it was given, and by conſequence ſhall releaſe the laſt cauſe of action, which was not within the ſubmiſſion, and even the bond of ſubmiſſion itſelf; but adjudged, that if the award had been for payment of money in ſatisfaction of all demands till the award, or a releaſe of all demands till the award, it had been ill; but here it was general, and made de & ſuper præmiſſis, and it ſhall be intended till the time of the ſubmiſſion, and this is Slainy and Wild's caſe, 2 Cro. 352. So a releaſe of all demands generally (without ſaying to what time) ſhall be intended to the time of ſubmiſſion. 3 Lev. 168.

In aſſumpſit, &c. the defendant pleaded in bar, a ſubmiſſion of all demands to the award of J. S. ſo as it be made and ready to be delivered by ſuch a day; then he ſets forth, that on ſuch a day, before the day appointed by the ſubmiſſion, J. S. made an award, that the defendant or his executors ſhould releaſe to the plaintiff, &c. which he, this defendant, was always ready to do: Adjudged, that this award was good, for being pleaded to be made before the day, it ſhall be intended to be always after ready to be delivered, &c. and tho' 'tis awarded, that the defendant ſhould give a releaſe, and no time appointed when it ſhould be given, yet the law will ſupply the time, (i. e.) it muſt be done in convenient time after a requeſt, if that is neceſſary; and if 'tis not neceſſary, then in convenient time after a tender of the releaſe, and the award, that he or his executors, in the disjunctive, ſhall releaſe, is good, for it may extend to executors, and bind them. 1 Salk. 169.

An award, that a ſuit in Chancery ſhould be diſmiſſed; it was objected, that this was void, becauſe not final, for the party may diſmiſs his bill and begin again; ſo that 'tis like an award, that one of the parties ſhall be nonſuit, which is ill; but adjudged, that a nonſuit is not final in the nature of the thing, but a diſmiſſion ſhall be intended a perpetual ceſſation. 1 Salk. 75.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, in which the arbitrators had taken notice, that there was 72*l.* in controverſy, and they awarded only 50*l.* in ſatisfaction, and general releaſes to be given; and upon a demurrer, this being objected, that 50*l.* could not be in ſatisfaction for

for the 72*l.* it was adjudged, that the award was good, becauſe the arbitrators might conſider other matters between the parties; beſides, it doth not appear that 72*l.* was due, but that it was in controverſy. 2 Mod. 303.

5. Pleadings in awards.

If the arbitrators award money to be paid at a day to come, this is a good plea in bar in action of treſpaſs before the day, becauſe it is debitum in præſenti, though ſolvendum in futuro; and if he might have an action of treſpaſs before the day, and recover, he may have an action of debt after the day, and ſo a double ſatisfaction for the ſame thing. 49 Ed. 3. 3. 1 Rol. Abr. 267.

In debt on bond to perform an award, ſo as the ſame be delivered in writing; the defendant pleaded, quod non deliberavit in ſcriptis, &c. the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth, the award in writing, but did not directly anſwer the plea of delivering it in writing, but only by way of argument; and upon demurrer, all the juſtices were againſt the plaintiff. 2 Mod. 269.

Submiſſion was to ſtand to the award of J. S. Ita quod, the award be written, ſigned, and ſealed by the ſaid J. S. an award was made, and ſealed by the ſaid J. S. but not ſigned. All the juſtices held this good notwithſtanding, for ſealing is a ſigning thereof in law; but otherwiſe, if the words had been that it ſhould be wrote and ſigned by the hands of J. S. for there it ought to be actually ſubſcribed. Palm. 97.

The condition of a bond was to ſtand to the award of P. Ita quod it be publiſhed and ſeal'd with the ſeal of P. before Mich. The plaintiff ſhewed that P. made an award, which was delivered to the defendant before Mich. and that he had it in court ſealed with the ſeal of P. But the plea was ruled to be ill, becauſe he did not ſhew that the award was ſealed at the time of the delivery. Palm. 121.

There is a difference between an accord with ſatisfaction and an award, for in an accord a man muſt plead preſent ſatisfaction, and it is no plea in bar to plead an accord with ſatisfaction at a day to come; for in all perſonal injuries the law gives damages as an equivalent; and when the party accepts of an equivalent, there is no injury or cauſe of complaint, and therefore a preſent ſatisfaction is a good plea; but where the wrong-doer promiſes a future ſatisfaction, the injury continues till ſatisfaction is made, and conſequently there is a cauſe of complaint in being, and if the treſpaſs were now barred by this plea, he can have no remedy for the future ſatisfaction, for that ſuppoſes the injury ſtill to have continuance; but where perſons ſubmit to arbitration, the arbitrators are judges of the injury; and if they award money payable at a day to come, that is a good award, and may be a good plea in bar to an action of treſpaſs brought in the mean time, becauſe this thereby becomes the immediate debt attainable by law. 5 Ed. 4. 7. Plowd. 5. b.

A ſubmiſſion was of all controverſies, &c. to A. and B. ſo as the award be made under their hands and ſeals on or before the 5th of December following, ready to be delivered at the ſhop of G. H. in the Exchange, London. In debt upon the bond the plaintiff ſhewed, that they made their award under their hands and ſeals at the Caſtle at York, then and there ready to be delivered at the ſhop of the ſaid G. H. in the Exchange, London. Doderidge and Haughton J. held this a void publication, and not according to the ſubmiſſion; but Montague Ch. J. e contra, and held that the publiſhing it there, and alledging that it was adtunc & ibidem ready to be delivered at the ſhop in the Exchange, was ſufficient; curia adviſare vult. Cro. Jac. 577.

It was formerly held, that in an award of a releaſe, a horſe, a quart of wine, to enter into an obligation, or any other collateral matter in ſatisfaction, without performance, was no good plea in bar; for were it a good plea in bar, he could have no remedy afterwards to compel the party to do the thing awarded, for by the bar the treſpaſs would be nullified. 1 Rol. Abr. 266. 1 Salk. 76.

But it has been ſince held, in an action on the caſe upon a ſpecial promiſe made by the defendant, to deliver a parcel of hops to the plaintiff on ſuch a day and place, on a certain price agreed on, &c. to which the defendant pleaded in bar, that after the promiſe made, both he and the plaintiff referred all matters, and that the arbitrators awarded that the defendant ſhould releaſe the plaintiff, and that he ſhould releaſe the defendant of all actions and demands whatſoever; and alledged, that from the time of the award hitherto, he was always ready, and yet is, to releaſe the plaintiff according to the award, &c. and upon demurrer to this plea after ſeveral debates, it was adjudged that this award was no bar to the action, becauſe nothing was awarded but only mutual releaſes from each other; ſo that the award itſelf is no bar, but the thing awarded, when executed, would be a bar; and a difference was taken where any thing is awarded in ſatisfaction, there the award itſelf is a bar before it is performed; but where nothing is awarded but releaſes on both ſides, there, when the award is executed, the releaſe will likewiſe be a bar: and the court held, that the defendant may bring his action againſt the plaintiff for not releaſing according to the award, and therein ought to recover all his damages and coſts loſt in the action againſt him. Carth. 378.

Debt on an arbitration bond; the plaintiff declared of an award made May the 28th in ſuch a year, ready to be delivered up the 29th day of the ſame May; the defendant pleaded no award; the plaintiff replied an award made by the umpire the 28th of May ready to be delivered the ſame day. Upon demurrer it was objected, that the plaintiff had ſet forth double matter, that the award ſet forth in the declaration, and that in the replication, could not be intended to be the ſame; but Roll Ch. J. anſwered, That the iſſue to be tried is not to be taken upon the day of the award made, and ſo requires no anſwer, and ſo cannot be double; and judgment, niſi, &c. for the plaintiff. Sty. 41.

Debt on a bond of award, upon nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award made; the defendant rejoined, that there were other things ſubmitted, and ſo no award. Adjudged upon demurrer, that this is a departure; for defendant ſhould have pleaded this ſpecial at the firſt. Sid. 180.

The above caſes muſt be underſtood where the action was brought before the time for performing the award was expired; for if an award be to pay money at a day to come, and the money be not paid at the day, and afterwards an action of treſpaſs be brought, this is no good plea in bar; for no man can plead this in bar without ſhewing he has paid the money; for it is againſt natural juſtice to make one default and wrong an excuſe for another; but if the party tender it at the day, and the other refuſe it, then it is a good plea in bar, it being his own fault, and he hath ſtill a remedy for the money. Keilw. 121. 1 Rol. Abr. 267. Dyer 75. Hob. 49. Raym. 450. 1 Salk. 69.

If in an action of debt upon an award the plaintiff declares, that the arbitrators did make an award that the defendant ſhould pay unto the plaintiff 10*l.* this is a good declaration, tho' nothing is ſhewn to have been awarded on the other ſide; for 'tis ſufficient for the plaintiff to ſet forth that part of the award which intitles him to his action; and if the defendant will impeach the award for any thing, he muſt ſhew it ſpecially on his own part. 1 Leon. 72.

In an action of debt upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, the defendant pleaded, that the arbitrators did make an award that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 310*l.* and ſhould give to him the general releaſe, and pleaded that he had paid the money and given a releaſe accordingly; but did not ſhew what on the part of the plaintiff was awarded to be done; and the plaintiff replied without ſhewing the other part of the award in his replication, and took iſſue that the defendant had not paid the money; and the defendant put in an inſufficient rejoinder, upon which the plaintiff demurred; and per cur', The plaintiff cannot have judgment, becauſe the award as ſet forth and agreed in pleading is void; but if the plaintiff would have helped himſelf, he ought to have ſhewn the other part of the award before he had taken iſſue. 1 Sand. 326.

Debt

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, &c. ſo it be made and ready to be delivered to the parties on or before ſuch a day; the defendant pleaded no award made, &c. the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth the award, but did not aver, that it was ready to be delivered to the parties, and for that reaſon adjornatur; but afterwards the court held that he need not, for that was ſupplied by ſetting forth the award itſelf. Hard. 399.

Debt upon bond; the defendant demanded oyer of the condition, which was for the performance of the award of A. P. ſo as it be made on or before the 27th of June, &c. and if not, then to ſtand to the umpirage of, &c. the defendant pleaded no award made before the 27th of June; the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed, that the umpire made an umpirage, and aſſigned a breach, which was ill; and the defendant demurred. Keeling Ch. J. held that judgment ſhould be for the defendant, tho' his bar is ill; for the condition upon the oyer is part of the declaration, and ſo it appears by the replication, that there is no cauſe of action; but all the other juſtices e contra, and that a bar ſo ill in ſubſtance cannot be cur'd by the replication, for it ſeems to admit that no award was made on the 27th of June, becauſe it ſets forth an umpirage made after that day; but ſuch implication cannot cure the bar, for if an award was made on that day, then the umpirage is void in itſelf; adjornatur to be mediated by friends, it being between two brothers. Sid. 336.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award, the defendant pleads nullum fecerunt arbitrium; and the plaintiff replies, and ſhews the award, he muſt alſo ſhew the breach, without which he hath no cauſe of action, for the obligation is guided by the condition; and though the defendant can make no anſwer to the breach, yet it ought to appear to the court that the plaintiff hath cauſe of action. Yelv. 152. Cro. Jac. 220. 1 Sand. 102.

But if in debt upon bond to perform an award, and oyer of the condition, the defendant pleads non ſubmiſit, the plaintiff need not aſſign a breach, for the defendant puts the whole ſtreſs of his cauſe upon a matter antecedent to the alledging a breach, for if there be no ſubmiſſion there could be no award, and conſequently no breach of it. 1 Sid. 290.

In debt on bond for performing an award, and no award pleaded; the plaintiff replied, that ante exhibitionem billæ, viz. 24th of June, the arbitrators made award; the defendant demurred generally: It was agreed by all, that if the demurrer had been ſpecial, judgment ſhould have been for the defendant, becauſe the plaintiff ought to have replied, that the arbitrators made their award before the day limited for it; but becauſe the demurrer was general, the plaintiff had judgment. Nota, The 24th of July was within the ſubmiſſion. Sid. 370.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award, the defendant ſhews that the arbitrators did make an award, that the defendant before ſuch a day ſhould pay to the plaintiff 100*l.* otherwiſe ſhould procure one A. being a ſtranger, to be bound to the plaintiff for the payment of 12*l. per annum* to the plaintiff for his life; and the defendant pleads that he hath performed the ſaid award, and the plaintiff replies, that the defendant hath not paid the ſaid 100*l.* without ſaying, nor hath procured A. &c. yet this is a good replication, for the award as to that part is merely void, and therefore the plaintiff need not take notice thereof. 1 Leon. 304. Owen 153.

An award was that the defendant ſhould pay 3100*l. to the plaintiff, and that they ſhould give each other general releaſes*; in debt upon the ſubmiſſion bond, the defendant in his plea confeſſed, that the award was, that he ſhould pay ſo much, and execute a general releaſe, and then averred performance; the plaintiff replied, and tendered an iſſue upon non-payment; the defendant waived the iſſue, and pleaded an inſufficient rejoinder; and becauſe neither the plaintiff nor defendant had ſet forth that the plaintiff was to execute a releaſe to him, and ſo the award as pleaded was of one ſide only, it was held, that the plaintiff could not have judgment; but the court looking upon it to be a trick in pleading, they would not give judgment for the defendant, but gave the plaintiff liberty to diſcontinue upon payment of coſts; but afterwards it appearing on an Engliſh bill in the Exchequer, that there was male practice of the plaintiff with the arbitrators, and it being likewiſe a caſe of great extremity upon the defendant, the money awarded being 1100*l.* more than the very penalty of the bond, ubi revera there was nothing due to the plaintiff, but he was indebted to the defendant; the defendant was relieved againſt the bond. Saund. 326.

Debt upon bond for the performance of an award, &c. the defendant pleaded no award made, &c. the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award made, and ready to be delivered to the parties; the defendant rejoined, that the award was not tendered to him on the day, & hoc paratus eſt verificare; and upon a demurrer, this rejoinder was held ill, becauſe it was a departure from the plea, for that was no award made; but the rejoinder was, that the award was not tendered, which implies that it was made; beſides, this rejoinder was ill concluded, for the replication ſets forth, that the award was ready to be delivered to the parties; the rejoinder ſays it was not, which is a negative and affirmative, and that is a plain iſſue; therefore he ſhould have concluded to the contrary, and not have averred the rejoinder. 2 Saund. 188, 189.

In an action of debt upon an award, it is not neceſſary for the plaintiff in his declaration to lay time or place where the award or ſubmiſſion were made; but if the defendant denies either, the plaintiff may reply, that the award or ſubmiſſion was made at ſuch a place. 2 Brownl. 137.

If there be a ſubmiſſion to the award of J. S. ſo that the ſaid award be made under his hand and ſeal at or before the 5th day of September following, ready to be delivered at the ſhop of J. N. in the Exchange, London; and in an action of debt upon an award made thereupon, the plaintiff declares that the ſaid J. S. under his hand and ſeal the 4th day of September following, apud caſtrum eborum, did make an award adtunc & ibidem parat' to be delivered at the ſhop of the ſaid J. N. in the Exchange, London; this is no good declaration, for the parties are not bound to take cognizance of the delivery elſewhere than at the place appointed. Cro. Jac. 577.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, ſo as it be ready to be delivered to the parties at ſuch a day and place; the defendant pleaded no award made; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award delivered to the parties before the day, and at another place, than mentioned in the ſubmiſſion; and upon demurrer, Hale Ch. J. held the replication ill, becauſe it being only the execution of an authority, it ought to be made at the ſame day and place; but the others e contra, and adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the award was delivered to the parties themſelves. 2 Liv. 68.

Bond was for performing an award de præmiſſis vel aliqua parte inde; the defendant pleaded no award made de præmiſſis. On demurrer it was objected, that it was not ſaid nec de aliqua parte inde, for if a bond be to perform an award of two or either of them, it is not ſufficient to plead that thoſe made no award, without adding nec aliquis eorum; but if an award is to be made of the manors of D. and C. or either of them, and the award is made of D. only, it is well enough; but as to the firſt part it was anſwered, that nullum fecerunt arbitrium de præmiſſis is well enough; for that it implies nec de aliqua parte inde, eſpecially if the contrary is not ſhewn in the replication, and therefore it ſhall never be intended that an award was made of ſome part; curia adviſare vult. 2 Mod. 27, 28.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award, ſo as, &c. the defendant pleads no award made, and the plaintiff replies, that ante exhibitionem billæ, ſcilicet the 24 June (which was a day within the ſubmiſſion) the arbitrators made an award, &c. and the defendant demurs generally, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment; for though the plaintiff ought to have replied, that the arbitrators made their award before the day limited to them; yet this is form only, and helped by a general demurrer. 1 Sid. 370.

If in debt upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, ſo as it be made, &c. and ready to be deli-

for the 72*l.* it was adjudged, that the award was good, becauſe the arbitrators might conſider other matters between the parties; beſides, it doth not appear that 72*l.* was due, but that it was in controverſy. 2 Mod. 303.

5. Pleadings in awards.

If the arbitrators award money to be paid at a day to come, this is a good plea in bar in action of treſpaſs before the day, becauſe it is debitum in præſenti, though ſolvendum in futuro; and if he might have an action of treſpaſs before the day, and recover, he may have an action of debt after the day, and ſo a double ſatisfaction for the ſame thing. 49 Ed. 3. 3. 1 Rol. Abr. 267.

In debt on bond to perform an award, ſo as the ſame be delivered in writing; the defendant pleaded, quod non deliberavit in ſcriptis, &c. the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth, the award in writing, but did not directly anſwer the plea of delivering it in writing, but only by way of argument; and upon demurrer, all the juſtices were againſt the plaintiff. 2 Mod. 269.

Submiſſion was to ſtand to the award of J. S. Ita quod, the award be written, ſigned, and ſealed by the ſaid J. S. an award was made, and ſealed by the ſaid J. S. but not ſigned. All the juſtices held this good notwithſtanding, for ſealing is a ſigning thereof in law; but otherwiſe, if the words had been that it ſhould be wrote and ſigned by the hands of J. S. for there it ought to be actually ſubſcribed. Palm. 97.

The condition of a bond was to ſtand to the award of P. Ita quod it be publiſhed and ſeal'd with the ſeal of P. before Mich. The plaintiff ſhewed that P. made an award, which was delivered to the defendant before Mich. and that he had it in court ſealed with the ſeal of P. But the plea was ruled to be ill, becauſe he did not ſhew that the award was ſealed at the time of the delivery. Palm. 121.

There is a difference between an accord with ſatisfaction and an award, for in an accord a man muſt plead preſent ſatisfaction, and it is no plea in bar to plead an accord with ſatisfaction at a day to come; for in all perſonal injuries the law gives damages as an equivalent; and when the party accepts of an equivalent, there is no injury or cauſe of complaint, and therefore a preſent ſatisfaction is a good plea; but where the wrong-doer promiſes a future ſatisfaction, the injury continues till ſatisfaction is made, and conſequently there is a cauſe of complaint in being, and if the treſpaſs were now barred by this plea, he can have no remedy for the future ſatisfaction, for that ſuppoſes the injury ſtill to have continuance; but where perſons ſubmit to arbitration, the arbitrators are judges of the injury; and if they award money payable at a day to come, that is a good award, and may be a good plea in bar to an action of treſpaſs brought in the mean time, becauſe this thereby becomes the immediate debt attainable by law. 5 Ed. 4. 7. Plowd. 5. b.

A ſubmiſſion was of all controverſies, &c. to A. and B. ſo as the award be made under their hands and ſeals on or before the 5th of December following, ready to be delivered at the ſhop of G. H. in the Exchange, London. In debt upon the bond the plaintiff ſhewed, that they made their award under their hands and ſeals at the Caſtle at York, then and there ready to be delivered at the ſhop of the ſaid G. H. in the Exchange, London. Doderidge and Haughton J. held this a void publication, and not according to the ſubmiſſion; but Montague Ch. J. e contra, and held that the publiſhing it there, and alledging that it was adtunc & ibidem ready to be delivered at the ſhop in the Exchange, was ſufficient; curia adviſare vult. Cro. Jac. 577.

It was formerly held, that in an award of a releaſe, a horſe, a quart of wine, to enter into an obligation, or any other collateral matter in ſatisfaction, without performance, was no good plea in bar; for were it a good plea in bar, he could have no remedy afterwards to compel the party to do the thing awarded, for by the bar the treſpaſs would be nullified. 1 Rol. Abr. 266. 1 Salk. 76.

But it has been ſince held, in an action on the caſe upon a ſpecial promiſe made by the defendant, to deliver a parcel of hops to the plaintiff on ſuch a day and place, on a certain price agreed on, &c. to which the defendant pleaded in bar, that after the promiſe made, both he and the plaintiff referred all matters, and that the arbitrators awarded that the defendant ſhould releaſe the plaintiff, and that he ſhould releaſe the defendant of all actions and demands whatſoever; and alledged, that from the time of the award hitherto, he was always ready, and yet is, to releaſe the plaintiff according to the award, &c. and upon demurrer to this plea after ſeveral debates, it was adjudged that this award was no bar to the action, becauſe nothing was awarded but only mutual releaſes from each other; ſo that the award itſelf is no bar, but the thing awarded, when executed, would be a bar; and a difference was taken where any thing is awarded in ſatisfaction, there the award itſelf is a bar before it is performed; but where nothing is awarded but releaſes on both ſides, there, when the award is executed, the releaſe will likewiſe be a bar: and the court held, that the defendant may bring his action againſt the plaintiff for not releaſing according to the award, and therein ought to recover all his damages and coſts loſt in the action againſt him. Carth. 378.

Debt on an arbitration bond; the plaintiff declared of an award made May the 28th in ſuch a year, ready to be delivered up the 29th day of the ſame May; the defendant pleaded no award; the plaintiff replied an award made by the umpire the 28th of May ready to be delivered the ſame day. Upon demurrer it was objected, that the plaintiff had ſet forth double matter, that the award ſet forth in the declaration, and that in the replication, could not be intended to be the ſame; but Roll Ch. J. anſwered, That the iſſue to be tried is not to be taken upon the day of the award made, and ſo requires no anſwer, and ſo cannot be double; and judgment, niſi, &c. for the plaintiff. Sty. 41.

Debt on a bond of award, upon nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award made; the defendant rejoined, that there were other things ſubmitted, and ſo no award. Adjudged upon demurrer, that this is a departure; for defendant ſhould have pleaded this ſpecial at the firſt. Sid. 180.

The above caſes muſt be underſtood where the action was brought before the time for performing the award was expired; for if an award be to pay money at a day to come, and the money be not paid at the day, and afterwards an action of treſpaſs be brought, this is no good plea in bar; for no man can plead this in bar without ſhewing he has paid the money; for it is againſt natural juſtice to make one default and wrong an excuſe for another; but if the party tender it at the day, and the other refuſe it, then it is a good plea in bar, it being his own fault, and he hath ſtill a remedy for the money. Keilw. 121. 1 Rol. Abr. 267. Dyer 75. Hob. 49. Raym. 450. 1 Salk. 69.

If in an action of debt upon an award the plaintiff declares, that the arbitrators did make an award that the defendant ſhould pay unto the plaintiff 10*l.* this is a good declaration, tho' nothing is ſhewn to have been awarded on the other ſide; for 'tis ſufficient for the plaintiff to ſet forth that part of the award which intitles him to his action; and if the defendant will impeach the award for any thing, he muſt ſhew it ſpecially on his own part. 1 Leon. 72.

In an action of debt upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, the defendant pleaded, that the arbitrators did make an award that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 310*l.* and ſhould give to him the general releaſe, and pleaded that he had paid the money and given a releaſe accordingly; but did not ſhew what on the part of the plaintiff was awarded to be done; and the plaintiff replied without ſhewing the other part of the award in his replication, and took iſſue that the defendant had not paid the money; and the defendant put in an inſufficient rejoinder, upon which the plaintiff demurred; and per cur', The plaintiff cannot have judgment, becauſe the award as ſet forth and agreed in pleading is void; but if the plaintiff would have helped himſelf, he ought to have ſhewn the other part of the award before he had taken iſſue. 1 Sand. 326.

Debt

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, &c. ſo it be made and ready to be delivered to the parties on or before ſuch a day; the defendant pleaded no award made, &c. the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth the award, but did not aver, that it was ready to be delivered to the parties, and for that reaſon adjornatur; but afterwards the court held that he need not, for that was ſupplied by ſetting forth the award itſelf. Hard. 399.

Debt upon bond; the defendant demanded oyer of the condition, which was for the performance of the award of A. P. ſo as it be made on or before the 27th of June, &c. and if not, then to ſtand to the umpirage of, &c. the defendant pleaded no award made before the 27th of June; the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed, that the umpire made an umpirage, and aſſigned a breach, which was ill; and the defendant demurred. Keeling Ch. J. held that judgment ſhould be for the defendant, tho' his bar is ill; for the condition upon the oyer is part of the declaration, and ſo it appears by the replication, that there is no cauſe of action; but all the other juſtices e contra, and that a bar ſo ill in ſubſtance cannot be cur'd by the replication, for it ſeems to admit that no award was made on the 27th of June, becauſe it ſets forth an umpirage made after that day; but ſuch implication cannot cure the bar, for if an award was made on that day, then the umpirage is void in itſelf; adjornatur to be mediated by friends, it being between two brothers. Sid. 336.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award, the defendant pleads nullum fecerunt arbitrium; and the plaintiff replies, and ſhews the award, he muſt alſo ſhew the breach, without which he hath no cauſe of action, for the obligation is guided by the condition; and though the defendant can make no anſwer to the breach, yet it ought to appear to the court that the plaintiff hath cauſe of action. Yelv. 152. Cro. Jac. 220. 1 Sand. 102.

But if in debt upon bond to perform an award, and oyer of the condition, the defendant pleads non ſubmiſit, the plaintiff need not aſſign a breach, for the defendant puts the whole ſtreſs of his cauſe upon a matter antecedent to the alledging a breach, for if there be no ſubmiſſion there could be no award, and conſequently no breach of it. 1 Sid. 290.

In debt on bond for performing an award, and no award pleaded; the plaintiff replied, that ante exhibitionem billæ, viz. 24th of June, the arbitrators made award; the defendant demurred generally: It was agreed by all, that if the demurrer had been ſpecial, judgment ſhould have been for the defendant, becauſe the plaintiff ought to have replied, that the arbitrators made their award before the day limited for it; but becauſe the demurrer was general, the plaintiff had judgment. Nota, The 24th of July was within the ſubmiſſion. Sid. 370.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award, the defendant ſhews that the arbitrators did make an award, that the defendant before ſuch a day ſhould pay to the plaintiff 100*l.* otherwiſe ſhould procure one A. being a ſtranger, to be bound to the plaintiff for the payment of 12*l. per annum* to the plaintiff for his life; and the defendant pleads that he hath performed the ſaid award, and the plaintiff replies, that the defendant hath not paid the ſaid 100*l.* without ſaying, nor hath procured A. &c. yet this is a good replication, for the award as to that part is merely void, and therefore the plaintiff need not take notice thereof. 1 Leon. 304. Owen 153.

An award was that the defendant ſhould pay 3100*l. to the plaintiff, and that they ſhould give each other general releaſes*; in debt upon the ſubmiſſion bond, the defendant in his plea confeſſed, that the award was, that he ſhould pay ſo much, and execute a general releaſe, and then averred performance; the plaintiff replied, and tendered an iſſue upon non-payment; the defendant waived the iſſue, and pleaded an inſufficient rejoinder; and becauſe neither the plaintiff nor defendant had ſet forth that the plaintiff was to execute a releaſe to him, and ſo the award as pleaded was of one ſide only, it was held, that the plaintiff could not have judgment; but the court looking upon it to be a trick in pleading, they would not give judgment for the defendant, but gave the plaintiff liberty to diſcontinue upon payment of coſts; but afterwards it appearing on an Engliſh bill in the Exchequer, that there was male practice of the plaintiff with the arbitrators, and it being likewiſe a caſe of great extremity upon the defendant, the money awarded being 1100*l.* more than the very penalty of the bond, ubi revera there was nothing due to the plaintiff, but he was indebted to the defendant; the defendant was relieved againſt the bond. Saund. 326.

Debt upon bond for the performance of an award, &c. the defendant pleaded no award made, &c. the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award made, and ready to be delivered to the parties; the defendant rejoined, that the award was not tendered to him on the day, & hoc paratus eſt verificare; and upon a demurrer, this rejoinder was held ill, becauſe it was a departure from the plea, for that was no award made; but the rejoinder was, that the award was not tendered, which implies that it was made; beſides, this rejoinder was ill concluded, for the replication ſets forth, that the award was ready to be delivered to the parties; the rejoinder ſays it was not, which is a negative and affirmative, and that is a plain iſſue; therefore he ſhould have concluded to the contrary, and not have averred the rejoinder. 2 Saund. 188, 189.

In an action of debt upon an award, it is not neceſſary for the plaintiff in his declaration to lay time or place where the award or ſubmiſſion were made; but if the defendant denies either, the plaintiff may reply, that the award or ſubmiſſion was made at ſuch a place. 2 Brownl. 137.

If there be a ſubmiſſion to the award of J. S. ſo that the ſaid award be made under his hand and ſeal at or before the 5th day of September following, ready to be delivered at the ſhop of J. N. in the Exchange, London; and in an action of debt upon an award made thereupon, the plaintiff declares that the ſaid J. S. under his hand and ſeal the 4th day of September following, apud caſtrum eborum, did make an award adtunc & ibidem parat' to be delivered at the ſhop of the ſaid J. N. in the Exchange, London; this is no good declaration, for the parties are not bound to take cognizance of the delivery elſewhere than at the place appointed. Cro. Jac. 577.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, ſo as it be ready to be delivered to the parties at ſuch a day and place; the defendant pleaded no award made; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award delivered to the parties before the day, and at another place, than mentioned in the ſubmiſſion; and upon demurrer, Hale Ch. J. held the replication ill, becauſe it being only the execution of an authority, it ought to be made at the ſame day and place; but the others e contra, and adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the award was delivered to the parties themſelves. 2 Liv. 68.

Bond was for performing an award de præmiſſis vel aliqua parte inde; the defendant pleaded no award made de præmiſſis. On demurrer it was objected, that it was not ſaid nec de aliqua parte inde, for if a bond be to perform an award of two or either of them, it is not ſufficient to plead that thoſe made no award, without adding nec aliquis eorum; but if an award is to be made of the manors of D. and C. or either of them, and the award is made of D. only, it is well enough; but as to the firſt part it was anſwered, that nullum fecerunt arbitrium de præmiſſis is well enough; for that it implies nec de aliqua parte inde, eſpecially if the contrary is not ſhewn in the replication, and therefore it ſhall never be intended that an award was made of ſome part; curia adviſare vult. 2 Mod. 27, 28.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award, ſo as, &c. the defendant pleads no award made, and the plaintiff replies, that ante exhibitionem billæ, ſcilicet the 24 June (which was a day within the ſubmiſſion) the arbitrators made an award, &c. and the defendant demurs generally, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment; for though the plaintiff ought to have replied, that the arbitrators made their award before the day limited to them; yet this is form only, and helped by a general demurrer. 1 Sid. 370.

If in debt upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, ſo as it be made, &c. and ready to be delivered to the parties, or to ſuch of them who ſhall deſire the ſame; the defendant pleads nullum fecerunt arbitrium, and the plaintiff replies and ſets forth the award, and ſhews a breach, but doth not ſay that it was ready to be delivered to the defendant, yet this is a good replication; for when the award is made it is ready to be delivered to parties, or ſuch of them who deſire it, ſo that it muſt be deſired; and if denied, the party muſt plead that matter ſpecially. 3 Mod. 330.

Debt upon bond, the defendant craved oyer of the bond and condition, which was to perform an award, ſo as it be in writing under the hand and ſeal of the arbitrator, and upon nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award under the ſeal of the arbitrator; the defendant rejoins no award under hand and ſeal, according to the condition of the bond, and upon demurrer to the rejoinder, the defendant had judgment; for per cur. The plaintiff ought to have replied an award under the hand as well as the ſeal of the arbitrator, for he muſt plead it formally as well as produce it. 2 Mod. 77.

If in debt upon an obligation conditioned for the performance of an award in writing, or by word of mouth, the defendant pleads no award made, and the plaintiff replies, that at the time of the bond and award he had an action againſt the defendant for ſcandalous words, and the arbitrator ore tenus did declare and publiſh his award in manner following, viz. That the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 12 guineas, and all ſuch money as he had expended circa projecutionem placitat' præd', &c. this is a good award, and well ſet forth, although the award doth not mention any ſuit before; for he that ſets forth a parol award is not tied to the very words, but it is ſufficient to ſhew the aſſent and ſubſtance of what was awarded by word of mouth. 2 Vent. 242.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award; upon nullum arbitrium pleaded the plaintiff replied, that he was poſſeſſed of a mill, to which the defendant pretending title, brought an ejectment, and had judgment by default; and the diſpute was, whether the defendant ſhould have it, or the plaintiff ſhould keep it, and thereupon they ſubmitted to the award, &c. and afterwards, but before the time for making the award, the defendant brought an habere facias poſſeſſionem upon the ſaid judgment, and the mill was delivered to him, and ſic non ſtetit arbitrio, &c. Upon demurrer to this replication, it was inſiſted for the defendant, that tho' he had the poſſeſſion, yet that matter is ſtill arbitrable; ſed per cur. A particular controverſy is ſet forth in this pleading, and the defendant by his own act having taken away the ſubject matter, has alſo taken away the poſſibility to make an award of it. 2 Jo. 134.

A man cannot plead generally the award performed, but he ought to ſet forth the award, and ſhew how he hath performed it. Moor 3. pl. 9.

In pleading a countermand to a ſubmiſſion to arbitrate, it need not be alledged, that the party gave notice to the arbitrators, for without that it is no countermand, and therefore if no notice be given, iſſue may be joined upon the point quod non revocavit. 8 Co. 82.

If the ſubmiſſion be by word, though the award be by deed, the party may wage his law; for though a deed cannot be diſſolved without deed, yet a verbal contract may be diſſolved by word only, and this in its original is a verbal contract. Co. Lit. 295. 2 Sand. 65.

In debt upon bond to perform an award; the plaintiff pleads an award that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff ſo much, &c. and he tendered it accordingly, and that the plaintiff refuſed; the plaintiff replied, that the umpire awarded the money to be paid in ſatisfaction of all controverſies, and that the defendant did not tender it, and concludes to the country; and upon demurrer it was inſiſted, that the plaintiff having alledged new matter in his replication, he ought not to have concluded to the country, for by that means he had deprived the defendant of his traverſe to the new matter, and therefore cannot have judgment, eſpecially ſince it does not appear by the pleading whether the award was good or not; and of this opinion were Jones Ch. J. and Charleton, but Windham and Levinz e contra, becauſe the defendant having admitted the award to be good, and taking upon him to plead performance, he ſhall not afterwards be admitted to traverſe it to prove it no award; but if the award was not in ſatisfaction of all controverſies, and ſo an award of one part only, the defendant ſhould have pleaded at firſt no award, but to admit him now to a traverſe to prove it no award, would be a departure; court divided. 3 Lev. 164.

If in debt on a bond for performance of an award, the defendant pleads no award, and the plaintiff ſets forth an award with a profert in cur'. and the defendant craves oyer, and then demurs for variance between the award ſet out in the replication and the oyer, and the variances appear material, the defendant muſt have judgment; otherwiſe if the variance had been as to thoſe parts in which the award was void; and though in debt on an award the plaintiff need not ſet forth more than makes for him, yet it is otherwiſe in debt on a bond, for there the plaintiff muſt reply the whole award; and if ſuch replication be without a profert, the defendant may reply nul tiel accord. 1 Salk. 72.

In debt on bond to perform an award in writing or by word of mouth; the defendant pleaded no award; the plaintiff replied, that at the time of the bond and award he had an action for ſcandalous words againſt the defendant, and that the arbitrators did declare and publiſh their award thus, viz. that the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 12 guineas, and all ſuch monies as he had expended in and about the proſecution of the plea aforeſaid, and that the parties ſhould give mutual releaſes to the date of the ſaid bond, &c. It was objected, that the award is void, becauſe it does not mention any ſuit before to refer the (plea aforeſaid) unto. But per cur. If the award had been in writing with ſuch form of expreſſion, it would not be good, but in ſetting out an award by parol, it is ſufficient to ſhew the effect and ſubſtance of what was awarded by word of mouth, and it is ſufficiently ſhewn that this award was made concerning the action of ſlander; and judgment for the plaintiff. 2 Vent. 242.

And it was alſo held, that the plaintiff need not ſhew that there was cauſe of action; for that is left to the arbitrators, and they have power to award charges thereupon, though in point of law there was no cauſe of action, becauſe the parties have made them their judges. 2 Vent. 242, 243.

If an award be made, that certain buildings erected on a wharf, which were a nuſance to the plaintiff, ſhould be pulled down within thirty-eight days from the date of the award, &c. and upon nul agard pleaded, the plaintiff ſets forth an award, but without date; yet this is well enough, for the date ſhall be computed from the making the award, as a deed takes its date from the delivery, though actually dated on another day. 1 Salk 76.

Submiſſion was, ita quod the award be made, &c. by the arbitrators, and if not, then ita quod it be made de præmiſſis by the umpire, either in writing or by word of mouth, before two witneſſes, at or before, &c. the defendant pleaded nullum arbitrium; the plaintiff replied, and ſhewed an award by the umpire by word of mouth, but did not aver that it was made before witneſſes; and therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Lutw. 536.

In debt on bond to perform an award, the defendant pleaded no award; the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award with a profert in curia, and there were ſeveral material omiſſions; the defendant craved oyer, and demurred for the variance between the award in the replication and the oyer; per Holt Ch. J. In debt upon bond to perform an award, if nul agard fait be pleaded, and the plaintiff replies an award, &c. and iſſue is thereupon, and there is a material variance between the award given in evidence and the award ſet forth in the replication, it is againſt the plaintiff; but if the variance be only by omiſſion of that which is void, it is no material variance, being no material part of the award; but becauſe the variances are by omiſſions that are material, judgment muſt be for the defendant. 1 Salk. 72.

A R B

Form of a submiſſion by rule of court.

WHEREAS divers diſputes and controverſies have ariſen, and are now depending, between A. B. of——in the county of——yeoman, of the one part, and C. D. of——in the ſaid county, yeoman, of the other part, touching and concerning——: Now for the ending and deciding thereof, it is hereby mutually agreed by and between the ſaid parties, that all matters in difference between them for, touching and concerning all and every the matters and things herein above ſpecified and particularly mentioned, ſhall be referred and ſubmitted to the arbitrament, final end and determination of A. A. of——in the ſaid county, gentleman, B. A. of——in the ſaid county, yeoman, and C. Arbitration bond.

KNOW all men by theſe preſents, that I A. B. of——in the county of——gentleman, am held and firmly bound to C. D. of——in the ſaid county of——yeoman, in——pounds of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be paid to the ſaid C. D. or to his certain attorney, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns: to which payment well and truly to be made, I bind myſelf, my heirs, executors, and adminiſtrators, firmly by theſe preſents, ſealed with my ſeal, and dated the——day of——in the——year of the reign of our ſovereign lord George the Third, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, defender of the faith, and ſo forth, and in the year of our Lord——.

The condition of the above obligation is ſuch, that if the above bound A. B. his heirs, executors, and adminiſtrators, and every of them, for and on his and their parts and behalfs, do and ſhall well and truly ſtand to, obey, abide, perform, obſerve and keep the award, order, arbitrament, final end and determination of A. A. of——eſquire, and B. A. of——gentleman, arbitrators indifferently named, elected, and choſen, as well for and on the part and behalf of the above bound A. B. as of the above named C. D. to arbitrate, award, order, adjudge and determine of and concerning all and all manner of action and actions, cauſe and cauſes of action and actions, ſuits, bills, bonds, ſpecialties, judgments, executions, extents, accounts, debts, dues, ſum and ſums of money, quarrels, controverſies, treſpaſſes, damages and demands whatſoever, both in law and equity, or otherwiſe howſoever, which at any time or times heretofore have been had, made, moved, brought, commenced, ſued, proſecuted, committed, omitted, done or ſuffered by or between the ſaid parties, ſo as the ſaid award be made in writing, and ready to be delivered to the ſaid parties, on or before the——day of——now next enſuing; then this obligation to be void, otherwiſe of force.

If the parties have a mind to make their ſubmiſſion a rule of court, then this may be added.

And the above bound A. B. doth agree and deſire, that this his ſubmiſſion be made a rule of his Majeſty's court of King's Bench at Weſtminſter, purſuant to the act of parliament in ſuch caſe made and provided.

Condition to ſtand to the award of three arbitrators, or any two of them, and an umpire appointed.

THE condition of this obligation is ſuch, that if the above bound A. And if the ſaid arbitrators ſhall not make ſuch their award of and concerning the premiſſes, within the time limited as aforeſaid, then if the ſaid* A. Arbitrement, (Arbitrium) Is the ſentence or determination pronounced by arbitrators, and publiſhed when they have heard all parties. And arbitrement is either general, of all actions, demands, quarrels, &c. or ſpecial, of ſome certain matters in controverſy: It may be alſo abſolute, or conditional. 8 Rep. 98. To every arbitrement five things are incident, 1. Matters of controverſy. 2. Submiſſion. 3. Parties to the ſubmiſſion. 4. Arbitrators. 5. Giving up the arbitrement. Hardr. 44. Dyer 216. Arbitrators can't refer arbitrements to others, if the ſubmiſſion be not ſo: but an arbitrement that one ſhall releaſe to another, by advice of a certain perſon, this is good; becauſe 'tis a reference only for the execution of it. Jenk. Cent. 129. Submiſſion to arbitrement are uſually by bond; and the parties who bind themſelves are obliged to take notice of the award, at their peril: but things relating to a freehold; debts due on bond; or on certain contracts; criminal offences, &c. are not arbitrable. See title Arbitrator.

Archbiſhop, (Archiepiſcopus) Is the chief biſhop of the province, who next and immediately under the King, hath ſupreme power, authority and juriſdiction, in all cauſes and things eccleſiaſtical. Godol. 12. At firſt, the title of archbiſhop ſeemeth to have been only a name of honour; whence in ſome countries, eſpecially in Italy, ſeveral are diſtinguiſhed with that title, who indeed take place of, but have no power or authority over other biſhops. Bower's Hiſt. Popes, vol. 1. p. 110. Metropolitan, was a title given to the biſhop of the chief city of a province. As was likewiſe that of a primate; he being primus, or the firſt of the province; for ſuch was the original ſignification of that word in an eccleſiaſtical ſenſe; but in proceſs of time, the title of primate was reſtrained to the biſhops of ſome great cities. id. ib. A patriarch was the chief biſhop over ſeveral kingdoms or provinces, as an archbiſhop is of ſeveral dioceſes. Godol. 20.

The ancient Britons are believed to have had at leaſt one archiepiſcopal ſee before the time of Auſtin the monk, viz. Caerleon, or (as ſome will have it) at Landaff. Johnſ. 35. Godol. 17. And upon the pope's granting unto Auſtin a power to erect a metropolitical ſee at York, (with ſubordination nevertheleſs to himſelf as primate,) Dr. Warner obſerveth, that the reaſon of this preference with regard to York was, becauſe formerly under the Romans, York hath been an archbiſhoprick, as well as London and Caerleon. 1 Warn. Eccl. Hiſt. 50.

But at this day, the eccleſiaſtical ſtate of England and Wales is divided only into two provinces or archbiſhopricks, to wit, Canterbury and York. Each archbiſhop hath within his province biſhops of ſeveral dioceſes. The archbiſhop of Canterbury hath under him within his province, of ancient foundations, Rocheſter, London, Wincheſter, Norwich, Lincoln, Ely, Chicheſter, Saliſbury, Exeter, Bath and Wells, Worceſter, Coventry and Litchfield, Hereford, Landaff, St. David's, Bangor, and St. Aſaph; and four founded by King Henry 8. erected out of the ruins of diſſolved monaſteries, viz. Glouceſter, Briſtol, Peterborough and Oxford. The archbiſhop of York hath under him four, viz. the biſhop of the county palatine of Cheſter, newly erected by King Hen. 8. and annexed by him to the archbiſhoprick of York; the county palatine of Durham; Carliſle; and the Iſle of Man, annexed to the province of York by King Hen. 8. but a greater number this archbiſhop anciently had, which time hath taken from him. 1 Inſt. 94.

Canterbury was once the royal city of the kings of Kent; and was given by King Ethelbert, on his converſion to chriſtianity, to Auſtin the firſt archbiſhop thereof, about the year of our Lord 598. Godol. 13, 17.

If we conſider Canterbury as the ſeat of the metropolitan, it hath under it twenty-one biſhops (as hath been ſaid); but if we conſider it as the ſeat of a dioceſan, ſo it comprehends only ſome part of Kent (the reſidue being in the dioceſe of Rocheſter), together with ſome other pariſhes diſperſedly ſituate in ſeveral dioceſes; it being an ancient privilege of the ſee, that the places where the archbiſhop hath many manors or advowſons, are thereby exempted from the ordinary, and are become peculiars of the dioceſe of Canterbury, properly belonging to the juriſdiction of Canterbury. Godol. 14.

The archbiſhop of Canterbury is ſtiled primate and metropolitan of all England, albeit there is another archiepiſcopal province within the realm; partly, becauſe when the popes had taken into their own hands, in a great meaſure, the archiepiſcopal authority, they inveſted the archbiſhops of Canterbury with a legatine authority, throughout both the provinces; and partly, becauſe the archbiſhop of Canterbury hath ſtill the power, which the popes in times paſt uſurped, and which by act of parliament was again taken from the popes, of granting faculties and diſpenſations in both the provinces alike. Yea further, the archbiſhop of Canterbury anciently had primacy, not only over all England, but over Ireland alſo, and from him the Iriſh biſhops received their conſecration; for Ireland had no other archbiſhop till the year 1152; for which reaſon it was declared, in the time of the two firſt Norman Kings, that Canterbury was the metropolitan church of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and of the iſles adjacent; the archbiſhop of Canterbury was therefore ſometimes ſtiled a patriarch, and orbis Britannici pontifex; inſomuch that matters recorded in eccleſiaſtical affairs did run thus, viz. anno pontificatus noſtri primo, ſecundo, &c. Godol. 20.

At general councils abroad, the archbiſhop of Canterbury had the precedency of all other archbiſhops. Godol. 21. At home, he has the privilege to crown the Kings of England. God. 13. He is ſaid to be inthroned, when he is veſted in the archbiſhoprick; whereas biſhops are ſaid to be inſtalled. God. 21.

He hath prelates to be his officers: thus, the biſhop of London is his provincial dean; the biſhop of Wincheſter, his chancellor; the biſhop of Lincoln anciently was his vice-chancellor; the biſhop of Saliſbury his precentor; the biſhop of Worceſter, his chaplain; and the biſhop of Rocheſter (when time was) carried the croſs before him. God. 14.

He may retain and qualify eight chaplains; which is more by two, than any duke or biſhop is allowed to do by ſtatute. God. 21.

The archbiſhop of Canterbury hath the precedency of all the clergy; next to him the archbiſhop of York; next to him the biſhop of London; next to him the biſhop of Durham; next to him the biſhop of Wincheſter; and then all the other biſhops of both provinces after the ſeniority of their conſecration; but if any of them be a privy counſellor, he ſhall take place next after the biſhop of Durham. 1 Inſt. 94. 1 Ought. Ord. Jud. 486.

It is the right of the archbiſhop of Canterbury to call the biſhops and clergy of his province to convocation, upon the King's writ: he hath a juriſdiction in caſes of appeal, where where there is a ſuppoſed default of juſtice in the ordinary; and has a ſtanding juriſdiction over his ſuffragans: He confirms the election of biſhops, and afterwards conſecrates them, &c. and he may appoint coadjutors to a biſhop that is grown infirm: He may confer degrees of all kinds; and cenſure and excommunicate, ſuſpend or depoſe, for any juſt cauſe, &c. 2 Roll. Abr. 223. He hath power to grant diſpenſations in any caſe, formerly granted by the ſee of Rome, not contrary to the law of God: But if the caſe is new and extraordinary, the King and his counſel are to be conſulted. Stat. 25 H. 8. He may retain eight chaplains; and during the vacancy of any ſee, he is guardian of the ſpiritualties. Stat. Ibid. and 21 H. 8.

The firſt archbiſhop of York that we read of, was Paulinus, who by pope Gregory's appointment was made archbiſhop there, about the year of our Lord 622. Godol. 14.

The province of York anciently claimed and had a metropolitan juriſdiction over all the biſhops in Scotland, whence they had their conſecration, and to which they ſwore canonical obedience, until about the year 1466. when George Nevil being at that time archbiſhop of York, the biſhops of Scotland withdrew themſelves from their obedience to him; and in the year 1470, pope Sixtus the Fourth created the biſhop of St. Andrews archbiſhop and metropolitan of all Scotland. God. 14, 18.

The archbiſhop of York hath the privilege to crown the Queen conſort, and to be her perpetual chaplain. Chamberlain's Preſent State 65.

He alſo, in like manner as the archbiſhop of Canterbury, is ſaid to be inthroned, when he is veſted in the archbiſhoprick. God. 21.

He alſo hath the title of Grace and Moſt reverend father in God; whereas biſhops have the title of Lord, and Right reverend father in God. Chamb. 65. And he writes himſelf by divine providence. God. 13.

The archbiſhop of Canterbury is the firſt peer of the realm, and hath precedency, not only before all the other clergy, but alſo (next and immediately after the blood royal) before all the nobility of the realm: And as he hath the precedency of all the nobility, ſo alſo of all the great officers of ſtate. God. 13.

The archbiſhop of York hath the precedency over all dukes, not being of the blood royal; as alſo before all the great officers of ſtate except the lord chancellor. God. 14.

And every other biſhop, in reſpect of his barony, hath place of all the barons of the realm, under the degree of viſcount. God. 13.

Archdeacon, (Archilevita, archidiaconus) Is one that hath eccleſiaſtical dignity and juriſdiction over the clergy and laity next after the biſhop throughout the dioceſe, or in ſome part of it only. Archdeacons had anciently a ſuperintendant power over all the parochial clergy in every deanery in their precincts, they being the chiefs of the deacons; though they have no original juriſdiction; but what they have got is from the biſhop, either by preſcription or compoſition; and Sir Simon Degg tells us, that it appears an archdeacon is a meer ſubſtitute to the biſhop; and what authority he hath is derived from him, his chief office being to viſit and inquire, and epiſcopo nunciare, &c. In ancient times archdeacons were employ'd in ſervile duties of collecting and diſtributing alms and offerings; but at length by a perſonal attendance on the biſhops, and a delegation to examine and report ſome cauſes, and commiſſions to viſit the remoter parts of the dioceſes, they became as it were overſeers of the church; and by degrees advanced into conſiderable dignity and power. Lanfranc, archbiſhop of Canterbury, was the firſt prelate in England who inſtituted an archdeacon in his dioceſe, which was about the year 1075. And an archdeacon is now allowed to be an ordinary, as he hath a part of the epiſcopal power lodged within him; he viſits his juriſdiction once every year; and he hath a court, where he may inflict penance, ſuſpend, or excommunicate perſons, prove wills, grant adminiſtrations, and hear cauſes eccleſiaſtical, &c. ſubject to appeal to the biſhop of the dioceſe. It is one part of the office of an archdeacon to examine candidates for holy orders; and to induct clerks within his juriſdiction, upon receipt of the biſhop's mandate. 2 Cro. 556. 1 Lev. 193. Wood's Inſt. 30.

As deacons were all originally the attendants and ſervants of their ſeveral biſhops in church affairs; ſo it is certain, that about the end of the third century, there was in ſeveral dioceſes one choſen out from among the reſt, who had the title of archdeacon: And by degrees this office became univerſal; and they who had it, being always near the biſhop, ſo improved their advantage, that in proceſs of time they began to ſhare with the biſhop in his authority. Johnſ. 57. Gibſ. 969.

But as the archdeacons in their original inſtitution, had no relation to the dioceſe, but only to the epiſcopal ſee; ſo it was by ſeveral ſteps and degrees that they attained to the power they now enjoy. At their firſt inſtitution, their proper buſineſs was, to attend the biſhop at the altar, to direct the deacons and other inferior officers in their ſeveral duties for the orderly performance of divine ſervice, to attend the biſhop at ordinations, and to aſſiſt him in the management of the revenues of the church; but without any thing that could be called juriſdiction in the preſent ſenſe of the word, either in the cathedral or out of it. Gibſ. 969.

Archdeaconries are commonly given by biſhops, who do therefore prefer to the ſame by collation: But if an archdeaconry be in the gift of a layman, the patron doth preſent to the biſhop, who inſtitutes in like manner as to another benefice; and then the dean and chapter do induct him, that is, after ſome ceremonies, place him in a ſtall in the cathedral church to which he belongeth, whereby he is ſaid to have a place in the choir. Watſ. c. 15.

Archdeacons by the 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. are to read the common prayer and declare their aſſent thereunto, as other perſons admitted to eccleſiaſtical benefices; and alſo muſt ſubſcribe the ſame before the ordinary: But they are not obliged by the 13 Eliz. to ſubſcribe and read the thirty-nine articles; for altho' an archdeaconry be a benefice with cure, yet it is not ſuch a benefice with cure as ſeems to be intended by that ſtatute, but only ſuch benefices with cure as have particular churches belonging to them. Watſ. c. 15. And they are to take the oaths at the ſeſſions, as other perſons qualifying for offices.

By the canon law the archdeacon is ſtiled the biſhop's eye; and hath power to hold viſitations (when the biſhop is not there); and hath alſo power under the biſhop of examining clerks to be ordained, as alſo of inſtitution and induction; likewiſe of excommunication, injunction of penances, ſuſpenſion, correction, inſpecting and reforming irregularities and abuſes among the clergy; and a charge of the parochial churches within the dioceſe: In a word, according to the practice of, and latitude given by the canon law, to ſupply the biſhop's room, and (as the words of that law are) in all things to be the biſhop's vicegerent. God. 61.

The judge of the archdeacon's court (where he doth preſide himſelf) is called the official. Wood's Inſt. 30.

By the ſtatute of the 24 Hen. 8. c. 12. an appeal lieth from the archdeacon's to the biſhop's court.

Upon motion for a prohibition to ſtay a ſuit in the biſhop's court, upon ſuggeſtion that the party lived within a peculiar archdeaconry; it was reſolved by the court, That where the archdeacon hath a peculiar juriſdiction, he is totally exempt from the power of the biſhop, and the biſhop cannot enter there, and hold court; and in ſuch caſe, if the party who lives within the peculiar be ſued in the biſhop's court, a prohibition ſhall be granted; for the ſtatute intends that no ſuit ſhall be per ſaltum: But if the archdeacon hath not a peculiar, then the biſhop and he have a concurrent juriſdiction, and the party may commence his ſuit either in the archdeacon's court or the biſhop's, and he hath election to chooſe which he pleaſeth: and if he commence in the biſhop's court, no prohibition ſhall be granted; for if it ſhould, it would confine the biſhop's court to determine nothing but appeals, and render it incapable of having any cauſes originally commenced there. L. Raym. 123.

Arches court, (Curia de arcubus) Is the chief and moſt ancient conſiſtory that belongeth to the archbiſhop of Canterbury, for the debating of ſpiritual cauſes; and it is ſo called from the church in London, dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin, commonly called the church of St. Mary le Bow, where this court is held; and the church is named Bow-Church, from the faſhion of the ſteeple; the top of which is compoſed of ſtone pillars, built archwiſe, like ſo many bent bows. The judge of this court is termed The dean of the arches, or The official of the arches court. Dean of the arches, becauſe with this officialty is commonly joined a peculiar juriſdiction of thirteen pariſhes in London, termed Deanery, being exempt from the authority of the biſhop of London, and belonging to the archbiſhop of Canterbury; of which Bow is one, and the principal, becauſe the court is there kept: Others conceive that he was firſt called Dean of the arches, becauſe the official to the archbiſhop being many times employ'd abroad in embaſſies for the king and realm; the dean of the arches was his ſubſtitute in this court, and by that means became confounded. The juriſdiction of this judge is ordinary, and extendeth itſelf through the whole province of Canterbury; ſo that upon any appeal made, he forthwith, and without any further examination of the cauſe, ſends out his citation to the appellee, and his inhibition to the judge from whom the appeal was made. See Hiſt. de Antiquit. Eccleſ. Britan. and 4 Inſt. fol. 337.

The perſon who adminiſters juſtice in the court of arches, is the official principal of the archbiſhop; who was called Officialis de arcubus, and the court itſelf Curia de arcubus, or Bow-Church, (ſo called from the ſteeple being raiſed at the top with ſtone pillars archwiſe); by reaſon of the archbiſhop's having ordinary juriſdiction in that place, as the chief of his peculiars in London; and being the church where the dean of thoſe peculiars (commonly called the dean of the arches) held his courts; and becauſe theſe two courts were held in the ſame place, and the dean of the arches was uſually ſubſtituted in the abſence of the official while the offices remained in two perſons, and the offices themſelves have in many inſtances been united in one and the ſame perſon, as they now remain; by theſe means a wrong notion hath obtained, that it is the dean of the arches, as ſuch, who hath juriſdiction throughout the province of Canterbury; whereas the juriſdiction of that office is limited to the thirteen peculiars of the archbiſhop in the city of London; and the juriſdiction throughout the province, for receiving appeals, and the like, belongs to him only as official principal. Gibſ. 1004. Johnſ. 257.

In like manner the right of juriſdiction in every dioceſe of the province, during the vacancies of the ſees, tho' veſted by patent in the ſame perſon, belongs not to him as dean of the arches, but as vicar general of the archbiſhop. Gibſ. 1004.

And the ſame perſon is likewiſe judge of the peculiars, that is, of all thoſe pariſhes, fifty-ſeven in number, which tho' lying in other dioceſes, yet are no ways ſubject to the biſhop or archdeacon, but to the archbiſhop. Johnſ. 257.

The court of the arches is very ancient, and ſubſiſted long before the time of King Henry the Second; for Alexander the Third, then biſhop of Rome, did by his edict to the dean of the arches and Robert Kilwarby, then archbiſhop of Canterbury, abrogate and aboliſh the then ancient ſtatutes of this court, and ſet up others in their ſtead; and it was there ſaid, that thoſe ancient ſtatutes were then by length of time become not legible. Conſet. 4.

This court (as alſo the court of peculiars, the admiralty court, the prerogative court, and the court of delegates for the moſt part) is now held in the hall belonging to the College of Civilians, commonly called Doctors Commons. Floy. 21.

From this court the appeal is to the King in Chancery; by the 25 Hen. 8. c. 19.

Arietum levatio, An old ſportive exerciſe, which ſeems to have been the ſame with running at the quintan, or quintal. See Quintan. Cowell, ib.

Arma dare, To dub or make a knight, an. dom. 1144. 10 Steph. Ego Brientius filius comitis, quem bonus rex Henricus nutrivit, & cui arma dedit & honorem. So arma capere, to be made a knight. A. D. 1278. 31 Ed. 3. A die quo dictus comes (i. e. Henricus de Lacy) arma militaria a domino Henrico Rege data noſtro cepit. See Kennet's Parochial Antiquities, p. 101, 289. Quem etiam præmature militem fecit donatum chlamyde coccinea, gemmato baltheo, enſe Saxonico, cum vagina aurea. Malmſ. lib. 2. cap. 2. de Ethelſtano. So in Hoveden, part. 1. poſt hæc in hebdomada pentecoſtes, filium ſuum Henricum apud Weſtm. armis militaribus honoravit. And in Walſingham, page 507. die dominica in virgilia purificationis, Edwardus juvenis ſuſcepit arma militaria. 'Tis true, the word arma in theſe places ſignifies only a ſword, but ſometimes a knight was made by giving him the whole armour: Thus we read, Lanfrancus Dorobernenſis epiſcopus eum lorica induit, & galeam leam capiti imposuit; eique & regis filio militiæ cingulum in nomine dei cinxit. Ordericus vitalis, lib. 8. de Henrico, &c. Cowell, ib.

Arma deponere, Was enjoined when a man had committed an offence. L L. Hen. 1. cap. 68. Cowell, ib.

Arma libera, Where a sword and a lance which were usually given to a servant, when he was made free. Cowell, ib.

Arma moluta, Sharp weapons that cut, and are not blunt, which only break or bruise, Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. ca. 23. and Standf. pl. cor. 78, 79. Bracton's words are these, Arma moluta plagam faciunt, sicut gladius & hujusmodi: ligna vero & lapides, brusuras, orbes & ictus, qui judicari non possunt ad plagam, ad hoc ut inde venire possit ad duellum. And Fleta, lib. 2. c. 33. par 6. calls them arma emolita. Cowell.

Arma mutare, Was a ceremony used to confirm a league or friendship. Cowell, edit. 1727

Arma reversata, This was when a man was convicted of treason or felony. Thus, Knighton, speaking of Hugh Spencer, Primo vestierunt eum uno vestimento cum armis reversatis. lib. 3. pag. 2546. Cowell, ib.

Armigeri, Not only a title of dignity, belonging to such as bear arms, but the common appellation of servants, especially in convents. I suppose the better sort of servants; yet they were such as wore liveries in the priory of Burcester.—— Et in blodeo panno empto pro armigeris & valictis prioris de Johanne Bandye de Magnatue. Pannario erga natale domini hoc anno 7 lib. 15. fol. 11. Ken. Paroch. Antiquit. p. 576. This is the same servile office, which by Sir Henry Spelman is called quædam species armigerorum in the abby of Battle, Com. Suss. where the abbot and convent granted Hugoni Francey armigero suo, a yearly prestation or wages, and a customary livery. Cowell, ib.

Armour or Arms, (Arma) In the understanding of law, are extended to any thing that a man wears for his defence, or takes into his hands, or useth in wrath to cast at or strike another. Crompt. Justice of Peace, fol. 65. So that armorum appellatio non ubique scuta & gladios, & galeas significat, sed & fustes & lapides. Arms are also what we call in Latin insignia, ensigns of honour. Cowell. As to the original of arms, or ensigns of honour, it was to distinguish commanders in war; for the antient defensive armour being a coat of mail, &c. which covered the persons, they could not be distinguished, and therefore a certain badge was painted on their shields, which was called arms; but not made hereditary in families till the time of King Rich. 1. on his expedition to regain Jerusalem from the Turks: And besides shields with arms, they had a silk coat drawn over their armour, and afterwards a stiff coat, on which their arms were painted all over, now the herald's coat of arms. Sid. Rep. 352.

By stat. 7. Ed. 1. men shall come peaceably to all parliaments without force and arms.

All men shall have arms according to their ability, and view of arms shall be made twice in the year. St. 13 Ed. 1. st. 2. c. 6. Men shall not come armed before the justices. Stat. 2 Ed. 3. c. 3. Going and riding armed is an offence. St. 25 Ed. 3. st. 5. c. 2. Launcegays prohibited, and riding armed. 7 R. 2. c. 13. 20 R. 2. c. 1.

Servants and labourers shall use bows and arrows on Sundays, &c. and not bear other arms. St. 12 Ric. 2. c. 6. Imbezelling the King's armour felony. St. 31 Eliz. c. 4. Armour may be exported. 12 Car. 2. c. 4. sect. 10. Unless prohibited by proclamation. 12 Car. 2. c. 4. sect. 12. Importing arms or ammunition prohibited. 1 Jac. 2. c. 8.

Armiscare, Is a sort of punishment decreed or imposed by the judge. Malmsb. lib. 3. pag. 97. Walsingham, pag. 430. At first it was to carry a saddle at his back in token of subjection, viz. Nudis vestigiis equestrem sellam ad satisfaciendum humeris feret. Thus Brompton tells us, that in the year 1176, the King of the Scots promised Henry the Second at York, Lanceam et sellam suam super altare sancti Petri, ad perpetuam hujus subjectionis memoriam offerre. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Arnaldia, Arnoldia, A sort of disease, that makes the hair fall off, like the alopecia, or like distemper in foxes. —— Deinde uterque rex incidit in ægritudinem quam arnaldiam *vocant, in qua ipsi ad mortem usque laborantes capillos suos deposuerunt. Arnalia, Arable lands, mentioned in Domesday, tit. Essex. Jacob.

Aromatarius, (Lat.) A word often used for a grocer, but held not good in law proceedings. 1 Vent. 142. Jacob.

Arpen, or Arpent, (Fr.) An acre or furlong of ground; the most ordinary one called L'arpent de France, is one hundred perches square, after eighteen foot to the perch; some account it but half an acre. This word is often found in Domesday, Quatuor arpenni vineæ noviter plantatæ, tit. Middlesex —— Septem acras terræ et unum arpentum quæ me contingebant per eschaietam. Ex Reg. Priorat. de Wormsley, fol. 7. b. where arpen seems to be some quantity less than an acre. Hence arpentator is used for a measure of lands. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Arquebus, (Fr. Arquebuse) A short hand gun, a caliver or pistol; mentioned in some of our antient statutes. Law. Fr. Dict.

Arrack. The same duty and excise payable for brandy and foreign spirits, and no more, shall be paid for arrack imported from the East Indies; and the like allowance to be made on exportation, &c. Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 14.

Arraiatio peditum, The arraying of foot soldiers. Pat. 1 Ed. 2. p. 1. m. 3. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Arraiers. See Arrayers.

Arraign, or Arrain, (From the French Arranger, i. e. To set a thing in order, or in its place,) hath the same signification in law: for he is said to arraign a writ of novel disseisin, who prepares and fits it for trial before the justices of the circuit. Old Nat. Br. fol. 109. Littleton, (pag. 78.) useth the word in the same sense, viz. The lessee arraigneth an assise of novel disseisin. To arraign the assise is to cause the tenant to be called, to make the plaint, and to set the cause in such order, as the tenant may be forced to answer thereto. Coke on Littl. fol. 262. b. Also a prisoner is said to be arraigned, when he is indicted and brought forth to his trial. Arraigned within the verge upon murder. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 150. The manner of this arraignment you may read in Sir Thomas Smith de Rep. lib. 2. c. 23. The learned Spelman is of opinion it should be written arrame, from arramare, and that from the old French arramir, i. e. jurare, promittere, solemniter profiteri. But this must be a mistake: for in the Register we find no such word as arramare; but in all the writs of assise 'tis arrainavit: and so it is in the Year-Books, and in Fitzh. Nat. Brev. The true derivation is from the Fr. arraisonner, i. e. ad rationem ponere, viz. to call a man to answer in form of law; and this comes from the barbarous Lat. adrationare, i. e. placitare; so that when a criminal is arraigned, 'tis ponere eum ad rationem. Cowell, edit. 1727.

When an offender comes into court, or is brought in by process, sometimes of capias, and sometimes of habeas corpus directed to the goaler of another prison; the first thing that follows thereupon is his arraignment. 2. Hal. H. 216. Now arraignment is nothing else but the calling the offender to the bar of the court, to answer the matter charged upon him: And the word in Latin is no other than ad rationem ponere, and in old French ad reson, or abbreviated a resn; for as the ancient word disrain or derayn imports in Latin disrationare, to disprove, or evince the contrary of any thing that is or may be affirmed, so arraigne is ad rationem ponere, to call to account or answer. 2 Hale's Hist. 216. The prisoner on his arraignment, tho' under an indictment of the highest crime, must be brought to the bar without irons and all manner of shackles or bonds, unless there be a danger of escape, and then he may be brought with irons. 2 H. H. 219. And there is no necessity that a prisoner at the time of his his arraignment, hold up his hand at the bar, or be commanded ſo to do; for this is only a ceremony for making known the perſon of the offender to the court; and if he anſwers that he is the ſame perſon it is all one. 2 Hawk. 308.

By the Common law, if a principal is acquitted or is pardoned, or dies, the acceſſary ſhall not be arraigned. But See Stat. 1. Ann. c. 9. and title Acceſſary.

If in action of ſlander for calling one thief, the defendant juſtifies that he ſtole goods, and iſſue is thereon taken; if it be found for the defendant in B. R. and for felony in the ſame county where the court ſits, or before juſtices of aſſiſe, &c. he ſhall be forthwith arraigned upon this verdict of 12 men, as on an indictment. 2 Ha. H. P. C. 151.

The pleas upon arraignment are either the general iſſue, Not guilty, plea in abatement, or in bar; and the priſoner may demur to the indictment; alſo he may confeſs the fact, but then the court has nothing more to do than to proceed to judgment againſt him. If he ſtands mute, and doth not put himſelf upon trial, he ſhall ſuffer the penance of pain fort & dure, in caſes of felony, &c. 3 Inſt. 217.

Array. Arrayed in barbarous Latin is arraiatus, i. e. well appointed or provided; and that comes from the old French word arraye, or arroye. Thus we read in Thorn's Chron. Gentes ſufficienter munitas & arraiatas: And in Knighton, lib. 3. Rediit tota fortitudo, &c. diſtincta & bene arraiata. So that it ſignifies, in a particular manner, military order; but now a ranking or ſetting forth a jury of men impanelled upon a cauſe. 18 Hen. 6. cap. 14. Hence the verb to array a panel. Anno. 3. H. 5. cap. 5. and Old Nat. Br. 157. that is, to ſet forth the men empanelled one by another; the array ſhall be quaſhed. Ibidem. By ſtatute every array in aſſiſe ought to be made four days before. Brook, tit. Pannel, numb. 10. to challenge the array of the panel, is at once to except againſt all the perſons arrayed or impanelled, in reſpect of partiality, &c. 1 Inſt. 156. To array ſignifies likewiſe, to lead and conduct perſons armed, &c. 14 Car. 2. cap. 3.

Arrayers, (Arraiatores) Is uſed in the ſtat. 12 Ric. 2. c. 6. for ſuch officers as had the care of the ſoldiers armour, and did ſee them duly accoutred in their kinds. Such were the commiſſioners of array, appointed by King Charles I. in the year 1642; and Edward III. in the firſt year of his reign, appointed ſuch commiſſioners to array men againſt the Scots: Edw. Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ et dux Aquit. Dilectis et fidelibus ſuis Johanni de Occleſtthorp et Johanni de Fenton, electoribus et arraiatoribus hominum in wapentachio de Barkeſton, ſalutem. Cum ad repellendam Scotorum maliciam qui regnum noſtrum hoſtiliter ſunt ingreſſi, homicidium, depredationes, incendia et alia mala——citia perpetrando verſus partes Marchiæ Scotiæ, &c. Inde Scoti cum toto poſſe ſuo, ut pro certo didicimus, prope civitatem noſtram Karleoli iſta die Martis ſe congregare proponunt, &c. Nos conſiderantes periculum, &c. omnes homines defenſibiles et potentes ad pugnandum ejuſdem wapentachii tam milites quam alii, &c. Teſte me ipſo apud North-Alverton 13 die Junii, anno regni noſtri primo. Cowell. ed. 1727.

Arrearages, (Arreragia) From the Fr. arriere, retro, behind, is taken for money unpaid at the due time, as rent behind; the remainder due on an account, or of a ſum of money remaining in the hands of an accountant. When arrears of rent are preſumed in law to be ſatisfied, ſee title Acceptance.

Arrectatus, Suſpected, accuſed. Offic. Coronat. Si autem aliquis arrectatus fuerit de morte alicujus periclitantis, capietur et impriſonetur. From the old Norman rette. Weſt. c. 1. Quaunt Clerk eſt priſe pour rette de felonie. ——Ceus queux ſont endites de tiel rette per ſolemne inqueſt. Spelman.

Arrenatus, Arraigned, accuſed.——Stephanus Rabaz, Vic. Leiceſt. arrenatus et ad rationem poſitus de hoc quod, &c. Rot. Parl. 21 Ed. 1.

Arrentare, Is a word often mentioned in our hiſtories, and it ſignifies, to rent, viz. Nec terræ vel tenementa eorum ea occaſione arrententur. Charta Ed. 1. And in the Monaſticon, 2 tom. p. 273. viz. Reddendo nobis per annum 56 ſolidos ad quos vaſta et aſſarta ſua in diverſis foreſtis arrentanda aſſignatos arrentabantur. And in Conſuetud. dom. de Farendon, MS. fo. 53 Ricardus de Armeſtone ballivus manerii de Kingesford, malitioſe et pur violentiam dictos religioſos de eadem piſcaria ejecit, et ipſam domino ſuo arrentari fecit in 12 ſol. quos idem dominus per ſex annos recepit. Cowell, ed. 1727.

Arrentation, (From the Spaniſh arrendare) Is as much as ad certum redditum dimittere; and it ſignifies the licenſing the owner of lands in the foreſt, to encloſe them with a low hedge and ſmall ditch, according to the aſſize of the foreſt under a yearly rent: Saving the arrentations is a ſaving power to give ſuch licences. Ordin. Foreſt. 34 Ed. 1. Rents for purpreſtures arrented. Stat. 22 Car. 2. c. 6.

Arreſt, (Arreſtum) Is derived from the French word arreſter, to ſtop or ſtay, and ſignifies a reſtraint of a man's perſon, depriving him of his own will and liberty, and binding him to become obedient to the will of the law: And it may be called the beginning of impriſonment. Cowell.

Arreſt is either civil or criminal.

1. Arreſt in civil caſes.
2. Arreſt in criminal caſes.

1. Arreſt in civil caſes.

An arreſt in a civil cauſe is the apprehending or reſtraining one's perſon by proceſs in execution of the command of ſome court, or officer of juſtice. Wood's Inſt. 575.

Magna Charta, c. 29. None ſhall be taken, impriſoned, or diſſeiſed of his freehold, but by judgment of his peers, or according to the law of the land.

Stat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 35. Whereas great men and their bailiffs uſed to attach others paſſing thro' their juriſdiction with their goods, compelling them to anſwer upon contracts, covenants and treſpaſſes, done out of their juriſdiction; this practice is hereby prohibited, on pain of the offenders forfeiting double damages to the party grieved, and being amerced by the King.

Stat. 50 Ed. 3. c. 5. Clerks attending divine ſervice in churches, church-yards, and other ſacred places, ſhall not be arreſted by authority royal, or the command of other temporal lords, upon pain of grievous forfeiture, ſo that colluſion or feigned cauſe be not found in the ſaid clerks.

Stat. 1 Ric. 2. c. 15. If any miniſter of the King or other, do arreſt any perſon of holy church, in churches or churchyards, or in other places, while they are attending divine ſervice, he ſhall be impriſoned and ranſomed at the King's will, and make ſatisfaction to the party ſo arreſted, provided that the ſaid people of holy church ſhall not hold them within the churches or ſanctuaries, by fraud or colluſion in any manner.

Stat. 23 Hen. 6. c. 10. No ſheriff, under-ſheriff, or bailiff, ſhall take any reward for arreſting, or for the omitting to arreſt any man; and upon every arreſt, the ſheriff ſhall have for his fee but twenty pence, the bailiff who makes the arreſt four pence, and the goaler to whom he is committed four pence.

No ſheriff or his officer ſhall take any obligation, by colour of his office, of a priſoner in his cuſtody, but only to himſelf, by the name of his office, and upon condition written, that the priſoner ſhall appear at the day contained in the writ or warrant in the court or place required, and if he take any other obligation, he ſhall forfeit his office: nor ſhall he take more than four pence for making ſuch obligation, precept, or warrant: And if the ſaid ſheriffs return cepi corpus, or reddidit ſe, they ſhall be chargeable to have the bodies of the ſaid perſons at the days of the returns of the ſaid writs, &c. as before the making this act. Ibid.

Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 15. If any perſon commence or ſue in any court of record, or other court, any action, bill or plaint of treſpaſs, upon the ſtatute of 5 Ric. 2. c. 7. or any action, bill, or plaint of debt or covenant, upon ſpecialty, or upon any contract, or upon any action of the caſe, or upon any ſtatute, for any perſonal wrong, and the the plaintiff after appearance of the defendant be nonſuited, or verdict paſs againſt him, then the defendant ſhall recover his coſts; for which he ſhall have ſuch proceſs, as the plaintiff might have in caſe he had recovered.

Perſons ſuing in forma pauperis, ſhall not be compelled to pay coſts by virtue of this act, but ſhall be puniſhed at the diſcretion of the juſtices or judge, before whom the action is brought. ib.

Stat. 8 Eliz. c. 2. If any one ſhall, maliciouſly and without juſt cauſe, procure any perſon to be moleſted and troubled by attachments and arreſts, by proceſs of latitat, alias and pluries capias, ſued out of the King's Bench, and the defendant ſhall be arreſted or appear, and put in bail, then if the plaintiff do not within three days after ſuch bail had and taken, declare againſt the defendant, or after his declaration, diſcontinue or become nonſuit, the court ſhall award to the defendant ſo arreſted, vexed or troubled, his coſts, damages and charges thereby ſuſtained.

If any perſon ſhall be attach'd or arreſted by proceſs, out of the marſhalſea or of any court in the city of London, or in any city, borough, town corporate, or other place, having the privilege of holding a plea in perſonal actions, and do not in all courts, having their continuance de die in diem, declare within three days after the appearance of the defendant, or bail put in, and where ſuch courts are otherwiſe kept, declare at the next court after the appearance, &c. and proſecute his ſuit with effect, &c. the defendant ſhall have his coſts, damages and charges. ib.

And if any perſon ſhall maliciouſly, or for vexation and trouble, cauſe any one to be arreſted or attached in a fictitious name, or without the conſent of the perſon at whoſe ſuit the defendant is arreſted, ſuch offender convicted by preſentment, indictment, or two witneſſes, ſhall ſuffer ſix months impriſonment, without bail or mainprize, and pay to the party ſo arreſted or attached, treble the coſt, charges and expences he ſhall be put to, and ſhall forfeit to the perſon in whoſe name the ſuit was brought, if there be any ſuch, the ſum of ten pounds. ib.

Stat. 4 Jac. 1. c. 3. Perſons to whom coſts or damages are given, by this act may recover the ſame by action, &c. in any court of record, againſt the offender, his executors and adminiſtrators, in which action, no eſſoin, protection, &c. ſhall be allowed.

Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 6. If any ſheriff or other perſon, having authority, or taking upon him to break writs, do make a warrant, as upon any writ, proceſs, or ſuit, or for the arreſt or attaching of any perſon to appear in courts at Weſtminſter or elſewhere, not having before an original writ or proceſs warranting the ſame; upon conviction thereof before a judge of aſſiſe, or the judges of the court out of which the proceſs iſſued, ſuch offender may by the ſaid judges, be committed to the county gaol where he was examined, until he pay ten pounds to the party grieved, with coſts, and twenty pounds to the King.

Stat. 4 Jac. 1. c. 3. In any action whatever, where the plaintiff or defendant ſhould have coſts, if judgment had been given for him, and ſuch plaintiff or defendant after appearance become nonſuit, or judgment paſs againſt him, there the defendant ſhall recover his full coſts, to be levied as is directed by 23 Hen. 8. cap. 15.

Stat. 13 Car. 2. c. 2. ſect. 2. Perſons arreſted by any proceſs out of the King's Bench or Common Pleas, in which the certainty or true cauſe of action is not expreſſed, and in which the defendant is bailable, by 23 Hen. 6. cap. 10. ſhall not be compelled to give bond, with ſureties for their appearance, in any penal ſum exceeding forty pounds.

Sect. 3. And ſuch bail-bonds, after appearance entered by attorney, ſhall be diſcharged, and no amerciaments ſhall be ſet or eſtreated upon the ſheriff or other officer, concerning ſuch appearance; and unleſs the plaintiff in a perſonal action or ejectione firmæ, declare before the end of the term next follwing the appearance, a nonſuit may be entered, and the defendant ſhall have judgment to recover coſts, according as is provided by the 23 Hen. 8. c. 15.

Sect. 4. Provided this act do not extend to any writ of capias utlagat. attachment, upon reſcous, or for contempt, or attachment at the ſuit of any privileged perſon, altho' there be no particular certainty of the cauſe of action expreſſed in the writ, but ſuch ſecurity ſhall be taken by the ſheriff, &c. in theſe caſes as heretofore.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 20. No under ſheriff, bailiff, ſerjeant, or other officer, having a perſon in his cuſtody, by virtue of any proceſs, ſhall cauſe him to be carried to any tavern, or other publick houſe, without his conſent, ſo as to charge ſuch priſoner with any ſum of money, for wine, ale, victuals, &c. but what he ſhall voluntarily call for; nor ſhall demand or receive more for ſuch arreſt or waiting than by law he ought, until ſuch priſoner have procured an appearance, found bail, agreed with his adverſary, or be ſent to gaol; nor ſhall take any other reward for keeping ſuch priſoner out of the gaol, than what he ſhall voluntarily give; nor ſhall exact more for a night's lodging or other expences, than is reaſonable, or ſhall be ſo adjudged by the next juſtice of the peace; nor ſhall cauſe ſuch perſon to pay for any proviſions or other things, but what he ſhall particularly and freely call for.

Every under ſheriff, gaoler, &c. to whom a priſoner ſhall be committed, ſhall ſuffer him to ſend for beer and food where he pleaſes, and to uſe ſuch bedding, linen, and other things, as he thinks fit, without detaining or paying for the ſame; nor ſhall take more than the uſual fees for his commitment or diſcharge; or more than ſhall be allowed by three juſtices of peace of the county or place, quor. un. for chamber rent, or by the two lord chief juſtices and lord chief baron in London, Middleſex, and Surry. ib.

The rates of fees ſigned by the chief juſtices and chief baron, or two of them, &c. ſhall be hung up in every priſon, and regiſtered by every clerk of the peace; and no other or greater fees ſhall be taken, than ſhall be ſo eſtabliſhed. ib.

Priſoners for debt, and felons, ſhall not be kept in the ſame room, on pain that every ſheriff and gaoler offending in this particular, ſhall looſe their reſpective offices. ib.

Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. No perſon on the Lord's day, ſhall ſerve or execute any writ, proceſs, warrant, order, judgment, or decree, except in caſes of treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace; but ſuch ſervice ſhall be void, and the perſon ſerving or executing the ſame, ſhall be liable to anſwer ſuch damages, as if he had done the ſame without any writ, proceſs, warrant, order, judgment, or decree.

Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. ſect. 53. No high ſheriff, under ſheriff, their deputies or agents, ſhall make out any warrant, before they have in their cuſtody the writs upon which ſuch warrants ought to iſſue, on forfeiture of 10*l.*

Sect. 54. Every warrant to be made out upon any writ out of the King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, before judgment, to arreſt any perſon, ſhall have the ſame day and year ſet down thereon as ſhall be ſet down on the writ itſelf, under forfeiture of 10*l.* to be paid by the perſon who ſhall fill up or deliver out ſuch warrant.

Stat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 29. ſect. 1. No perſon ſhall be held to ſpecial bail upon any proceſs iſſuing out of any ſuperior court, where the cauſe of action ſhall not amount to 10*l.* nor out of any inferior court, where the cauſe of action ſhall not amount to 40*s.* and in all caſes where the cauſe of action ſhall not amount to 10*l.* in a ſuperior court, or to 40*s.* in any inferior court (and the plaintiff ſhall proceed by way of proceſs againſt the perſon) he ſhall not arreſt the body of the defendant, but ſhall ſerve him perſonally, within the juriſdiction of the court, with a copy of the proceſs; and if ſuch defendant ſhall not appear at the return of the proceſs, or within four days after, it ſhall be lawful for the plaintiff, upon affidavit being made and filed, of the perſonal ſervice of ſuch proceſs (which affidavit ſhall be filed gratis) to enter a common appearance, or file common bail for the defendant, and to proceed thereon, as if ſuch defendant had enter'd his appearance, or filed common bail.

Sect. 2. In all caſes where the plaintiff's cauſe of action ſhall amount to 10*l.* or 40*s.* as aforeſaid, affidavit ſhall be made and filed of the cauſe of action (which affidavit may be made before any judge or commiſſioner of the court, out of which ſuch proceſs ſhall iſſue, or elſe before the officer who ſhall iſſue ſuch proceſs, or his deputy) and for ſuch affidavit 1*s.* over and above the ſtamp-duties, ſhall be paid, and no more; and the ſum ſpecified in ſuch affidavit, ſhall be indorſed on the back of ſuch writ or proceſs, for which ſum ſo indorſed the ſheriff, &c. ſhall take bail, and for no more: but if any writ or proceſs ſhall iſſue for 10*l.* or upwards, and no affidavit or indorſement ſhall be made, as aforeſaid, the plaintiff ſhall not proceed to arreſt the body of the defendant, but ſhall do in like manner, as is by this act directed in caſes where the cauſe of action does not amount to 10*l.* or 40*s.* as aforeſaid.

Stat. 21 Geo. 2. cap. 22. ſect. 1. No ſheriff, bailiff or other officer ſhall convey any perſon by him arreſted by virtue of any proceſs or warrant, to any tavern, alehouſe or other publick victualling or drinking-houſe, or to the houſe of ſuch officer, or of any tenant or relation of his, without the free conſent of the perſon ſo arreſted; nor charge him for wine, beer, victuals or other things, ſave what he ſhall call for of his own accord; nor ſhall take any greater ſum than is by law allowed for ſuch arreſt, detaining or waiting, till the perſon arreſted ſhall have given an appearance or bail, or agreed with the perſon at whoſe ſuit he ſhall be arreſted, or till he ſhall be ſent to gaol; nor ſhall take any reward for keeping the perſon arreſted out of priſon; nor ſhall carry any ſuch perſon to priſon within 24 hours from the time of arreſt; nor ſhall take any greater ſum for his lodging or diet, or other expences, than ſhall be allowed by ſome orders for aſcertaining ſuch expences within their reſpective counties.

Sect. 2. Every ſheriff, and other perſons, entruſted with the execution of proceſs, ſhall deliver a printed copy of the ſaid clauſe to every bailiff or officer by them employed to execute warrants, and when ſuch officer ſhall give ſecurity upon his entering into office, ſhall require him to make it part of the condition, that he will deliver a copy of the ſaid clauſe to every perſon whom he ſhall arreſt by virtue of any warrant, and carry to any houſe, and permit him or any friend of his to read it, before any liquor or meat be called for; and in caſe any officer ſhall carry to any houſe any perſon in his cuſtody, and permit any liquor or victuals to be called for, before ſuch clauſe be read to or by the priſoner, ſuch neglect, beſides the breach of ſuch ſecurity, ſhall be accounted a miſdemeanor in the execution of the proceſs.

Sect. 3. Every ſheriff, gaoler, &c. ſhall permit every perſon ſo arreſted to ſend for beer or other food from what place they pleaſe, and alſo to have ſuch bedding and other things as they ſhall think fit, without purloining or detaining the ſame, or requiring them to pay for the uſe thereof, or putting any difficulty upon them relating thereto.

Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 27. ſect. 6. If any perſon ſhall be arreſted by virtue of any proceſs or warrant, and ſhall refuſe to be carried to ſome ſafe dwelling houſe of his own appointment, ſo as ſuch dwelling-houſe be in a city or market-town, if ſuch perſon ſhall be there arreſted; or if out of a city or market-town, then within three miles from the place where the arreſt ſhall be made, and ſo as ſuch houſe be not the houſe of the perſon arreſted, provided it be within the ſame county and liberty, it ſhall be lawful for the officer to carry the perſon ſo refuſing to gaol by virtue of ſuch proceſs.

Stat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 27. ſect. 1. In all caſes where the cauſe of action ſhall not amount to 10*l.* in any ſuperior court, or to 40*s.* in any inferior court, the defendants (a copy of proceſs having been ſerved) ſhall appear at the return thereof, or within eight days after, and the affidavit of ſervice of ſuch proceſs may be made before any judge or commiſſioner of the court, out of which ſuch proceſs ſhall iſſue, or before the proper officer for entring common appearances, or his deputy; and is to be filed gratis.

Sect. 2. No attorney, or other perſon, ſhall have more than 5*s.* for making and ſerving a copy of ſuch proceſs iſſuing out of any ſuperior court, or more than 1*s.* for making and ſerving a copy of ſuch proceſs, iſſuing out of any inferior court.

Sect. 3. In particular franchiſes the proper officer ſhall execute ſuch proceſs.

Sect. 4. Upon every copy of ſuch proceſs, to be ſerved upon any defendant, ſhall be written an Engliſh notice to ſuch defendant, of the intent of ſuch ſervice, to the effect following, viz.

A. B. you are ſerved with this proceſs, to the intent that you may by your attorney appear in his Majeſty's court of at the return thereof, being the day of (as the caſe ſhall be) in order to your defence in this action.

for which notice no fee ſhall be demanded.

Sect. 5. Where the cauſe of action ſhall not amount to 10*l.* in any ſuperior court, or to 40*s.* in any inferior court, no ſpecial writ, nor proceſs ſpecially expreſſing the cauſe of action, ſhall be iſſued; and every attorney or officer of ſuch courts ſuing forth or iſſuing any ſuch proceſs, ſhall forfeit 10*l.* to the perſon aggrieved. Made perpetual by 21 Geo. 2. cap. 3.

Pears of the realm, and members of parliament may not be arreſted, unleſs it be in criminal caſes; but the proceſs againſt them is to be ſummons, diſtreſs infinite, &c. 12 Will. 3. c. 3.

The execution of writs, which comes to the ſheriff, or his under ſheriff, ought to be executed by bailiffs of hundreds, tho' now the uſe is to put in ſpecial bailiffs with them. A ſpecial bailiff is an officer of the ſheriff, to execute ſome particular writ, &c. and for that time only. This arreſt is the arreſt of the ſheriff, and if he ſuffers a priſoner to eſcape, an action lies againſt the ſheriff. And if the priſoner is reſcued, the return of the reſcous ſhall be, that it was done to the ſheriff himſelf. The ſtatute of the 27 Eliz. cap. 12. does not extend to ſpecial bailiffs, ſo that in effect, the deſign of that ſtatute is evaded, and to looſe a reſtraint laid upon thoſe who are uſually a great grievance to the people; however the ſheriff ſhall anſwer for the miſdemeanors of his bailiffs, if they offend in their office, tho' he may have his remedy over againſt them. Wood's Inſt. 127, 128.

A bailiff ſworn, and commonly known, need not, (tho' they demand it) ſhew his warrant, but a ſpecial bailiff is bound to ſhew it upon demand. ib.

An arreſt without ſhewing the warrant, and without telling at whoſe ſuit, until the other demanded it, was held legal; and that this need not be done until the party obeyed and demanded the ſame. Cro. Jac. 485.

Where the huſband is arreſted for the debt or treſpaſs of the wife, he muſt appear or give bail both for himſelf and his wife, as the caſe requires; but if a writ be againſt huſband and wife, and the wife only is arreſted, upon the entering a common appearance, ſhe ſhall be diſcharged. Inſt. Leg. 171.

It is not ſufficient for a bailiff to ſay, I arreſt you at the ſuit of, &c. but he muſt lay hold of the defendant, or touch him, otherwiſe, 'tis no arreſt. 1 Salk. 79.

If an action be entred in either of the counters in London, a ſerjeant may arreſt the party without the ſheriff's warrant. Trin. 22 Car. B. R. For the entry of the action there, is a warrant in law for the arreſt, and the ſerjeants are attendants at the compters, and may take notice of ſuch entries, it being the cuſtom of the city, uſed time out of mind. Pract. Reg. 72.

By Glynn Ch. J. Mich. 1658. if one be arreſted by the ſheriff of the county, within a liberty, without a non omittas, mittas, yet the arreſt is good; for the ſheriff is ſheriff of the whole county, but the bailiff of the liberty may have his action againſt the ſheriff, for entring of his liberty. But upon a quo minus, a ſheriff may enter any liberty, and execute it impune. Pract. Reg. 72.

Generally, the bailiff cannot juſtify the breaking open a houſe to arreſt a man, but where the officer took the defendant by the hand as he held it out of a window, it was deemed a good arreſt, and that the bailiff might afterwards juſtify breaking open the houſe for his priſoner. 1 Vent. 306.

An arreſt may be by night or day. 9 Rep. 66.

If the perſon arreſted make reſiſtance, or aſſault the officer, he may juſtify the beating of him, and if the party be killed, 'tis juſtifiable. D. and Stud. dial. 2. chap. 41. But if the officer be killed in doing his duty, 'tis murder, malice being implied in this caſe, and that notwithſtanding the proceſs be erroneous. 9 Rep. 67, 68.

Corporations and companies muſt be made to appear by diſtringas, and cannot be arreſted. Finch. 353. 3 Salk. 46.

Perſons attending upon any courts of record, on buſineſs there, are to be free from arreſts. 3 Inſt. 141.

A clerk of the court ought not to be arreſted for any thing which is not criminal, becauſe he is ſuppoſed to be always preſent in court to anſwer the plaintiff. 1 Lill. 94.

The King cannot command any one by word of mouth to be arreſted; but he muſt do it by writ, or order of his courts, according to law: nor may the King arreſt any man for ſuſpicion of treaſon, or felony, as his ſubjects may; becauſe if he doth wrong, the party cannot have action againſt him. 2 Inſt. 186.

Every one is bound by the Common law to aſſiſt not only the ſheriff in the execution of writs, and making arreſts, &c. but alſo his bailiff that hath his warrant to do it. 2 Inſt. 193.

A bailiff upon an arreſt ought to ſhew at whoſe ſuit, out of what court the writ iſſues, and for what cauſe, &c. but this is when the party arreſted, ſubmits himſelf to the arreſt. 9 Rep. 68, 69.

Genner, a bailiff, having a warrant againſt Sparks, went to him in his yard, and being at ſome diſtance, told him he had a warrant, and ſaid he arreſted him. Sparks having a fork in his hand, keeps off the bailiff from touching him, and retreats into his houſe, and this was moved as a contempt; et per cur. The bailiff cannot have an attachment, for here was no arreſt, nor reſcous, bare words will not make an arreſt; but, if the bailiff touched him, that had been an arreſt, and the retreat a reſcous, and the bailiff might have purſued, and broke open the houſe, or might have had an attachment or a reſcous againſt him; but as this caſe is, the bailiff has no remedy, but an action for the aſſault, for the holding up of the fork at him, when he was within reach, is good evidence of that. 1 Salk. 79.

2. Arreſt in criminal caſes.

In theſe caſes a perſon may be apprehended and reſtrained of his liberty, not only by proceſs out of ſome court, or warrant from a magiſtrate, but frequently by a conſtable, watchman or private perſon, without any warrant or precept; and a private perſon may be fined and impriſoned for not apprehending notorious offenders.

All perſons whatſoever, who are preſent when a felony is committed, or a dangerous wound given, are bound to apprehend the offender, on pain of being fined and impriſoned for their neglect, unleſs they were under age at the time. 2 Hawk. 74.

And for this cauſe, by the common law, if any homicide be committed, or dangerous wound given, whether with, or without malice, or even by miſadventure or ſelf-defence, in any town, or in the lanes or fields thereof, in the day time, and the offender eſcape, the town ſhall be amerced, and if out of a town, the hundred ſhall be amerced. 3 Inſt. 53.

And ſince the ſtatute of Wincheſter, c. 5. which ordains that walled towns ſhall be kept ſhut from ſun-ſetting to ſun-riſing; if the fact happen in any ſuch town by night, or by day, and the offender eſcape, the town ſhall be amerced. 3 Inſt. 53.

And, as private perſons are bound to apprehend all thoſe who ſhall be guilty of any of the crimes above mentioned in their view, ſo alſo are they, with the utmoſt diligence, to purſue and endeavour to take all thoſe who ſhall be guilty thereof, out of their view, upon a hue and cry levied againſt them. 3 Inſt. 117.

By the vagrant act 17 Geo. 2. every private perſon may apprehend beggars and vagrants.

And every private perſon is bound to aſſiſt an officer, requiring him to apprehend a felon.

As to what are ſufficient cauſes of ſuſpicion of treaſon or felony, to juſtify a private perſon in apprehending the ſuſpected perſon, it is held, 1. That the common fame of the country is ſufficient to juſtify the arreſt, but then it ought to appear upon evidence, in an action brought for ſuch an arreſt, that ſuch fame had ſome probable ground. 2 Hawk. 76.

2. The living a vagrant, idle and diſorderly life, without having any viſible means to ſupport it. ibid.

3. The being in company with one known to be an offender at the time of the offence, or generally, at other times, keeping company with perſons of ſcandalous reputations. ib.

4. The being found in ſuch circumſtances as induce a ſtrong preſumption of guilt, as coming out of a houſe wherein murder has been committed, with a bloody knife in one's hand, or being found in poſſeſſion of any part of goods ſtolen, without being able to give a probable account of coming honeſtly by them. ib.

5. The behaving one's ſelf in ſuch a manner as betrays a conſciouſneſs of guilt; as where a man being charged with treaſon or felony, ſays nothing to it, but ſeems tacitly, by his ſilence, to own himſelf guilty; or where a man accuſed of any ſuch crime, upon hearing that a warrant is taken out againſt him, doth abſcond. ib.

Tho' it is held, that no cauſes of ſuſpicion whatever, let the number or probability of them be never ſo great, will juſtify the arreſt of an innocent man, by one who does not, himſelf, believe him guilty, whether he make ſuch arreſt of his own head, or in obedience to the commands of a conſtable. ib.

And it is holden by ſome, that none of the above mentioned cauſes will juſtify the arreſting a man for the ſuſpicion of crimes, unleſs a crime was actually committed; but out of this rule, the apprehending a perſon upon hue and cry, or ſuch as attempt to commit a robbery, or felony, may very well be excepted; for any one may lay hold of a perſon, whom he ſees upon the point of committing treaſon, or felony, or doing an act which would manifeſtly endanger the life of another, and detain him, till it may be reaſonably preſumed, he has changed his purpoſe. 2 Hawk. 77.

As to arreſts for inferior offences, no private perſon can arreſt another for a bare breach of the peace after it is over; but it is held, that a private man may arreſt a night-walker, or a common cheat going about with falſe dice, and actually caught playing with them, in order to have him before a juſtice of peace; and the arreſt of any other offenders, by private perſons, for offences in like manner ſcandalous, and prejudicial to the publick, ſeems juſtifiable. 2 Hawk. 77.

As to arreſts by conſtables, by their own authority, it ſeems difficult to find any caſe wherein a conſtable is impowered to arreſt a man for a felony committed or attempted, in which a private perſon might not as well be juſtified in doing it: But the chief difference between the power and duty of a conſtable, and a private perſon in reſpect of ſuch arreſts, ſeems to be this; that the former has the greater authority, to demand the aſſiſtance of others, and is liable to the ſeverer fine for any neglect of this kind, and has no ſure way to diſcharge himſelf of the arreſt, of any perſon apprehended by him, for felony, without bringing him before a juſtice of peace, in order to be examined; whereas a private perſon, having made ſuch an arreſt, needs only to deliver his priſoner into the hands of the conſtable. 2 Hawk. 80.

As to the juſtifying ſuch arreſts by conſtables, by virtue of a warrant from a juſtice of peace, it ſeems clear, that ſuch an arreſt, unlawfully made by a conſtable without a warrant, cannot be made good by a warrant taken out afterwards; alſo it hath been holden, that if a conſtable, after he hath arreſted the party by force of any ſuch warrant, ſuffer him to go at large upon his promiſe to come again at ſuch a time, and find ſureties, he cannot afterwards arreſt him by force of the ſame warrant; however, if the party return and put himſelf again under the cuſtody of the conſtable, the conſtable may lawfully detain him, and bring him before the juſtice, in purſuance of the warrant. 2 Hawk. 80. Dyer 244. b.

A conſtable cannot juſtify any arreſt by force of a warrant from a juſtice of peace, which expreſly appears on the face of it, to be for an offence whereof a juſtice of peace hath no juriſdiction, or to bring the party before him at a place out of the county for which he is a juſtice; but it ſeems that he both may, and ought to execute a general warrant, to bring a perſon before a juſtice of peace, to anſwer ſuch matters as ſhall be objected againſt him, on the part of the King, for that the officer ought to preſume, that the juſtice hath a juriſdiction, which he takes conuſance of, unleſs the contrary appear, and it may often endanger the eſcape of the party, to make known the crime he is accuſed of: But it ſeems to be very queſtionable, whether a conſtable can juſtify the execution of a general warrant, to ſearch for felons or ſtolen goods, becauſe ſuch warrant ſeems to be illegal on the very face of it; for, that it would be extreamly hard, to leave it to the diſcretion of a common officer, to arreſt what perſons, and ſearch what houſes he thinks fit; and if a juſtice cannot legally grant a blank warrant for the arreſt of a ſingle perſon, leaving it to the party to fill it up; ſurely he cannot grant ſuch a general warrant, which might have the effect of a hundred blank warrants. 2 Hawk. 82.

Yet, perhaps, 'tis the better opinion at this day, that any conſtable, or even private perſon, to whom a warrant ſhall be directed from a juſtice of peace, to arreſt a particular perſon for felony, or any other miſdemeanor within his juriſdiction, may lawfully execute it, whether the perſon mentioned in it be, in truth, guilty or innocent, and whether he were before indicted of the ſame offence or not, and whether any felony were, in truth, committed or not? for, however the juſtice himſelf may be puniſhable for granting ſuch a warrant, without ſufficient grounds, it is reaſonable that he alone be anſwerable for it, and not the officer, who is not to examine or diſpute the reaſonableneſs of his proceeding. ib.

As to arreſts by the command of a juſtice of peace: a juſtice of peace may, by word of mouth, authoriſe any one to arreſt another, who ſhall be guilty of an actual breach of the peace in his preſence, or ſhall be engaged in a riot in his abſence. 2 Hawk. 83. Dalt. c. 117.

And a juſtice of peace may lawfully grant a warrant for apprehending, or arreſting perſons charged with treaſon, felony, premunire, or any other offence againſt the peace; and generally, wherever a ſtatute gives one or more juſtices of peace a juriſdiction over any offence, any one juſtice of peace may, by his warrant, cauſe ſuch offenders to be arreſted and brought before him. 2 Hawk. 84.

A juſtice of peace may juſtify the granting a warrant for the arreſt of any perſon upon ſtrong grounds of ſuſpicion of felony, or miſdemeanor, but he ſeems to be puniſhable, as well at the ſuit of the King, as of the party grieved, if he grant any ſuch warrant groundleſly, or maliciouſly, without ſuch a probable cauſe as might induce a candid and impartial man to ſuſpect the party to be guilty. 2 Hawk. 84.

Every warrant ought to be under the hand and ſeal of the juſtice of peace, and ſpecify the day it was made out: if it be for the peace or good behaviour, it is adviſable to ſet forth the ſpecial cauſe upon which it is granted, but if it be for treaſon or felony, or other offences of an enormous nature, it is ſaid, that it is not neceſſary to ſet it forth, and it ſeems to be rather diſcretionary than neceſſary to ſet it forth in any caſe. 2 Hawk. 85.

It may be directed to the ſheriff, bailiff, conſtable, or to any indifferent perſon by name, who is no officer, for, tho' the juſtice may authoriſe any one to be his officer, whom he pleaſes to make ſuch; yet it is moſt adviſable to direct to the conſtable of the precinct wherein it is to be executed; for that no other conſtable, and a fortiori no private perſon, is compellable to ſerve it. 2 Hawk. 85.

A bailiff or conſtable, if they be ſworn, and commonly known to be officers, and act within their own precinct, need not ſhew their warrant to the party, notwithſtanding he demand the ſight of it; but that theſe and all other perſons whatſoever making an arreſt, ought to acquaint the party with the ſubſtance of their warrant; and all private perſons to whom ſuch warrants ſhall be directed, and even officers, if they be not ſworn and commonly known; and even theſe, if they act out of their own precincts, muſt ſhew their warrants if demanded. 2 Hawk. 86.

The ſheriff having ſuch warrant directed to him, may authoriſe others to execute it; but every other perſon, to whom it is directed, muſt perſonally execute it, yet, it ſeems, that any one may lawfully aſſiſt him. 2 Hawk. 86.

If a warrant be generally directed to all conſtables, no one can execute it out of his own precinct; but if it be directed to a particular conſtable by name, he may execute it any where within the juriſdiction of the juſtice. 2 Hawk. 86.

Where one is authoriſed to arreſt a perſon who ſhelters himſelf in a houſe; if enterance be denied, the officer may juſtify the breaking open the doors in the following inſtances.

1*ſt.* Upon a capias, grounded on an indictment for any crime whatſoever, or upon a capias from the King's Bench or Chancery, to compel a man to find ſureties for the peace or good behaviour, or even upon a warrant from a juſtice of peace for ſuch purpoſe. ib.

2*dly.* Upon a capias utlagatum, or capias pro fine, in any action whatſoever. ib.

3*dly.* Upon the warrant of a juſtice of peace, for the levying of a forfeiture in execution of a judgment, or conviction for it, grounded on any ſtatute which gives the whole, or but part of ſuch forfeiture to the King, and authoriſes the juſtice of peace to give ſuch judgment or conviction for it. ib.

4*thly.* Where a forcible entry or detainer is either found by inquiſition before juſtices of peace, or appears upon their view. ib.

5*thly.* Where one known to have committed a treaſon or felony, or to have given another a dangerous wound, is purſued either with, or without warrant by a conſtable, or private perſon; but where one lies under a probable ſuſpicion only, and is not indicted, it ſeems the better opinion at this day, that no one can juſtify the breaking open doors in order to apprehend him. ib.

6*thly.* Where an affray is made in a houſe, in the view or hearing of a conſtable, or where thoſe who have made an affray in his preſence, fly to a houſe, and are immediately purſued by him, and he is not ſuffered to enter, in order to ſuppreſs the affray in the firſt caſe, or to apprehend the affrayer in either caſe.

7*thly.* Wherever a perſon is lawfully arreſted for any cauſe, and afterwards eſcapes and ſhelters himſelf in a houſe. ib.

Alſo it is enacted by the 3 & 4 Jac. 1. par. 35. that upon any lawful writ, warrant or proceſs awarded to any ſheriff or other officer, for the taking of any popiſh recuſant, ſtanding excommunicated for ſuch recuſancy, it ſhall be lawful, if need be, to break any houſe. 2 Hawk. 87.

But it hath been reſolved, that where juſtices of peace are by virtue of a ſtatute, authoriſed to require perſons to come before them to take certain oaths preſcribed by ſuch ſtatute, the officer cannot lawfully break open the doors. 2 Hawk. 87.

Arreſt of judgment, To move in arreſt of judgment, is to ſhew cauſe why judgment ſhould be ſtayed, notwithſtanding a verdict given; for in many caſes, though there be a verdict, no judgment can be had; and the cauſes of arreſt of judgment are, want of notice of trial; where the plaintiff before trial treats the jury; the record differs from the deed pleaded; for material defect in pleading; where perſons are miſnamed; more is given and found by the verdict, than laid in the declaration; or the declaration doth not lay the thing with certainty, &c. and here all matters of fact are to be made out by proper affidavits. Comp. Attorn. 329, &c. Judgment may be arreſted for good cauſes in criminal caſes, as well as civil; if the indictment be inſufficient, &c. 3 Inſt. 210. Four days are allowed to move in arreſt of judgment; and the defendant hath all the term wherein the verdict was given to ſpeak any thing to arreſt it, if the plaintiff hath not given the four days rule, and ſigned his judgment; after which he is put to his writ of error. 2 Lill. 93. On motion in arreſt of judgment, if the court be divided, two judges againſt two, the plaintiff muſt have his judgment; unleſs a rule be made at firſt to ſtay all proceedings, until the court otherwiſe order, &c. 2 Lill. Abr. 118. See Jeofails and Judgment. Arreſt of enqueſt is to plead in arreſt of taking the enqueſt, upon the former iſſue, and to ſhew cauſe why an enqueſt ſhould not be taken. Jacob.

Arſon, (from ardeo, to burn) Is houſe-burning, which is felony at Common law. 3 Inſt. 66. It muſt be maliciouſly and voluntarily, and an actual burning; not putting fire only into a houſe, or any part of it, without burning: but if part of the houſe is burnt; or if the fire doth burn, and then goeth out of itſelf, it is felony. 2 Inſt. 188. H. P. C. 85. The burning of a frame of a houſe, is not accounted houſe-burning, becauſe the frame of a houſe cannot come under the word domus, which is neceſſary in every indictment for arſon: and it muſt be the houſe of another; for if a man burns his own houſe only, though with intention to burn others, it is not felony, but a great miſdemeanor, puniſhable with fine, pillory, &c. If a houſe is fired by negligence or miſchance, it cannot amount to arſon. 3 Inſt. 67. H. P. C. 85. Where one burns the houſe of another, if it be not wilful and malicious, 'tis no felony, but only treſpaſs: Therefore if A. ſhoot unlawfully in a gun, at the cattle or poultry of B. and by means thereof ſets another's houſe on fire, this is not arſon; for though the act he was doing was unlawful, yet he had no intent to burn the houſe. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 569. By ſtat. 25 H. 8. c. 11. burning of houſes, or barns wherein any corn is, is felony without benefit of clergy. And the ſtat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 7. makes it felony to ſet barns, ſtables, ſtacks of corn, hay, &c. on fire in the night time, or any outhouſes or buildings: but the offender may be tranſported for ſeven years. By 6 Annæ, cap. 31. ſervants through negligence or careleſsneſs ſetting on fire any dwelling houſe or outhouſe, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* to be levied by warrant of two juſtices, and paid to the churchwardens of the pariſh, to be diſtributed to the ſufferers by the fire; or on default ſhall be ſent to the houſe of correction, and there kept at hard labour eighteen months, &c. By 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. (made perpetual by 31 Geo. 2. c. 24.) ſetting fire to any houſe, barn, or out-houſe, or to any hovel, cockmow, or ſtack of corn, ſtraw, or wood, is made felony without benefit of clergy.

Aſceſterium, (Archiſterium, arciſterium, aciſterium, alcyſterium, architrium) is a Greek word, and ſignifies a monaſtery. It often occurs in our old hiſtories Du Freſne.

Aſſach, or Aſſath, Was a cuſtom of purgation, uſed of old in Wales, by which the party accuſed did clear himſelf by the oaths of 300 men. It is mentioned in Ancient MSS. and prevailed till the time of Hen. 5. when it was abrogated. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 6. Spelman. Cowell.

Aſſart, (Aſſartum) Is derived from the Fr. aſſartir, to make plain, according to Manwood. Aſſartum eſt quod redactum eſt ad culturam. Fleta, lib. 4. cap. 21. And the word aſſartum is by Spelman derived from exertum, to pull up by the roots; for ſometimes 'tis wrote eſſart. Others derive it from exaratum, or exartum, which ſignifies to plough or cut up. Manwood, in his Foreſt Laws, ſays it is an offence committed in the foreſt, by pulling up the woods by the roots, that are thickets and coverts for the deer, and making the ground plain as arable land: this is eſteemed the greateſt treſpaſs that can be done in the foreſt to vert or veniſon, as it contains in it waſte and more; for whereas waſte of the foreſt is but the felling down the coverts which may grow up again, aſſart is a plucking them up by the roots and utterly deſtroying them, ſo that they can never afterwards ſpring up again. And this is confirmed out of the Red Book in the Exchequer, in theſe words——Aſſarta vero dicuntur quæ apud Iſidorum occiſiones nuncupantur, quando foreſtæ nemora vel dumeta, paſcuis & latibulis ferarum opportuna, ſucciduntur: quibus ſucciſis & radicitus avulſis, terra ſubvertitur & excolitur.—— But this is no offence if done with licence; and a man may by writ of ad quod damnum ſue out a licence to aſſart ground in the foreſt, and make it ſeveral for tillage. Reg. Orig. 257. Hence lands are called aſſarted: and formerly aſſart rents were paid to the crown for foreſt lands aſſarted. Stat. 22 Car. 2. c. 6. Aſſartments ſeem to be uſed in the ſame ſenſe in Rot. Parl. Of aſſart you may read more in *Cromp. Aſſault and battery. Aſſault is derived from the old Latin word aſſultus, that is, a leaping on, or from the French verb aſſailer, to attack, and ſignifies an attempt or offer, with force and violence, to do a corporal hurt to another; as by ſtriking at him without a weapon; or preſenting a gun at him, at ſuch a diſtance to which the gun will carry; or pointing a pitch-fork at him, ſtanding within the reach of it; or by holding up one's fiſt at him; or by any other ſuch like act, done in any threatning manner. 1 Hawk. 133. Battery, (from the French battre, to ſtrike, or from the Saxon batte, a club) ſeems to be, when any injury whatſoever, be it never ſo ſmall, is actually done to the perſon of a man, in an angry, or revengeful, or rude, or inſolent manner; as by ſpitting in his face, or any way touching him in anger, or violently juſtling him out of the way, and the like. 1 Hawk. 134.

Any injury whatſoever, be it never ſo ſmall, being actually done to the perſon of a man, in an angry or revengeful, or rude or inſolent manner, as by ſpitting in his face, or any way touching him in anger, or violently juſtling him out of the way, are batteries in the eye of the law. 6 Mod. 149, 172. 1 Mod. 3. 3 Lev. 404. 1 Hawk. P. C. 134.

But

But to lay one's hand gently on another, whom an officer has a warrant to arreſt, and to tell the officer that this is the man he wants, is not a battery. 2 Rol. Abr. 546. 1 Hawk. P. C. 134.

So if two by conſent play at cudgels, and one happens to hurt the other, as their intent was lawful and commendable, in promoting courage and activity, it does not ſeem to amount to battery. Dalt. c. 22. Bro. Coron. 229.

If A. lays his hand on his ſword, and ſays, that if it were not aſſize time I would not take ſuch language from you, that is no aſſault; for it is plain he did not deſign to do him any corporal hurt at that time, and a man's intention muſt operate with his act in conſtituting an aſſault. 1 Mod. 3.

It ſeems agreed, that at this day no words whatſoever, be they never ſo provoking, can amount to an aſſault, notwithſtanding the many ancient opinions to the contrary. 1 Hawk. P. C. 134.

Every battery includes an aſſault; therefore if the defendant be found guilty of the battery, it is ſufficient. Salk. 384. 1 Hawk. P. C. 134.

So if one ſoldier hurts another by diſcharging a gun in exerciſe, this cannot amount to a battery, though if it be done without ſufficient caution, he is liable to an action at the ſuit of the party injured. Hob. 134. 2 Rol. Abr. 548.

1. In what caſes aſſault and battery may be juſtified, and pleadings.

2. How aſſault and battery are puniſhed.

1. In what caſes aſſault and battery may be juſtified, and pleadings.

A perſon may juſtify an aſſault, in defence of his perſon, or of his wife, or maſter, or parent, or child within age; and even a wounding may be juſtified in defence of his perſon, but not of his poſſeſſions. 3 Salk. 46.

And where a man in his own defence beats another who firſt aſſaults him, he may take advantage thereof, both upon an indictment and upon an action; but with this difference, that on an indictment he may give it in evidence upon the plea of Not guilty, but on an action he muſt plead it ſpecially. 1 Hawk. 134.

If an officer, having a warrant againſt one who will not ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted, beat or wound him in the attempt to take him, he may juſtify it; ſo if a parent in a reaſonable manner chaſtiſe his child, or maſter his ſervant, being actually in his ſervice at that time, or a ſchoolmaſter his ſcholar, or a gaoler his priſoner, or even a huſband his wife; or if one confine a friend who is mad, and bind and beat him, &c. in ſuch manner as is proper in his circumſtances; or if a man force a ſword from one who offers to kill another; or if a man gently lay his hands on another, and thereby ſtay him from inciting a dog againſt a third perſon; if I beat one (without wounding him, or throwing at him a dangerous weapon) who wrongfully endeavours with violence to diſpoſſeſs me of my lands or goods, or the goods of another delivered to me to be kept for him, and will not deſiſt upon my laying my hands gently on him and diſturbing him; or if a man beat, wound or maim one who makes an aſſault upon his perſon, or that of his wife, parent, child, or maſter; or if a man fight with, or beat one who attempts to kill any ſtranger; in theſe caſes it ſeems the party may juſtify the aſſault and battery. See 1 Hawk. P. C. 130. and the ſeveral authorities there cited.

And on an indictment the party may plead Not guilty, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence; but in an action on the caſe he muſt plead it ſpecially. 6 Mod. 172.

In battery the plaintiff declared, that on ſuch a day the defendant aſſaulted and beat his wife, this action was brought by the huſband after the death of his wife, and it being a perſonal wrong, is dead with the perſon; and if ſhe had been living, the huſband alone could not have the action, becauſe damages would ſurvive to the wife. Yelv. 89.

In an action of aſſault, the plaintiff declared quod cum the defendant ſuch a day, &c. him the aforeſaid plaintiff did beat, which is only a recital, and not an expreſs allegation that the defendant did beat him, and for his purpoſe the caſe of Sheriff and Bridges was cited, Mich. 39. Eliz. where ſuch a declaration was held ill; but yet the declaration in the principal caſe was held good. Paſch. 12. Jan. Godb. 251. Shorley's caſe. 2 Bulſt. 215. reported by the name of Sherland verſus Heaton, where the declaration was held ill; but if it had been quod cum the plaintiff being in pace domini regis, &c. the defendant did aſſault him, this had been good, becauſe 'tis relative to the quod cum, which always preſuppoſeth ſome ſubſequent matter.

In an action of battery the defendant pleads, that he was maſter of a ſhip, and that the plaintiff being his carpenter and ſervant in the ſhip, neglected his duty and gave him ſaucy language, and therefore moderate caſtigavit; plaintiff replies non moderate caſtigavit; and iſſue joined; verdict was given for the plaintiff; and in an arreſt of judgment it was inſiſted, that a non moderate caſtigavit was not a pertinent negative, the proper iſſue being immoderate caſtigavit; but the court held it well enough, eſpecially after verdict. 1 Sid. 444. 2 Keb. 623. 1 Vent. 70.

In aſſault and battery, the defendant pleaded Not guilty, and afterwards, before the record of niſi prius was ſealed, he would confeſs the action; but adjudged, that it came too late, tho' all the pronotaries were of a contrary opinion. Hob. 221.

Aſſault, &c. the defendant pleaded, that tempore quo, &c. he was ſeiſed of ſuch rectory in fee, and that the corn growing in the place was ſevered from the nine parts, and that he came into the ground to carry away the tithes, and in defence thereof, and to hinder the plaintiff from taking it, he ſtood there to defend it, and if any hurt was done it was of his own wrong; the plaintiff replied, de injuria ſua propria abſque tali cauſa; and upon demurrer to this replication the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe by his declaration he did not claim any thing in the ſoil or in the corn, but only damages for the aſſault, &c. which is collateral to the title; but if he had claimed a title, &c. and the defendant had pleaded any matter to deſtroy ſuch title, there the plaintiff muſt reply ſpecially, and not plead generally abſque tali cauſa. Yelv. 157.

In battery, &c. the action was laid in London, when in truth it was done at Uxbridge; the defendant pleaded, that on ſuch a day and year, the plaintiff at B. in the county of S. made an aſſault upon the defendant, and pleaded de injuria ſua propria, and traverſed, that he was guilty in London; this was adjudged a good plea. Goldſ. 5.

In an action of aſſault and battery, and wounding, it was laid with a mutilavit & ſiniſtr' brach' fregit ita quod uſum ſiniſtri brachii amiſit; to this the defendant pleaded de ſon aſſault demeſne; and on demurrer it was ſhewn for cauſe, that this being a heinous battery, and amounting to a mayhem, he ſhould have ſhewed to the court, that the aſſault was with ſuch violence, that he could not otherwiſe defend himſelf but by maiming the plaintiff; and the pleading ſhould have been, that plaintiff mayhemaſſet & vulneraſſet the defendant niſi, &c. But the court held the plea good, and that it was a matter upon evidence, whether the aſſault were proportionable to the battery; for if it were not, the iſſue would be for the plaintiff; although the plaintiff did make the firſt aſſault, it will not juſtify every beating, but it muſt be ſuch a one as may draw a probable danger and fear upon the perſon upon whom it is made. 1 Sid. 246. 1 Keb. 884, 921, S. C. See Cro. Jac. 251. 3 Lev. 251. 3 Lev. 403. 1 Lutw. 925. 2 Inſt. 316. 2 Hawk. P. C. 159.

In aſſault, &c. the defendant pleaded ſon aſſault demeſne; the plaintiff replied, that he was ſervant to Mr. Sandys to look after his horſes, and that the defendant would have beaten one of them, but that the plaintiff laid his hands on the defendant in defence of the horſe, and thereupon the defendant aſſaulted him: the defendant rejoined, that he was ſervant to Mr. Ridler, who was ſeiſed in fee of a cloſe called Davis Cloſe, which was well fenced, and that he ſeeing one Payton, another of Mr. Sandys's ſervants, attempting

attempting to leap over the fence on horſeback, forbid him, and endeavoured to hinder him; and that the plaintiff coming to aſſiſt Payton aſſaulted the defendant, who defended himſelf, and traverſed, that he was guilty, &c. but in Davis Grove, &c. and upon demurrer, it was objected to the replication, that the plaintiff did not poſitively alledge, that the defendant did beat him, but only, that he would have beaten him; but notwithſtanding this exception, the defendant had judgment. Nota; in this caſe the plaintiff juſtified as a ſervant in defence of his maſter's goods, and the defendant juſtified in defence of his maſter's poſſeſſion; and it was held, that a ſervant may juſtify a battery in defence of his perſon, but not of his goods. 2 Lutw. 1481.

In aſſault, &c. the defendant pleaded ſon aſſault demeſne, and the plaintiff replied, that he was ſtanding at his gate, and that the defendant being on horſe-back offered to ride over him, whereupon he molliter aſſaulted the plaintiff in defence of himſelf, quæ eſt eadem, &c. and on demurrer to this replication it was adjudged to be ill, becauſe he thereby had confeſſed that he had made the firſt aſſault; for he ſhould have pleaded molliter manus impoſuit to hinder the riding over him. 1 Lev. 282. 1 Sid. 441. 1 Mod. 36. 2 Keb. 597.

In treſpaſs for aſſault and battery, the defendant juſtifies by a molliter impoſuit manus for due correction of the defendant as his ſervant, and pleads over, that ſince that time the plaintiff exoneravit & relaxavit (without ſaying per ſcriptum) to the defendant the ſaid matter; to this plea it was demurred for doubleneſs ſpecially; and the opinion of the court was, that it was double; for though the releaſe be not ſufficiently pleaded, yet it is pleaded ſo as iſſue be taken upon it, which will make it double. 1 Sid. 175. 1 Keb. 661. S. C.

Aſſault, battery and wounding; the defendant pleaded, that he was conſtable of B. and for ſuch a miſdemeanor done by the plaintiff he laid his hands on him and put him into the ſtocks quæ eſt eadem tranſgreſſio; and upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the defendant did neither plead Not guilty, nor juſtify the wounding; but if he had pleaded, that the hurt which the plaintiff had was of his wrong, this had anſwered all. Cro. Eliz. 93.

In aſſault, &c. the defendant juſtified by a molliter manus impoſuit on the plaintiff, who entered his cloſe; and upon a demurrer, it was adjudged no good plea, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſhew what eſtate he had in the cloſe, or that he did endeavour to turn the defendant out. Moor 846.

In aſſault, battery and wounding; the defendant pleaded ſon aſſault demeſne; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was adjudged ill, becauſe the defendant cannot juſtify the wounding by this plea; but this may be ſtill a queſtion, for the ground of the action is the treſpaſs, to which this is a proper plea. Sid. 246.

Aſſault, battery and wounding, &c. the defendant as to the wounding, pleads Not guilty, and as to the reſt, he juſtified by virtue of a ca. ſa. againſt the plaintiff, and a warrant thereon, and that he to arreſt the plaintiff molliter manus impoſuit on him, and that he did take and impriſon him, quæ quidem mollis impoſitio manuum, is the ſame aſſault and battery of which the plaintiff complained; and upon demurrer it was objected, that molliter manus imponere was too ſoft a juſtification for battery; the defendant ought to have pleaded Not guilty as to that; and that it was ſo adjudged in Stony and Calvert's caſe, Hill. 2 W. 3. Rot. 759. in C. B. 'Tis true Serjeant Levinz, who reports the principal caſe, tells us, that molliter manus imponere is a battery, if the defendant hath nothing to excuſe himſelf for ſo doing, and that moſt of the precedents are as this is; tho' in ſome the battery is particularly anſwered, and that would be the ſurer way of pleading. 1 Lutw. 925.

2. How aſſault and battery are puniſhed.

The wrong-doer is ſubject both to an action at the ſuit of the party, wherein he ſhall render damages; and alſo to an indictment at the ſuit of the King, wherein he ſhall be fined according to the heinouſneſs of the offence. 1 Hawk. 134.

An aſſaulting or threatning a counſellor at law, or attorney employed in a cauſe againſt a man; or a juror giving verdict againſt him; or his adverſary for ſuing him, &c. is puniſhable on an indictment, by fine and impriſonment, for the contempt. 1 Hawk. 58.

Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 11. [intituled, An act for the better preventing frivolous and vexatious ſuits] enacts that, where there are ſeveral defendants to any action of aſſault, &c. and one or more acquitted, the perſon ſo acquitted ſhall recover coſt of ſuit, unleſs the judge certify that there was a reaſonable cauſe for making ſuch perſon a defendant or defendants to ſuch action.

Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 16. Aſſaulting a privy counſellor in the execution of his office, is felony without benefit of clergy.

Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 23. ſect. 11. If any perſon ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly aſſault any perſon or perſons in the publick ſtreets or highways, with an intent to tear, ſpoil, cut, burn or deface, and ſhall tear, ſpoil, cut, burn, or deface the garments or cloaths of ſuch perſon or perſons, then all and every perſon and perſons ſo offending, being thereof lawfully convicted, ſhall be adjudged to be guilty of felony; and the courts before whom ſuch offender ſhall be tried ſhall have full power and authority of tranſporting ſuch felons for the ſpace of ſeven years.

Stat. 7 Geo. 2. cap. 21. Aſſaulting with intent to rob is made felony and tranſportation.

Aſſecurare, (Abſecurare) To make ſecure by pledges, or any ſolemn interpoſition of faith. In the charter of peace between Hen. 2. and his ſons, this word is mentioned. Hoveden, anno 1174.

Aſſembly unlawful, From the Fr. aſſembler, i. e. aggregare, to flock together. It is the meeting of three or more perſons to do an unlawful act, altho' they do it not: as to aſſault, or beat any perſon; enter into houſes, or lands, &c. Weſt. Symb. part. 2. ſect. 65. Their meeting and abiding together makes the crime, where they do not execute their intentions: if the intention be to redreſs public grievances, and be executed, 'tis adjudged treaſon. 3 Inſt. 9. In the reign of King Ed. 6. a law was made declaring it treaſon for twelve perſons, or more, to aſſemble together to attempt to kill any of the King's council, or to alter the laws, &c. and that it ſhould be felony to attempt to deſtroy parks, pull down houſes, incloſures, &c. if they continued together an hour after proclamation made by a juſtice of peace, mayor, or ſheriff: but this was ſoon repealed, though it ſeems to have given riſe to the late riot act; which ordains, that where twelve perſons, or more, unlawfully aſſembled, continue together an hour after proclamation to depart, they ſhall be guilty of felony. Stat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 6. See Religious aſſembly, and Riot. Jacob.

Aſſent or Conſent. To a legacy of goods, the aſſent of the executor is neceſſary, before the legatee may take the ſame; but to a deviſe of lands that are freehold, it is not required.

The aſſent of an executor to a deviſe of a legacy, or of any perſonal thing, is ſo neceſſary, that if the legatee to a deviſe take the thing without the delivery and aſſent of the executor, he may have an action of treſpaſs againſt them. Keilw. 128. Dyer.

But ſuch an aſſent will not make a deviſe of a perſonal thing good, which is void in itſelf; as for inſtance, the teſtator having a term of years, as executor to another, deviſed it to a ſtranger, and made his ſon executor, and died; the deviſee enter'd by the aſſent of the ſon, and afterwards he, as executor to his father, re-entered upon the deviſee; and adjudged, that his entry was lawful, becauſe the deviſe to this ſtranger was void, for an executor cannot deviſe that to another which he hath as executor, becauſe he hath it not in his own right, but for the uſe of his teſtator; therefore an aſſent to a void deviſe muſt be alſo void. Plowd. Comm. 525.

The Common law takes notice of the aſſent of the executor to the legacy, and doth give him time to conſider of the value of the goods, and ſtate of the debts of the teſtator, that he may pay a legacy with ſafety; the executor being to pay debts before legacies. Perk. 570.

No property can be transferred to the legatee without the aſſent of the executor; but if the executor doth once aſſent to the legacy, the legatee hath ſuch a property veſted in him that he may take it, though the executor revokes his aſſent afterwards. And there may be an aſſent implied, as well as expreſs; as if the executor offers the legatee money for what is bequeathed him; or directs others to the legatee to buy it, &c. Plowd. 543. 4 Rep. 28.

In treſpaſs, &c. the caſe was, that the teſtator being poſſeſſed of lands, which he held upon ſeveral leaſes, ſome of which were in the dioceſe of the archbiſhop of York, and ſome in peculiars, deviſed all thoſe leaſes to his ſon, and made his daughter executrix, who was then an infant; the mother took out adminiſtration durante minore ætate of the executrix in the peculiar, where her huſband died, and granted the reſidue of the term of the lands there to the plaintiff; the queſtion was, whether the aſſent of an adminiſtratrix, durante minore ætate, was good to the deviſe of a term, or whether the aſſent of the executrix herſelf, tho' an infant, was neceſſary; the chief juſtice Anderſon held, that an infant at the age of eighteen might aſſent; but the court doubted, whether the aſſent of an adminiſtratrix was good or not. Cro. Eliz. 719.

The teſtator being poſſeſſed of a term of years, deviſed the ſame to his daughter for ſo many years as he ſhould live, remainder to J. S. and made his daughter's huſband executor, and died; the executor ſome time afterwards declared, that if his wife was dead his eſtate in the lands was ended; adjudged, that this was a ſufficient aſſent to make him take the term, in right of his wife, as a deviſee; but if he had not made ſuch a declaration, he might have taken it as executor, and not as a deviſee, and by conſequence might have enjoyed it, if he had ſurvived his wife. March 137. Adjudged, that the ſpiritual court may compel an executor to aſſent to a legacy, and ſo may a court of equity. March 97.

Aſſeſſors, Thoſe that aſſeſs publick taxes. Two inhabitants in every pariſh were aſſeſſors for the royal aid, to rate every perſon according to the value of his eſtate. Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. There are aſſeſſments of pariſh duties, for raiſing money for the poor; repairing of highways, &c. made and levied by rate on the inhabitants; as well as aſſeſſments of publick taxes, &c. See Aſſiſors.

Aſſets. All thoſe goods and chattels which belonged to the teſtator at the time of his death in any part of the world, and which do come to the hands of the executor, ſhall be aſſets (from the French aſſez, enough) or ſufficient goods and chattels to make the executor chargeable (as far as the ſaid goods and chattels extend) to a creditor or legatee. 6 Rep. 47. Terms de la ley.

Aſſets are real or perſonal; where a man hath lands in fee ſimple, and dies ſeiſed thereof, the lands which come to his heir, are aſſets real: and where he dies poſſeſſed of any perſonal eſtate, the goods which come to the executors, are aſſets perſonal: Aſſets are alſo divided into aſſets per deſcent, and aſſets enter maines; aſſets by deſcent is where a perſon is bound in an obligation, and dies ſeiſed of lands which deſcend to the heir, the land ſhall be aſſets, and the heir ſhall be charged as far as the land to him deſcended will extend: Aſſets enter maines, is when a man indebted makes executors, and leaves them ſufficient to pay his debts and legacies; or where ſome commodity or profit ariſeth to them in right of the teſtator, which are called aſſets in their hands. Termes de la ley.

1. What ſhall be aſſets by deſcent in the hands of an heir; and what not.
2. What ſhall be aſſets in the hands of an executor or adminiſtrator.
3. Pleadings in caſes of real and perſonal aſſets.

1. What ſhall be aſſets by deſcent in the hands of an heir; and what not.

Where the anceſtor enters into a bond, and dies ſeiſed of lands in fee, which deſcend to his heir as ſuch, thoſe lands are real aſſets and liable to ſatisfy the debts of the anceſtor, and they are called aſſets by deſcent; and formerly the law was, that if the heir had ſold or aliened the land before the bond was put in ſuit, the debt was loſt; to prevent which, by ſtatute 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 14. ſect. 5. it is enacted, that "where any heir at law ſhall be liable to pay the debt of his anceſtor in regard of any lands or tenements deſcending to him, and ſhall alien the ſame before any action brought, ſuch heir at law ſhall be anſwerable for ſuch debt in an action of debt, to the value of the land by him aliened; in which caſes all creditors ſhall be preferred as in actions againſt executors; and ſuch execution ſhall be taken out upon any judgment obtained againſt ſuch heir, to the value of the land, as if the ſame were his own debt, ſaving that the lands, bona fide aliened before the action brought, ſhall not be liable."

Sect. 6. "Where any action of debt upon ſpecialty is brought againſt any heir, he may plead riens per diſcent at the time of the original writ brought, or the bill filed; and the plaintiff may reply, that he had lands, tenements or hereditaments, from his anceſtor before the original writ brought or bill filed; and if upon iſſue joined it be found for the plaintiff, the jury ſhall inquire of the value of the lands deſcended, and thereupon judgment ſhall be given and execution awarded; but if judgment be given attempting to leap over the fence on horſeback, forbid him, and endeavoured to hinder him; and that the plaintiff coming to aſſiſt Payton aſſaulted the defendant, who defended himſelf, and traverſed, that he was guilty, &c. but in Davis Grove, &c. and upon demurrer, it was objected to the replication, that the plaintiff did not poſitively alledge, that the defendant did beat him, but only, that he would have beaten him; but notwithſtanding this exception, the defendant had judgment. Nota; in this caſe the plaintiff juſtified as a ſervant in defence of his maſter's goods, and the defendant juſtified in defence of his maſter's poſſeſſion; and it was held, that a ſervant may juſtify a battery in defence of his perſon, but not of his goods. 2 Lutw. 1481.

In aſſault, &c. the defendant pleaded ſon aſſault demeſne, and the plaintiff replied, that he was ſtanding at his gate, and that the defendant being on horſe-back offered to ride over him, whereupon he molliter aſſaulted the plaintiff in defence of himſelf, quæ eſt eadem, &c. and on demurrer to this replication it was adjudged to be ill, becauſe he thereby had confeſſed that he had made the firſt aſſault; for he ſhould have pleaded molliter manus impoſuit to hinder the riding over him. 1 Lev. 282. 1 Sid. 441. 1 Mod. 36. 2 Keb. 597.

In treſpaſs for aſſault and battery, the defendant juſtifies by a molliter impoſuit manus for due correction of the defendant as his ſervant, and pleads over, that ſince that time the plaintiff exoneravit & relaxavit (without ſaying per ſcriptum) to the defendant the ſaid matter; to this plea it was demurred for doubleneſs ſpecially; and the opinion of the court was, that it was double; for though the releaſe be not ſufficiently pleaded, yet it is pleaded ſo as iſſue be taken upon it, which will make it double. 1 Sid. 175. 1 Keb. 661. S. C.

Aſſault, battery and wounding; the defendant pleaded, that he was conſtable of B. and for ſuch a miſdemeanor done by the plaintiff he laid his hands on him and put him into the ſtocks quæ eſt eadem tranſgreſſio; and upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the defendant did neither plead Not guilty, nor juſtify the wounding; but if he had pleaded, that the hurt which the plaintiff had was of his wrong, this had anſwered all. Cro. Eliz. 93.

In aſſault, &c. the defendant juſtified by a molliter manus impoſuit on the plaintiff, who entered his cloſe; and upon a demurrer, it was adjudged no good plea, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſhew what eſtate he had in the cloſe, or that he did endeavour to turn the defendant out. Moor 846.

In aſſault, battery and wounding; the defendant pleaded ſon aſſault demeſne; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was adjudged ill, becauſe the defendant cannot juſtify the wounding by this plea; but this may be ſtill a queſtion, for the ground of the action is the treſpaſs, to which this is a proper plea. Sid. 246.

Aſſault, battery and wounding, &c. the defendant as to the wounding, pleads Not guilty, and as to the reſt, he juſtified by virtue of a ca. ſa. againſt the plaintiff, and a warrant thereon, and that he to arreſt the plaintiff molliter manus impoſuit on him, and that he did take and impriſon him, quæ quidem mollis impoſitio manuum, is the ſame aſſault and battery of which the plaintiff complained; and upon demurrer it was objected, that molliter manus imponere was too ſoft a juſtification for battery; the defendant ought to have pleaded Not guilty as to that; and that it was ſo adjudged in Stony and Calvert's caſe, Hill. 2 W. 3. Rot. 759. in C. B. 'Tis true Serjeant Levinz, who reports the principal caſe, tells us, that molliter manus imponere is a battery, if the defendant hath nothing to excuſe himſelf for ſo doing, and that moſt of the precedents are as this is; tho' in ſome the battery is particularly anſwered, and that would be the ſurer way of pleading. 1 Lutw. 925.

2. How aſſault and battery are puniſhed.

The wrong-doer is ſubject both to an action at the ſuit of the party, wherein he ſhall render damages; and alſo to an indictment at the ſuit of the King, wherein he ſhall be fined according to the heinouſneſs of the offence. 1 Hawk. 134.

An aſſaulting or threatning a counſellor at law, or attorney employed in a cauſe againſt a man; or a juror giving verdict againſt him; or his adverſary for ſuing him, &c. is puniſhable on an indictment, by fine and impriſonment, for the contempt. 1 Hawk. 58.

Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 11. [intituled, An act for the better preventing frivolous and vexatious ſuits] enacts that, where there are ſeveral defendants to any action of aſſault, &c. and one or more acquitted, the perſon ſo acquitted ſhall recover coſt of ſuit, unleſs the judge certify that there was a reaſonable cauſe for making ſuch perſon a defendant or defendants to ſuch action.

Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 16. Aſſaulting a privy counſellor in the execution of his office, is felony without benefit of clergy.

Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 23. ſect. 11. If any perſon ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly aſſault any perſon or perſons in the publick ſtreets or highways, with an intent to tear, ſpoil, cut, burn or deface, and ſhall tear, ſpoil, cut, burn, or deface the garments or cloaths of ſuch perſon or perſons, then all and every perſon and perſons ſo offending, being thereof lawfully convicted, ſhall be adjudged to be guilty of felony; and the courts before whom ſuch offender ſhall be tried ſhall have full power and authority of tranſporting ſuch felons for the ſpace of ſeven years.

Stat. 7 Geo. 2. cap. 21. Aſſaulting with intent to rob is made felony and tranſportation.

By the Common law, a truſt of lands, deſcending upon an heir, was not aſſets even in equity; but now by ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. it is enacted, that "if any ceſtui que truſt die, leaving a truſt in fee ſimple to deſcend to his heir, ſuch truſt ſhall be taken to be aſſets by deſcent, and the heir ſhall be chargeable with the obligation of his anceſtors, by reaſon of ſuch aſſets, as fully as if the eſtate in law had deſcended to him; provided that no heir ſhall, by any kind of plea or confeſſion of the action, or ſuffering judgment by nient dedire, or any other matter, be chargeable to pay the condemnation out of his own eſtate, but execution ſhall be ſued of the whole eſtate, ſo made aſſets in his hands by deſcent, in whoſe hands ſoever it ſhall come after the writ purchaſed.

"Eſtate pur auter vie ſhall be aſſets in the hands of the heir, if it come to him by reaſon of a ſpecial occupancy; and where there is no ſpecial occupant, it ſhall go to the executors or adminiſtrators of the party that had the eſtate thereof by virtue of the grant, and ſhall be aſſets in their hands."

The father bound himſelf and his heirs in a bond, and died, leaving iſſue two ſons; the eldeſt of them entered on the lands as heir at law to the father, and he died without iſſue, and then the youngeſt ſon entered; and in an action of debt brought againſt him upon this bond, it was adjudged, that he ſhould be charged with aſſets as heir to his father, notwithſtanding the intermediate deſcent of the lands to his elder brother. Dyer 368.

So where the father ſettled his lands to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to his eldeſt ſon in tail male, reverſion to his own right heirs, and died, leaving iſſue two ſons; the eldeſt, who was tenant in tail, entered, and had iſſue one ſon, and died, which ſon died without iſſue, ſo that the eſtate tail was ſpent, then the youngeſt ſon of the father entered; adjudged, that theſe lands ſhall be aſſets in his hands to anſwer the father's debts; and the ſole queſtion was, whether he ſhould be charged as heir to his father, without naming the intermediate deſcent to his elder brother and nephew. 3 Lev. 286.

A leaſe was made, rendring rent to the leſſor, his heirs or aſſigns; the leſſor died, and his executor received the rents for ſeveral years after the death of the leſſor, this ſhall not be aſſets, becauſe it belonged to the heir. Dyer 361.

A reverſion in fee expectant upon an eſtate-tail ſhall not be aſſets, becauſe 'tis in the power of the tenant in tail in poſſeſſion to bar it when he will; but when the eſtate-tail is ſpent, then 'tis aſſets by deſcent. 6 Rep. 58. b. Therefore where the jury found, that the heir had ſeveral lands and tenements by deſcent, the verdict was uncertain, becauſe it may be true, and yet the heir may not have aſſets, becauſe a reverſion expectant upon an eſtate-tail is a tenement, and yet that is not aſſets. 6 Rep. 58.

Where a copyhold of inheritance deſcends to an heir, this ſhall not be aſſets, becauſe 'tis an inheritance created by cuſtom, and the deſcent is directed by the Common law; but it doth not allow any other collateral qualities which do not concern ſuch deſcent, and which are proper to other inheritances at Common law. 4 Rep. 22. a.

The father being ſeiſed of lands in fee, deviſed them to his ſon and heir in fee upon condition, that he ſhould pay his debts within a year; and if he failed, that then his executors ſhould have all, and pay his debts; 'tis true, the heir had a fee ſimple by this deviſe, but being obliged by this condition to pay his father's debts, he hath the lands as a purchaſer, and therefore they ſhall not be aſſets by deſcent. Cro. Car. 161.

Feoffment of a manor, excepting and reſerving black acre to himſelf for life only, habend' except before excepted, to the uſe of A. in tail. Reſolved, there is no limitation of uſe of black acre, ſo it reſults and deſcends, and is aſſets. Lev. 287.

Mortgagor and mortgagee; the mortgagor died, and the heir of the mortgagor and mortgagee join in a ſale of thoſe lands; quære, whether the money that comes to the hands of the heir by this ſale ſhall be aſſets to charge him in equity; and per Finch, lord keeper, It ſhall not, no more than he ſhall be charged at law after alienation bona fide. Freem. Rep. 303. pl. 369.

Where the heir takes by a will with a charge as paying 20 l. &c. he does not take by deſcent, but by purchaſe, and therefore this is no aſſets; per North Ch. J. and Atkins J. 2 Mod. 286.

If one demiſes lands to A. and his heirs during the life of J. S. or if tenant for life grants his eſtate to A. and his heirs, and A. dies, his heir ſhall take only as ſpecial occupant, and he ſhall not be charged hereby as heir in an action of debt. 10 Rep. 98.

Lands in Ireland are aſſets to ſatisfy a bond debt in England, but it is otherwiſe of lands in Scotland. Arg. Vern. 419. cites it as reſolved in Evans and Aſcough's caſe. Latch 234. and 6 Rep. Dowdale's caſe.

Lands were purchaſed by A. but conveyed to A. and B. but B. to take nothing. A. dies, B. decreed to convey to the heirs of A. Theſe lands, being truſt lands, are no aſſets in equity, though the truſt be decreed in equity. Chan. Ca. 12.

If ceſty que truſt binds himſelf and his heirs in a bond, this truſt is not aſſets to the heir, tho' queſtioned in Lord Chancellor Hide's time, but clearly the truſt of a leaſe for years is aſſets to charge an executor in equity. 3 Chan. Rep. 37.

If the equity of redemption of a mortgage in fee, ſince the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, ſhould be aſſets in equity to ſatisfy bond debts, was the queſtion; the lord chancellor inclined that it was; but reſpited his decree till the maſter had reported a ſtate of the caſe. Vern. Rep. 411.

The heir claiming under a voluntary ſettlement ſells the land; the purchaſor before his purchaſe had notice that there was a bond, but there was no original filed; and before the commencement of the ſuit he had covenanted to pay the reſidue of his purchaſe. On a bill filed, the queſtion was, if the money in the purchaſor's hands is liable to the payment of this bond debt; and the court thereupon inclined to diſmiſs the plaintiff's bill. 2 Vern. 44.

A. ſeiſed in fee, demiſed to truſtees for raiſing 1500 l. a year for his wife's jointure, who re-demiſed to him for a leſſer term, paying a pepper-corn. This term ſo redemiſed, being raiſed only for a particular purpoſe, ſhall not be aſſets for payment of other debts than the inheritance would have been liable to; per two juſtices, the maſter of the Rolls, and Lord Ch. Jefferies. 2 Vern. 52.

A. having a leaſe for three lives to him and his heirs from the church, mortgaged it for 99 years, if the three lives lived ſo long, and died after the mortgage was forfeited; decreed this mortgage term, which would not have been aſſets at law, to be ſold for the payment of debts. Arg. 2 Vern. Rep. 54. pl. 50.

Reverſionary lands purchaſed in the names of A. and B. after the death of C. who has an eſtate for life in the lands, were decreed to go towards ſatisfaction of judgments. 2 Chan. Rep. 145, 146.

Where a leaſe for years is to wait on the inheritance, it ſhall be aſſets as to debts, as well where the intereſt of the leaſe is in the hands of a ſtranger, and not in the owner of the inheritance, as when it is in ceſty que truſt of the inheritance, and the intereſt of the inheritance in a ſtrange truſtee; per Lord Keeper. 2 Chan. Caſ. 152.

Upon a queſtion if the equity of redemption of a mortgage for years of an eſtate in fee be aſſets, the lord chancellor's preſent opinion was, if there was a ſurplus beyond the mortgages, it ſhould be aſſets to anſwer bond debts. Vern. Rep. 410.

A. ſeiſed in fee, mortgages for 99 years. The equity of redemption has always in this court been adjudged aſſets. Arg. 2 Vern. 55.

The judgment againſt an heir, who has a reverſion in fee deſcended to him, is only of aſſets quando acciderint; and the creditor cannot by bill in equity compel the heir to ſell the reverſion, but muſt expect till it falls. 2 Vern. 134.

A. on

A. on ſale of lands takes a bond from the purchaſor to pay any ſum of money not exceeding 500*l. as A. ſhould by will appoint. Per cur. A.* having power to diſpoſe of the 500*l.* it muſt be look'd on as part of his eſtate, and decreed it to be aſſets liable to the plaintiff's debts. 2 Vern. Rep. 319.

In debt upon bond brought againſt the defendant as heir to his father, &c. and riens per deſcent pleaded, the plaintiff replied aſſets, and iſſue was taken thereupon; and the evidence was, that the obligor, the defendant's father, deviſed to the defendant, his ſon and heir, certain meſſuages in Exchequer alley in fee, but chargeable with an annuity or rent-charge payable to the defendant's mother; and it was held by Holt Ch. J. that theſe meſſuages deſcended to the defendant, and were aſſets; for (by him) the difference is, where the deviſe makes an alteration of the limitation of the eſtate from that which the law would make by deſcent; and where the deviſe conveys the ſame eſtate as the law would make by deſcent, but charges it with incumbrances. In the former caſe, the heir takes by purchaſe, in the latter by deſcent. Ld. Raym. Rep. 728.

A. having a power to charge 3000*l. on his eſtate for ſuch purpoſes as he ſhould think fit*, by deed appoints the 3000*l.* as a collateral ſecurity for quiet enjoyment of an eſtate he had ſold; but the appointment to be void, if no incumbrance appears; A. deviſed it to his daughter; the creditors of A. brought a bill to have the 3000*l.* applied to payments of debts, and decreed accordingly; per Wright Lord Keeper. 2 Vern. 465.

A. being ſeiſed of the truſt of an advowſon in groſs in fee, dies indebted by ſpecialties, &c. the creditors bring a bill againſt the heir at law and the truſtees of the advowſon, and pray a ſale of the advowſon. The heir at law inſiſted that the advowſon was not aſſets: it was argued for the plaintiff, that an advowſon is aſſets at law; that it is an eſtate of inheritance, deſcendable, valuable, and ſaleable, &c. but for the heir at law it was argued, that an advowſon is not aſſets at law in an action of debt, and cited Anderſon Ch. J. in Sir Edward Clear and Peacock's caſe, Cro. El. 359. tho' otherwiſe in a formedon to bar the warranty; and that the reaſon of the difference ſeems to be, that the aſſets to make the warranty a bar in a formedon, are to be conſidered according to the groſs value, &c. whereas upon a judgment in debt againſt the heir, the aſſets are to be extended according to the annual value, and there is no annual value of an advowſon, and therefore cannot be extended; tenant by elegit is to hold quouſque he is ſatisfied, according to the yearly value, &c. and how can that be when there is no yearly value, and when is it that the debt ſhall be ſaid to be ſatisfied, and the party have the advowſon? That there are other circumſtances of inheritances which are not aſſets at law, as copyhold, eſtates pur auter vie, before the ſtatute of frauds, &c. Farther, in a formedon, the bar and ſatisfaction by warranty and aſſets deſcended, is not by holding the aſſets and profits to be taken, but the thing itſelf, i. e. the aſſets are delivered in ſatisfaction abſolutely, according to the groſs value; whereas in debt the lands, &c. are always found and delivered clari valoris, &c. To this it was replied, as to the objection and inſtance of the copyhold, that is not aſſets, becauſe in the eye and notion of law it is but an eſtate at will, tho' cuſtom has now fixed and made it in ſome reſpects an eſtate of inheritance, but yet the tenure is ad voluntatem domini; and another reaſon, becauſe the lord may not have a tenant put upon him contrary to his will, &c. and as to the caſe of eſtates pur auter vie, the heir took not properly by deſcent, but as ſpecial occupant, &c. and as to the diſtinction of an advowſon's being aſſets in a formedon, and not in an action of debt, it is founded upon the ſingle authority of what Anderſon ſaid obiter, and wherein, as to the point then in judgment, the whole court was againſt him. Co. Lit. 374. b. is general that it is aſſets. It is true, it is there mentioned with reference to warranty to create a bar in formedon; but the reaſon there given, and the books that were cited, prove it to be aſſets generally, becauſe valuable, and ſhew how it may be valued annually; and if a value, as admitted, may be put upon it in groſs, as in the caſe of warranty, why may it not by proportion admit of a yearly value? As ſuppoſe an advowſon worth 20*l.* then one twentieth may be ſaid to be the annual value, and the objection of it's producing no annual profits will not hold, becauſe that proves likewiſe that no value ought at all to be put upon it; and the ſole difficulty here is the manner of valuing or charging; but that is no difficulty in this court, which will decree a ſale of aſſets deſcending, as a more ready and compendious method of ſatisfaction; and even at law, ſince the ſtatute of W. 3. againſt fraudulent deviſes, if the heir aliens the aſſets, he is chargeable according to the groſs value, &c. wherefore, &c. Lord Chancellor, as to the point of the advowſon being aſſets, &c. held, that if it be not aſſets at law this court would not make it ſo, becauſe that would be to alter the law, &c. and ſeem'd, that as a groſs value (as it is admitted) may be put upon it, ſo it may be capable of a valuation per annum, &c. At another day Lord Chancellor delivered his judgment, and held that the advowſon was aſſets, and accordingly decreed it to be ſold, &c. he held that it was a rule, that all lands, tenements and hereditaments were extendable; and that an advowſon was ſo in the caſe of the King; he cited Sir William Jones 24. an advowſon was a thing valuable, and lay in tenure, and might be held by knight's ſervice, &c. he referred to Fleta and Briton. The 23d of March following, this decree was affirmed in the houſe of Lords, Eyres Ch. J. of C. B. Price J. and Comyns B. being the only judges in town, attended; and being aſked their opinion, whether an advowſon in groſs was aſſets in ſuch caſe at law, declared it was; and the houſe did not divide. 3 Vin. 145, 146. cites *MS. 2. What ſhall be aſſets in the hands of an executor or adminiſtrator.

All goods and chattels, debts, &c. that are recovered by the executor by action, after the death of the teſtator, ſhall be accounted aſſets; but not before they are recovered. For if the executor do never recover, or get a debt into his poſſeſſion, he ſhall never be charged; provided he hath uſed his utmoſt endeavour to recover it, and cannot do it. 1 Rep. 98. Office of Ex. ch. 6. p. 92.

Damages recovered for goods taken away in the life of the teſtator, ſhall be aſſets. Lit. 192. 1 Inſt. 124. a.

If an obligee or creditor is made executor, the debt is aſſets; but he may pay himſelf before any other in equal or inferior degree. 1 Inſt. 264. Office of Ex. ch. 2. p. 43, 63.

If an executor of his own wrong, to whom 20*l.* is owing, doth ſeize goods to the value of 20*l.* intending to pay himſelf a debt of that value, this ſhall be aſſets in his hands to make him chargeable to any creditor or legatee. 5 Rep. 30.

Tho' a plantation be an inheritance, yet being in a foreign country, it is a chattel to pay debts, and a thing that is teſtamentary. Vent. 358.

A man mortgaged his eſtate for a term of years; adjudged, that the equity of redemption is aſſets, and ſo is a term for years to attend the inheritance; ſo, if the mortgagor pays the money to the heir of the mortgagee, he ſhall not take it as heir, but it ſhall be aſſets in his hands. 3 Leon. 32.

Where a debt due to the teſtator is certain, as 'tis always by bond, there a releaſe of that debt makes it aſſets in the hands of the executor, becauſe it ſhall be intended, that he would not have made the releaſe unleſs the money had been paid to him, or unleſs he had otherwiſe been ſatisfied; therefore where an infant was executor, and the adminiſtrator during his minority had received 600*l.* due to the teſtator, and when the infant executor came of age, and had proved the will, he releaſed the adminiſtrator tor of all actions; it was adjudged in an action of debt brought againſt him, that the 600*l.* which was certain, and which was now releaſed, ſhall be aſſets in his hands; for it ſhall be intended, that he received it from the adminiſtrator, otherwiſe he would not have given him a releaſe. Owen 36.

There was a bond of 100*l.* made to the teſtator for performance of covenants, which afterwards were broken, and the executor put the bond in ſuit, and pending the action, ſubmitted himſelf to arbitration, and the obligor was awarded to pay the executor 70*l.* and that upon payment of the money he ſhould releaſe the bond; all which was done; and in an action brought againſt him, it was adjudged, that he ſhall be anſwerable for aſſets to the value of 100*l.* for ſo was the bond; and tho' he was compelled by the award to releaſe the bond, yet it was his own act to ſubmit to the arbitration. 3 Leon. 51.

Judgment was had againſt one Vaughan, who afterwards died inteſtate, having firſt made a fraudulent gift of his goods to his daughter, who by virtue thereof gave them to the defendant, and having gotten the goods in his poſſeſſion, took out adminiſtration to the ſaid inteſtate; afterwards a ſcire facias was brought againſt him as executor to Vaughan, and this was to have execution of the ſaid judgment, who pleaded riens inter maines; and all this matter being found ſpecially, the plaintiff recovered againſt him; for by his intermeddling with the goods, he was an executor de ſon tort, becauſe the gift to the daughter being fraudulent and void, as to creditors, ſhe could not give him any authority to poſſeſs them, therefore he was a treſpaſſer, and they were aſſets in his hands, and his ſubſequent adminiſtration did not purge that wrong; therefore a creditor may ſue him as executor de ſon tort, or he might have ſued him as adminiſtrator. Cro. Eliz. 810.

Executor durante minore ætate of an infant, who after came of age, and proved the will, and left ſeveral goods of the teſtator in the hands of the ſaid executor, yet theſe ſhall be adjudged aſſets in his hands; now he had proved the will, tho' he never had the poſſeſſion, becauſe he might have recovered them of the executor after he came of age. 1 Rol. Abr. 921.

Leaſe for eighty years, if the leſſee ſhould live ſo long, the remainder at his deceaſe to his executors or aſſigns for forty years; the leſſee died inteſtate, and his wife took out letters of adminiſtration; and in an action of treſpaſs brought by her, againſt one who claimed under another leaſe, it was adjudged, that this term was veſted in the leſſee, and then his adminiſtratrix ſhall have it, and that it ſhall be aſſets in her hands. Cro. Eliz. 666.

Debt againſt an executor, who pleaded plene adminiſtravit; the plaintiff replied, aſſets die impetrationis brevis, upon which they were at iſſue, and the proof for the plaintiff was, that on the ſame day 100*l.* was paid to the defendant in the prerogative court, and that preſently, by the order of the ſaid court, the ſame was paid by the defendant to another creditor of his teſtator; adjudged, that becauſe the money was once in the hands of the defendant as executor, &c. it ſhall be accounted aſſets, tho' paid over to another creditor; but the defendant might have helped himſelf, upon pleading this matter ſpecially, but not upon plene adminiſtravit. Dyer 20.

The leſſor covenanted with the teſtator to make him a leaſe for years of ſuch lands, but he died before the leaſe was made, and afterwards the leſſor made the leaſe to his executors: Now it was adjudged, that the term ſhall be aſſets in their hands, for tho' it commenced in their time, and after the death of the teſtator; yet, becauſe the covenant was made to him, and by virtue thereof the leaſe was granted to them, it ſhall be aſſets. 1 Rep. 91. Chapman's caſe, cited in Shelley's caſe.

If an executor ſurrenders a term of years (which he had as executor) to him who hath the reverſion in fee, tho' 'tis merged and extinct as to him, yet it ſhall ſtill remain aſſets in the executor to ſatisfy debts and pay legacies; and ſo it had been, if the executor himſelf had purchaſed the inheritance in reverſion. 1 Rep. 87. in Corbett's caſe.

The teſtator being poſſeſſed of ſeveral goods, made M. R. his executrix, and died; the executrix made a fraudulent gift of the goods, but continued in the poſſeſſion of them, and afterwards ſhe married the defendant, and died; and in an action of debt brought againſt him as executor de ſon tort, the queſtion was, whether goods were aſſets in his hands, he having paid debts and legacies; adjudged that they were; 'tis true, the gift, tho' fraudulent, is good againſt all but creditors; but if in reſpect to them 'tis void (as certainly it is), then the executrix had a good title to them, notwithſtanding her fraudulent gift; and if ſo, then her huſband having poſſeſſed the goods, and paid legacies, &c. he is liable as executor of his own wrong, and they are aſſets in his hands. Cro. Eliz. 405.

Money decreed in a court of equity by reaſon of any executorſhip, and money ariſing by ſale of lands by executors, and even damages recovered by an executor, ſhall be aſſets, and ſo ſhall the intereſt of money lent by the executor, if it was the teſtator's money; 'tis true, it hath been argued to the contrary, becauſe the teſtator lends the money at his own peril; therefore he being to bear the loſs, 'tis reaſonable he ſhould have the profit; but now 'tis held otherwiſe. Moor 858.

A woman, who was an executrix, was poſſeſſed of a term for years; afterwards ſhe married, and then the huſband purchaſed the reverſion; adjudged, that the term was extinguiſhed as to her, if ſhe ſhould ſurvive her huſband, but that it ſhall be aſſets in his hands in reſpect to all others. Moor 54.

A copyholder made a leaſe for years of his copyhold lands by licence; the leſſee died, this ſhall be aſſets in the hands of his executor or adminiſtrator; but 'tis clearly ſo, if the leaſe was made for one year, becauſe that is a leaſe warranted by common law, and not cuſtomary. Poph. 188.

Deviſe of land to his executor to ſell, or a deviſe of lands to be ſold by his executors, and with the money ariſing by ſuch ſale to pay the teſtator's debts, there the money received by ſuch ſale ſhall be aſſets; but where the lands are deviſed to be ſold for the payment of debts and legacies, with the money ariſing by ſuch ſale, and with his perſonal eſtate, and the reſidue thereof (after the ſame are paid) is given to his executor; in ſuch caſe the perſonal eſtate ſhall be aſſets, and ſhall be applied as far as it will go for the payment of the debts, and the lands ſhall not be charged any farther than to ſatisfy what the perſonal eſtate falls ſhort; and this is in favour of the heir. Hard. 405.

Upon a bill of review, the queſtion was, whether a copyhold eſtate deviſed to be ſold by the executor to pay debts, and afterwards ſold accordingly, ſhall be aſſets at law and in equity, or in law only, for if only in law, then a decree to make them aſſets in equity, without a trial firſt at law, is erroneous; and it was held, that the decree could not be reverſed, becauſe it doth not appear, whether upon the proof, at the hearing the cauſe, it was matter of law or equity; and after a decree, it ſhall be intended that the court adjudged upon the whole proof. Hard. 174.

The teſtator being poſſeſſed of a leaſe for a long term for years, deviſed it to his wife for life, then to his eldeſt ſon for life, and to the heirs male of his body, and made his wife executrix, and died very much in debt; the executrix proved the will, and paid ſo many of the debts as the ſtock of the teſtator did amount unto, and then ſhe aſſented to the deviſe of the ſaid leaſe, and made one Crofts her executor, and ſhe died; afterwards Crofts entered into articles with the plaintiff to ſell the leaſe to him for a valuable conſideration, and was decreed to convey it accordingly, becauſe the leaſe was aſſets in his hands notwithſtanding the aſſent of the executrix to the deviſe thereof; 'tis true, by ſuch aſſent it was ſo veſted in the ſon, that if he had ſold the leaſe the ſale had been good, but it not being ſold, it ſhall now remain in Crofts as a truſt for the creditors of the firſt teſtator. 1 Chan. Rep. 256.

Goods taken from the teſtator in his life-time are not aſſets till recovered by the executor, and in his poſſeſſion; neither is a debt due to him upon bond any aſſets till recovered, becauſe it is but a choſe in action. Owen 36.

So where the teſtator deviſed lands to be ſold by his executor, and that the money ariſing by ſuch ſale ſhould be diſtributed amongſt his daughters when they ſhould be of full

full age; the executor ſold the lands purſuant to the power given him by the will; adjudged, that the money ſhall not be aſſets in his hands in the mean time to ſatisfy debts, becauſe 'tis limited to a particular uſe. 1 Leon. 87.

The teſtator pawned his own goods, and his executor redeemed them with his own money, and retained them till he was ſatisfied; adjudged, that the property was altered by the retainer, he having paid to the value, and therefore the goods ſhall not be aſſets in his hands. Keilw. 63.

The teſtator made a leaſe of his houſe, &c. rendring rent to himſelf, his heirs or aſſigns, and died: after his death, his executor received the rent ſeveral years, and in an action brought againſt him, wherein the iſſue was, whether he had aſſets or not, all this matter was found ſpecially; but adjudged no aſſets, becauſe the rent belonged to the heir. Dyer 361.

The plaintiff who was an executor, and the defendant ſubmitted themſelves to an award, and the arbitrators awarded the defendant to pay the plaintiff 300*l*. afterwards a creditor of his teſtator attached this money in the defendant's hands, for the debt owing by the teſtator; but adjudged, that this was not aſſets till the executor had received it, and therefore the attachment was not good. 1 Lev. 306.

J. S. took a bond in truſt for another, and died; adjudged, this is not aſſets in the hands of his executor: ſo where the obligee aſſigned over a bond, and covenanted nor to revoke it, and died; this is not aſſets in the hands of his executor. 1 Salk. 79.

Leſſee for years died, his executor entered and received the profits; adjudged, that they are received by him as tertenant, and appropriated to the uſe of the leſſor, but what is over and above the rent ſhall be aſſets. 1 Salk. 79.

In an attachment upon a prohibition, the caſe was, the inteſtate died ſeiſed of a meſſuage, which he held for three lives; the adminiſtrator was ſued in the ſpiritual court for a diſtribution, and to exhibit an inventory, which he did, but omitted the term for three lives; and the queſtion was, whether an eſtate pur auter vie was diſtributable, according to the ſtatute 22 & 23 Car. 2. By virtue of the ſtatute 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. and adjudged, that 'tis not diſtributable; for it remains a freehold notwithſtanding the ſtatute, which ſubjects it to the payment of debts, but not legacies, unleſs expreſsly given out of it. 2 Salk. 464.

3. Pleadings in caſes of real and perſonal aſſets.

Debt againſt an heir upon the bond of his anceſtor; he pleaded riens per deſcent in fee ſimple from his father but ſixteen acres of land, and demanded judgment if he ſhould be farther charged than to the value of thoſe lands; and judgment was given accordingly, that he ſhould be no farther charged; but it was likewiſe adjudged, that if he had not confeſſed the action, and ſhewed the certainty of the aſſets deſcended to him, but had pleaded riens per deſcent only; or if a judgment had been againſt him by confeſſion, or by any defect in pleading, in ſuch caſe the plaintiff ſhall have judgment and execution of all his lands, or a ca. ſa. to take his body, as if it had been his own debt. Plow. Com. 440.

Debt againſt the heir upon a bond of his anceſtor, and the plaintiff had judgment by nihil dicit; and upon a ſci. fa. to have execution, the defendant pleaded riens per deſcent in fee ſimple at the time of the writ brought, or after; adjudged, that after a judgment by nihil dicit, or confeſſion, &c. the heir comes too late to plead riens per deſcent, &c. for he ought to have pleaded that firſt. Dyer 344.

But anno 1 Car. both theſe caſes were denied to be law, (viz.) the teſtator obtained a judgment againſt G. D. and made his wife executrix and died; ſhe alſo having made an executor died; then G. D. the creditor died, and the executor of the wife brought a ſcire facias againſt his heirs, who pleaded riens per deſcent &c. of G. D. and it was found, that he had two acres and a half by deſcent, &c. it was thereupon moved, that there might be a general judgment againſt the defendant, as well of his own lands as of thoſe he had by deſcent, becauſe his plea was falſe; but adjudged, that execution ſhall be only of a moiety of thoſe lands which were found to deſcend to him, for it ſhall be no otherwiſe againſt him than it would have been againſt his anceſtor, even if the judgment had been by nil dicit, or by confeſſion; but in the principal caſe, the lands deſcending from G. D. to the heir, ſubject to the payment of a judgment, come to him with a charge, and therefore he cannot be ſued as heir, becauſe he comes in as a purchaſer. Poph. 193.

In a formedon, the defendant pleaded in bar a warranty with aſſets; the plaintiff replied riens per deſcent; upon which they were at iſſue, and the jury found that the anceſtor of the defendant, whoſe warranty was pleaded in bar, was ſeiſed of the lands in nature of gavelkind, and by his will deviſed them to two ſons, equally to be divided between them, and to their heirs, and that the defendant was his eldeſt ſon; adjudged that this was not aſſets by deſcent. 1 Leon. 315.

Debt againſt an executor upon a bond of the teſtator; the defendant pleaded, that his teſtator became bound to the plaintiff in a ſtatute of 2000 l. conditioned, that whereas the ſaid plaintiff had covenanted to aſſure ſuch lands to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to the right heirs of the teſtator, that if he performed the ſaid covenant, then the ſtatute ſhould be void, and aſſigned the breach in non-performance; and averred, that he had aſſets die impetrationis billæ, but did not ſay nec unquam poſtea, &c. and this was adjudged an incurable fault. 2. Cro. 131.

The teſtator made two executors, who lived in ſeveral counties; one of them poſſeſſed all the goods, but yet in an action brought againſt him he could not plead plene adminiſtravit, becauſe aſſets in the hands of one executor is aſſets in the hands of both; and the jury in one county may find aſſets in another, for 'tis their finding aſſets which is the ſubſtance, and the place is but ſurpluſage; for if the defendant plead plene adminiſtravit at Saliſbury, the jury may find aſſets at Exeter, becauſe 'tis a thing tranſitory. Keilw. 51. 6 Rep. 46.

But in finding aſſets, the jury muſt always find to what value, otherwiſe 'tis void, becauſe the plaintiff muſt recover only according to the value of the aſſets found, which muſt be certain; therefore to find aſſets generally, without ſaying to what value, is void. 1 Rol. Rep. 58.

Where an executor is ſued upon a promiſe to pay a legacy, in ſuch caſe the plaintiff need not aver, that the defendant hath aſſets in his hands at the time of the promiſe made, becauſe it ſhall be intended, that he had aſſets at that time, for otherwiſe he would not have promiſed to pay the money. 2 Cro. 602.

Debt againſt Sir John Chicheſter as executor of Windham, who was executor of Lutterell, upon a bond of the ſaid Lutterell; the defendant pleaded, that Lutterel, who was the firſt teſtator, was indebted to Windham in 100*l*. upon a ſtatute, and that after the death of Lutterell his goods, of the value of 100*l*. came to the hands of Windham as his executor, which he adminiſtred and retained, to ſatisfy his own debt, and that beyond the ſaid goods he had nothing in his hands; the plaintiff replied, that Windham had aſſets of the goods of Lutterell beyond the ſaid 100*l*. in London; upon which they were at iſſue, and the cauſe was tried there; and a verdict for the plaintiff, that Windham, at the time of his death, had goods and chattles of Lutterell &c. It was objected, that this was an immaterial iſſue, becauſe Windham might adminiſter all the goods of Lutterell which came to his hands, and yet Lutterell might have more goods, which might come to the defendant Chicheſter after the death of Windham, and which never came to the hands of Windham; and therefore, the defendant having ſaid nothing of any goods of Lutterel's which came to him after the death of Windham, his plea is ill; but adjudged, that this exception came too late after a verdict. Dyer 185.

Aſſumpſit &c. againſt an executor, upon the promiſe of his teſtator, but the plaintiff in his declaration did not aver, that the defendant had aſſets; and adjudged, that the declaration was good, and that he need not make any ſuch averment. Cro. Eliz. 52.

The defendant demurred to a bill in equity, becauſe it was brought to diſcover aſſets before any ſuit commenced at law againſt him, for if an action had been brought againſt him as executor, &c. he might have confeſſed the action or paid the debt, but now he may be doubly vexed. Hard. 115.

Debt againſt an executor, who pleaded plene adminiſtravit, the plaintiff replied aſſets die exhibitionis billæ originalis, (viz.) ſuch a day; this iſſue was tried in Middleſex, and the bill of Middleſex being the original, the plaintiff at the trial was required to produce it, (when in truth it ought to be given in evidence) and becauſe he did not produce it he was nonſuited; and upon a motion for a new trial he could not prevail, for he ought to have tendered a bill of exceptions to the evidence. Sid. 226.

Debt againſt an executor, who pleaded plene adminiſtravit; the plaintiff replied aſſets die exhibitionis billæ, viz. on the 23*d of October*, which was the firſt day of Michaelmas term; now, if it appear upon the evidence, that the bill was not filed till fourteen days afterwards, or within the term, whatever the defendant paid after the 23*d of October*, and before the bill filed, ſhall be aſſets, if it was paid in diſcharge of any debts of equal degree with the debt for which the action was now brought. Sid. 432.

Aſſewiare, To draw or drain out water from marſhy grounds.——Quod ipſi mariſcum prædictum aſſewiare, et ſecundum legem mariſci Wallis includere, et in culturam redigere.——Et mariſcum illum ſic aſſewiatum, incluſum et in culturam redactum tenere. Mon. Angl. 2 vol. f. 334.

Aſſidere, or Aſſidare, To tax equally. Proviſum eſt generaliter quod prædicta quadrageſima hoc modo aſſideatur et colligatur. Mat. Par. ann. 1232. Sometimes it ſignifies to aſſign an annual rent, to be paid out of a particular farm; as Manerium rex Stephanus dedit et aſſedit eis centum marcis. Cowell, ed. 1727.

Aſſign, Aſſignare, Hath two ſignifications, one general, as to appoint a deputy, or ſet over a right unto another; in which ſenſe Britton ſaith (fol. 122.) this word was firſt brought into uſe for the favour of baſtards, becauſe they cannot paſs under the name of heirs; therefore were and are compriſed under the name of aſſignees. The other ſignification is ſpecial, as to point at, or ſet forth; ſo we may ſay to aſſign errors, Old N. B. fol. 19. that is, to ſhew where the error is committed; to aſſign falſe judgment, Id. fol. 17. that is, to declare how and where the judgment is unjuſt; to aſſign a falſe verdict, Id. fol. 112. and to aſſign a perjury, anno 9 R. 2. c. 3. to aſſign the ceſſor, Old Nat. Brev. fol. 1341. to ſhew how the plaintiff had ceſſed or given over; to aſſign waſte is to ſhew wherein eſpecially the waſte is committed. Reg. Orig. fol. 72. Aſſign in a general ſignification is uſed 20 E. 1. and 11 H. 6. cap. 2. in theſe words, juſtices aſſigned to take aſſizes; and the ſubſtantive aſſignment hath the ſame ſignification, Weſt Symbol. par. 1. b. 2. ſect. 496. As the aſſignment af a leaſe, is the ſetting over the intereſt of the leſſee to another; in which ſenſe is uſed alſo the word aſſignee, aſſignatus, for one that is appointed or deputed by another, to do any act, or perform any buſineſs, or enjoy any commodity; and ſuch an aſſignee may be either by deed or in law; aſſignee by deed, is he that is appointed by a perſon; as when a leſſee of a term aſſigns the ſame to another, he is his aſſignee by deed: An aſſignee in law, is he whom the law ſo makes, without any appointment of the perſon. Dyer, fol. 6. nu. 5. So the executor is aſſignee in law to the teſtator, who dies poſſeſſed of a leaſe made to him and his aſſigns. Perkins (tit. Grants) ſaith, that an aſſignee is he that occupieth a thing in his own right, and deputy is he that doth it in the right of another. Cowell.

Aſſignee. See Aſſign and Aſſignment.

Aſſignment, Is the appointing, or transferring, or ſetting over a right to another. He that aſſigns is called the aſſignor, and he to whom the thing is aſſigned is named the aſſignee. Termes de la ley.

1. What things are aſſignable, and not aſſignable.
2. Who ſhall be an aſſignee; and who not.
3. Where aſſignee ſhall be bound by the covenant of the aſſignor.
4. Where aſſignee ſhall not be bound by the covenant of the aſſignor.

1. What things are aſſignable, and not aſſignable.

Adjudged, that where leſſee for years of the crown is put out of his eſtate by a ſtranger, yet he may aſſign the term, tho' he is not in poſſeſſion; becauſe the reverſion being in the crown, he cannot lawfully be put out of poſſeſſion, but at his own will. Cro. Eliz. 275.

Adjudged, that a duty, which is not naturally a debt but by circumſtances only; as a debt upon a bond to ſave another harmleſs, or for performance of covenants, which are not debts till the party is damnified, or the covenants broken, yet theſe bonds may be aſſigned to the crown for a debt; but execution ſhall not be taken againſt the obligors, until a ſci. fa. is brought againſt them to ſhew cauſe why ſuch an aſſignment ſhould not be made. 2 Leon. 55.

A leaſe was made for years to commence after the death of the tenant for life then in poſſeſſion; and after his death a ſtranger entered, and the leſſee aſſigned his leaſe; adjudged, that the aſſignment was good, notwithſtanding the entry of the ſtranger; but if the leſſee himſelf had firſt entered, and had afterwards been put out, he could not have made an aſſignment till he had reentered. Cro. Eliz. 15.

Adjudged, that a bond may be aſſigned to the Queen, without enrolling it, and where the obligee is not indebted to her; but it cannot be aſſigned to a ſubject unleſs for a debt due by the aſſignor to the aſſignee. 4 Leon. 9, 90.

Judgment in an action of debt againſt a leſſee for years, who after the judgment aſſigned his term, and then, after a year, he who had obtained the judgment brought a ſci. fa. to have execution; adjudged, that if the aſſignment was made bona fide, it ſhall be good, and the term not liable to this execution; but if the leſſee for years had not aſſigned the term bona fide, but only in fraud to defeat the execution, and the aſſignee had bona fide aſſigned it to another, it ſhould not be liable to this execution in the hands of the aſſignee. Godb. 161.

Leaſe for years to commence after the death of a leſſee for life, who was diſſeiſed, but yet by that diſſeiſin the intereſt of the leſſee for years is not turned into a right, but remains as it did before the diſſeiſin, and therefore may be aſſigned. 2 Brownl. 224.

The vendor ſold a manor to another in fee; proviſo, that he, his heirs and aſſigns might dig ore in parcel of the waſte; the vendor afterwards aſſigned his intereſt to G. D. for twenty-one years, who aſſigned it to two more; adjudged, that this aſſignment was good. Godb. 17.

Bonds and ſpecialties may be aſſigned over, and therefore where A. was indebted to B. and B. was indebted to C. in ſuch caſe B. may aſſign the bond of A. to C. ſo where there is a bond for the performance of covenants in a leaſe, if the leſſee aſſigns the leaſe, he may likewiſe aſſign the bond; but this muſt be before any of the covenants are broken; but if any of the covenants are broken and the leſſee afterwards aſſigns the leaſe and bond, and the aſſignee puts the bond in ſuit, 'tis maintenance. Godb. 81.

Caſe againſt the defendant for aſſigning counterfeit bills of publick faith to the plaintiff to the value of 800*l.* upon demurrer to the declaration it was inſiſted for the defendant, that the plaintiff had declared of an aſſignment of papers, which could not be, for thoſe are things in action which are not aſſignable; but adjudged, that the ordinance of parliament gave authority to aſſign ſuch papers. Style 348.

The

The conuſee of a ſtatute extended the lands, and after the liberate returned he aſſigned his intereſt, but the conuſor ſtill continued in poſſeſſion; the queſtion was, whether this intereſt was aſſignable? it was inſiſted that it was, for before the actual entry of the conuſee, 'tis like an intereſſe termini, or the intereſt of one who hath a leaſe to commence in futuro; but adjudged, that it was not aſſignable, becauſe by the return of the extent, an intereſt was veſted in the conuſee, and by the return of the liberate it muſt be intended that he had the actual poſſeſſion, for the ſheriff returns quod liberari feci, ſo that the eſtate of the conuſee is turned into a right which may be granted; but it cannot be aſſigned, for the conuſor continuing in poſſeſſion makes a diſſeiſin. 2 Salk. 563.

'Tis enacted by the ſtatute 7 Jac. that a debtor to the King ſhall not aſſign any debts to him, but ſuch as did originally grow due to the debtor: afterwards there was a debtor to the huſband in 2000*l.* by a ſtatute; the huſband made his wife executrix, and died; ſhe married again one G. D. who was indebted to the King, and then the huſband and wife aſſigned this ſtatute to the King in ſatisfaction of the debt due to him; adjudged, that the aſſignment was good, for tho' the ſecond huſband had the ſtatute in right of his wife, and by conſequence the debt was not originally due to him; yet becauſe he might releaſe the ſtatute 'tis the ſame thing as if it had been originally taken in his name. 2 Cro. 324.

Grant of a releaſe for life pro concilio impendendo to the grantee and his aſſigns, payable yearly at the four feaſts, &c. this grant was aſſigned to another, who demanded the rent on the land; adjudged, this aſſignment was good. 7 Rep. 28.

Lands were ſettled to raiſe money for daughters portions; one of them married J. S. and died before her portion paid; J. S. took adminiſtration to her, and aſſigned all his intereſt to W. his ſon by a former venter. J. S. died, and W. ſued in equity for the money; it was inſiſted; that tho' choſes en action might on a conſideration be aſſigned here by the party that had the intereſt, and the aſſignee might recover them, and that the aſſignor's releaſe afterwards, unleſs without notice, and on conſideration paid to the releaſee, would not hurt the aſſignee, yet the aſſignment being by an adminiſtrator, and not by him that had it in his own right, this had never been good; for there might be a creditor of the inteſtate's to ſatisfy, &c. Lord Keeper thought there was a conſiderable difference between an aſſignment of the party and of the adminiſtrator, where the adminiſtrator was a ſtranger and had no precedent, and no colour of right, but merely by the adminiſtration; but that here the adminiſtration was pro forma only; for here J. S. had a right to the money, as a portion or proviſion for his wife, and every man has not ready money to give his daughters, but their portions are to be provided for by this means, and therefore it is reaſonable to advance or promote the eſtabliſhing of them, ſo as they may be diſpoſed by the huſband, (who ſettles a jointure) as money itſelf may be; and ſo decreed for the plaintiff. Chan. Ca. 170.

Bonds are aſſignable in Holland, and therefore aſſignments of bonds there, according to their cuſtom, are allowable here; by the Lord Keeper. Chan. Ca. 232.

One was to receive a proportion of damages from the town of Hamborough, and it was ſtipulated, that the town ſhould pay ſo much to the parties that had ſuffered; one whereof aſſigned his part or proportion of the reparation to another, notwithſtanding which, he afterwards received the money to his own uſe, whereupon the aſſignee brought covenant againſt him, and the words of the deed were only aſſignavit and tranſpoſuit; and tho' the thing in its nature was not aſſignable, yet it was enough to bind the aſſignor to ſuffer the aſſignee to enjoy it. 12 Mod. 554.

A bare power is not aſſignable, but where it is coupled with an intereſt it may be aſſigned; agreed per cur. as where a leaſe was made with power for leſſor, his heirs and aſſigns, to cut down, grub up and ſell trees; and leſſor granted ſome of the trees to J. S. who with his ſervants entered and cut them down; and it was objected, that this was a power annexed to the reverſion only, and not aſſignable: and that he might have juſtified under the leſſor, but not in his own right. But the court held, that an action doth lie in this caſe, both againſt the leſſor and his aſſignee acting under his power, for the leſſor might ſever the trees from the reverſion; whereupon judgment was given for the defendant. 2 Mod. 317.

Arrears of rent, &c. is a choſes en action, and not aſſignable. See Skin. 6.

It has been doubted if a leaſe for years before entry and poſſeſſion be aſſignable. See Show. 291.

The Lord Montjoy ſeiſed of the manor of Cauford in fee did, by deed indented and inrolled, bargain and ſell the ſame to Brown in fee, in which indenture this clauſe was contained; provided always, that the ſaid Brown did covenant and grant to and with the ſaid Lord Montjoy his heirs and aſſigns, that the Lord Montjoy, his heirs and aſſigns, might dig for ore in the lands (which were great waſte) parcel of the manor, and to dig turf alſo for the making of allum. Reſolved, that notwithſtanding this grant, Brown and his heirs and aſſigns might dig alſo; and like to the caſe of common ſauns nombre. Co. Lit. 164. b.

J. G. being poſſeſſed of a term of 2000 years deviſed the eſtate to M. his wife for 50 years if ſhe ſo long live and from and after her deceaſe to B. his ſon for 50 years, if he ſhould ſo long live, and from and after his deceaſe, to C. and D. his two grandchildren, for and during the reſidue and remainder of the ſaid term; C. aſſigns his intereſt in the life time of M. and B. and the queſtion was, whether this was ſuch an intereſt veſted in the life-time of M. and B. as was aſſignable in their life-time; it was argued, that it was a contingent intereſt till after the deceaſe of M. and B. and if ſo, altho' it be ſuch an intereſt veſted as cannot be defeated by the firſt deviſees, and ſuch as may be releaſed in their life-time, yet it cannot be aſſigned over; and ſeems to be the ſame caſe to this purpoſe, as Matthew Manning's caſe and Lampett's caſe; on the other ſide it was inſiſted, that there is but one part of the term carved out, viz. 50 years and 50 years, and the remainder of the term reſted in the deviſor, which he had power to deviſe as he thought fit, and the deviſee might aſſign over; and in Manning and Lampett's caſes, the whole term was deviſed to the party for life, and was in him during his life, and nothing but a poſſibility in the executory deviſee; and the Maſter of the Rolls was of that opinion, that this was an aſſignable intereſt, and that the moiety paſſed by the aſſignment, and decreed accordingly. 2 Freem. Rep. 238.

A poſſibility, right of entry, or thing in action, or cauſe of ſuit, or title for a condition broken, cannot be granted or aſſigned over by law; for if this were permitted, it would promote maintenance, and prove prejudicial to ſuch as, being able to contend with thoſe with whom the original contract was, might find themſelves depreſſed by a powerful adverſary. Co. Lit. 214. 1 Rol. Abr. 376. Skin. 6, 26.

But though a bond, being a choſe en action, cannot be aſſigned over ſo as to enable the aſſignee to ſue in his own name, yet he has by the aſſignment ſuch a title to the paper and wax, that he may keep or cancel it. Co. Lit. 232.

Alſo in equity a bond is aſſignable for a valuable conſideration paid, and the aſſignee alone becomes entitled to the money; ſo that if the obligor, after notice of the aſſignment, pays the money to the obligee, he will be compelled to pay it over again. 2 Vern. 595.

An aſſignee muſt take it ſubject to the ſame equity that it was in the hands of the obligee; as if on a marriage treaty the intended huſband enters into a marriage-brokage bond, which is afterwards aſſigned to creditors, yet it ſtill remains liable to the ſame equity, and is not to be carried into execution againſt the obligor. 2 Vern. 428.

An office of truſt is not grantable or aſſignable to another: and therefore it was adjudged, that the office of a filazer, which was an office of truſt, could not be aſſigned, and if it could not be aſſigned it cannot be extended upon a ſtatute. Dyer 7.

One, who had goods to the value of 30*l. and no more*, was indebted to one in 5*l.* and to another in 10*l.* and aſſigned all his goods to him to whom he owed 5*l.* to the intent, intent, that after he was ſatisfied, he would be kind to the debtor for the reſt; adjudged, that becauſe there was fraud in part, the aſſignment ſhall be void for the whole; but one judge was of opinion, that it ſhall be only void for the reſidue after the 5*l.* paid. Godb. 161.

A leaſe was made to the huſband and wife, and the children between them begotten, at the aſſignment of the huſband; they had then but one child, and afterwards many more; the wife died, and the huſband aſſigned the leaſe to his ſecond ſon, who was born after the making the leaſe, and for that reaſon it was void; becauſe the power which the huſband had aſſigned, extended only to ſuch children which he had at the time of the making the leaſe. 1 Leon. 287.

Adjudged, that ſome things in reſpect of their nature are not aſſignable, or to be granted over; as for inſtance, if the donee in tail holdeth of the donor by fealty, he cannot aſſign it over to another, becauſe fealty is incident to, and inſeparable from, the reverſion; ſo if the founder of a college grant his foundation, tho' it be to the King, the grant is void, becauſe 'tis inſeparable from his blood. 11 Rep. in Magdalen College's caſe.

Leſſee for ſix years of a tavern in London made an under-leaſe thereof for three years, in which it was covenanted between them, that the under-leſſee ſhould in every month during the ſaid three years account with the leſſor for all the wine ſold in that tavern, and ſhould pay to him per tun; afterwards the leſſor aſſigned the reſidue of the other three years to another, and he required the under-leſſee to accompt, who refuſing, he brought an action of covenant againſt him; who pleaded, that he had accompted to the aſſignee of the three years: and upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged againſt the defendant, becauſe this being a collateral covenant, and not one which did go with the land, it did not paſs by the aſſignment of the three years. Godb. 120.

If there be a deviſe of a term to A. for life, remainder to B. B. cannot in the life time of A. aſſign his intereſt, becauſe he has not a bare poſſibility, for A. may outlive the number of years. 10 Co. 47.

Several things are aſſignable by acts of parliament, which ſeem not aſſignable in their own nature; as promiſſary notes, by the 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. bail-bonds by the ſheriff, by 4 & 5 Ann. c 16. a judge's certificate for taking and proſecuting a felon to conviction, by 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. a bankrupt's effects by the ſeveral ſtatutes of bankruptcy.

2. Who ſhall be an aſſignee, and who not.

Under the word aſſigns, the aſſignee of an aſſignee in perpetuum, the heir of an aſſignee, or the aſſignee of an heir, ſhall take. Co. Lit. 384. b. So, if a man covenant with another, his executors and aſſigns, the aſſignee of an aſſignee, and his executors, and the aſſignee of an executor or adminiſtrator of every aſſignee are included, and ſhall have covenant. 5 Co. 17. b. But if an obligation be, to pay ſuch perſons as he ſhall name by his will or writing; there muſt be an expreſs nomination, and his executor ſhall not take as aſſignee. Mo. 855.

Leaſe to A. and B. for 99 years, if &c. rendring a heriot; A takes huſband and dies; agreed per 3 juſtices, that the huſband is aſſignee within the word (aſſigns) in the leaſe. 2 Lutw. 1367.

A. covenants for himſelf, his executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, to permit and ſuffer a thing to be done; this cannot extend but only to aſſignees after the covenant entred into. 2 Vent. 278.

A deviſee is an aſſignee in law; per cur. 2 Show. 59.

Where a power is coupled with an intereſt, an aſſignee of an executor of an aſſignee may take as aſſignee. 2 Show. 57.

Condition in a leaſe was, that neither he nor his aſſigns ſhould alien without licence; the leſſee died inteſtate; the adminiſtrator was bound by this condition; cited per Walmſley J. to have been ſo adjudged. Cro. El. 757. pl. 24.

The leſſee covenanted, that if he, his executors or aſſigns, did alien, then it ſhould be lawful for the leſſor to enter; he made his wife executrix, and died, ſhe married again, and then huſband and wife aliened the term; adjudged, that this ſecond huſband was an aſſignee in law of the firſt. Dyer 7.

The vendor covenanted with the vendee, that if he paid to him, or to his heirs or aſſigns 100*l.* before ſuch a day, that he and his heirs would ſtand ſeiſed of the lands to the uſe of the vendee and his heirs; before the day of payment came, the vendor having iſſue a ſon, made his will, and his wife executrix, and died; the widow renounced the executorſhip; adjudged, that the word aſſigns ſhall be intended aſſigns in fact, (viz.) aſſigns of the eſtate of the vendor, who had an eſtate aſſignable, and the law will never ſeek for an aſſignee in law (as an executor is) where there is an aſſignee in fact, as in this caſe the ſon was; but if the vendor had made a feoffment in fee, and not ſold his eſtate by a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed (as in this caſe), and if there had been a condition in ſuch feoffment, that the feoffee ſhould pay the purchaſe-money to the feoffor, his heirs or aſſigns, there, becauſe he had departed with his whole eſtate by the feoffment, and had nothing left but a naked condition, which could not be aſſigned over; the law will conſtrue what perſon is moſt apt and capable of receiving the money, as his aſſignee in law, and that is his executor, becauſe he repreſents the perſon of the teſtator in all goods and chattles, and in ſuch caſe the feoffor cannot have an aſſignee in fact. 5 Rep. 97.

Leſſee for years made an aſſignment of part of his term, and the aſſignee covenanted to repair; afterwards the leſſee deviſed the reverſion of the whole term to another, and died, and the deviſee brought an action of covenant againſt the aſſignee; adjudged, that this deviſe of the reverſion was an aſſignee to take the benefit of this covenant or condition within the ſtatute 32 H. 8. of conditions. Godb. 161.

An aſſignee of an aſſignee, an executor or adminiſtrator of an aſſignee, or an aſſignee of an executor, are comprehended under the word aſſigns, and theſe ſhall have an action of covenant for a breach of any covenant which runs with the land. 5 Rep. 16. Spencer's caſe.

Leſſee for years covenanted for himſelf and his aſſigns, that he would not lop the trees, &c. afterwards the leſſee died inteſtate, and adminiſtration was granted to W. R. who lopped the trees, &c. adjudged, that it was a breach of the covenant, for an adminiſtrator is an aſſignee as well as an executor. Moor 44.

Feoffment in fee, reſerving rent, ſuit of court and relief, and that if the feoffee, his heirs or aſſigns, ſhould be ſued for more ſervices than were reſerved, &c. that then they might diſtrain in the manor of D. and keep the diſtreſs till they ſhould be ſatisfied for the damages which they had ſuſtained, &c. afterward the feoffee made a feoffment, &c. to W. R. the queſtion was, if W. R. might diſtrain in the manor of D. to have recompence for damages, &c. and adjudged, that he might by virtue of the word aſſigns; but if that word had been left out, the word heirs would warrant the diſtreſs as an aſſignee. Moor 179.

Leſſee for life made a leaſe for ſeventeen years, who in the next year aſſigned the term to B. who made a leaſe to W. R. for fourteen years, rendring rent on certain days, and if it be behind for three days after, being lawfully demanded, and not paid, the leaſe ſhall be void; he in the reverſion for 17 years, granted all his eſtate and intereſt by deed parol to one Rowland, who demanded the rent, and entered for non-payment; one queſtion was, whether at Common Law, without the help of the ſtatute 32 H. 8. of conditions, the aſſignee of him in reverſion could take the ſame advantage of this leaſe, being void, as the aſſignee of the term himſelf might have done, who granted the leaſe for 14 years? and adjudged, that he might by the grant of all his eſtate, if it had been in writing, and that by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. the grantee of the reverſion of a term ſhall have the benefit of a condition annexed to a leſſer term derived out of a larger. Moor 525.

Leſſee for twenty years made a leaſe for four years to W. R. in which he covenanted to deliver up the land peaceably to the leſſor, his executors, adminiſtrators or aſſigns, aſſigns, at the end of the term; afterwards the leſſor for twenty years granted the reverſion of that term (after the expiration of the four years) to the plaintiff, to whom the leſſee for four years attorned, and afterwards an action of covenant was brought againſt him by the aſſignee of the reverſion, and the breach aſſigned was, that he had not delivered up the land peaceably at the end of the four years; the defendant confeſſed both the leaſes of twenty years and four years, but pleaded, that before the aſſignment of the reverſion to the plaintiff, he the ſaid defendant had aſſigned over the term for four years to another; and upon demurrer adjudged, that the aſſignee of a reverſion of a term ſhall take advantage of a covenant againſt the leſſee of an inferior term, by virtue of the ſtatute 32 H. 8. Moor 527. Mathuris verſus Weſtoray.

Leſſee for ninety years covenanted with the leſſor, that he would not alien, &c. unleſs to his wife, or her aſſigns, during her life; in this caſe the queſtion was, that ſince the huſband could not alien to his wife, becauſe during the coverture he cannot give any thing to her, whether, if he deviſed it to her for life, ſuch a deviſee was an aſſignee within this covenant? The point was not reſolved. 2 Bulſt. 292.

Huſband and wife were ſeiſed of lands to them and the heirs of the huſband, and they made a leaſe thereof to the defendant, who covenanted with them and the heirs of the huſband to repair; afterwards the huſband and wife aſſigned the reverſion to the plaintiff, who, as aſſignee to the huſband alone, brought an action of covenant againſt the leſſee for not repairing, without averring, that the wife was dead; it was objected, that the plaintiff having an eſtate from both huſband and wife he ſhould have brought the action as aſſignee to both; but adjudged, that it was well brought as aſſignee to him who had the inheritance. Cro. Car. 285.

Leſſee for years covenanted for himſelf a nd*aſſigns to pay the rent* ſo long as he or they ſhall be in poſſeſſion of the lands demiſed; he afterwards aſſigned his term to another; the leaſe expired, and the aſſignee continued in poſſeſſion; the rent became due after the term ended, and the leſſor brought an action againſt the aſſignee; adjudged, that though he is not an aſſignee ſtrictly within the rules of law after the term was ended, yet he ſhall be ſuch an aſſignee as ſhall be liable to perform the covenant for payment of rent. Style 407.

Leaſe for years, reſerving rent; the leſſor aſſigned the reverſion, and the aſſignee brought an action of covenant againſt the leſſee; the queſtion was, whether it ought to be brought in the county where the lands lie; it was argued, that the action is tranſitory, becauſe the ſtatute 32 H. 8. cap. 34. which gives the action of covenant to an aſſignee of the reverſion, ſaith, that he ſhall have in like manner as the leſſor might: Now, if it had been brought by the leſſor, it had been tranſitory. On the other ſide it was argued, that the ſtatute did not give the remedy as a mere choſe in action, which is tranſitory; but knit it to the reverſion, and that by the words, that the aſſignee of the reverſion ſhall have action in like manner as the leſſor might; that the like remedy in ſubſtance. Adjornatur. 1 Vent. 10.

Leaſe to B. G. for eighty years, if he ſhould ſo long live, remainder after his death to his executors or aſſigns for forty years; afterwards the leſſee died inteſtate and adminiſtration was granted to his widow, who by virtue thereof claimed the term of forty years, and being diſturbed, ſhe brought an action on the caſe; adjudged, that an adminiſtrator is not an aſſignee, for he is appointed by the ordinary, and aſſigns muſt be by the act of the party himſelf and not by a ſtranger. Owen 125.

In a warrantia chartæ, &c. there was a demurrer, and it was adjudged, that the word heirs doth not imply aſſignees, becauſe he is heir who comes to a thing by deſcent, which is the act of God, by the death of the anceſtor; but an aſſignee is he who comes to the thing by the act of the party; and ſometimes an aſſignee, though appointed by the party, hath his authority from another as an executor. 1 And. 299.

The condition of a bond was, that the obligor ſhould pay 20 l. to ſuch perſon, or his aſſigns, as the obligee ſhould by her laſt will appoint; in an action of debt brought againſt the obligor by the executor of the obligee, he pleaded, that the obligee did not appoint any perſon to receive the money; the plaintiff replied, that ſhe made her will, by which they were appointed her executors; and upon demurrer to this replication, it was adjudged, that this money is not payable to the plaintiffs as executors; for though it is true, that where a teſtamentary thing is to be done to a man or his aſſigns, it muſt be done to the executor where there is no actual aſſignee, becauſe the word aſſigns ſtands indifferent as well to aſſigns in fact as in law; yet in this caſe the word aſſigns muſt neceſſarily intend aſſigns in fact, and not in law, as an executor is, and the rather, becauſe the word to pay carrieth a property with it, (viz.) that the money muſt be paid to the proper uſe of that perſon who ſhall be appointed to receive it. Hob. 9.

Upon a fine the uſe of lands was limited to A. for 80 years, with a power to A. and his aſſigns to make leaſes for three lives to commence after the determination of the ſaid term. A. aſſigns over to B. B. dies, and makes C. his executor, who aſſigns over to D. who made the leaſe for life, which was the eſtate in queſtion. And the queſtion was, whether or no D. was ſuch an aſſignee of A. as had power to make this leaſe? or whether it ſhould extend only to the immediate aſſignees of A. and the doubt in this cauſe was the greater, becauſe here was a deſcent upon an executor, who made the eſtate over to him, who makes the leaſe, and the caſe in Hob. 9. Peaſe v. Styleman, [the preceding caſe] was cited, where an executor or an adminiſtrator in ſome caſes ſhall not be ſaid to be a ſpecial aſſignee; but all the court ſeemed to incline to the contrary; and that D. ſhall be ſaid an aſſignee well enough to this purpoſe, and ſo ſhall any perſon that comes to the eſtate under the firſt leſſee, though there be 20 meſne aſſignments; and afterwards, in Mich. following, judgment was given accordingly. Freem. Rep. 476.

3. Where aſſignee ſhall be bound by the covenant of the aſſignor.

The aſſignee of a term is bound to perform all the covenants annexed to the eſtate; as if A. leaſes lands to B. and B. covenants to pay the rent, repair houſes &c. during the ſaid term, and B. aſſigns to J. S. the aſſignee is bound to perform the covenants during the life of the firſt leſſee, though the aſſignee be not named, becauſe the covenant runs with the land, being made for the maintenance of a thing in eſſe at the time of the leaſe made. 1 Rol. Abr. 521. Cro. Eliz. 457. Moor 399. 5 Co. 24.

But if A. leaſes for years to B. and B. for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, covenants with A. to build a wall upon a part of land demiſed, and after B. aſſigns, the aſſignee is not bound by this covenant; for the law will not annex the covenant to a thing not in eſſe. 5 Co. 15.

But if B. had covenanted for him and his aſſigns to build the wall, &c. this would have bound the aſſignee, becauſe it is to be done upon the land, and the aſſignee is to have the benefit thereof. 5 Co. 15.

The leſſee covenanted for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, to leave fifteen acres every year for paſture, without plowing it, and afterwards he aſſigned his leaſe to the defendant, againſt whom an action of covenant was brought for not leaving fifteen acres in paſture, &c. and upon a demurrer to the declaration it was inſiſted for the defendant, that he was not bound by this covenant, becauſe he was not aſſignee of the leſſee, who had covenanted only for his executors and adminiſtrators, and not for his aſſigns, for they were not named in the covenant; but adjudged, this covenant binds them, though not named, becauſe it is for the benefit of the eſtate; but it had been otherwiſe if it had been to do a collateral act, as to build de novo, or the like, for in ſuch caſes the aſſigns of the covenantor are not bound, unleſs named. 2 Cro. 125.

Where the executor of a leſſee aſſigns the term, debt will not lie againſt him for rent incurred after the aſſignment, becauſe there is neither privity of contract between the leſſor and the executor, before the aſſignment, nor privity of eſtate, after the aſſignment, and this was Verton and Sydalis's dalis's caſe; but where the leſſee himſelf aſſigns his leaſe, in ſuch caſe the privity of contract ſtill remains between him and the leſſor, though the privity of eſtate is gone by the aſſignment, and therefore, notwithſtanding that aſſignment, he ſhall be chargeable during his life, but after his death the privity of contract is likewiſe determined. 3 Rep. 24.

If leſſee for years covenants for him and his aſſigns to rebuild and finiſh a houſe within ſuch a time, and after the time expired, the leſſee aſſigns over the premiſſes, the houſe not being built and finiſhed according to the covenant; this covenant ſhall not bind the aſſignee, becauſe it was broke before the aſſignment; aliter if broke after; as if the leſſee had aſſigned before the time expired. 1 Salk. 199.

Alſo though the covenant be for him and his aſſigns, yet if the thing to be done be merely collateral, and no way concern the thing demiſed, the covenant ſhall not bind the aſſignee; as if it be to build an houſe upon other land of the leſſor or to pay a collateral ſum. 5 Co. 15.

So if a man demiſes ſheep or other perſonal thing for a certain time, and the leſſee covenants for him and his aſſigns at the end of the term, to deliver ſuch ſheep, &c. or the price of them, and the leſſee aſſigns them over, the aſſignee ſhall not be bound by the covenant; for it is but a perſonal contract, and there is not ſuch privity as between leſſor and leſſee of land and his aſſigns. 5 Co. 16. b. 17. a.

The ſtatute 32 H. 8. enables grantees of reverſions to enter for conditions broken, and to bring actions of covenant, &c. and alſo enables the tenants of particular eſtates as for life, &c. to have actions of covenant againſt their grantees; the queſtion was, if a leſſee for life covenant for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, to build a wall on the lands, and afterwards he aſſigns the eſtate to W. R. whether he or the grantee of the reverſion may have an action of covenant againſt W. R. the aſſignee, if the wall is not built; and adjudged, that he may, though the word aſſigns was not in this covenant, but only executors and adminiſtrators; for by the acceptance of the poſſeſſion he had made himſelf ſubject to all the covenants which run with the land, and are inherent to it. Such as paying rent, repairing, building walls, &c. and to ſuch he is bound without the ſpecial word aſſigns, but not to any collateral covenants. Moor 159.

Leſſee for forty years made a leaſe for three years to one Calice, wherein he covenanted, that he would keep a wine cellar and ſell wine there, and accompt every month, upon requeſt, to the leſſor or his aſſigns for all wines ſold, and would pay him 30*s.* for every ton ſold; then the leſſor granted the reverſion to W. R. who required Calice the leſſee to accompt, &c. and upon his refuſal brought an action of debt upon the bond for performance of covenants; and upon demurrer it was objected, that the grantee of the reverſion could not have this action, becauſe to accompt is a collateral benefit, and therefore not within the ſtatute 32 H. 8. for the money ariſing upon the accompt is not a rent, or a thing incident to the reverſion; on the other ſide, it was argued, that though it is not a rent, yet it is an advantage inherent to the thing demiſed, ſo that the grantee of the reverſion is aiding by the ſtatute, for though this payment is collateral, yet it paſſes to the aſſignee by the word aſſigns. Moor 243.

In a ſpecial verdict in an action of debt for rent, the jury found, that the leſſor being ſeiſed both of freehold and copyhold lands made a leaſe of both to W. R. rendring rent, and that W. R. the leſſee aſſigned the term to the defendant; and afterwards by a grant of the freehold and ſurrender of the copyhold, conveyed the reverſion to the plaintiff, but firſt he made a releaſe to W. R. the leſſee of all demands; and in an action of debt for rent brought by the grantee of the reverſion againſt the aſſignee of the term, the queſtion was, whether the rent was extinguiſhed by this releaſe, and adjudged that it was not, becauſe the releaſe was made after the aſſignment of the term; it is true, it was made before the grant of the reverſion, but it being after the aſſignment of the term, the leſſor in ſuch caſe had his election, either to charge the leſſee or aſſignee, and it ſhall be intended that he would have charged the aſſignee for rent incurred after the releaſe given to the leſſee. Moor 544.

If leſſee for years, for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, covenants with his leſſor to leave fifteen acres every year for paſture, abſque cultura, and afterwards the leſſee aſſigns; the aſſignee, though not named, muſt perform the covenant; becauſe it is for the benefit of the eſtate, according to the nature of the ſoil; but a collateral covenant, as to build de novo, &c. ſhall not bind him, unleſs named. Cro. Jac. 125.

If A. demiſes to B. ſeveral parcels of land, and the leſſee covenant, for him and his aſſigns, to repair, &c. and after the leſſee aſſigns to D. all his eſtate in parcel of the land demiſed, and D. does not repair that to him aſſigned, the leſſor may have an action of covenant againſt D. the aſſignee. 1 Rol. Abr. 522.

If a man leaſes for years, and the leſſee covenants for him and his aſſigns, to pay the rent ſo long as he and they have the poſſeſſion of the thing let, and the leſſee aſſigns, and the term expires, and the aſſignee continues the poſſeſſion afterwards; an action of covenant will lie againſt him for rent behind after the expiration of the term; and tho' he is not an aſſignee ſtrictly according to the rules of law; yet he ſhall be accounted ſuch an aſſignee as is to perform the covenants. Style 407.

If A. leaſes to B. and B. covenants to repair, &c. and he aſſigns to J. S. who dies inteſtate, the premiſes being out of repair, the leſſor may bring covenant againſt his adminiſtrator as aſſignee, and declare that he made a leaſe to B. &c. cujus ſtatus et reſiduum termini annorum, &c. devenit, &c. per aſſignationem to the adminiſtrator. Carth. 519.

In covenant &c. for non-payment of rent, the plaintiff declared, that the lady Purbeck was ſeiſed of lands in fee, and that ſhe demiſed the ſame to the defendant, who covenanted to pay, &c. and that afterwards the ſaid lady, by indenture, for the conſideration therein mentioned, granted the reverſion to the plaintiff, to which grant the defendant attorned, and for rent arrear this action was brought in the county where the lands lie, as it ought, and by the grantee of the reverſion againſt the leſſee, with a profert hic in curia Indenturam, but it was entered in hæc verba; the defendant pleaded, that he aſſigned his term to J. S. before the plaintiff had any intereſt in the lands, but did not ſet forth, that the plaintiff accepted the rent from the aſſignee, or that he had any notice of the aſſignment; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, becauſe the action lies by the grantee of the reverſion againſt the leſſee, even after the aſſignment of the term, and this upon his expreſs covenant to pay the rent: but becauſe the plaintiff did not declare to whoſe uſe the grant of the reverſion was, nor upon what conſideration, but only generally, upon conſideration in the indenture mentioned, the judgment was ſtayed. 3 Lev. 233.

Debt for rent againſt an executor, who pleaded an aſſignment of the term, and an acceptance of the rent of the aſſignee by the leſſor; the parties were at iſſue upon the acceptance, and the plaintiff had a verdict, but he could never get judgment, becauſe part of the rent became due pending the action. Palm. 524.

An action of debt was brought by the leſſor againſt the adminiſtrator of the leſſee, who pleaded, that before any rent became due, he aſſigned the term to another; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was adjudged, that the adminiſtrator ſhould be charged in an action of debt in the detinet, upon the contract of his inteſtate, and ſhou'd pay as far as he had aſſets, though he had aſſigned over the term, becauſe the privity of contract ſtill remained between the leſſor and ſuch adminiſtrator of the leſſee: and this was Helier and Caſbard's caſe. Sidd. 266.

Leaſe for ninety-nine years, if three lives ſo long ſhould live; this leaſe was aſſigned to the defendant, there being a rent reſerved upon it, and the reverſion after the determination of the eſtate for lives was granted to the plaintiff, who brought an action of debt againſt the aſ-

ſignee

ſignee of the term, for the rent; and upon a demurrer to the declaration the plaintiff had judgment, not upon the merits, but becauſe the defendant did not argue his demurrer; the fault in the declaration was, that ſince the plaintiff was intitled to the rent as a grantee of the reverſion, he ought to be ſo named in the writ, which he was not. 1 Lutw. 478.

4. Where aſſignee ſhall not be bound by the covenant of the aſſignor.

A leaſe was made to one, who afterwards died inteſtate, and an action of debt was brought againſt the defendant as adminiſtrator, for rent arrear after the death of the inteſtate; the adminiſtrator pleaded, that before any rent became due he aſſigned the term to another, and that the leſſor had notice thereof, aud had afterwards accepted rent of the aſſignee; and upon demurrer to this plea it was adjudged, that the adminiſtrator was no longer chargeable after he had made this aſſignment. Cro. Eliz. 715.

Leaſe for years made by a prebendary, rendring rent, the leſſee died, and his executor aſſigned the term, and in an action of debt brought againſt that exccutor for rent incurred after the aſſignment, it was adjudged, that ſuch action would not lie; 'tis true, the executor would have been chargeable if he had not made this aſſignment; not upon any privity of contract, for there was none between him and the leſſor, but upon a privity in law, as having the eſtate of the leſſee, if he had not aſſigned it to another, but by the aſſignment the privity of eſtate was gone from him. Cro. Eliz. 555.

Leaſe of a ſtock of cattle, and the leſſee covenanted for himſelf and his aſſigns, to deliver them at the end of the term in as good a condition as he found them, or to pay ſo much money; afterwards the leſſee aſſigned both the term and the ſtock to another; adjudged, in an action brought againſt the aſſignee, that he was not bound by this covenant of his leſſee, becauſe 'tis a perſonal contract between him and the leſſor, and therefore it binds only the leſſee, and thoſe who repreſent him, which are his executors and adminiſtrators, but not his aſſigns, becauſe there is no privity of contract between them and the leſſor. This is the third reſolution in 5 Rep. 16. b. Spencer's caſe.

Leſſee for years covenanted with the leſſor to pay yearly during the term, 20*s.* to the church wardens of the pariſh church of S. and to repair the houſes, &c. he afterwards aſſigned the term; and in an action brought againſt the aſſignee for non-payment of the yearly rent, there was judgment againſt him; but upon a writ of error it was reverſed, becauſe the covenant for payment of this rent being not to the leſſor himſelf but to the churchwardens, &c. 'tis for that reaſon a mere collateral covenant, and therefore the aſſignee is not chargeable with it. 2 Cro. 439.

Leaſe for years rendring rent, the leſſee died, his executrix aſſigned the term to another; and in an action of debt for rent brought againſt the aſſignee, he pleaded that before any rent became due he aſſigned the term to another; adjudged, that the action did not lie, becauſe when the executor of the leſſee made an aſſignment of the term, the privity of contract was gone, for there could be none between the leſſor and the aſſignee of the executor of the leſſee; and when that aſſignee had made a further aſſignment to another, then the privity of eſtate was likewiſe gone, ſo that there was nothing to ſupport the action. 3 Lev. 295.

Leſſee for years covenanted to repair, &c. and afterwards he aſſigned the term, and the leſſor likewiſe aſſigned the reverſion; adjudged, that the aſſignee of the reverſion ſhall maintain an action of covenant againſt the leſſee himſelf, or againſt the aſſignee for not repairing, becauſe this is a covenant which runs with the land, and not a collateral covenant. 2 Cro. 399.

Leaſe for years, rendring rent, the leſſor aſſigned the reverſion to the plaintiff, who brought an action of debt for rent; the defendant pleaded, that the leſſor demiſed the land prout, &c. and that by the ſame deed he covenanted with the leſſee, that if he ſhould be at any charge for iſſues loſt, in ſuch caſe he ſhould retain ſo much of the rent as he ſhould be forced to pay; then he ſet forth, that iſſues were loſt, and that the ſheriff levied ſo much, &c. and that he retained the like ſum of the rent; and upon demurrer to this plea, the queſtion was, that this action being brought by the aſſignee of the reverſion againſt the aſſignee of the term, whether ſuch an aſſignee could have any remedy upon this covenant by way of retainer; and adjudged, that he might, both at Common-law, and by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. becauſe it was a covenant which runs with the land. Cro. Car. 97, 137.

Feoffments, &c. in which the feoffor covenanted to make farther aſſurance; afterwards the feoffee aſſigned his intereſt to the plaintiff, who brought an action of covenant againſt the feoffor for not levying a fine to make a farther aſſurance; adjudged, that the aſſignee ſhould have the benefit of this covenant, becauſe it runs with the lands. Cro. Car. 361, 503.

Covenant by the aſſignee of the reverſion for rent arrear after the aſſignment of the leaſe on which the rent was reſerved; the defendant pleaded, that before any rent was due, the leſſor had releaſed to him (the defendant) all covenants and demands; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was held, that this releaſe, after the aſſignment made by the leſſor, did not bar the aſſignee from this action of covenant, becauſe it was a covenant which runs with the reverſion. T. Jones 102.

An aſſignee of a reverſion brought an action of debt for rent; the defendant pleads, that before any rent became due, he aſſigned the term to another; and upon demurrer to this plea, the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe the defendant did not ſet forth in his plea, that he gave notice to the plaintiff that he had aſſigned the term; Twiſden of a contrary opinion. Raym. 162.

Covenant, &c. againſt the defendant as aſſignee of one John Vaux, and the breach aſſigned was, that neither the ſaid John Vaux in his life-time, nor the defendant ſince his death, (whoſe aſſignee he is) had kept the fences, &c. in repair; the defendant pleads, that he and the aſſigns of John Vaux had kept the fences in repair, and upon this they were at iſſue, and the plaintiff had a verdict, but could never get judgment, becauſe an action of covenant doth not lie againſt an aſſignee for a breach of that covenant in the life-time of the aſſignee; and this breach being aſſigned for a default done, as well in the life-time of the aſſignor, as by the defendant ſince his death, and intire damages given, it muſt be wrong. 1 Lutw. 360.

In a ſpecial verdict in ejectment, the caſe was, leaſe for years, upon condition, that the leſſee ſhould not aſſign the term to any but to his kindred, without licence of the leſſor; afterwards the leſſor granted the reverſion to T. P. and the leſſee aſſigned the term to one who was not of kindred to him; the better opinion was, that this was a collateral condition, according to Pennant's caſe, and that 'tis ſuch a condition as is within the ſtatute 32 H. 8. cap. 34. of which the grantee of the reverſion may take any advantage for the breach thereof. Raym. 850.

The leſſee covenanted for himſelf and his aſſigns, to rebuild and finiſh a houſe before ſuch a time, which he did not do, but after the time was expired, he aſſigned the term; adjudged, that this covenant will not bind the aſſignee, becauſe it was broken before the aſſignment made. 1 Salk. 199.

In a ſpecial verdict in debt, the caſe was, the leſſor being ſeiſed in fee made a leaſe to T. S. for ſeven years; the leſſee re-demiſes the lands to the leſſor for the whole ſeven years, reſerving the rent of 20*l.* per annum; the leſſor died, his widow entered as guardian to the ſon and heir of the leſſor, and receives the profits, and the rent not being paid, T. S. the leſſee brought an action of debt againſt her as executrix de ſon tort, in the debet and detinet; it was admitted, that an action of debt would lie upon the contract where the whole term is aſſigned, and that there might be an executor de ſon tort of a term of years; but per curiam, It will lie againſt one in the debet and detinet, as executor de ſon tort, where there is no term at all, as in this caſe; for when the leſſee aſſigned the whole term back to the leſſor, this was a ſurrender in law; and if ſo, then then it lies upon the contract of the teſtator only, and by conſequence 'tis wrong againſt the defendant in the debet and detinet. 2 Mod. 174.

Aſſimulare, To put highways together: It is mentioned in Leg. H. 1. c. 8. De via regia, viz. tanta vero debet eſſe, ut inibi duo carri ſibi poſſint obviare, et bubulci de longo ſtumbli ſui poſſint aſſimulare, &c. Cowell.

Aſſiſa cadere. To be nonſuited. In what caſes ſuch nonſuit is ſuffered, ſee Fleta, lib. 4. c. 15. and lib. 5. c. 6.

Aſſiſa, Capi in modum aſſiſæ, that is, when the defendant pleads to the aſſiſe without taking any exception to the count, declaration, or writ. Cowell.

Aſſiſa cadit, That is, when there is ſuch a plain and legal inſufficiency, that the complainant can proceed no farther in it. Fleta, lib. 4. c. 15. Cowell.

Aſſiſa cadit in juratam, Is where the thing in controverſy is ſo doubtful, that it muſt neceſſarily be tried by a jury. Fleta, lib. 4. c. 15. Bracton, lib. 2. c. 7.

Aſſiſa continuanda, Is a writ directed to the juſtices aſſigned to take an aſſiſe, for the continuance of the cauſe, in caſe where certain records alledged cannot in time be procured by the party that would uſe them. Reg. of Writs, fo. 217.

Aſſiſa panis et cervifiæ, The power or priviledge of aſſiſing or adjuſting the weights and meaſures of bread and beer; as the weight of bread preſcribed by the magiſtrate is ſtill called the ſize or aſſize of bread: So half a cruſt or farthing-bread is in Cambridge called a ſize of bread; and a ſervitor is there a ſizor, or one who is to live upon ſuch an aſſized allowance: Hence to ſize, i. e. to match cloths, ſilks, &c. or to get ſome of the ſame aſſize or proportion: Hence ſize for height and ſtature. Sizely in the North is proud and coy. Cowell, ed. 1727.

Aſſiſa proroganda, Is a writ directed to the juſtices of aſſize, to ſtay proceeding by reaſon of the King's buſineſs, wherein the party is employed. Reg. of Writs, fol. 208, & 221. Cowell, ed. 1727.

Aſſiſe, (Fr. Aſſis) According to our antient books, is defined to be an aſſembly of knights, and other ſubſtantial men, with the bailiff or juſtice in a certain place, and at a certain time appointed. Cuſtom. Normand. cap. 24. This word is properly derived from the Latin verb aſſideo, to ſit together; and is alſo taken for the court, place or time, when and where the writs and proceſſes of aſſiſe are handled or taken. And in this ſignification aſſiſe is general; as when the juſtices go their ſeveral circuits with commiſſion to take all aſſiſes; or ſpecial, where a ſpecial commiſſion is granted to certain perſons, (formerly oftentimes done) for taking an aſſiſe upon one or two diſſeiſins only. Bract. lib. 5. Cowell.

Concerning

Concerning the general aſſiſe, all the counties of England are divided into ſix circuits, and two judges are aſſigned by the King's commiſſion to every circuit, who hold their aſſiſes twice a year in every county, (except Middleſex, where the King's courts of record do ſit, and where his courts for his counties palatine are held) and have five ſeveral commiſſions. 1. Of oyer and terminer, directed to them and many other gentlemen of the county, by which they are empowered to try treaſons, felonies, &c. and this is the largeſt commiſſion they have. 2. Of gaol-delivery, directed to the judges and the clerk of aſſiſe aſſociate, which gives them power to try every priſoner in the gaol committed for any offence whatſoever, but none but priſoners in the gaol; ſo that one way or other they rid the gaol of all the priſoners in it. 3. Of aſſiſe, directed to themſelves only and the clerk of aſſiſe, to take aſſiſes and do right upon writs of aſſiſe brought before them by ſuch as are wrongfully thruſt out of their lands and poſſeſſions: which writs were heretofore frequent, but now men's poſſeſſions are ſooner recovered by ejectments, &c. 4. Of niſi prius, directed to the judges and clerk of aſſiſe, by which civil cauſes grown to iſſue in the courts above, are tried in the vacation by a jury of twelve men of the county where the cauſe of action ariſes; and on return of the verdict of the jury to the court above, the judges there give judgment. 5. A commiſſion of the peace, in every county of the circuits; and all juſtices of the peace of the county are bound to be preſent at the aſſiſes; and ſheriffs are alſo to give their attendance on the judges, or they ſhall be fined. Bacon's Elem. 15, 16, &c.

There is a commiſſion of the peace, oyer and terminer and gaol-delivery of Newgate, held ſeveral times in a year, for the city of London and county of Middleſex, at Juſtice-Hall in the Old Baily, where the lord mayor is the chief judge. In Wales there are but two circuits, North and South Wales; for each of which the King appoints two perſons learned in the laws to be judges. Stat. 18 Eliz. cap. 8. If juſtices ſit by force of a commiſſion, and do not adjourn the commiſſion, it is determined. 4 Inſt. 265. The conſtitution of the juſtices of aſſiſe, was begun by Hen. 2. though ſomewhat different from what they now are: And by Magna Charta, juſtices ſhall be ſent through every county once a year, who with the knights of the reſpective ſhires ſhall take aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, &c. in their proper ſhires, and what cannot be determined there, ſhall be ended by them in ſome other place in their circuit; and if it be too difficult for them, it ſhall be referred to the juſtices of the bench, there to be ended. 9 Hen. 3. cap. 12. Juſtices of aſſiſe, &c. are to hold their ſeſſions in the chief towns of the county; and their records to be ſent into the Exchequer. 6 R. 2. 9 Ed. 3. By ſtat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 12. the ſummer aſſiſes in Buckinghamſhire ſhall be held at the town of Buckingham. Aſſiſe is likewiſe uſed for a jury, by whom aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin are tried. Lit. cap. Rents. The panels of aſſiſes ſhall be arrayed, and a copy indented delivered by the ſheriff, &c. if demanded, on pain of 40*l.* by ſtatute 6 Hen. 6. cap. 2. And aſſiſe is taken for a writ for recovery of poſſeſſion of things immoveable, whereof any one and his anteſtors have been diſſeiſed. Likewiſe in another ſenſe, it ſignifies an ordinance or ſtatute. Reg. Orig. 279. Lit. cap. Rents. Termes de la ley. And there are four writs of aſſiſe: An aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, an aſſiſe of mortd'anceſtor, an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, and an aſſiſe of juris utrum. Co. Lit. 155. a.

Aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, (Aſſiſa novæ diſſeiſinæ.) Lies where tenant in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for term of life, is put out and diſſeiſed of his lands, or tenements, rents, common of paſture, common way, or of an office, toll, &c. Glanv. lib. 10. c. 2. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 1. Britt. c. 70. Reg. Orig. fo. 197. F. N. B. fo. 177, 178, 179.

An aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin is a remedy maxime feſtinum, for the recovery of lands or tenements, of which the party was diſſeiſed. 2 Inſt. 410. And it is called novel diſſeiſin, becauſe the juſtices in eyre went their circuits from ſeven years to ſeven years; and no aſſiſe was allowed before them, which commenced before the laſt circuit, which was called an ancient aſſiſe; and that which was upon a diſſeiſin ſince the laſt circuit, an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. Co. Lit. 153. b.

An aſſiſe is called feſtinum remedium. 1. Becauſe the tenant ſhall not be eſſoined. 2. Shall not caſt a protection. 3. Shall not pray in aid of the King. 4. Shall not vouch any ſtranger, except he be preſent, and will enter preſently into warranty; ſo of receipt. 5. The parol ſhall not demur for the nonage of the plaintiff or defendant. 8 Co. 50. Booth 262.

1. In what caſes an aſſiſe lieth.

2. Who may have an aſſiſe, and againſt whom, and where it lieth.

3. Proceedings and pleadings in aſſiſe.

1. In what caſes an aſſiſe lieth.

An aſſiſe lies for any thing a præcipe quod reddat may be brought for at Common law; therefore it lies for an office. 2 Inſt. 8 Co. 47. b.

It lies for one ſeiſed of lands, tenements, rents in fee-ſimple, tail, or for life, and for tenant by elegit, ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or tenant by recognizance in nature of a ſtatute ſtaple. It lies of tithes, penſions, and other eccleſiaſtical duties in temporal hands, but of a rent iſſuing out of tithes barely, no aſſiſe lies. See Co. Lit. 159. 32 Hen. 8. c. 7. Vaugh. 204.

There were at firſt but two forms of writs of aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, either an aſſiſe de libero tenemento, or de communia paſturæ.

The aſſiſe de libero tenemento did lie of houſes, land, rent, or other things which lay in render, but for profits apprender, which conſiſted in capiendo, colligendo, habendo, recipiendo & exercendo, no aſſiſe lay, but a quod permittat, in which there was great delay, and they who had but an eſtate for life could not maintain that writ. 2 Inſt. 411. But now by the ſtatute Weſt. 2. c. 25. a ſpeedy remedy is given in theſe caſes de proficuis, &c. in certo loco capiend', &c.

There were but two writs of aſſiſe at common law, (viz.) an aſſiſe of common of paſture for cattle, and an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, the laſt of which doth lie for ſeveral things, viz. lands, rents, offices, tithes, and generally for every thing of which a præcipe quod reddat did lie, and in ſome caſes where ſuch præcipe did not lie; as for inſtance, de uno croſto, becauſe it may be put in view to the recognitors, i. e. to the jury. 2 Bulſt. 214.

An aſſiſe will lie in ſome caſes where treſpaſs vi & armis will not; as where a tenant holds of his lord, by rendring rent and ſervices, and the lord enters, and ſo often diſtrains, tho' nothing is due, that the tenant is diſturbed in the manuring his lands; in ſuch caſe he may have an aſſiſe de ſovent foits diſtreſs; but he cannot have treſpaſs vi & armis againſt his lord, becauſe he is prohibited by the ſtatute of Marlbridge, cap. 3. See Bevill's caſe. 'Tis true, there was no remedy at Common law for theſe profits apprender in alieno ſolo, for an aſſiſe in ſuch caſes was given by the ſtatute Weſtm. 2. cap. 15. and ever ſince it lieth of eſtovers, to be taken in the woods of another, of nuts and acorns to be taken in ſuch woods, of a corody of the ſeveral ſorts of tolls; all which a man may likewiſe have in his own lands, and yet, if he be diſſeiſed of them he may have an aſſiſe; ſo of pontage, paſſage, pannage, and ſuch like things. 8 Rep. 47.

It lies where men are diſſeiſed of their offices of profit, and therefore an aſſiſe was brought, wherein the demandant counted de officio magiſtri ludorum pilarum palmarum domini regis Angliæ, the office of maſter of the King's tennis plays, that is, of the tennis plays of the King's houſhold, and only when the King himſelf plays in perſon; for the grant of the office ſhall have a reaſonable conſtruction, and the aſſiſe ſhall be de officio cum pertinentiis, where a man is diſſeiſed of the whole office, but where only of part, he ſhall have an aſſiſe of that part, and no more. 8 Rep. 46.

In aſſiſe for a cellar, the tenant pleaded in abatement, that the demandant had entered at the laſt continuance; the jury found a ſpecial verdict, that the demandant had entered, entered, but it was at the requeſt of the tenant, and only to view the antiquity of the cellar; adjudged, that by ſuch entry the writ was not abated. Plowd. Com. 92.

An aſſiſe was brought of the office of a filazer of the court of Common Pleas, and the demandant counted de libero tenemento, and alledged ſeiſin, by taking money for a capias, and the poſt was put in view where the officer ſate. Dyer 114.

An aſſiſe was brought of the office of clock-keeper of Weſtminſter, and it was adjudged to be well brought; but then the demandant muſt aver, that it was an ancient office, and prove it at the trial, otherwiſe he muſt be nonſuited. Brownl. 28.

An aſſiſe was brought of the office of ſadler to the Queen, granted to the demandant by the King; and it was adjudged, that it would not lie, becauſe the King could not make ſuch an officer for the Queen; and becauſe there was no place mentioned in the patent where the perſon ſhould exerciſe and enjoy this office, and therefore it could not be put in view to the recognitors; ſo if the King granted the office of uſher to the prince of Wales, an aſſiſe will not lie. 1 Brownl. 28.

An aſſiſe lieth of the office of regiſter of the admiralty, and the demandant laid a preſcription to it, viz. quod quilibet hujuſmodi perſona, which ſhould be named by the admiral, ſhould be regiſter of the admiralty for life. Dyer 153.

It lieth of offices of woodward, park-keeper, and keeper of chaſes, warrener, &c. but theſe are not at Common law; but by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. becauſe they are of profits to be taken in alieno ſolo; it likewiſe lieth of all other offices and bailiwicks in fee. 8 Rep. 47.

In an aſſiſe of a new office, it ought to be ſhewed what profits belong to it; but it is otherwiſe of an ancient office, becauſe it is preſumed, that the profit thereof is ſufficiently known. 8 Rep. 45.

If a maſter of an hoſpital is deprived of his office by a lay patron, without cauſe, he may have an aſſiſe, becauſe he hath no other remedy; but if ſuch a maſter is eccleſiaſtical, and deprived by the ordinary without cauſe, he ſhall not have an aſſiſe, becauſe he may appeal to the viſitor. 11 Rep. 99.

Error of a judgment in an aſſiſe of the office of a park-keeper, which was granted in reverſion to the demandant, and afterwards the park itſelf was granted to another, who entered and kept out the reverſioner after the death of the tenant for life, for which he brought an aſſiſe, and after the verdict, and before judgment, entered into the park, and there did hunt and killed a deer, and this entry was aſſigned for error, for that it had abated the writ, and made the judgment erroneous; but the court was not of that opinion. 1 Bulſt. 5, 6.

Aſſiſe of the ſuperſedeas office; the King's counſel came into court, and ſaid to the judges, the King doth greet you well, and as to the aſſiſe, it concerned the King and his prerogative, and that they were no farther to proceed therein, and ſo delivered to them a writ de non ulterius proſequendo rege inconſulto, which the court received, and yet the counſel for the defendant argued againſt the writ, which at firſt the court doubted whether they might or not; but they agreed, that after the writ was allowed, they could not proceed upon the aſſiſe without a procedendo ad loquelam, and likewiſe a procedendo ad judicium. 3 Bulſt. 32.

Aſſiſe, &c. for that the defendant levavit quandam domum ad nocumentum, &c. and ſhewed that he had a windmill, and that the defendant had built his houſe ſo near that it hindered the mill: the jury found, that he levavit domum, and that two foot of it did hinder the plaintiff's mill; it was inſiſted, that only the two foot ſhall be abated, and not the whole houſe; but the Chief Juſtice Hobart was of opinion that could not be, for levavit domum is when an entire houſe is built from the ground; if it had been erexit domum, then the two foot and no more might have been abated, becauſe erexit is when part of an houſe is ſet up; but the better opinion was, that only the two foot ſhall be abated. Godb. 233.

And though ejectment is now the common action for thoſe things, which were formerly recovered in aſſiſe; yet in ſome caſes an aſſiſe will lie where ejectment will not, as in the caſe before mentioned, de uno croſto; neither will an ejectment lie de piſcaria, becauſe the ſheriff cannot deliver poſſeſſion of it, but an aſſiſe will lie of it, for though it is proficuum capiend' in alieno ſolo, yet it may be put in view to the recognitors. Cro. Car. 354.

In aſſiſe for the office of one of the four clerks of the privy ſignet, it was ruled, that where it is brought for a thing againſt common right, the demandant ought to ſet forth his title ſpecially; but where 'tis brought for lands, there 'tis ſufficient to ſay de libero tenemento: that when an aſſiſe is arraigned, 'tis not enough to demand the recognitors, and to read the writ and the count in French; but the clerk ought to read the count in Latin, as 'tis entered on record, for till then the court is not poſſeſſed of it; and if 'tis not read in Latin it may be a queſtion whether the aſſiſe is diſcontinued; but before this aſſiſe was taken, it was excepted againſt the writ, becauſe it was octavas inſtead of octabis, and becauſe it was returnable coram nobis apud Weſtm', when it ought to have been coram nobis ubicunq; for the one is the form in the common pleas, and the other in B. R. but adjudged, that octavas is more near the grammar than octabis, and that coram nobis apud Weſtm' was well enough; and the court held, that if a clerk of the ſignet abſented in his waiting month, it was a forfeiture of his office; ſo if the reverſion is granted to him, and he doth not come when it is void, that is likewiſe a forfeiture; and if a grant is poſt mortem vel forisfacturam of him in poſſeſſion, and afterwards he forfeits it, the grantee of the reverſion may enter without a ſcire facias. Sid. 73, 80.

Aſſiſe for the office of the marſhal of B. R. Mr. Lenthal and others, and the counſel being ready to arraign it in French, the recognitors did not appear, but the writ was read, which may be returnable any day, as well as on a return day; neither did the demandant appear; whereupon the aſſiſe was adjourned to another day, and then was arraigned, and the tenant prayed, that the demandant might come in and count, who not being ready prayed another day, which was denied; for this is feſtinum remedium, and the tenant in law is bound to plead inſtanter, which he cannot do where there is no court, therefore the demandant was nonſuited; but he may bring a new aſſiſe. 1 Salk. 82.

In an aſſiſe for tithes, the writ was de libero tenemento, and the count was de portione decimarum in R. without mentioning the certainty of the tithes; and this was adjudged good, becauſe the taking of part ſhall be a diſſeiſin of the whole. Dyer 83.

Where an aſſiſe is brought for a mill, it ſhall be de molendino generally, without expreſſing in certainty the nature of the mill, as griſt mill, fulling mill, &c. becauſe the mill is the ſubſtance, and the other are but additions to ſhew the quality of the mill. 4 Rep. Lutterel's caſe.

In aſſiſes for a rent-charge, rent-ſervice, or rent-ſeck, brought by tenant for life, in fee or in tail, the writ muſt be general de libero tenemento in R. but if 'tis of a rent-charge or ſeck, all the lands muſt be named in the writ, but not in aſſiſe for rent-ſervice. Dyer 31.

Aſſiſe, &c. for rent-charge, in which the caſe was, huſband and wife were ſeiſed of two manors, which by fine they conveyed (inter alia) to the conuſee by the name of two manors, &c. and he by the ſame fine rendered back to them an yearly rent of 50 l. and to the heirs of the wife, and alſo rendered the two manors to them for their lives, the remainder over in tail; the huſband and wife died, the rent deſcended to the plaintiff as ſon and heir of the wife, and he had judgment in the aſſiſe; upon which a writ of error was brought, and the error aſſigned was, that the fine was of two manors (inter alia) which words import, that other lands beſides the manors did paſs; if ſo, the aſſiſe brought againſt the tenant of the manors only is not good, becauſe all the tenants of the lands compriſed in the fine ought to be named, and this was adjudged good cauſe of error. Cro. Eliz. 226.

An aſſiſe lieth of a rent, (viz.) a rent ſeck of 40 l. per ann. was granted, iſſuing out of an houſe called the unicorn in L. payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day at the houſe of the grantee in L. &c. and 6*d.* was given in the name of the ſeiſin; now in this caſe the rent was iſſuing out out of one houſe, and to be paid at another, yet the demand at the houſe where it was iſſuing, and none being there to pay it, was adjudged a diſſeiſin, for which the aſſiſe was brought. Cro. Car. 365.

Error of a judgment in an aſſiſe for rent arrear, in which the demandant counted, that the rent was deviſed to him for life, iſſuing out of ſeveral tenements, naming them, and that the teſtator died, and the lands deſcended to B. G. and that he was ſeiſed of the ſaid rent by the hands of the ſaid B. G. until afterwards he was diſſeiſed by him, &c. the errors aſſigned were, that the aſſiſe being brought for the arrears of rent due upon a deviſe, the demandant had omitted to ſhew when the teſtator died; for which reaſon the certainty of what was in arrear could not be known; neither did he ſet forth, or the jury find, that the rent was demanded on the lands, for a demand of the perſon off the land was adjudged not to be good; and for theſe reaſons the judgment was reverſed. Cro. Car. 374.

An aſſiſe lieth de cellaria, de alneto, de bullaria, de ſalina, &c. for though theſe and the like are incertain in the count, yet becauſe they may be made certain in the evidence at the trial, it ſhall be good. Cro. Car. 399.

An aſſiſe lieth of common of paſture, where the commoner hath a freehold in it, and the lord or other people feed it ſo hard, that all the graſs is eat up where the common ſhould be taken; but then he muſt count and ſet forth how long the land was fed, and alledge per quod proficuum ſuum per totum tempus ibidem amiſit; for if 'tis only a ſmall feeding, an aſſiſe doth not lie, but in ſuch caſe the commoner may diſtrain the cattle damage-feaſant. 9 Rep. 112.

Error to reverſe a judgment in an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin in an inferior court, in which the demandant counted, that the tenant did diſſeiſe him de uno muro lapideo, and had built an houſe in the place of it, and all this matter was aſſigned for error; and adjudged, that he ought to have brought an aſſiſe of nuſance, and not an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. Style 145.

Afterwards the demandant brought a new aſſiſe for the ſame office, and it being arraigned on the firſt day of term, the tenant made default, being demanded, ideo capiatur aſſiſa per defaltum; then the demandant counted and ſhewed the King's patent, which was read, but the jury being not yet ſworn, day was given till Wedneſday following, at which time the tenant may appear and give what evidence he can, but he cannot after this default plead either in bar or abatement, nor challenge; and the cauſe coming on to tryal, the demandant proved ſeiſin by compounding and taking 20 s. of a priſoner, who was committed by the houſe of commons to the tenant Norfolk, who was then in poſſeſſion of the office, and by going to the lobby and laying his hands on the mace whilſt it was on the ſhoulder of Norfolk; and this was held ſufficient ſeiſin and diſſeiſin, and the demandant had a verdict. 2 Lev. 120.

Aſſiſe for the office of ſerjeant at mace to the houſe of commons; at the trial the demandant made a title by a grant from King James, reciting a former grant, and this to commence after the determination thereof; adjudged, that this recital was not evidence, whereupon the demandant went to the rolls, and had leave of the maſter of the rolls to bring the patent into court, which was done; then he was to prove ſeiſin, which he did, by proving that he went to the houſe of commons and demanded his place, but received no fees; but that in an action on the caſe for diſturbing him in his office he had recovered 300 l. damages, and that this by Hale Ch. J. was held a ſufficient ſeiſin, the damages being recovered in ſatisfaction of his fees whilſt he was out of poſſeſſion; but by other judges it was denied: whereupon the matter was intended to be found ſpecially, but the demandant, rather than agree to it, became nonſuit. 2 Lev. 108.

2. Who may have aſſiſe, and againſt whom, and where it lieth.

As the writ of aſſiſe reſtores the party to the actual ſeiſin of his freehold, for ſo are the words of the writ, viz. facias tenementum illud ſeiſiri, &c. conſequently the party that brings the writ muſt found it upon an actual ſeiſin, which he has been diveſted of, for otherwiſe this remedy is not commenſurate to his caſe. See 2 Rol. Abr. 463.

Therefore if there be lord and tenant by rent-ſervice, and the lord grants the ſervices to another, and the tenant attorns by a penny, this being given by way of attornment, is not ſufficient ſeiſin to ground an aſſiſe on; ſecus if the penny had been given by way of ſeiſin of the rent. Lit. Sect. 565. Co. Lit. 315. 4 Co. 9. 10 Co. 127.

If the leſſor dies, and after the leſſee for years is ouſted, the heir of the leſſor ſhall have an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, and not of mort d'aunceſtor, for the leſſee's continuing in poſſeſſion after the death of the leſſor, was in right of the heir. See 1 Rol. Abr. 270, 271. Kelw. 110.

If a man leaſes for years, the remainder over in fee, and after the tenant for years is ouſted of his term, he in the remainder may have an aſſiſe, becauſe the freehold was in him at the time of the diſſeiſin. Kelw. 109.

An aſſiſe muſt be brought in the county where the land lieth, and not elſewhere; for if 'tis brought in a foreign county, though by the aſſent of the parties, 'tis erroneous. Dyer 267.

Tenant by ſtatute, or by elegit, may have an aſſiſe, tho' they have but a chattle intereſt, and they muſt count ut de libero tenemento, and not de termino, and in ſuch caſe antient demeſne is a good plea. 5 Rep. Alden's caſe: but now the law is held to be otherwiſe, becauſe in an aſſiſe brought by a tenant in elegit, the judgment is not to recover the poſſeſſion of the land, but only to have execution done on the former judgment. Hob. 47.

Tenants in common ſhall each have a ſeveral aſſiſe for his moiety, or part, becauſe they are ſeiſed by ſeveral titles; but twenty jointenants ſhall have but one aſſiſe in all their names, becauſe they have but one joint title; ſo if there are three jointenants, and one of them releaſeth all his right to one of his companions, and then the other two are diſſeiſed of the whole, they ſhall have but one aſſiſe in both their names for the two parts, becauſe they had a joint title to it at the time of the diſſeiſin, and he to whom the releaſe was given ſhall have an aſſiſe in his own name, becauſe of that part he is tenant in common. 1 Inſt. 196.

In aſſiſe, which came on to be tried at the aſſiſes, the recognitors were at the bar and ready to be ſworn, and the defendant came into court, and confeſſed the ſeiſin and diſſeiſin as the demandant had declared; whereupon he demanded judgment, and he had it, which was entered, quod recuperet ſeiſinam per viſum recognitorum; and upon this a writ of error was brought, and the error aſſigned was, becauſe none of the jury were ſworn, or had the view, and they were not recognitors before they were ſworn; adjudged, that tho' they ſhould have the view of the land, yet if they know it well enough, the aſſiſe may be taken without the view; the judgment was affirmed. 2 Bulſt. 160.

A diſſeiſor made a leaſe of years, and being about to leave the realm, he ordered the leſſee to keep the poſſeſſion againſt the diſſeiſee till he returned, which he did, and paid the rent to the uſe of the diſſeiſor; the better opinion was, that in this caſe the leſſee was ſuch a diſſeiſor, that an aſſiſe might be brought againſt him. Dyer 141.

The Queen granted the cuſtody of a park to one for life, with all the profits and commodities to the ſaid office belonging, to which the herbage and pawnage of the park did belong; and afterwards granted the park to T. S. and his heirs; the grantee felled ſome trees, and carried them away: now this being an injury done to the keeper in reſpect of the pawnage, he cannot bring treſpaſs, but an aſſiſe or action on the caſe; he cannot bring an aſſiſe, for that doth not lie, becauſe he cannot have ſeiſin of the pawnage of the trees, for thoſe are gone; therefore he may bring an action on the caſe, and recover damages; but he may have an aſſiſe for the herbage. 2 And. 7.

The taking of 3 d. of A. for a capias againſt B. is a ſufficient ſeiſin of the office of Filizer de Banco. 1 Rol. Abr. 270.

If one by the houſe of commons be committed to A. who before and long after was in poſſeſſion of the office of of ſerjeant at arms to the houſe, and the priſoner compounds with B. for the fees, and gives him twenty ſhillings; this is a good ſeiſin of the office by B. for he cannot be diſſeiſed thereof but at his election; adjudged and held likewiſe, that proving that B. being in the lobby of the houſe of commons, took hold of the door of the houſe, and laid his hands upon the mace, (then being in the hands of A.) to take it, but hindered by A. was good evidence both of a ſeiſin and diſſeiſin. 2 Lev. 108.

The ſerjeant of the mace to the houſe of commons, in an action upon the caſe for a diſturbance, recovered damages; and whether this was a ſufficient ſeiſin, the damages being recovered in ſatisfaction of the fees, and he then being out of poſſeſſion of his office, was doubted; ſome of the judges inclining one way, and ſome the other; and it was intended to have been found ſpecially; but the plaintiff being unwilling to ſtand to it was nonſuit. 1 Lev. 108.

3. Proceedings and pleadings in aſſiſe.

The firſt proceſs in this action is an original writ iſſued out of Chancery, directed to the ſheriff, commanding him to return a jury, who are called the recognitors of the aſſiſe. An aſſiſe is feſtinum remedium, and to be arraigned on the day the writ is returnable, on which day the defendant is to count, and the tenant is to appear and plead inſtantly, unleſs the court thinks proper to allow him an imparlance, which is ſaid cannot be without ſhewing good cauſe. Style Reg. 88.

When the plaintiff counts, the defendant may plead in abatement, and over in bar, or may plead the general iſſue nul tort nul diſſeiſin. Booth 214.

If the tenant pleads a plea, which ſhews that the aſſiſe ſhould not be taken, and ſuch plea is triable by a jury, the recognitors of the aſſiſe may try it, and then the aſſiſe is ſaid tranſire in jurata; and the aſſiſe and record adjourned into the Common Pleas. Booth 313, 314.

In aſſiſe for a rent-charge or ſeck, the demandant muſt make a title in his plaint; otherwiſe in an aſſiſe of land, for there poſſeſſion without any other title is ſufficient. Jenk. 42.

In an aſſiſe for a portion of tithes, the demandant in his plaint muſt make a title, for the ſeiſin only is not ſufficient, no more than in the caſe of a rent or other profit in the ſoil or fee of another, which commences againſt common right; for in all theſe caſes of neceſſity the commencement thereof muſt be alledged by him who will make title thereto, whether he be privy or a ſtranger; for it is againſt reaſon to charge the inheritance or freehold of another, without ſhewing ſome ſubſtantial foundation thereof. Dyer 58.

In an aſſiſe for an office, the demandant in his plaint muſt ſet forth a title. 3 Mod. 273.

By Weſtm. 2. cap. 25. a certificate of aſſiſe is given, which is a writ for the party grieved, by a verdict or judgment given againſt him in an aſſiſe, when he had ſomething to plead, as a record or releaſe, which could not have been pleaded by his bailiff; or when the aſſiſe was taken againſt himſelf by default, to have the deed tried, and the record brought in before the juſtices, and the former jury ſummoned to appear before them at a certain day and place, for a further examination and trial of the matter. See Booth 215, 287. 4 Co. 4. b. 2 Inſt. 26.

If a flat bar be pleaded to the aſſiſe, and iſſue is joined thereupon, the jury never inquire of the ſeiſin or diſſeiſin, but of the matter pleaded in bar, and of damages if the plea be found againſt the defendant. Booth 214.

But if the defendant pleads a colourable plea, then they are to inquire of the ſeiſin and diſſeiſin, which is called the taking the aſſiſe at large. See Booth 214, 215.

Alſo if an infant pleads a flat bar, and the bar is found againſt him, yet the aſſiſe ſhall be taken at large, becauſe the law not allowing the parol to demur in this action, which was feſtinum remedium, the ſeiſin and diſſeiſin was inquired of, that the infant's whole title might appear before the court. 1 Rol. Abr. 275.

Adjudged, that in aſſiſe, if the tenant plead in abatement, he muſt likewiſe plead over in bar at the ſame time, and that no imparlance ſhall be allowed without ſome ſpecial cauſe; and if there are ſeveral tenants, thoſe who do not appear on the firſt day, the aſſiſe ſhall be taken againſt them. 1 Salk. 85.

In an aſſiſe for an office newly erected and conſtituted, the demandant in his plaint muſt ſhew what fee or profit is granted for the exerciſe thereof; for this office cannot have a fee or profit appurtenant to it as an ancient office may; and for an office without fee or profit no aſſiſe lies. 8 Co. 49.

But in an aſſiſe for an ancient office, the demandant in his plaint need not ſhew what fee or profit is belonging to it, for it ſhall be intended there is ſome fee or profit. 8 Co. 49.

It is a common learning, that in an aſſiſe the plaint need not be ſo certain as in other writs, becauſe the judgment is to recover per viſum recognitorum; and if the plaint be but ſo certain that the recognitors may put the demandant in poſſeſſion, it is ſufficient. Dyer 84.

In an aſſiſe of rent in D. the tenant cannot plead that in the ſaid county there are two D's, without any addition to diſtinguiſh them, becauſe the plaintiff ſhall recover per viſum juratorum. Jenk. 33.

Aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, (Aſſiſa mortis anteceſſoris) Is a writ that lieth where a man's father, mother, brother, ſiſter, uncle, aunt, &c. died ſeiſed of lands, tenements, rents, &c. that were held in fee, and after their deaths a ſtranger abateth. Reg. Orig. 223. It is good as well againſt the abator, as any other in poſſeſſion of the land: but it lies not againſt brothers or ſiſters, &c. where there is privity of blood between the perſon proſecuting and them. Co. Litt. 242. And it muſt be brought within the time limited by the ſtatute of Limitations, or the right may be loſt by negligence, if the anceſtor were ſeiſed the day that he died, of any lands, or other eſtate in fee-ſimple, altho' a ſtranger entereth and diſſeiſeth him of that land the day that he dieth, ſo that he dieth not ſeiſed of the ſaid land; yet the perſon who is his heir ſhall have the aſſiſe of mort a'anceſtor, becauſe the writ doth not ſuppoſe that the anceſtor died ſeiſed; but ſaith parati ſacramento recogn. ſi W. B. pater, &c. fuit ſeiſitus die quo obiit, &c. and the ſame is ſufficient, altho' he dieth not ſeiſed. Fitz. Nat. Br. 433. If a man be beyond ſea in pilgrimage, and dieth there; or if he enter into religion, &c. his heir ſhall have a writ of aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, and it ſufficeth that the anceſtor was ſeiſed the day he went out of the land, although it was not the day of his death. Ibid. 434, 435.

By the ſtatute of Glouceſter, if tenant by curteſy alien his wife's inheritance, and dieth, the heir of the wife ſhall have an aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, if he have not aſſets by deſcent from the tenant by the curteſy, and the ſame ſhall be as well where the wife was not ſeiſed of land the day of her death as where ſhe was ſeiſed thereof. 6 Ed. 1. New Nat. Br. 489. A warden of a college, &c. ſhall have aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, of rent where his predeceſſor was ſeiſed. And a man may have aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor of rents againſt ſeveral perſons in ſeveral counties; having in the end of the writ ſeveral ſummons againſt the tenants: and the proceſs in this writ, is ſummons againſt the party; and if he makes default at the day of the aſſiſe returned, then the plaintiff ought to ſue out a reſummons; and if he makes default again, the aſſiſe ſhall be taken, &c. Br. aſſiſ. 88. In a mort d'anceſtor, if the tenant ſays, the plaintiff is not next heir, and this is found againſt him, the points of the writ ſhall be inquired of: and in this caſe, the aſſiſe may find, that though the plaintiff be the next heir, yet he is not next heir as to this land; for this is in regard of their inquiry at large. Br. Mort. d'An' 47. 1 Danv. Abr. 584. Damages ſhall be recovered in the aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor; but it lieth not of an eſtate in tail, only where the anceſtor was ſeiſed in demeſne as of fee. Bro. Aſſiſ. If a man be barred in aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, upon ſhewing a deſcent, or other ſpecial matter, he may have mort d'anceſtor, or writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin, &c. 4 Rep. 43.

Aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, (Aſſiſa ultimæ præſentationis) A writ lying where a man and his anceſtors have preſented a clerk to a church, and after, the church being void, a ſtranger preſents his clerk to the ſame church, whereby the perſon having right is diſturbed. Reg. Orig. 30. And a man ſhall have aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, although he nor his anceſtors did preſent to the laſt avoidance: as if tenant for life or years, or in dower, or by the curteſy, ſuffer an uſurpation into a church, &c. and die; he in reverſion, who is heir unto the anceſtor who laſt preſented, ſhall have aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, if he be diſturbed: but if a man preſent, and then grant the advowſon unto another for life, and he ſuffer one uſurpation, or two or three uſurpations; now at the next avoidance, he in the reverſion ſhall not have an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, if he is diſturbed to preſent. 10 Ed. 3. In this caſe he is put to his writ of right. If a diſturber preſent to an advowſon, and the patron bring an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, and pending the writ the incumbent dieth, if the diſturber preſent again and dies, yet the patron ſhall have an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, upon the firſt diſturbance againſt the heir of the diſturber by journey's accounts. New Nat. Br. 71. A perſon preſents to an advowſon, and the incumbent dies, and the ordinary doth preſent another by lapſe; on that incumbent's death, the right patron ſhall preſent; and if he be diſturbed, he ſhall have an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, notwithſtanding the mean preſentment: but one cannot make title to a preſentment in time of war. Ibid. A tenant in tail of an advowſon may have this writ, as well as tenant in fee thereof, and is not put to a quare impedit; and 'tis ſaid a leſſee for years may bring it, if he hath preſented before, altho' he hath no freehold; for this aſſiſe is not like an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. F. N. B. 31. Though he who will generally bring the aſſiſe of darrein preſentment ought to have the ſame eſtate or part thereof, which he had at the time of the firſt preſentment; therefore if ſuch leſſee for years of an advowſon preſents, and after his eſtate is enlarged for life, or in fee, and then the church becomes void, he ſhall not have this writ, becauſe he hath a new eſtate by enlargement, and no part of his former eſtate. Kelw. 118. Mallor. Qu. imped. 162. By Magna Charta, 9 H. 3. c. 13. theſe aſſiſes of darrein preſentment are to be always taken before the juſtices of the bench, and there ſhall be determined. In aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, the proceſs is ſummons and reſummons, habeas corpus, &c. and if the writ is in Middleſex, at the return thereof the aſſiſe ſhall be there arraigned at the bar, and the tenant demanded; if the tenant doth not appear, a re-ſummons ſhall be awarded; and if upon that he appeareth not, the aſſiſe is to be taken againſt him by default, &c. in this aſſiſe, ſix of the jury ought to have the view of the church, to the intent that they may put the plaintiff in poſſeſſion, if he recovers; and the judgment is to recover the preſentation and damages, and the value of the church for half a year; and if ſix months be paſt, two years value of the church ſhall be recovered, by *ſtat. Aſſiſe de utrum, (Aſſiſa utrum) Lieth for a parſon againſt a layman, or a layman againſt a parſon, for lands or tenements, where it is doubtful, whether they be lay fee, or free alms belonging to the church. Bract. lib. 4. It is a writ of the higheſt nature that a parſon can have: and if a parſon, prebendary, &c. loſe by default in a real action, he may have this writ; for it is his writ of right. 6 Rep. 8. There are the four kinds of writs of aſſiſe, uſed in actions poſſeſſory; and are called petit aſſiſes in reſpect of the grand aſſiſe: for the law of fees is grounded upon two rights, one of poſſeſſion, the other of property; and as the grand aſſiſe ſerves for the right of property, ſo the petit aſſiſe ſerveth to ſettle the right of poſſeſſion. Horn's Mir. At the Common law there are but two forms of writs of aſſiſe, viz. aſſiſe de libero tenemento, and aſſiſe de communia paſturæ. 8 Rep. 45. The aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, &c. and de communia paſturæ, were inſtituted by Hen. 2. in the place of duels: and therefore Glanvil tells us, that Magna Aſſiſa eſt regale beneficium clementia principis de conſilio procerum populis indultum, a quo vitæ hominum, & ſtatus integritati tam ſalubriter conſulitur, ut in jure, quod quis in libero ſolo tenemento poſſidet, retinendo, duelli caſum homines declinare poſſunt ambiguum, &c. Glanvil, lib. 2. cap. 7.

Aſſiſe of the foreſt, (Aſſiſa de foreſta) Is a ſtatute touching orders to be obſerved in the King's foreſt. Manwood, 35. The ſtatute of view of frankpledge, anno 18 Ed. 1. is called the aſſiſe of the King: And the ſtatute of bread and ale 51 Hen. 3. is termed the aſſiſe of bread and ale; and theſe are ſo called, becauſe they ſet down and appoint a certain meaſure or order, in the things they contain. There is further an aſſiſe of nuſance, aſſiſa nocumenti, where a man maketh a nuſance to the freehold of another, to redreſs the ſame: and beſides Littleton's diviſion of aſſiſes, there are others mentioned by other writers, viz. aſſiſe at large, brought by an infant to enquire of a diſſeiſin, and whether his anceſtor were of full age, good memory, &c. when he made the deed pleaded, whereby he claims his right. Aſſiſe in point of aſſiſe, (aſſiſa in modum aſſiſæ) which is when the tenant as it were ſetting foot to foot with the demandant, without any thing further, pleads directly to the writ, no wrong, no diſſeiſin. Aſſiſe out of the point of aſſiſe, is when the tenant pleadeth ſomething by exception; as a foreign releaſe, or foreign matter triable in a foreign county; which muſt be tried by a jury, before the principal cauſe can proceed. Aſſiſe of right of damages is where the tenant confeſſeth an ouſter, and referring it to a demurrer in the law, whether it were rightly done or not, is adjudged to have done wrong; whereupon the defendant ſhall have a writ of aſſiſe to recover damages. Bract. lib. 4. *F. Aſſiſers, (Aſſiſores) Sunt qui aſſiſas condunt, aut taxationes imponunt.——In Scotland, (according to Skene) they are the ſame with our jurors; and their oath is this:

As we will anſwer to God, upon

Aſſociation, (Aſſociatio) Is a writ or patent ſent by the King, either at his own motion, or at the ſuit of a party plaintiff, to the juſtices appointed to take aſſiſes, or of oyer and terminer, &c. to have others aſſociated unto them. And this is uſual where a juſtice of aſſiſe dies; and a writ is iſſued to the juſtices alive to admit the perſon aſſociated: Alſo where a juſtice is diſabled, this is practiſed. F. N. B. 185. Reg. Orig. 201, 206, 223. The clerk of the aſſiſe is uſually aſſociate of courſe; in other caſes, ſome learned ſerjeants at law are appointed. It has been holden, that an aſſociation after another aſſociation allowed and admitted, doth not lie; nor are the juſtices then to admit other aſſociation in that writ afterwards, ſo long as that writ and commiſſion ſtand in force. Br. Aſſiſe 386. Mich. 32 Hen. 6. The King may make an aſſociation unto the ſheriff, upon a writ of rediſſeiſin, as well as upon aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, &c. New Nat. Br. 416, 417.

Aſſociation of parliament. In the reign of King William the Third, the parliament entered into a ſolemn aſſociation to defend his Majeſty's perſon and government againſt all plots and conſpiracies; and all perſons bearing offices civil or military, were injoined to ſubſcribe the aſſociation, to ſtand by King William, on pain of forfeitures and penalties, &c. by ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 27.

Aſſumpſit, (from the Lat. aſſumo) Is taken for a voluntary promiſe, by which a man aſſumes or takes upon him to perform or pay any thing to another: It comprehends any verbal promiſe, made upon conſideration; and the civilians expreſs it diverſly, according to the nature of the promiſe, calling it ſometimes pactum, ſometimes promiſſionem, or *conſtitutum, &c. 1. In what caſes an aſſumpſit lies.

Indeb. aſſump. by an under-officer againſt his colonel for his pay; and here proof was admitted of the hand of a perſon proved beyond ſea; and per Holt Ch. J. If one recovers money to the uſe of another, an indeb. is a proper remedy for it; but if in this caſe there were any legal deduction to be made by the colonel, the remedy had been account; for where one receives money, and has no way to diſcharge himſelf of it but by payment over, an indeb. will lie. 12 Mod. 521.

A goldſmith's bill for 450l. payable to A. was brought to the bank by G. who deſir'd M. the caſhier, to give him a ſpecie a ſpecie bank-note payable to A. for the ſaid bill. M. refuſed, unleſs A. would promiſe to pay the 450*l.* to the bank, in caſe S. the goldſmith did not; which A. agreeing to, M. gave G. a bank-bill for that ſum. G. gave the bank-note to C. for a debt he owed him, and C. received the money at the bank. S. refuſed to pay his bill. Holt, Ch. J. held, that the plaintiffs might have a ſpecial action, but not a general indeb. aſſump. for this was not money lent, nor laid out for defendant's uſe, but it was a buying of the bill of S. with a warranty of it from the defendant; and the plaintiffs were nonſuit. 2 Lord Raym. 753. See title Actions VI.

Plaintiff can maintain no action here on a judgment in France, but an indebitatus aſſumpſit, or an inſimul computaſſet, &c. for the debt is to be conſidered here only as a debt by ſimple contract. 2 Vern. 540.

Where money is over-paid, this action will lie for the ſurplus. Arg. 11 Mod. 147.

Indeb. aſſump. lies by a prothonotary againſt an attorney, for fees for work done for defendant as attorney. Holt's Rep. 20.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit will not lie on a ſpecial agreement, till the terms of it are performed; but when that is done, it raiſes a duty for which a general indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie. Gib. 303.

Indeb. aſſump. for that the defendant was indebted to him in 20*l.* for nouriſhing E. L. an infant, by the plaintiff, at the requeſt of the defendant, he promiſed to pay. It was objected, that this will raiſe a debt, and ſo indeb. aſſump. will not lie; but per tot. cur. contra, and judgment for the plaintiff. 2 Lord Raym. 842.

Indeb. aſſump. for meat, drink, and lodging found for a third perſon; and moved in arreſt of judgment that it would not lie, but a ſpecial action upon the caſe; but per cur. it lies againſt him upon the contract, and the plaintiff had judgment. 6 Mod. 77.

2. What acts or words will make an aſſumpſit.

If A. delivers an obligation to B. to re-bail to A. A. ſhall have an action on the caſe, without an expreſs aſſumpſit; per Anderſon. Leon. 297. pl. 406.

Every contract executory implies an aſſumpſit to pay money at the day agreed, or immediately, if no time be limited; but it is not ſo of an indeb. aſſump. becauſe the cauſe does not appear. Said by Popham to be the opinion of all the juſtices of England. Mo. 667.

The plaintiff declared, that T. was indebted to him, and appointed J. S. the defendant, to whom he delivered 50*l.* to pay it to the plaintiff in part of the ſaid debt, whereupon the plaintiff came to J. S. and demanded the 50*l.* who anſwered that he was buſy then, but if he would come ſuch a day he would pay him. The plaintiff came at the day, but J. S. refuſed to pay him. Per Popham Ch. J. When T. delivered the money to J. S. to deliver to the plaintiff, an agreement is included thereby to deliver it to him, which will charge him in aſſumpſit to him that ought to have the money; and Tanfield agreed, that when there is any precedent matter which cauſed the delivery, as here it was by a debt, the delivery is not countermandable; but here is another conſideration beſides the debt, viz. the coming to the defendant's houſe to fetch the money, to which Yelverton agreed; whereupon it was adjudged for the plaintiff. Dyer 272.

Wherever one acts as bailiff he promiſes to render account; per Holt, Ch. J. 1 Salk. 9.

If two men ſubmit to the award of a third perſon, the two do alſo thereby promiſe expreſsly to abide by the determination; for agreeing to refer is a promiſe in itſelf. 6 Mod. 35.

There is no ſuch thing as a contract, or promiſe in law, though there is ſuch expreſſion in ſome of the books. Per Holt and Powel. 6 Mod. 250.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that the plaintiff venderet et deliberaret to D. his father, at the inſtance of defendant, 200 hog-lambs to the uſe of defendant, that defendant would pay ſo much money as ſhould be agreed between the plaintiff and D. After judgment for the plaintiff, it was aſſigned for error, that the contract was the contract of the defendant himſelf, ſo that the action ſhould have been debt, and not aſſumpſit; but all the juſtices e contra; for the count was, that he ſold to D. to the uſe of B. the defendant, whereas the uſe is only a confidence, which gives no property to the defendant in law; ſo that debt lay not againſt the defendant, but aſſumpſit. Mo. 701.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration the plaintiff would ſell, and deliver to the defendant, pannos laneos pro funeralibus of a clerk, he promiſed to pay him for them, cum inde requiſitus eſſet; and alledged he ſold and delivered divers cloths to him, viz. thirty-one yards of black cloth for 19*l.* and ſo received other parcels, amounting to 160*l.* Upon non aſſumpſit found for the plaintiff, error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and the judgment reverſed, becauſe debt properly lay, and not aſſumpſit, this matter proving a perfect ſale and contract. Mo. 711.

Action upon the caſe upon aſſumpſit lies upon every contract executory, as well as an action of debt. Adjudged. Mo. 667.

Aſſumpſit, for the plaintiff and defendant accounted together for monies received by the defendant, who was found in arrears 10*l.* and in conſideratione inde promiſed to pay it the 19th of March following, &c. it was aſſigned for error, that here is no conſideration; for the being found in arrears is not any cauſe to make a ſpecial promiſe, nor is any thing done on the plaintiff's ſide, whereon this promiſe ſhould be grounded, viz. forbearing the ſuit, &c. ſed non allocatur; for the debt itſelf, without other ſpecial cauſe, is ſufficient to ground the action. Cro. Jac. 69.

It lies for monies received by him of a coal-meter as lord-mayor, which was due to the chamberlain; and adjudged that if I pay money in ſatisfaction of a duty, and as a duty, and he to whom it is paid has no title to receive it, and ſo the duty is not ſatisfied, he to whom it is paid is indebted to me, and I ſhall maintain an action. 2 Sid. 4.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit for phyſick, wares, &c. provided and delivered for the daughter of defendant at his requeſt; adjudged for the plaintiff, for it is for wares, &c. delivered (for) not (to) the daughter; and ſo being after verdict, ſhall be intended delivered the defendant for the daughter, and debt lies for this; as if the father deſires one to find phyſick for his daughter, debt lies againſt the father, and ſo an indebitatus aſſumpſit. Raym. 67.

An agreement was to pay 5*s.* per combe for corn, or as much as the plaintiff ſhould ſell any of his other corn for at the next market. It was found that the plaintiff ſold his corn at the next market at C. for 5*s.* 6*d.* per combe. The plaintiff had judgment; for after the agreement aſcertained by ſale at the next market, the plaintiff has election to bring a general indebitatus aſſumpſit, or a ſpecial action on the caſe; but before ſuch certainty it muſt be ſpecial. 2 Keb. 240.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit was brought by the plaintiff pro naulo. Upon non aſſumpſit the plaintiff had judgment; and it was aſſigned for error, that freight was uſually contracted by a charter-party; and if ſo, a general indebitatus aſſumpſit would not lie for a debt by ſpecialty. But judgment was affirmed; for it doth not appear that there was any deed in the caſe, and it ſhall not be intended that there was. Vent. 100.

If A. ſells a horſe to B. for 10*l.* and there being divers other dealings between them, they come to an account upon the whole, and B. is found in arrear 5*l.* A. muſt bring an inſimul computaſſet, for he can never recover upon an indebitatus aſſumpſit; per tot' cur'. 2 Mod. 44.

A. promiſed B. that in conſideration he would marry his kinſwoman, he would give her 100*l.* adjudged, that an indebitatus aſſumpſit will not be; for it is not a debt, but a collateral promiſe. Vent. 268.

Exception was taken that an indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not on ſale of copyhold land. Sed non allocatur; it lying as well on that as on a bargain and ſale of other land. Contra on aſſignment of a judgment, &c. 3 Keb. 625.

In indebitatus aſſumpſit for ſcavage duty, plaintiff declared upon the cuſtom of London, that all perſons expoſing foreign goods to ſale, which had been entered at the cuſ-do you cauſe their namos to be returned, and ſummon C. D. who deforced him of that advowſon, that he be there to hear, &c. and have you then there the ſummoners and this writ. Witneſs, &c.

Aſſiſe de utrum, (Aſſiſa utrum) Lieth for a parſon againſt a layman, or a layman againſt a parſon, for lands or tenements, where it is doubtful, whether they be lay fee, or free alms belonging to the church. Bract. lib. 4. It is a writ of the higheſt nature that a parſon can have: and if a parſon, prebendary, &c. loſe by default in a real action, he may have this writ; for it is his writ of right. 6 Rep. 8. There are the four kinds of writs of aſſiſe, uſed in actions poſſeſſory; and are called petit aſſiſes in reſpect of the grand aſſiſe: for the law of fees is grounded upon two rights, one of poſſeſſion, the other of property; and as the grand aſſiſe ſerves for the right of property, ſo the petit aſſiſe ſerveth to ſettle the right of poſſeſſion. Horn's Mir. At the Common law there are but two forms of writs of aſſiſe, viz. aſſiſe de libero tenemento, and aſſiſe de communia paſturæ. 8 Rep. 45. The aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, &c. and de communia paſturæ, were inſtituted by Hen. 2. in the place of duels: and therefore Glanvil tells us, that Magna Aſſiſa eſt regale beneficium clementia principis de conſilio procerum populis indultum, a quo vitæ hominum, & ſtatus integritati tam ſalubriter conſulitur, ut in jure, quod quis in libero ſolo tenemento poſſidet, retinendo, duelli caſum homines declinare poſſunt ambiguum, &c. Glanvil, lib. 2. cap. 7.

Wherever one acts as bailiff he promiſes to render account; per Holt, Ch. J. 1 Salk. 9.

If two men ſubmit to the award of a third perſon, the two do alſo thereby promiſe expreſsly to abide by the determination; for agreeing to refer is a promiſe in itſelf. 6 Mod. 35.

There is no ſuch thing as a contract, or promiſe in law, though there is ſuch expreſſion in ſome of the books. Per Holt and Powel. 6 Mod. 250.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that the plaintiff venderet et deliberaret to D. his father, at the inſtance of defendant, 200 hog-lambs to the uſe of defendant, that defendant would pay ſo much money as ſhould be agreed between the plaintiff and D. After judgment for the plaintiff, it was aſſigned for error, that the contract was the contract of the defendant himſelf, ſo that the action ſhould have been debt, and not aſſumpſit; but all the juſtices e contra; for the count was, that he ſold to D. to the uſe of B. the defendant, whereas the uſe is only a confidence, which gives no property to the defendant in law; ſo that debt lay not againſt the defendant, but aſſumpſit. Mo. 701.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration the plaintiff would ſell, and deliver to the defendant, pannos laneos pro funeralibus of a clerk, he promiſed to pay him for them, cum inde requiſitus eſſet; and alledged he ſold and delivered divers cloths to him, viz. thirty-one yards of black cloth for 19*l.* and ſo received other parcels, amounting to 160*l.* Upon non aſſumpſit found for the plaintiff, error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and the judgment reverſed, becauſe debt properly lay, and not aſſumpſit, this matter proving a perfect ſale and contract. Mo. 711.

Action upon the caſe upon aſſumpſit lies upon every contract executory, as well as an action of debt. Adjudged. Mo. 667.

Aſſumpſit, for the plaintiff and defendant accounted together for monies received by the defendant, who was found in arrears 10*l.* and in conſideratione inde promiſed to pay it the 19th of March following, &c. it was aſſigned for error, that here is no conſideration; for the being found in arrears is not any cauſe to make a ſpecial promiſe, nor is any thing done on the plaintiff 's ſide, whereon this promiſe ſhould be grounded, viz. forbearing the ſuit, &c. ſed non allocatur; for the debt itſelf, without other ſpecial cauſe, is ſufficient to ground the action. Cro. Jac. 69.

It lies for monies received by him of a coal-meter as lord-mayor, which was due to the chamberlain; and adjudged that if I pay money in ſatisfaction of a duty, and as a duty, and he to whom it is paid has no title to receive it, and ſo the duty is not ſatisfied, he to whom it is paid is indebted to me, and I ſhall maintain an action. 2 Sid. 4.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit for phyſick, wares, &c. provided and delivered for the daughter of defendant at his requeſt; adjudged for the plaintiff, for it is for wares, &c. delivered (for) not (to) the daughter; and ſo being after verdict, ſhall be intended delivered the defendant for the daughter, and debt lies for this; as if the father deſires one to find phyſick for his daughter, debt lies againſt the father, and ſo an indebitatus aſſumpſit. Raym. 67.

An agreement was to pay 5*s.* per combe for corn, or as much as the plaintiff ſhould ſell any of his other corn for at the next market. It was found that the plaintiff ſold his corn at the next market at C. for 5*s.* 6*d.* per combe. The plaintiff had judgment; for after the agreement aſcertained by ſale at the next market, the plaintiff has election to bring a general indebitatus aſſumpſit, or a ſpecial action on the caſe; but before ſuch certainty it muſt be ſpecial. 2 Keb. 240.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit was brought by the plaintiff pro naulo. Upon non aſſumpſit the plaintiff had judgment; and it was aſſigned for error, that freight was uſually contracted by a charter-party; and if ſo, a general indebitatus aſſumpſit would not lie for a debt by ſpecialty. But judgment was affirmed; for it doth not appear that there was any deed in the caſe, and it ſhall not be intended that there was. Vent. 100.

If A. ſells a horſe to B. for 10*l.* and there being divers other dealings between them, they come to an account upon the whole, and B. is found in arrear 5*l.* A. muſt bring an inſimul computaſſet, for he can never recover upon an indebitatus aſſumpſit; per tot' cur'. 2 Mod. 44.

A. promiſed B. that in conſideration he would marry his kinſwoman, he would give her 100*l.* adjudged, that an indebitatus aſſumpſit will not be; for it is not a debt, but a collateral promiſe. Vent. 268.

Exception was taken that an indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not on ſale of copyhold land. Sed non allocatur; it lying as well on that as on a bargain and ſale of other land. Contra on aſſignment of a judgment, &c. 3 Keb. 625.

In indebitatus aſſumpſit for ſcavage duty, plaintiff declared upon the cuſtom of London, that all perſons expoſing foreign goods to ſale, which had been entered at the cuſ-

tom houſe, ſhall pay ſo much for ſhewing them. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that there ought to be a contract, either expreſs or implied, to maintain an aſſumpſit, and therefore it would not lie for this duty; and the cuſtoms of the city being confirmed by parliament, this is a duty by record. Sed non allocatur; for there are multitudes of precedents in ſuch like caſes. Vent. 298.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit, for that the defendant being indebted to him in a certain ſum for wares ſold and delivered to a ſtranger at the defendant's requeſt, the defendant did promiſe to pay, &c. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved, that this was only a collateral promiſe, and that an indebitatus aſſumpſit would not lie; for the debt was due from him to whom the goods were ſold. Wilde and Jones held that the action lay, but Rainsford, Ch. J. contra. But the plaintiff had judgment. Vent. 311.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie for meat and drink for a baſtard child; per Pemberton, Ch. J. 2 Show. 184.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not againſt a man where he has received money of the plaintiff to lay out to a particular purpoſe, and he has laid out part thereof accordingly; for then he ought to be called to account for the ſame by action of account; but if none were laid out, there an indebitatus aſſumpſit lies to recover back the money again. So if it were expended to another purpoſe; for there the ſum is certain, and may be demanded as a debt. 2 Show. 301.

A. promiſes B. that when A. receives 100*l.* which C. owes A. that he will pay B. 20*l.* indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not. Otherwiſe if the money had been originally the money of B. Skin. 196.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for a cuſtomary fine, ſuper mortem domini. Show. 35.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies upon a perſonal contract for a ſum in groſs, as pro rebus venditis; per Holt, Ch. J. Show. 36.

Indebitatus lies for fees for being knighted. Show. 78.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for money paid by miſtake, on an account or deceit; but not for money paid knowingly on illegal conſideration, as an uſurious bond. Salk. 22.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie in no caſe but where debt lies, therefore it lies not on a wager, nor upon a mutual aſſumpſit, nor againſt the acceptor of a bill of exchange; for his acceptance is but a collateral engagement: but lies againſt the drawer himſelf; for he was really a debtor by the receipt of the money. 1 Salk. 23.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not on collateral engagements. See the preceding caſe; and 1 Salk. 23. Butcher and Andrews, which was an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the father, for money lent the ſon at the father's requeſt, and ſo judgment was arreſted; for this was a collateral promiſe. But per Holt Ch. J. if it had been for ſo much money paid by the plaintiff at the requeſt of the defendant the father to the ſon, it might have been good; for then it would be the father's debt, and not the ſon's. Carth. 446.

Holt, Ch. J. ſaid, that Keyling would allow an indebitatus againſt a receiver or factor, but Hale would not; and that by his conſent it ſhould go as far as it had gone, but not a ſtep farther. 12 Mod. 324.

Indeb. aſſumpſit, for a fine impoſed by a corporation, for not holding the office of ſheriff in the city of York. It was objected, that the action does not lie; for no privity or aſſent can be implied, when a fine is impoſed on a man againſt his will, nor is there any precedent conſideration; neither do they ſhew any right to this fine, nor who impoſed, &c. Holt, Ch. J. thought it time to have theſe actions redreſſed, and that it was hard that cuſtoms, by-laws, and rights, to impoſe fines, ſhould be left to a jury. Et adjornatur. 5 Mod. 444.

An officer (as regiſter in Chancery, &c.) receives his fee for doing the duty of his office (as to make entries, &c.) and neglects the doing it; ſuch acceptance of his fee amounts by implication of law to a promiſe and agreement, and if the party, or ſuitor, pay coſt for irregularity, an action lies; except where ſuch officer is an officer in the Chancery (as in the principal caſe) the court of Chancery will not ſuffer this matter to be examined by any other court, but will determine it itſelf, as in all like caſes, in a ſummary way: Arg. and ſo held by L. C. King. 2 P. Williams, 657.

3. What ſhall be deemed a good conſideration to create an aſſumpſit.

Conſideration is defined, a cauſe, or occaſion meritorious, that requires a mutual recompence in fact or in law. Therefore if a man promiſes ſo much money at a day to come, to build a houſe, or a church, without conſideration, this is a naked promiſe, and will not oblige. Hard. 72. Dyer 366. b. Doct. & Stud. 211, 213, 215. Kelw. 50. 1 Rol. Abr. 9, 10.

Idle and inſignificant conſiderations are looked upon as none at all; for wherever a perſon promiſes without a benefit ariſing to the promiſer, or loſs to the promiſee, it is looked upon as a void promiſe. 2 Bulſt. 269.

A. was indebted to B. and B. to C. the defendant, and C. in conſideration that the plaintiff would procure B. to make a letter of attorney to C. to ſue A. promiſed to pay the plaintiff 10*l.* It was objected, that this was no conſideration; for the defendant by this letter, of attorney, gets nothing but his labour and trouble; ſed non allocatur; for it is not ſo much the profit which redounds to the defendant, as the labour of the plaintiff in procuring the letter of attorney, that is to be reſpected. 4 Leon. 113.

Arbitrators being about to award that R. the defendant ſhould deliver up to the plaintiff two ſeveral obligations to be cancelled, wherein the plaintiff was bound to the defendant, he (the defendant) in conſideration that the article ſhould be left out of the award, promiſed that himſelf would deliver them up gratis, &c. but did not, and afterwards put the bonds in ſuit; whereupon the plaintiff brought his action, and ſet forth this matter, and that the ſaid clauſe was omitted ad ſpecialem inſtantiam ipſius querentis; and judgment was given for him. 3 Leon. 105.

If the plaintiff declares, that in conſideration the defendant was indebted to him in 20*l.* the defendant did aſſume and promiſe to deliver ſeveral cattle to J. S. to the uſe of the plaintiff, and that the defendant had not delivered the cattle accordingly, &c. the conſideration is void, becauſe it does not appear that the debt was to be diſcharged thereby; and if not, the plaintiff notwithſtanding might bring his action for the money, ſo that the promiſe is but nudum pactum. Style 330.

If A. in conſideration that B. will deliver to him a recognizance to read over, aſſumes and promiſes within ſix days, to re-deliver the ſame to B. or to pay him 1000*l.* this is a good promiſe, upon which B. may have an action againſt A. for the conſideration is ſufficient. 1 Leon. 297. Cro. Eliz. 138.

If D. demiſes certain lands to B. rendring rent, and B. aſſigns to D. after which rent becomes due, and D. in conſideration that A. will ſhew him a deed, by which it may appear that ſuch rent is due, aſſumes and promiſes to A. forthwith to pay the ſame; if A. does ſhew D. the indenture of leaſe, by which it appears that ſuch rent is due, A. ſhall have an action upon this promiſe againſt D. for when any thing, though never ſo ſmall, is to be done by the plaintiff, it will be a conſideration ſufficient to ground an action. Cro. Eliz. 67, 150. S. C.

A. being in priſon at the ſuit of B. upon account, the gaoler ſuffers him to eſcape, and being at liberty, promiſeth to B. that if he will permit him to be at large, and further if he does ſuch an act, he will pay to him 10*l.* which he doth not pay; whereupon B. brings aſſumpſit againſt him; it was adjudged, that the action would not lie; for that both the conſiderations ought to be proved, and A. was at large before. 4 Leon. 3.

R. was indebted to B. in 14*l.* and A. was indebted to R. in 50*l.* A. in conſideration that R. allowed him 14*l.* and promiſed him to diſcharge him of ſo much parcel of the ſaid 50*l.* promiſed to pay to the ſaid B. the plaintiff, the ſaid 14*l.* Per tot. cur. (Anderſon abſente) the conſideration is good; for A. was diſcharged of ſo much againſt R. and R. might alſo plead payment of the 14*l.* by the hands of the defendant. Goldſb. 49.

Aſſumpſit

Aſſumpſit for rent upon leaſe for years behind, and demanded; the defendant promiſed the plaintiff, that if he could ſhew him a deed, that the rent was due, he would pay him the rent and arrearages; the plaintiff ſhewed him the indenture of leaſe, by which the rent was due for four years. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the ſhewing of the deed was no conſideration; but it was adjudged for the plaintiff; for when a thing is to be done by the plaintiff, be it never ſo ſmall, it is ſufficient ground of an action, and the ſhewing of the deed is a cauſe to avoid a ſuit. Cro. Eliz. 67.

Conſideration that A. would not proceed to diſprove a will in the prerogative court, &c. is good. Leon. 118.

Love or friendſhip are not conſiderations to ground actions upon. 2 Leon. 30.

Conſideration that A. huſband of the executor, (and with whoſe teſtator the plaintiff was bound in a bond and had paid the money) might have and enjoy the goods of teſtator, he aſſumed to pay the plaintiff, &c. it is void; as if it had been, that defendant might enjoy his own goods. Leon. 173.

If A. is lord of a manor, and a controverſy ariſes between A. and B. concerning a certain copyhold which B. claims to hold of the ſaid manor, whereupon they ſubmit to the judgment and award of J. S. and in conſideration that A. had promiſed to abide thereby, B. aſſumes and promiſes, that if the ſaid J. S. ſhall adjudge the copy inſufficient, that then he the ſaid B. will forthwith deliver up to A. the poſſeſſion thereof; this is a good conſideration, the promiſe being reciprocal, and to avoid variances and ſuits. 1 Leon. 103. 4 Leon. 31.

If the father of A. and B. lying ſick, declares his intention to deviſe a rent of 4*l. per ann.* to his younger ſon, during his life, and thereupon A. the eldeſt ſon, in conſideration that the father will not charge his lands therewith, aſſumes and promiſes to B. to pay the ſaid rent; whereupon the father forbears to charge the land, and dies, and the land deſcends to A. diſcharged of the ſaid rent; this is a good conſideration. 1 Leon. 192.

If B. the daughter of A. be heir apparent to C. and D. promiſes to A. the mother, in conſideration that ſhe would conſent and agree that the ſaid B. her daughter ſhould marry his ſon, that he would give to the ſaid A. 100*l.* upon which A. conſents, and the marriage takes effect; this is a good conſideration; for nature has given the power of diſpoſing to parents, and in nature their children are bound to obey them. 1 Rol. Abr. 19. Moor 857.

If A. being on a treaty with B. for the purchaſe of certain lands from B. comes to B.'s wife, and promiſes her, in conſideration that ſhe would not hinder the bargain, that he would give her 10*l.* or a riding ſuit, this is a good conſideration, and the huſband and wife may have an aſſumpſit on this promiſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 21, 22.

If B. in conſideration that A. at the ſpecial inſtance and requeſt of B. would permit B. to have and to hold a meſſuage and land, then in the occupation of B. una cum proficuis et commoditatibus inde provenientibus to his own uſe, promiſes to pay him 13 s. at Michaelmas after, for rent for the premiſſes; and alſo at the ſaid feaſt to deliver the poſſeſſion of the premiſſes to A. in as good repair as it was at the time of the demiſe; this is a good conſideration to maintain an action, tho' it does not appear that A. had any eſtate therein at the time of the promiſe, and though it appears that B. was then in poſſeſſion thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 23.

But if A. in conſideration that B. will make an eſtate at will to him, ſuch as counſel ſhall deviſe, promiſes, &c. this is no good conſideration, for that he may preſently after the eſtate made determine it. 1 Rol. Abr. 23.

Aſſumpſit. The father having three ſons, had an intent to charge his lands with 4*l. per annum to each of his younger ſons* for their lives, but the eldeſt ſon deſired him not to charge the lands, and promiſed to pay them duly 4*l. per annum*, to which the two younger ſons being preſent agreed; and he promiſed them to pay it: All the court held clearly that it is a good conſideration. Cro. El. 163.

Aſſumpſit, for that iſſue being joined in ejectment between him and the now defendant and another, and intended to be tried at the next aſſizes, in conſideration that the plaintiff and his leſſee would forbear to inforce their title, and make a ſlender defence, he promiſed to pay, &c. upon non aſſumpſit pleaded, the jury found quod aſſumpſit, but that there were two iſſues join'd between the parties, and that the defendants had not join'd, but that one had pleaded the general iſſue, and the other a ſpecial plea, on which iſſue was joined, and the promiſe in conſideration of making a ſlender defence in both iſſues; but adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the common parlance is, that the parties have join'd iſſue, and is as proper where two iſſues are join'd as only one. Moor 351.

A. in conſideration B. would ſell him four cows for 10*l.* promiſed to pay the 10*l. at Eaſter* following, and if he fail'd, that he would pay him 100*l. when required. B.* ſold him the cows, but A. fail'd of payment at Eaſter. B. brought an action for the 100*l.* and recover'd; and on error brought, the conſideration was held good, and the judgment affirmed. Cro. Eliz. 747.

If A. having ſeveral young children, lies ſick, and B. in conſideration that A. after his death will commit the education of his children, and the diſpoſition of his goods, during their minority, to him, aſſumes and promiſes to A. to procure certain lands to be aſſured to one of the children; whereupon A. appoints B. overſeer of his will, and that his goods ſhould be under the diſpoſition of B. A. dies, and B. by virtue thereof, takes poſſeſſion of the ſeveral goods of A. if B. does not procure ſuch lands to be aſſured accordingly, yet ſhall the executor of A. have no action againſt B. for here is no conſideration, inaſmuch as the power which B. had given him was only pro educatione liberorum, and not profit to himſelf; and though ſuch overſeers do too often make their advantage, yet that is contrary to their truſt, and ſuch a fraud as the law will not preſume. 3 Leon. 88.

If there be certain controverſies between A. and B. and they ſubmit to the award of J. S. who among other things is about to award that B. ſhall deliver up to A. two ſeveral obligations, wherein A. was bound to B. whereupon B. in conſideration, that upon the requeſt of A. the clauſe in relation to the delivery up of the obligations ſhall be left out of the award, aſſumes and promiſes to A. to deliver them up to A. gratis, &c. this is a good conſideration, the clauſe being omitted ad ſpecialem inſtantiam ipſius A. 3 Leon. 105.

Aſſumpſit, for that the defendant's brother was indebted to the plaintiff in 8*l.* and made M. his wife executrix, leaving aſſets, and that he intended to ſue the executrix to recover the 8*l. ſecundum debitum legis curſum*, and the defendant, in conſideration the plaintiff would forbear the executrix, promiſed to pay, &c. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this debt ſhall be intended ſtrongeſt againſt the plaintiff, to be a debt upon a ſingle contract, with which an executrix is not chargeable, and to ſtay this ſuit is not any conſideration; and of this opinion were all the court. But if he had declared that he intended to have brought an aſſumpſit againſt her, (as this declaration does not warrant it, becauſe he intends to recover the debt itſelf, which cannot be in action on the caſe) or that he intended to ſue in chancery for it, (which cannot be intended here, becauſe of the words ſecundum debitum legis curſum) then perhaps this action would have lain; for the conſideration of ſtaying the ſuit is good, but as it is here it is not good. Judgment for the defendant. Cro. Eliz. 804.

Conſideration quod conaretur procurare J. S. to permit the defendant to have the poſſeſſion and profit of ſuch an houſe, is good. Conſideration that executor will take 150*l.* for 200*l.* due to teſtator, is good. Yelv. 11.

Promiſe againſt promiſe is a good conſideration; per cur'.

Defendant granted to the plaintiff 1000 trees, to be cut within three years. The plaintiff cut ſome, and the defendant promiſed him, in caſe he would cut no more within the three years, he ſhould have licence to cut the reſidue after the three years, whereupon the defendant deſiſted; this is a good conſideration; admitted by the pleadings. Yelv. 195.

If A. pawns goods to B. upon condition of redemption at a day certain, and after the day the goods being not redeemed, B. ſays he will ſell them, upon which D. ſays, if he will ſtay the ſale of them but for three days, he will pay the money and have the goods; if B. does ſtay the ſale accordingly, B. may have an action againſt D. upon this agreement; for this was in nature of a ſale; and if D. had paid the money, he might have brought a detinue for the goods. 1 Rol. Rep. 215.

If A. and B. are both ſolicitors for the office of under-ſheriff, and A. in conſideration that B. will deſiſt, aſſumes and promiſes to B. that if he the ſaid A. obtains the ſaid office, that he the ſaid A. will pay unto B. 20*l.* for a horſe, &c. this is a good conſideration. Cro. Jac. 612.

A. has lands in D. of which pariſh B. is rector, and B. in conſideration that A. will plant his land with hops, and ſo better the tithes, aſſumes and promiſes to allow him 40*s.* for every acre ſo planted; and whether this is a good conſideration, becauſe the tithes cannot be bettered by the planting of the hops, but by the growing of them, dubitatur. Winch 80.

If A. together with B. is bound to C. for the proper debt of B. &c. and A. pays the money, and B. dies, and makes D. his executor, and D. in conſideration that A. will forbear to ſue him till ſuch a time, aſſumes and promiſes to repay him; this conſideration is good, though D. was liable in equity only. 1 Sid. 89.

Cook Ch. J. ſaid, he had never ſeen it otherwiſe, but that when one draws money from another, this ſhould be a good conſideration to raiſe a promiſe. 3 Bulſt. 162.

If the conſideration puts the other to charge, tho' it be no way profitable to the promiſer, yet this ſhall be a good conſideration to raiſe a promiſe; per Dodderidge J. to which Coke C. J. agreed. 3 Bulſt. 162.

Aſſumpſit againſt an adminiſtratix, on a promiſe to pay a debt of her inteſtate's for wares had of the plaintiff, in conſideration he would let two ſurvey the account, is good. Het. 8, 11.

B. was bound to the plaintiff in 40*l. for payment of* 20*l.* R. the defendant was bound to H. by obligation, dated the 5*th of February* 1721, in 100*l. for payment of* 55*l. on the* 5*th of February following*. The ſaid ſums being due, and not paid, the defendant on the 1*ſt of Feb.* 1724, in conſideration the plaintiff would forbear the 20*l. till* 1727, and would compound with the ſaid H. for the 50*l. and intereſt then due, and deliver the ſaid bonds into his hands, promiſed to pay him the ſaid* 20*l. and* 50*l. and all the intereſt which he ſhould pay or compound for*; all which the plaintiff had perform'd, and the defendant had not paid him, &c. It was objected, that the conſideration as to the 20*l.* is not good; for that the defendant had not any benefit thereby, nor is it alledg'd that he gave notice what he had paid for the compoſition; but it was reſolved, that it being alledg'd that he paid ſo much, and requir'd it, and it was not paid upon requeſt, it was ſufficient; and judgment for the plaintiff, and affirm'd on error. Cro. Car. 272.

If A. in conſideration that B. an infant hath promiſed to permit A. to carry away ſo much of his graſs, &c. aſſumes and promiſes to pay B. 6*l.* the conſideration is good, and B. may maintain an action againſt A. upon this promiſe, notwithſtanding B. may avoid his promiſe. 1 Mod. 25.

If A. and B. are churchwardens of D. and C. at the proſecution of A, and B. is excommunicated for not paying the tax for the reparation of the church of D. and C. in conſideration that the biſhop, at the requeſt of A. and B. would abſolve him, aſſumes and promiſes to pay unto A. and C. ſo much; if C. is accordingly abſolved, A. and B. may have an action upon this promiſe againſt C. for it cannot be intended but the abſolution was at the inſtance of A. and B. and by reaſon of the promiſe to pay them the money. 1 Vent. 297.

If B. is indebted to A. in 20*l.* and C. is indebted to B. in the like ſum, and C. promiſes A. in conſideration that he is content to accept the ſaid ſum by the hands of C. and ſtay for this for four days, that he will pay him the ſaid ſum, this is a good conſideration, for A. to maintain an action upon the caſe againſt C. 1 Rol. Abr. 29.

Debtor pays a ſmall part of a debt, and deſires a general releaſe, and promiſes in conſideration thereof to pay the reſidue when God ſhould enable him, and the defendant did ſeveral times after renew his promiſe to the plaintiff; afterwards a great eſtate fell to the defendant. Quære, If a good conſideration here? Mar. 151, 152.

The count was, that whereas he, at the inſtance and requeſt of the defendant, had taken pains to reconcile differences betwixt the defendant and J. S. and others, the defendant promiſed to pay to the plaintiff 100*l.* at a certain day. It was objected, that this was no more than a voluntary curteſy; but Glyn Ch. J. held e contra; for this was undertaken at the inſtance of the defendant, and here was a continued conſideration until the pains taken were paſt; and judgment, niſi, &c. Sty. 465.

The defendant in conſideration of 5*s.* promiſed to pay 40 s. if he ever play'd a game call'd even or odd for money or wine; this is a good conſideration. Raym. 13.

Every promiſe ought to have a conſideration; and that ought to be either benefit to him that makes it, or diſadvantage to the plaintiff; per Reeve J. Mar. 203.

Aſſumpſit, &c. to pay for a horſe a barley corn a-nail doubling it on every nail; and the plaintiff averr'd, that there were 32 nails in the horſe's ſhoes, and doubling it on every nail, it came to 500 quarters of barley. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, the Ch. J. at the trial directed the jury to give the value of the horſe, which was 8*l.* in damages; and ſo they did. 1 Lev. 111.

If A. is indebted 20*l.* to B. and dies, and his executor, in conſideration that B. will forbear him for a reaſonable time, promiſes to pay him the debt; this is a good conſideration to have an action; with an averment, that he forbore for a certain time. 1 Rol. Abr. 26.

Aſſumpſit, for that he was poſſeſs'd of ſeveral tickets for ſeamens wages, and had an order from the treaſurer of the navy for paying them; and that the defendant being an under-officer, promiſed that if the plaintiff would not trouble the treaſurer in procuring another order, he would pay, &c. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff had not ſhewed any title to the tickets, as that he was executor or adminiſtrator, &c. or by any aſſignment, &c. but per Twiſden J. (abſentibus aliis) it is good enough, after a verdict eſpecially, ſince he declared he had an order from the treaſurer to receive the money, which he could not have granted, unleſs he had a title to it. Judgment for the plaintiff. Sid. 392.

Aſſumpſit, for that W. R. defendant's teſtator being indebted to A. a ſtranger, who aſſign'd the debt to B. the plaintiff, and authorized him to receive it. S. the defendant, the executor, promiſed B. the plaintiff to pay it to him, in conſideration he would accept him for his debtor. Adjudged on demurrer for the defendant, there being no conſideration of forbearance, but to accept him for his debtor, which he is not, he being ſtill debtor to the firſt creditor, and the authority to receive is determined by the death of W. R. the teſtator, and differs from the caſe of Ruſſel v. Haddock, where he who had the authority to receive the debt forbore. Lev. 262.

Aſſumpſit to a vicar, in conſideration of preaching, is good. Sid. 409.

In aſſumpſit, for that the lord O. was indebted to him in 250l. and that the defendant had money of the ſaid lord's ſufficient in his hands to pay the ſaid debt, and that it was mutually agreed between them that the plaintiff ſhould accept 200l. in ſatisfaction of his debt, and that the defendant would pay the money on ſuch a day, and that in conſideration the one would perform his part, the other would perform his part. Upon non aſſumpſit the plaintiff had a verdict, but judgment quod nil capiat, becauſe this was no good conſideration. 2 Jo. 87.

J. S. is indebted to A. in 12*l. and* B. is indebted to J. S. in a like ſum, and B. promiſes A. that if A. at his requeſt, would procure an order from J. S. in writing to B. to to pay the money to A. which B. owed J. S. then B. will pay to A. the money. Per cur. The procuring the note at B.'s the defendant's requeſt, by A. the plaintiff, is a ſufficient conſideration. 2 Vent. 71.

Where the doing a thing will be a good conſideration, a promiſe to do that thing will be ſo too; per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 459.

Parting with my note to the defendant is a good conſideration. 7 Mod. 12, 13.

If A. undertakes to do a thing without hire, as to take brandies out of one cellar, and to lay them down in another cellar, no action lies for the non-feaſance; but if he enters on the doing it, action lies for a miſ-feaſance, if it be through his own neglect, or miſmanagement, becauſe it is a deceit; but not if by meer accident; per Holt. 1 Salk. 26.

4. Where the conſideration ſhall be ſaid to be executed, or continuing.

A conſideration altogether executed and paſt, is not good to maintain an aſſumpſit; but if it were moved by a precedent requeſt, it is good, and doth amount to a promiſe; for it is not reaſonable that one man ſhould do another a kindneſs, and then charge him with a recompence; for this would be obliging him whether he would or no, and a bringing him under an obligation without his own concurrence. 1 Rol. Abr. 11, 12.

Therefore if the ſervant of A. be arreſted in London for a treſpaſs, and J. S. who knows A. bails him, and after A. for his friendſhip promiſes to ſave him harmleſs, and J. S. comes to be charged, yet this is no conſideration to ground an aſſumpſit on, becauſe the bailing, which was the conſideration, was paſt, and executed before. Dyer 272. 2 Rol. Abr. 11. 2 Leon. 225. Owen 144.

But it had been otherwiſe if the maſter had before requeſted him to become bail for his ſervant, and the bailing had been after. Dyer 172.

So if a man requeſts another to labour for his pardon, &c. and after he has done his endeavour, if the other ſays, in conſideration that he has laboured for his pardon at his own charge, he promiſes to pay him ſo much, &c. this is a good conſideration. 1 Rol. Abr. 11. Style 465. Dyer 355.

Aſſumpſit, for that the defendant leaſed lands to the plaintiff, rendring rent, and after ſome years of the term expired, promiſed, that in conſideration the plaintiff had occupied the land, and paid his rent, to ſave him harmleſs againſt all perſons for the occupation for the time paſt and to come; and that afterwards H. diſtrained the plaintiff's cattle on the land. It was objected, that payment of the rent could be no conſideration, becauſe he occupied the land for it, and alſo the conſideration was paſt. But the plaintiff had judgment to recover his damages. Lev. 102.

If one comes to a ſerjeant at law for his counſel, and the ſerjeant adviſes him, and afterwards the client, in conſideration of ſuch counſel, promiſes to pay him 20*l.* an action lies for it; per Wray Ch. J. and ſo Popham ſaid it had been adjudged in the Exchequer. 2 Lev. 111.

If a phyſician, who is my friend, hearing that my ſon is ſick, goes to him in my abſence, and helps, and recovers him, and I being informed thereof promiſed him, in conderation as above, to give him 20*l.* an action will lie for the money. 2 Leon. 111.

Aſſumpſit in conſideration he had bought of the defendant three parcels of land upon the 10*th of* December, the defendant afterwards, viz. the 19*th of* December, promiſed to make ſuch ſufficient aſſurance thereof before ſuch a day.

It was moved after verdict, that the conſideration was executed; but adjudged for the plaintiff, for the aſſurance was the ſubſtance of the ſale. Cro. Eliz. 138.

A precept iſſued to a bailiff to attach goods of J. S. which he did, and delivered them to the then plaintiff, to deliver at the next court, and B. the defendant, in conſideration thereof, aſſumed to ſave him harmleſs. This conſideration was a thing executed before the promiſe, and ſo not good. See 3 Leon. 326.

If A. ſerves B. for a year, but has nothing for his ſervice, and afterwards at the end of the year, B. for his good and faithful ſervices, aſſumes to pay him 10*l. A.* may have an action upon the caſe, upon this promiſe againſt B. for the conſideration is good. 1 Leon. 225.

If A. leaſes lands to B. for a certain term of years rendring rent, and after ſome of the years expired, and the rent paid, A. in conſideration that B. had occupied the land, and paid his rent, aſſumes to ſave him harmleſs againſt all perſons for his occupation paſt and to come; if afterwards the cattle of B. are diſtrained damage-feaſant, he may have an action upon this promiſe againſt A. for the occupation, which is the conſideration, continues. 1 Leon. 102.

If there be a communication between A. and B. concerning a marriage to be had between A. and the daughter of B. upon which B. offers him 200*l.* with his daughter in marriage; but they cannot agree upon the day of payment, and afterwards A. ſteals away the daughter of B. and marries her, without the conſent or knowledge of B. and after B. agrees thereto, and in conſideration of this marriage aſſumes to pay 100*l.* to A. this is a good promiſe, upon which A. may have an action againſt B. for the natural affection of the father, and the advancement of the daughter makes this a conſideration continuing. 2 Leon. 111.

In conſideration that he had paid money for the defendant, and obtained a releaſe of his debt, was held a continuing conſideration, becauſe the benefit of it was continuing to the party. 2 Keb. 99.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that N. the plaintiff had paid for B. the defendant, and at his requeſt, 10*l.* at ſuch a day, (which was a year before) he promiſed to repay it, cum inde requiſitus eſſet. It was objected, that this conſideration was for a thing paſt, and therefore not good. Sed non allocatur; for the payment being laid to be at his requeſt, the conſideration continues, and ſo is the common courſe. Cro. Eliz. 282.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that the plaintiff had ſubmitted himſelf to the award of J. S. the defendant, adtunc et ibidem, promiſed to pay the plaintiff 10*l.* The defendant demurred, becauſe the conſideration was executed; but adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe adtunc et ibidem make the ſubmiſſion intendable at the time of the promiſe. Mo. 367.

Aſſumpſit, &c. in conſideration the plaintiff had delivered to the defendant twenty ſheep, he promiſed to pay him 5*l. at the time of his marriage*, and alledged in fact, that he was married, &c. The whole court held, that becauſe the conſideration was in the preter tenſe, (deliberaſſet) and ſo the conſideration paſt, it is no cauſe of action; and therefore judgment was ſtaid. Cro. Eliz. 442.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that he had given certain money, is ill, becauſe it might be that he had given it before the promiſe. Palm. 560.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that he, at the defendant's requeſt, by deed dedit et conceſſit to the defendant the next avoidance of the church of D. the defendant promiſed to pay the plaintiff 100*l.* Reſolved, that the grant being at his requeſt, it was a ſufficient conſideration, tho' it was divers years paſt, eſpecially it being to the defendant himſelf; otherwiſe peradventure, if it had been to a ſtranger. Cro. Eliz. 715.

A. put his ſon to board with J. S. the plaintiff for three years, at 8 l. a year, and died within the year. M. his widow, in conſideration of natural affection to her ſon, and in conſideration that the ſon ſhould continue during the reſidue of the three years with the plaintiff, promiſed to pay 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d. for the boarding the ſon for the time paſt, and* 8*l. for every year after* of his continuance with the plaintiff. The court agreed, that natural affection of itſelf is not ſufficient to ground an aſſumpſit, without an expreſs quid pro quo; but that is good here, becauſe it is not only in conſideration of affection, but that her ſon ſhould afterwards continue at his table, which is good, as well for the money due before, as for what ſhould afterwards become due. Cro. Elz. 755.

The defendant, in conſideration that the plaintiff had lent him 30 l. before at his requeſt, promiſed to lend the plaintiff 30 l. for a year, or give him 40 s. But this being a conſideration paſt and executed, it was adjudged for the defendant. Cro. El. 885.

Aſſumpſit, for that the defendant requeſted the plaintiff to give his credit for one R. to F. for two tons of wine, value 50 l. and the plaintiff gave bond to F. of 100 l. for the payment thereof; upon which he was ſued, and forced to pay 70 l. at ſuch a day; in conſideration whereof, the defendant promiſed to pay the 70 l. ſuch a day, &c. It was objected, that this was upon a conſideration paſt, and ſo not good; but becauſe R. had credit given him by F. at the defendant's requeſt, upon the plaintiff's undertaking, and the plaintiff was damnified by reaſon thereof, the court held the conſideration to be ſufficient, and not paſt, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Cro. Jac. 18.

A. ſold a horſe to B. for 5 l. and C. the defendant being preſent, ſaid, that in conſideration of the ſale, if B did not pay him, he would ſee him paid. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it was not expreſsly alledged that the ſale was made at C.'s requeſt, and this promiſe is laid to be after the ſale made, and therefore, per tot. cur. judgment was given againſt the plaintiff. Bulſt. 120.

An exchange was made between two of ſo much French money, for ſo much Engliſh, in conſideration whereof one promiſed the other to pay him ſo much. In action upon this promiſe it was ruled, that the conſideration was good; but, becauſe the promiſe was made after the exchange was paſt and executed, the judgment was reverſed in the Exchequer Chamber. 2 Bulſt. 73.

Gale requeſted Clobery to deliver to J. S. 600 l. worth of wine, which he delivered accordingly. Afterwards Gale promiſed Clobery, in conſideration that he at his requeſt had delivered ſo much to J. S. that he would pay him if J. S. did not. J. S. paid only 300 l. and adjudged by all the juſtices of England, that action lies by Cl. againſt G. Palm. 442. cites it as the caſe of Gale v. Clobery, in error.

In aſſumpſit, by a ſervant, ſhe counted that having ſerved the defendant and his wife faithfully, he after his wife's death, in conſideration of the ſervice done to him and his wife, promiſed to pay her 13 s. 4 d. It was objected, that the conſideration is not good, becauſe it is not alledged that ſhe at his requeſt ſerved him, and alſo, that the promiſe was after the ſervice performed; but judgment was for the plaintiff. Hutt. 84.

Aſſumpſit, &c. the plaintiff declared, that on ſuch a day, &c. he ſold ſo much barley to the defendant, part whereof he delivered immediately, and the reſt by agreemeut he was to deliver afterwards, and afterwards on the ſame day the defendant promiſed to pay ſo much by ſuch a day. It was objected, that the promiſe was after the ſale, and ſo being made upon a conſideration executed, it is not good; but per cur. it is good enough, being made on the ſame day, and no diviſion ſhall be made thereof in this caſe. Lat. 150.

Caſe, for that in conſideration the father would ſurrender a copyhold to the defendant, he promiſed to give to M. and S. his two daughters 20 l. apiece. M. alone brought action for 20 l. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff had declared upon a joint promiſe which concerned both, and the action was brought by M. alone, whereas S. ought to be joined; but adjudged, that they had diſtinct intereſts, and by conſequence the action is well brought by one of them. Sty. 461.

In aſſumpſit the plaintiff declared, that whereas the plaintiff at his own charges had buried the defendant's child, the defendant promiſed to pay him his charges; and though no requeſt was laid, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Raym. 260.

In caſe the plaintiff counted, that for ſuch conſideration (which was not executory, but) executed, the defendant aſſumed, &c. the defendant traverſed the conſideration executed. Upon demurrer it was agreed per cur. that a conſideration executed cannot be traverſed; and judgment was given for the plaintiff, none coming for the defendant. Rol. Rep. 401.

The count was for work and labour done for the defendant, but did not ſay that it was done at the defendant's requeſt. The plaintiff had judgment by nil dicit; but upon error brought, this matter was aſſigned; but adjornatur. 2 Barnard, Rep. in B. R. pl. 55.

5. Where aſſumpſit cannot be maintained, the conſideration being againſt law.

As all conſiderations are deemed inſignificant and void, that are not of ſome benefit to the promiſor, or loſs to the promiſee; ſo if they are wicked and ill in themſelves, or unlawful, by being prohibited by ſome act of parliament, they are void; therefore, if an officer, who, by the duty of his office, is obliged to execute writs, promiſes, in conſideration of money paid him, to ſerve a certain proceſs, an aſſumpſit will not lie on this promiſe; for the receipt of the money was extortion, and the conſideration is unlawful. 1 Rol. Abr. 16.

So if an exeeutor ſues execution by elegit, and B. a ſtranger, as a friend to the executor, in conſideration that the ſheriff would forthwith execute the ſaid elegit, and of ſix-pence to him by the ſheriff paid, promiſes to pay him 60 l. upon which the ſheriff executes the writ, yet no action lies, becauſe the conſideration is againſt law; for the ſheriff ought to do his duty without reward, and this 60 l. is no diſcharge of the fees due to the ſheriff, being given by a ſtranger, and not expreſſed for them. 1 Rol. Abr. 16.

But if a man brings a capias that he has againſt A. to the ſheriff, and prays him that he will make J. S. his ſpecial bailiff, and promiſes him that if he will make his ſpecial bailiff, that if A. eſcapes from the bailiff, that he will bring no action for the eſcape againſt him; this is an aſſumpſit upon which an action lies, if he brings any action againſt the ſheriff for the eſcape. 1 Rol. Abr. 16. 1 Leon. 132. 3 Leon. 227. Cro. Eliz. 178.

So where the ſheriff takes goods in execution upon a fieri facias, and a ſtranger promiſes the officer to pay him the debt in caſe he would reſtore them, this is a lawful conſideration; for by the fieri facias, he may ſell goods, and this in effect is doing no more. 1 Salk. 28.

Aſſumpſit, &c. for that defendant being arreſted at the plaintiff's ſuit, in conſideration that the plaintiff would permit him to go at large, and would give authority to the bailiff to that purpoſe, he promiſed to appear at the return of the proceſs, or would give the plaintiff 10 l. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the promiſe was void, being contrary to the ſtatute of 23 H. 6. but Gawdy and Clench held it good, being made to the plaintiff, who had authority to diſpenſe with his appearance; but if it had been made to the ſheriff himſelf, or any other to his uſe, it had been within the equity of the ſtatute. Cro. E. 190.

Aſſumpſit, for that a precept was awarded to a bailiff to attach the goods of S. and he attached him by two quarters of corn, and delivered them to the plaintiff, to deliver them at the next court, and the defendaut aſſumed to ſave him harmleſs. It was the opinion of the court, that the conſideration was void, and againſt law; for attachment cannot be of corn out of ſacks, but if it might, it ought to be kept by the bailiff, and not delivered out of his hands. Cro. El. 230.

A. entered into a bond of 200 l. to B. afterwards A. gave all her goods to R. for payment of her debts; the defendant pretending, that the bond was read to R. as a bond of 100 l. only, promiſed to the plaintiff that if he, and two witneſſes, would depoſe before the mayor of L. that the bond was read to the obligor as a bond conditioned for payment of 200 l. that he would pay the money. The plaintiff, and two other perſons, did depoſe before the mayor of L. accordingly. Adjudged, that it was a lawful oath, and a good conſideration. Cro. E. 469.

Aſſumpſit, &c. for that B. being outlawed, after a judgment againſt him by the plaintiff, the defendant, in conſide- ration the plaintiff would forbear to proceed upon the capias utlagatum, promiſed that if the ſaid B. did not pay the debt he would. After verdict, it was moved, that the conſideration was againſt law, becauſe the proceſs was at the ſuit of the King; but Gawdy, Fenner, and Yelverton held the conſideration good; for the proceſs is at the ſuit of the party, as well as of the King; but Popham, e contra. Judgment for the plaintiff niſi, &c. Cro. El. 909.

If A. in conſideration of ſome benefit, promiſes not to ſet up, or follow the ſame trade with the plaintiff in ſuch a town, this is a good promiſe; but if the promiſe were not to ſet up, or follow the ſame trade in any part of the kingdom, it would be void. See 1 Rol. Abr. 16, 17.

If A. being a clerk promiſes B. in conſideration that B. will procure him to be rector of a donative church, with cure of ſouls, to pay 10 l. to B. this is no good conſideration to maintain an action; for this is ſimony, and an offence againſt the laws of God and man. 1 Rol. Abr. 18.

If A. levies a plaint in the court of Stepney againſt B. upon which a precept is directed to C. the bailiff there, to attach the goods of B. and thereupon C. attaches certain of the goods of B. and A. in conſideration that C. will deliver thoſe goods to him to deliver at the next court, aſſumes and promiſes to ſave C. harmleſs, &c. the conſideration is void, being againſt law; for the bailiff ought not to deliver them to the plaintiff. Cro. Eliz. 230.

If A. being ſeiſed of lands in fee, enters into recogniſance to B. and after makes a feoffment of thoſe lands to C. who, in conſideration that B. will aſſign to him the recogniſance, aſſumes and promiſes to pay him 80 l. this is a good promiſe; for the conſideration being to aſſign to the ter-tenant, it operates by way of diſcharge, and is clearly lawful; otherwiſe of an aſſignment to a ſtranger. Cro. Eliz. 551.

If A. brings B. to a common inn, of which C. is hoſt, and affirms to C. that he hath arreſted B. by virtue of a commiſſion of rebellion, and in conſideration that C. will keep B. as a priſoner by the ſpace of one night, aſſumes and promiſes to ſave C. harmleſs, &c. if B. recovers againſt C. in an action of falſe impriſonment, C. may have an action againſt A. upon this promiſe; for though the conſideration, viz. the keeping of B. was unlawful, yet becauſe it did not appear to C. to be ſo, the promiſe to ſave him harmleſs was good. Hut. 55.

But if it appears, that the act which is to be done is unlawful; as if A. in conſideration that B. will beat C. promiſes to ſave C. harmleſs, the conſideration is void. Hut. 56.

H. was in execution at the ſuit of D.——B. came to M. the gaoler, and promiſed him, that in conſideration he would permit H. to go at large, that H. ſhould pay the debt into court by a certain day to ſatisfy D. and that he would ſave the gaoler harmleſs. M. brought aſſumpſit. But per tot. cur. The promiſe is void, becauſe the conſideration is againſt law. Yelv. 197.

If an informer takes upon him to compound contrary to the ſtatute of 18 Eliz. 5. though it be prohibited, yet the promiſe is good; and though he cannot withdraw the ſuit, yet he may forbear the proſecution; per Montague, Ch. J. 2 Rol. Rep. 103.

The plaintiff and defendant were both ſuitors to the ſheriff of Middleſex, to obtain the office of under-ſheriff for ſuch a year. The defendant, in conſideration the plaintiff would deſiſt his ſuit, promiſed the plaintiff that if he obtained the ſaid office, to pay to the plaintiff 20 l. for a gelding delivered by the plaintiff; all the court held the conſideration to be good and valuable; and adjudged for the plaintiff in C. B. and that judgment affirmed. Cro. J. 612.

If A. is in execution at the ſuit of B. and C. in conſideration that the gaoler will permit A. to go at large, aſſumes and promiſes to him that A. ſhall pay the debt at a certain day, and that he the ſaid C. will ſave the gaoler harmleſs, the promiſe is void; becauſe the conſideration is againſt law. Yelv. 197.

If the father of A. was indebted to B. and A. promiſes B. that if he will bring two witneſſes before a juſtice of peace, who upon their oaths will depoſe, that the father of A. was ſo indebted to B. that then he will pay it; if B. does produce his witneſſes, &c. he may have an action upon this promiſe againſt A. for the conſideration is not unlawful, nor the oath profane; adjudged by two judges againſt Vaughan, who thought it was within the ſtatute againſt prophane ſwearing. 1 Mod. 166. Cro. Eliz. 469, 470.

If A. obtains a judgment againſt B. in the Marſhal's court, and afterwards, in conſideration of money in hand paid, aſſumes and promiſes to aſſign this judgment to C. this is a good promiſe; for it is lawful ſo to do, and the intent muſt be that it ſhall be aſſigned according to common uſage, viz. by a letter of attorney, ſo that C. may take out execution in the name of A. which may be done without any maintenance. 1 Sid. 212.

If I requeſt another to enter into B.'s land, and in my name to drive out the beaſts, and impound them, and promiſe to ſave him harmleſs, this is a good aſſumpſit, and yet the act is tortious; per Hobart, Hutton and Winch. Win. 49.

Aſſumpſit, for that the defendant having a ſci. fa. againſt the goods of J. L. and delivered it to the ſheriff, and affirmed to the plaintiff that the cloth in the ſhop of C. L. were the goods of J. L. and liable to this execution, and required the plaintiff to execute the writ, and if he would ſeize the ſaid cloth, he promiſed, when required, to give bond to the ſheriff in any reaſonable ſum, to indemnify both him and the plaintiff for entering and ſeizing the ſaid goods. It was objected, that this promiſe was grounded upon a conſideration very unlawful, (viz.) to ſave a man harmleſs for taking another man's goods in execution. But the court held the conſideration good, and that the defendant requiring the ſheriff to execute the writ, it was reaſonable he ſhould indemnify him; and a promiſe to give a bond in a reaſonable penalty, without mentioning any certain ſum, is good. Cro. J. 652.

There is a diverſity where one aſſumes to do a thing unlawful, which cannot by any means be made lawful, as to kill a man, or to burn a houſe, &c. and where it is to do a thing unlawful, which in time may be made lawful; as where it is to make a feoffment of the land of a ſtranger, or of an alien, or a corporation, &c. In theſe caſes he is bound to make them, and therefore at his peril muſt obtain lawful liberty to make them; per Walter, Ch. B. Lit. Rep.

If A. obtains a judgment againſt B. and thereupon takes out an elegit, and delivers it to the under-ſheriff, who by virtue thereof ſeizes certain goods of B. and afterwards the under-ſheriff, in conſideration that A. will take out a new elegit, and deliver it to him, he promiſes to cauſe and procure the ſaid goods to be found by inquiſition, and to deliver the ſame to ſuch perſon as A. ſhall appoint, &c. this promiſe is againſt law, being to do a thing againſt the duty of his place, by which he is bound to return an indifferent jury; and though part of the promiſe was to do a lawful act, yet ſince that depended upon the other part, which was illegal, the whole is naught. 2 Jones 284.

Aſſumpſit, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he is a bailiff, and having arreſted J. S. on a warrant, the defendant promis'd, that in conſideration the plaintiff would permit the ſaid J. S. to be in his houſe, he would deliver him to the plaintiff the next morning. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the promiſe was againſt law, and void; for leaving a priſoner in another's houſe and cuſtody is an eſcape. But per cur. They will not intend that the plaintiff was abſent from J. S. and judgment for the plaintiff. Sid. 132.

An attorney being employed to take out execution on a recognizance againſt the defendant, he promiſed to pay him, &c. the defendant demurred to the declaration, for that the conſideration is void, as ariſing ex turpi cauſa, it being contrary to his truſt, and oath of an attorney, to forbear where he is employed to ſue; but per cur. It ſhall be intended the attorney had authority from his client to forbear, or to uſe ſuch means as he might think requiſite to get the debt, and to forbear generally, without ſaying how long, is good; for it ſhall be taken to be a perpetual forbearance. Sid. 294.

A queſtion ariſing between A. the defendant, a cuſtom-houſe officer, and C. a merchant, plaintiff, what the cuſtom of goods imported did amount to, and what ſum B. had paid; A. the defendant, in conſideration C. the plaintiff would pay to him 100 l. (which in truth was leſs than the cuſtom did amount unto) promiſed that if B. had paid no more, C. ſhould pay no more; and averr'd that B. had paid no more; yet the defendant had complain'd to the commiſſioners, and the plaintiff was compell'd to pay more. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected that here was no conſideration, for C. was compellable to pay what was due; and this agreement amounted to no more than to cheat the King, as B. had done. But per cur. Payment of what is due, without any ſuit or trouble, is a good conſideration; and the acceptance of leſs than is due by the officer, and agreement that the merchant ſhall pay no more, is a good agreement between them; for the officer ſhall anſwer to the King for the reſidue out of his own pocket. Lev. 128.

A bailiff had taken J. S. in execution by a ca. ſa. and the defendant, in conſideration he would permit J. S. to ſtay at the houſe of J. D. in H. till ſuch a day, promis'd to ſave him harmleſs from all eſcapes. It was inſiſted, that the conſideration was illegal, becauſe J. S. was in execution; and thereupon the court ſtaid judgment on the firſt, but on laſt day of the term gave judgment for the plaintiff; Hale Ch. J. ſaying, that a long vacation coming on he would delay the judgment no longer, but directed that a writ of error be brought, if thought well of. 2 Lev. 17.

C. an under-ſheriff having ſeized goods on an elegit, ſued out by the plaintiff, promiſed the plaintiff, that in conſideration he would, at C.'s requeſt, ſue out another elegit, to procure the goods to be found by inquiſition, and deliver them to any perſon to be appointed by the plaintiff. The court held the promiſe not lawful; for, 1ſt, the ſeizure upon the firſt elegit, without an inquiſition, was not good; ſo that this promiſe is to make good the tort of the defendant; 2dly, it is the duty of the ſheriff to return an indifferent jury, but this promiſe engages him contrary to the duty of his office; and tho' one part of the promiſe is lawful, yet ſince that depended upon the other part, which was illegal, the whole is naught; and judgment for the defendant. 2 Jo. 24.

In conſideration the plaintiff would deliver the defendant's cattle out of pound, he promiſed to pay or ſave him harmleſs; it was held, that this conſideration was not unlawful, tho' the cattle were duly impounded, becauſe it was not a malum in ſe. 2 Show. 329.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration the officer would reſtore goods taken on a fi. fa. to pay the debt, is a good conſideration. 1 Salk. 28.

6. Pleadings.

The plaintiff muſt ſet forth every thing eſſential to the giſt of the action, with ſuch certainty, that it may appear to the court that there were ſufficient grounds for the action; for if any thing material be omitted, it cannot appear to the court whether the damages given by the jury were in proportion to the demand, or whether the party was at all intitled to a verdict. And therefore in an action upon the caſe, the plaintiff cannot declare quod cum the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in ſuch a ſum, and that the defendant, in conſideration thereof, ſuper ſe aſſumpſit, to pay, &c. without ſhewing cauſe of the debt. 10 Co. 77.

So, if in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares that, in conſideration quod procuravit J. S. to ſurrender a meſſuage, &c. the defendant ſolveret to the plaintiff 10 l. the declaration is not good; for there is no promiſe laid, ſuper ſe aſſumpſit, or agreavit being omitted; and there is nothing here that imports a promiſe or contract. 1 Sid. 246.

Caſe, for that one B. was indebted to him in 10 l. for work, &c. and died inteſtate, and that defendant adminiſtred, and that the defendant did promiſe, that if the plaintiff would forbear till Michaelmas he would pay him, and ſhews that he did forbear the debt, &c. after verdict, it was objected, that the conſideration was uncertain, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth what ſhould be paid, nor to whom, but generally, that the defendant would pay him; and that the conſideration was that parceret indefinitely. Sed non allocatur; for it ſhall be intended of the debt, which is the ſubjecta materia; and that it was alledg'd generally, that he forbore, and did not ſhew how; but by Dodderidge J. iſſue ſhall not be taken whether he forbore or not, but you ſhall ſhew how he ſued you. 2 Rol. Rep. 488.

Aſſumpſit was, that in conſideration that the plaintiff daret diem ſolutionis, the defendant ſuper ſe aſſumpſit; and becauſe he doth not ſay in facto, that he had given day, it was adjudged that no ſufficient conſideration was alledged; but if the conſideration were quod cum indebitatus, &c. the ſame had been a good conſideration without any more; for that implies a conſideration in itſelf. Godb. 13.

The count was, that W. the defendant's brother, on his death-bed call'd the defendant, whom he made his executor, and deſired him to pay the plaintiff's debt in two months time; and that in conſideration thereof he promiſed to do it. The court held that there was no conſideration ſet forth; for it is not ſaid, that in conſideration that W. made the defendant his executor, &c. 3 Leon. 129.

Super ſe aſſumpſit on an inſimul computaſſet was left out, and a difference was endeavoured to be taken where the law raiſes the promiſe, and where it is a ſpecial promiſe; and that in the firſt it ſhould not be needful; but the court held it neceſſary in both; for the law does not create a promiſe in any caſe in pleading, but gives ſufficient evidence to a jury to find a promiſe. But in this action the law requires no greater certainty in the allegations, than the nature of the thing requires; therefore if a contract be made in general terms, the declaration may likewiſe be general; hence a quantum meruit for diverſa veſtimenta & omnia alia materialia adinde ſpectantia, is good. 2 Keb. 97. 1 Sid. 306.

So if in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares that, in conſideration the plaintiff would find and provide for a ſick man all ſuch neceſſaries as he ſhall want, the defendant aſſumed and promiſed to pay, &c. and avers that he had found him neceſſaries amounting to ſuch a ſum, &c. this is a good declaration, without ſhewing in particular what thoſe neceſſaries were; for that would make the record too prolix. 3 Bulſt. 31.

The count was, that in conſideration that quædam pars domus, &c. was in decay, and the plaintiff would repair the ſame, defendant promiſed to pay, &c. and declar'd, that eandem partem domus prædictæ reparavit; it was moved, that quædam pars domus was too general in the count, and that he ought to have ſhew'd ſpecially what part in certain, as hall, chamber, &c. ſed non allocatur. 2 Leon. 53.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that at the requeſt of the defendant, he would deliver as many quarters of malt to J. S. to his uſe, as he would receive or have before 1ſt Auguſt, the defendant promis'd to pay tales denariorum ſummas, &c. before the ſaid 1ſt day of Auguſt, and alledges he delivered ſo many quarters, each of ſuch value; tho' he doth not promiſe any ſum certain, but tales denariorum ſummas, without ſaying what, yet it was held good; for per Wray, when the plaintiff ſhews the value of every quarter, it is intended he ſhall pay according to the rate; and judgment for the plaintiff. Cro. El. 149.

Aſſumpſit, for that in conſideration he by his ſervant had delivered to the defendant two bills of 300 French crowns, amounting to 80 l. to be received at Roan in Normandy to his uſe, the defendant promiſed to pay him 61 l. it was moved that there is no conſideration; for it appeareth not how he ſhall recover them, if he be denied payment, nor that they were bills made to the plaintiff, nor what benefit he may have by them; but adjudged in C. B. to be a good conſideration, and well alledg'd; and the court of B. R. held ſo too; ſed adjornatur. Cro. Eliz. 155.

If in an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declares that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 10 l. for the feeding and agiſtment of beaſts, and for wheat, & aliis mercimoniis per prædict' the defendant habit' & recept', this is a good declaration; for though it be not ſufficient to to ſay that he was indebted generally, becauſe that may be for rent upon leaſes or debts upon ſpecialties, yet this is certain enough; for as well the wares and merchandiſes, as the paſturing and wheat, are perſonal things, for which an aſſumpſit may be brought. Hob. 5.

So in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares pro opere & labore generally, without ſetting forth what ſort or manner of work or labour it was; and though it was objected that it ſhould be ſet forth particularly, ſo that it may appear to the court to be lawful work, yet the court held it well enough; and that the only reaſon why the plaintiff is obliged to ſhew wherein the defendant is indebted is, that it may appear to the court that it is not a debt on record or ſpecialty, but only upon ſimple contract; and any general words, by which that may be made to appear, are ſufficient. Carth. 276.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, that whereas the defendant had received 24 l. of ſeveral perſons, to the uſe of the plaintiff, in conſideration thereof the defendant did aſſume and promiſe to pay, &c. this is a good declaration, without ſhewing of what perſons in particular he received the money, becauſe the conſideration is executed, and not traverſable. Moor 854.

Aſſumpſit. The plaintiff declares, that in conſideration the defendant ſhould enjoy ſuch goods, &c. he would pay the party 25 l. the jury upon non aſſumpſit found, that he promiſed to pay, if he enjoyed ſuch goods, &c. and it was adjudged for the defendant, becauſe the plaintiff declared of an abſolute promiſe, and the jury found a conditional promiſe. Cro. Eliz. 149.

The count was, that in conſideration the plaintiff reſpectuaret the defendant pro ſolutione debiti prædicti per ſpatium unius ſeptimanæ tunc proxime ſequentis, to pay the debt to the ſaid plaintiff modo ſequenti, viz. one moiety within one week after, and the other moiety at the end of the ſaid week, and counts that he did forbear by the ſpace of a week. It was objected that the conſideration was not ſufficient, without ſaying that he had forborn for a week next following, as laid in the count. Sed non allocatur; for it ſhall be intended. It was alſo objected, that the declaration is repugnant, by ſetting forth that the conſideration was the forbearing for a week, and that he promiſed to pay within a week. Sed non allocatur; for the week in the aſſumpſit ſhall be conſtrued to be the week after the week in the conſideration. 2 Leon. 112.

Aſſumpſit, for that the defendant was poſſeſſed of divers goods of the plaintiff's, and in conſideration the plaintiff would forbear the goods, the defendant promiſed to deliver them within ſix months. It was ſaid, there was no conſideration; for he does not ſhew what goods they were, and ſo uncertain; but per cur. There needs not any certainty to be ſhewn of them; for he is not to recover the goods in ſpecie, but damages for them; and adjudged for the plaintiff. Cro. El. 387.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, quod cum there were ſeveral reckonings and accounts between the plaintiff and defendant; and at ſuch a day, &c. inſimul computaverunt for all debts, reckonings and demands; and the defendant upon the ſaid account was found to be in arrear the ſum of 20 l. in conſideration whereof the defendant promiſed to pay, &c. this is a good declaration, without ſhewing it was pro mercimoniis, or otherwiſe, wherefore he ſhould have an account; for an account may be for divers cauſes, and ſeveral matters and things may be included and comprized therein, which in pede computi are reduced to a ſum certain, and thereupon being indebted to the plaintiff, it is ſufficient to ground an action. Cro. Car. 116.

If in a quantum meruit for meat, &c. the plaintiff declares upon a promiſe, to pay ſo much quantum rationabiliter valerent, this is a good declaration, though general; and though objected that it ought to have been valebant. 3 Mod. 190.

J. S. was indebted to T. the plaintiff in 100 l. and in conſideration that T. would abate 10 l. of the debt, and forbear the 90 l. reſidue till Michaelmas, the defendant promiſed to pay the 90 l. then, if J. S. did not; and alledg'd that he had abated the 10 l. and forbore the 90 l. till Michaelmas. It was demurr'd, becauſe he did not ſhew how he abated him the 10 l. ſo as the court might take conuſance whether it was a ſufficient diſcharge; and of that opinion was the whole court. Cro. El. 477.

In conſideration the plaintiff would relinquiſh ſuch a ſuit, the defendant promiſed, &c. after judgment for the plaintiff, it was aſſign'd for error, that the plaintiff ought to have averr'd that the action, which he was to diſcharge, was actionable, which not being done, was held to be error, and the judgment revers'd in the Exchequer-Chamber. Cro. El. 561.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration he would permit the defendant to enjoy ſuch lands for a year, he promiſed to give the plaintiff 10 l. for that year; and alledges in fact that the defendant enjoy'd it by his permiſſion; but becauſe it was not ſhewed what right or title he had to the land to licenſe the defendant to enjoy it, it was holden there was no good conſideration or cauſe of action. Cro. El. pl. 28.

Aſſumpſit againſt an executor, for that his teſtator was indebted 33 l. to the plaintiff, and in conſideration the plaintiff would forbear to ſue him till he the defendant ſhould get execution upon ſuch a judgment, he promiſed to pay the money upon requeſt. It was objected, that it did not appear the teſtator was indebted, or that the defendant had aſſets; but adjudged that the action is grounded upon the promiſe of the defendant, and it ſhall be intended that he was indebted, otherwiſe the executor would not promiſe. Cro. J. 593.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, that the defendant in conſideration of, &c. inter alia, did aſſume to pay, &c. that is no good declaration, becauſe he ought to ſet forth the whole promiſe which is intire. Allen 5.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, that in conſideration the plaintiff had promiſed to deliver a cow to the uſe of the defendant, the defendant did aſſume and promiſe, &c. this is a good declaration, without any averment of the delivery of the cow, becauſe there is promiſe for promiſe. Hob. 88.

The defendant promiſed to give the plaintiff 40 l. to cure him of the pox; however, he promiſed to give him 10 l. for his endeavour to cure him; and in an action brought for this 10 l. the plaintiff ſet forth that he endeavoured to cure him, but alledged no place where; upon a traverſe to the endeavour, and iſſue join'd, the plaintiff had a verdict; but the judgment was arreſted. 2 Rol. Rep. 312.

The plaintiff declared upon a promiſe to pay him ſuch fees as ſhould be due to him as his attorney in the proſecuting a ſuit for him in C. B. and ſuch money as he ſhould lay out in ſoliciting a ſuit for him in Chancery; upon non aſſumpſit pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and upon error brought, the error aſſigned was, that the plaintiff did not ſhew particularly what ſums of money he had laid out for the defendant, nor to whom paid. But adjudged, that it was not neceſſary ſo to do; and that if he ſhould bring any other action for his fees, or money laid out, the defendant might plead this recovery in bar. Sty. 428.

A. and B. agreed to run a horſe-race, and the winner to have of the other 200 l. The count was, whereas the plaintiff had promiſed to perform on his part, the defendant had promiſed to perform on his; this was adjudged to be good, and ſufficiently certain. Hard. 103.

In conſideration the plaintiff would forbear to take his courſe for the monies, the defendant promiſed that he would pay them; it was objected, that the words are uncertain, and that he ſhould have ſaid (his courſe in law), and not generally (his courſe). But Roll Ch. J. held the conſideration certainly enough ſet forth, tho' the Latin be not very proper; and judgment for the plaintiff, niſi, &c. Sty. 264.

If in a quantum meruit for medicines, the defendant pleads, that he had paid the plaintiff tot & tantas denariorum ſummas, as the ſaid medicines were worth, without ſhewing what ſum in certain he hath paid; this is no good plea. March 77.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, that the defendant did aſſume and promiſe to pay to the plaintiff ſo much money, and alſo to carry away certain wood before ſuch a day; the defendant as to the money cannot plead that he

he paid it, and as to the carriage of the wood non aſſumpſit, for the promiſe being intire cannot be apportioned. March 100.

Aſſumpſit, for that the plaintiff and H. were bargaining for a horſe, and the defendant promiſed, that if they agreed on the price he would pay the money, and that he agreed for ſo much, but the defendant did not pay it; it was aſſign'd for error, that here was no conſideration; for 'tis not that he ſhould ſell or deliver the horſe, ſo the plaintiff hath no loſs, nor the defendant any benefit; but judgment affirm'd; for it ſhall be intended after a verdict, that upon this promiſe the horſe was delivered; and that the promiſe was the inducement thereto. 1 Lev. 103.

If the plaintiff declares upon an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and upon a quantum meruit, and the defendant pleads, that after the ſaid ſeveral promiſes made, and before the action brought, the plaintiff and defendant came to an account concerning divers ſums of money, and that the defendant was found in arrear to the plaintiff 30 l. and thereupon, in conſideration that the defendant promiſed to pay the ſaid 30 l. the plaintiff likewiſe promiſed to releaſe and acquit the defendant of all demands, this is a good plea; for by the account the firſt contract is merged. 2 Mod. 43, 44.

The defendant cannot plead that he revoked his promiſe; as if A. is in execution at the ſuit of B. and J. S. deſires B. to let him go at large, and that he will ſatisfy him; to which B. agrees; though J. S. before any thing is done in purſuance of this promiſe and agreement, comes to B. and tells him, that he revokes his promiſe, and that he will not ſtand to it; yet ſuch revocation cannot be pleaded in bar to the action. 1 Rol. Abr. 32.

In aſſumpſit the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration that he had done the defendant multum & gratiſſimum ſervitium, he promiſed to pay the plaintiff 10 l. and alſo in conſideration that he had done him multa beneficia, he promis'd, &c. it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that neither of theſe conſiderations were ſufficient, eſpecially the laſt, becauſe there ought to have been ſome ſervice particularly expreſs'd; and the court for that reaſon held it merely void, and judgment quod querens nil capiat, &c. Vent. 27.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, that in conſideration the plaintiff would ſolicit a buſineſs for the defendant, which he had with J. S. & finem adinde poneret, the defendant did aſſume, &c. and that he had ſolicited and employed much care and pains, &c. but before he could finem inde ponere, the defendant countermanded him, the action lies; though it was objected, that ſuch employment is always countermandable; and if the plaintiff had beſtowed pains, and in part done the thing before the countermand, he might have had a quantum meruit for what he had done, but not an aſſumpſit for the whole; yet it was reſolved by the court, that if after part done the defendant countermands it, the plaintiff ſhall have an action for the whole, and upon the trial the jury ought to give as much in damages as the buſineſs done deſerves. 3 Lev. 244.

If A. being poſſeſſed of a horſe and lends him to B. and B. aſſumes and promiſes to re-deliver the horſe to A. by a day, before which day the true owner of the horſe contra voluntatem takes him from B. this matter, by reaſon of the precedent property, is quaſi an eviction of the horſe from the poſſeſſion of B. and ſhall diſcharge B. of his promiſe. Yelv. 22.

Aſſumpſit, for that the defendant promiſed to give him ſo much pro opere ſuo facto; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here is nothing to found an aſſumpſit upon; for (opus factum) may be any neighbourly kindneſs, and ſo the declaration too general; but adjudged, that 'tis the ſame as pro labore ſuo, which hath been held good, and being after a verdict, it ſhall be intended that ſuch labour as implied a conſideration was given in evidence. Sid. 425.

In action againſt an heir on the bond of his anceſtor, ſetting forth that the defendant, in conſideration the plaintiff would forbear to ſue for ſuch a time, promiſed to pay him; the plaintiff ought to ſhew that the anceſtor was bound, or otherwiſe he cannot have judgment; and it ſhall not be intended after verdict. Vent. 159.

Caſe, &c. for that the plaintiff pretended a title to certain goods in the poſſeſſion of S. P. and claimed them to be his own, and intending to remove them, the defendant, in conſideration that the plaintiff would ſuffer them to continue there, promiſed to ſee them forth-coming, and not imbeziled, &c. it was objected, that here was no good conſideration, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth any property in the goods, but only that he pretended to, and claimed them as his own. Sed non allocatur; for after a verdict it ſhall be intended that he proved that they were his own. Vent. 211.

Attachment, (from attach) Is a proceſs that iſſues at the diſcretion of the judges of a court of record, againſt a perſon for ſome contempt, for which he is to be committed, and may be awarded by them upon a bare ſuggeſtion, or on their own knowledge, without any appeal, indictment or information; for though by the ſtatute of Magna Charta, none are to be impriſoned ſine judicio parium vel per legem terræ; yet this ſummary method of proceeding being abſolutely neceſſary to the furtherance and execution of juſtice, ſeems to have been long practis'd, and is certainly now eſtabliſhed as part of the law of the land. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. c. 16. 1 New Abr. 180. See Weſt. 2. c. 3.

2. Proceeding upon an attachment.

1. In what caſes an attachment is to be granted.

All courts of record have a diſcretionary power over their own officers, and are to ſee that no abuſes be committed by them, which may bring diſgrace on the courts themſelves; therefore if a ſheriff or other officer ſhall be guilty of a corrupt practice in not ſerving a writ; as if he refuſe to do it, unleſs paid an unreaſonable gratuity from the plaintiff, or receive a bribe from the defendant, or give him notice to remove his perſon or effects, in order to prevent the ſervice of any writ; the court which awarded it may puniſh ſuch offences in ſuch manner as ſhall ſeem proper by attachment. Dyer 218. 2 Hawk. P. C. 142.

But if there be no palpable corruption, nor extraordinary circumſtance of wilful negligence or obſtinacy, the judgment whereof is to be left to the diſcretion of the court; it ſeems not uſual to proceed in this manner, but to leave the party to his ordinary remedy againſt the ſheriff, either by action, or by rules to return the writ, or by an alias and pluries, which if he have no excuſe for not executing, an attachment goes of courſe. Hob. 62, 264. Noy 101. F. N. B. 38. Finch 237. 5 Mod. 314, 315.

Alſo ſheriffs and other officers are liable to an attachment for an oppreſſive or illegal practice in the execution of a writ; as uſing needleſs force, violence or terror, treating perſons under an arreſt baſely and inhumanly, extorting money from them, &c. or making an arreſt without due authority, or by colour of a blank warrant, filled up without the privity or ſubſequent agreement of the ſheriff. 11 Hen. 6. 42. Noy 101. Moor 770. 2 Rol. Abr. 278.

Alſo an attachment is grantable for a corrupt practice, in not executing a writ effectually; as if a ſheriff, having levied a debt on an execution, imbezils the money. 2 Hawk. P. C. 143.

Alſo an attachment is grantable in diſcretion for a falſe return to a writ, but this is not uſually done without ſome viſible corruption, or extraordinary circumſtances of malice, hardſhip, or oppreſſion. 2 Hawk. P. C. 143.

Attornies are liable to an attachment, and have been puniſhed in this manner in numberleſs inſtances; as for proſecuting or defending a ſuit without directions from the party; for baſe and unfair dealings towards their clients in the way of buſineſs; as for protracting ſuits by little ſhifts, demanding money for buſineſs never done, detaining their clients writings, or their money recovered and received by them; for barely attempting to forge a writ, or other matter of record, for giving directions to a ſheriff what perſons they ſhall return on a panel, or for endeavouring to impoſe on the court, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 144, 145.

Alſo all other officers of courts of record are in like manner puniſhable for diſobeying the commands of ſuch courts, or for executing them oppreſſively, or otherwiſe miſdemeaning themſelves in their offices. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 145.

Gaolers are puniſhable in this ſummary way, for groſs miſbehaviours in their offices, by the courts to which they more immediately belong; alſo by diſobeying a habeas corpus iſſuing out of a court which has authority to award it, and by the court of King's Bench, for uſing priſoners barbarouſly and inhumanly. 2 Hawk. P. C. 151.

A judgment-creditor brought a ſci. fa. againſt the principal, after the death of the bail, who had paid the debt, and had a releaſe and ſatisfaction acknowledged; adjudged, that theſe proceedings were undue, and in contempt of the court, and therefore an attachment was granted againſt the creditor. 2 Bulſt. 68.

In debt upon a ſingle bill, the defendant pleaded payment, upon which they were at iſſue, and a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff; afterwards the defendant brought an audita querela; and upon an averment of payment of the money, he was bailed out of execution; but upon a motion to the court by the judgment-creditor it was adjudged, that this audita querela would not lie, becauſe the defendant was bailed out of court; and therefore he was taken in execution again by a rule of court, and an attachment was granted againſt the attornies who proſecuted the audita querela, and got the defendant bailed. 1 Bulſt. 140.

In ejectment to be tried at the bar, the defendant pleaded infancy on purpoſe to put off the trial; but it was found by proof on oath, and by ſearching the regiſter, that the party was thirty-ſix years old, and thereupon an attachment was granted againſt him. 2 Bulſt. 67.

The plaintiff had a verdict, but before the judgment was entered, he arreſted the defendant, for no other cauſe, but that he might have him in cuſtody when the judgment was entered; and this appearing to the court by affidavit, there was an attachment granted againſt him. Style 211.

The plaintiff arreſted the defendant by proceſs out of the court of King's Bench, directed to the ſheriff of Wilts, and carried him to Marlborough, where he arreſted him again by a ſerjeant of that town, by proceſs out of the corporation court, and proceeded againſt him in that court, and not upon the latitat, upon which he was firſt arreſted; adjudged, that this was a contempt of the court, and thereupon an attachment was granted againſt him, and an habeas corpus cum cauſa to bring up the defendant. Style 239.

The court of King's Bench, as it has a ſuperintendancy over all inferior courts, may grant an attachment againſt the judges of ſuch courts, for oppreſſive, unjuſt, or irregular practice, contrary to the obvious rules of natural juſtice; as for denying a defendant a copy of the declaration, or going on to trial without giving him notice, or time to make his defence, or for compelling him to give exorbitant bail, or for taking unreaſonable diſtreſſes, or for taking money for vitious pleading, for proceeding after a prohibition, certiorari, &c. 1 Salk. 210. 1 Keb. 484. Palm. 564. 6 Mod. 90.

An attachment is the proper remedy for diſobedience of the rules of court; as of thoſe made in ejectment, arbitrament, &c. So where a defendant in account, being ing adjudged to account before the auditors, refuſes to do it, unleſs they will allow matter diſallowed by the court before, or where one refuſes to pay coſts taxed by the maſter, whoſe taxation the law looks upon as a taxation by the court. 1 Mod. 21. 1 Salk. 71.

But an attachment is not uſually granted for diſobedience of a rule of niſi prius, unleſs it be firſt made a rule of court; nor for diſobedience of a rule made by a judge at his chamber, unleſs it be entered; nor for diſobedience of any rule without perſonal ſervice. 1 Salk. 84.

Alſo an attachment is proper for abuſes of the proceſs of the court; as for ſuing out execution where there is no judgment, bringing an appeal for the death of one known to be alive, making uſe of the proceſs of a ſuperior court, as a ſtale to bring a defendant within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, and then dropping it, uſing ſuch proceſs in a vexatious, oppreſſive, or unjuſt manner, without colour of ſerving any other end by it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 154.

An attachment was granted againſt an attorney, who was a mayor of Newbury, for iſſuing out an execution upon a judgment obtained in the corporation-court, after a writ of error delivered to him, and allowed; but he proving, that he was informed by counſel, that the record was not well removed by reaſon of a defect in the writ of error, he was diſcharged. Style 321.

A juſtice of peace proceeded upon an indictment of forcible entry, after a certiorari delivered, and fined the party; the rule was, that he ſhould be examined upon interrogatories, and return the certiorari, and reſtore the fine. Style 395.

A witneſs who attended the court in a cauſe there to be tried, was arreſted, whereupon a ſuperſedeas was granted to diſcharge him, and an attachment againſt the perſon who arreſted him. Style 395.

Attachment againſt the defendant upon affidavit made, that he, being ſerved with a rule of court, to ſhew cauſe why an information ſhould not be filed againſt him, ſaid, he did not care a fart for the rule of court, though it was inſiſted for him, that he ſhould have a rule to ſhew cauſe why the attachment ſhould not be granted; but it was held, that he ſhall anſwer in cuſtody, for it is to no purpoſe to ſerve him with one rule who had deſpiſed the firſt, ſo he was brought in, and bound in a recognizance to anſwer interrogatories. 1 Salk. 84.

Upon an affidavit made, that the defendant had committed waſte, a writ of eſtrepement was directed to the ſheriff, and executed; the court was moved for an attachment, but it was not granted, becauſe it appeared that waſte was done upon affidavit, which was only the opinion of him who made it, when it ſhould have appeared, either by pleading, or upon the return of the ſheriff. Winch. 15.

The plaintiff was by rule of court of B. R. put into poſſeſſion of certain lands; the defendant, in contempt of the rule, diſturbed him in the poſſeſſion; and upon a motion for an attachment it was denied, becauſe it appeared, that the plaintiff was only diſturbed, and not put out of poſſeſſion, nor his cattle drove off the land. Style 277.

Upon a motion for an attachment, for that the defendant had put one out of poſſeſſion, who was put in by virtue of an habere facias poſſeſſionem; it was denied, becauſe it was inſiſted on by the defendant, that he came in by an elder judgment, and an extent upon it. Style 318.

An attachment will not lie againſt a corporation, but if it is granted niſi cauſa, and afterwards the corporation will not reſtore a member, in ſuch caſe the court will grant reſtitution. Raym. 152.

Libel in the ſpiritual court for tithes in the year 1610, to which the defendant pleaded a modus, and thereupon a prohibition was granted, and afterwards the ſame perſon libelled for tithes in the year 1611; adjudged, that if the libel had been for the ſame tithes after the prohibition granted, in ſuch caſe an attachment ſhould be againſt him for his contempt, or the defendant might have a ſpecial action on the caſe. 2 Bulſt. 289.

2. Proceeding upon an attachment.

Attachments are uſually granted on a rule to ſhew cauſe, unleſs the offence complained of be of a flagrant nature, and poſitively ſworn to; in which laſt caſe the party is ordered to attend, which he muſt do in perſon, as muſt every one againſt whom an attachment is granted; and if he ſhall appear to be apparently guilty, the court in diſcretion, on conſideration of the nature of the crime, and other circumſtances, will either commit him immediately, in order to anſwer interrogatories to be exhibited againſt him, concerning the contempt complained of, or will ſuffer him to enter into recognizance to anſwer ſuch interrogatories; which if they be not exhibited within four days, the party may move to have the recognizance diſcharged; otherwiſe he muſt anſwer them, tho' exhibited after the four days; but in all caſes, if he fully anſwer them, he ſhall be diſcharged as to the attachment, and the proſecutor ſhall be left to proceed againſt him for the perjury, if he thinks fit; but if he deny part of the contempts only, and confeſs other part, he ſhall not be diſcharged as to thoſe denied, but the truth of them ſhall be examined, and ſuch puniſhment inflicted as from the whole ſhall appear reaſonable; and if his anſwer be evaſive as to any material part, he ſhall be puniſhed in the ſame manner as if he had confeſſed it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 141. 1 Salk. 84. 6 Mod. 73. 2 Jones 178.

Attachment foreign, is an attachment of the goods of foreigners, found in ſome liberty, to ſatisfy their creditors within ſuch liberty. Carth. Rep. 66. And by the cuſtom of ſome places, as London, &c. a man may attach money, or goods, in the hands of a ſtranger. But a foreign attachment cannot be had when a ſuit is depending in any of the courts at Weſtminſter; which makes the matter not to be meddled with by any other court. Cro. Eliz. 691. And nothing is attachable but for a certain and due debt: though by the cuſtom of London money may be attached before due, as a debt; but not levied before due. Sid. 327. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 282, 283.

Foreign attachments in London, upon plaint of debt, are made after this manner: A. oweth B. 100*l.* and C. is indebted to A. 100*l.* B. enters an action againſt A. of 200*l.* and by virtue of that action a ſerjeant attacheth 100*l.* in the hands of C. as the money of A. to the uſe of B. which is returned upon that action. The attachment being made, and returned by the ſerjeant, the plaintiff is immediately to fee an attorney before the next court holden for the Compter; or the defendant may then put in bail to the attachment, and nonſuit the plaintiff: four court days muſt paſs before the plaintiff can cauſe C. the garniſhee, in whoſe hands the money was attached, to ſhew cauſe why B. ſhould not condemn the 100*l.* attached in the hands of C. as the money of A. the defendant in the action (though not in the attachment) to the uſe of B. the plaintiff: and the garniſhee C. may appear in court by his attorney, wage his law, and plead that he hath no money in his hands of the defendant's, or other ſpecial matter; but the plaintiff may hinder his waging of law, by producing two ſufficient citizens to ſwear that the garniſhee had either money or goods in his hands of A. at the time of the attachment, of which affidavit is to be made before the lord mayor, and being filed, may be pleaded by way of eſtoppel: then the plaintiff muſt put in bail, that if the defendant come within a year and a day into court, and he can diſcharge himſelf of the money condemned in court, and that he owed nothing to the plaintiff at the time in the plaint mentioned, the ſaid money ſhall be forth-coming, &c. if the garniſhee fail to appear by his attorney, being warned by the officer to come into court to ſhew cauſe as aforeſaid, he is taken by default for want of appearing, and judgment given againſt him for the goods and money attached in his hands, and he is without remedy either at common law or in equity; for if taken in execution, he muſt pay the money condemned, though he hath not one penny, or go to priſon; but the garniſhee appearing to ſhew cauſe why the money or goods attached in his hands ought not not to be condemned to the uſe of the plaintiff, having feed an attorney, may plead as aforeſaid, that he hath no money or goods in his hands of the party's againſt whom the attachment is made, and it will then be tried by a jury, and judgment awarded, &c. but after trial, bail may be put in, whereby the attachment ſhall be diſſolved, but the garniſhee, &c. and his ſecurity will then be liable to what debt the plaintiff ſhall make out to be due, upon the action: and an attachment is never thoroughly perfected, till there is a bail, and ſatisfaction upon record. Privileg. Lond.

1. Where attachment lieth for debt and other things by the cuſtom of London, and where not.

A citizen of London was indebted to a foreigner upon bond, and the foreigner was indebted to the citizen upon a ſimple contract; the foreigner died, and upon oath made by the citizen, that his debt was a juſt debt, he levied a plaint in London againſt the executor of the foreigner; and upon four defaults recorded, he had judgment, and then he attached the debt in his own hands, finding ſureties, that if the debt was not diſproved by the executor within a year and a day, or the judgment reverſed, that then he ſhould be diſcharged of ſo much of the debt which he owed on the bond; the queſtion was, whether this cuſtom did extend to foreigners, as well as to citizens; it was not reſolved. Dyer 199.

Debt upon bond for one hundred marks, conditioned to pay 50 l. on ſuch a day, &c. the defendant pleaded a tender upon the day, upon which they were at iſſue, but afterwards he pleaded, that after the laſt continuance the one hundred marks were attached in his hands in London, at the ſuit of another, &c. And upon demurrer to this plea the court at firſt doubted, whether an attachment was good pending an action in the courts at Weſtminſter; but afterwards they held, that the one hundred marks were attachable after the laſt continuance. Cro. Eliz. 101, 691.

In an action on the caſe the plaintiff had judgment againſt the defendant, and he owing 60 l. to one G. D. he entered a plaint againſt him in London, and attached the 60 l. in the hands of the ſaid defendant, againſt whom the plaintiff had recovered as aforeſaid, and had execution according to the cuſtom; afterwards the plaintiff brought a ſci. fa. againſt the defendant, to ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not have execution upon the judgment which he had recovered, to which the defendant pleaded the execution upon the attachment; and upon demurrer to that plea it was adjudged againſt the defendant, becauſe a duty which accrueth by matter of record, cannot be attached by the cuſtom of London; for judgments obtained in the King's courts ſhall not be defeated or avoided by ſuch particular cuſtoms, they being of ſo high a nature, that they cannot be reached by attachment. 1 Leon. 29.

Debtor and creditor being both citizens of London, the debtor delivered ſeveral goods to the Exeter carrier then in London, to carry and deliver them at Exeter, and the creditor attached them in the hands of the carrier for the debt due to him from his debtor; adjudged, that the action ſhould be diſcharged, becauſe the carrier is privileged in his perſon and goods, and not only in the goods which are his own, but in thoſe of other men of which he is in poſſeſſion, for he is anſwerable for them. 1 Leon. 189.

Upon a plaint affirmed in the court of the city of Exeter againſt the defendant; the money due to the plaintiff was attached in the hands of G. D. upon a ſuggeſtion, that he owed money to the defendant; thereupon the ſaid G. D. appeared to the attachment, and pleaded nil debet to the defendant; and upon demurrer to this plea there was judgment againſt him, becauſe he ought to have pleaded not only nil debet, but alſo that he had no goods of the defendant's in his hands, whereupon G. D. brought a writ of error, &c. and the judgment in Exeter was reverſed; for it was adjudged, that nil debet alone was a good plea. 1 Leon. 321.

The debtor owed the creditor 100 l. and G. D. owed the debtor 12 l. the debtor died inteſtate, and the ordinary granted adminiſtration to W. afterwards the creditor affirmed a plaint in London againſt the ordinary for the 100 l. and upon his ſuggeſtion that by the default of the ordinary (being returned nihil habet,) the 12 l. was attached in the hands of G. D. and after the fourth default of the ordinary, it being returned non eſt inventus, the plaintiff recovered againſt G. D. afterwards the adminiſtrator brought an action of debt againſt him for this 12 l. to which he pleaded in bar this cuſtom of foreign attachment; and upon a demurrer to this plea the adminiſtrator had judgment, becauſe no action did lie againſt the ordinary after adminiſtration granted, neither could the adminiſtrator have any action againſt G. D. the debtor of the inteſtate. Dyer 247.

A ſum of money was to be paid at Michaelmas, and it was attached before that day; adjudged, that a foreign attachment cannot reach a debt before it is due; therefore, though the judgment on the attachment was after Michaelmas, yet the money being attached before it was due, it is for that reaſon void. Cro. Eliz. 184.

In treſpaſs for taking a dyer's furnace, it was found, that upon a plaint levied, the ſheriff attached it, being faſtened to a wall of the houſe, and delivered it to the defendant, againſt whom the action was now brought; adjudged, that it being fixed to the wall, it could not be attached. Cro. Eliz. 374.

An executor ſubmitted to an award, and the arbitrators awarded, that the defendant ſhould pay the executor 350 l. This money is not attachable in his hands by any creditor of his teſtator, though it is aſſets in his hands when he recovered, becauſe it was not due to the teſtator tempore mortis, and the cuſtom of foreign attachments extends only to ſuch debts. 1 Vent. 111.

2. Pleadings.

The plaintiff ſet forth the cuſtom to be, that the debt ought to be affirmed upon the oath of the party in curiâ Guildhall, and then he alledged, that he had made oath in curia vicecomitis in computatorio, &c. the cauſe was ended by agreement. Dyer 199.

Caſe by adminiſtrator, in which the caſe was, that Tenant was indebted to the inteſtate by bond, and the inteſtate was indebted to Heydon upon a contract, and that he (the adminiſtrator) intending to put the bond in ſuit againſt Tenant, he promiſed, that if the adminiſtrator would forbear, &c. he the defendant would pay, &c. afterwards Heydon brought an action of debt upon the contract againſt the adminiſtrator in London, and the money which Tenant owed to the inteſtate was attached in Tenant's hands; and now the adminiſtrator brought an action on the promiſe againſt Tenant, who pleaded all this matter; and upon a demurrer it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that this debt was not attachable by a foreign attachment, becauſe the promiſe being to pay at a day to come, reſts altogether in damages, and nothing is attachable but a certain and due debt: ſed per curiam, this debt is attachable, for it is a due and certain debt before the promiſe made, becauſe the promiſe was to pay the debt due to the inteſtate by bond; but it might have been otherwiſe if the debt had ariſen upon a promiſe. 1 Roll. Rep. 105.

If a man ſue another in the mayor's court, &c. and a third perſon is indebted to the defendant as much as he owes the plaintiff, and the money is attached in the hands of this third perſon, and condemned, and afterwards judgment is given againſt him, yet at any time before execution the plaintiff may reſort to the defendant again, who is his principal debtor, and get judgment and execution againſt him. Dyer 182.

A foreign attachment was pleaded to an action of debt; the plaintiff in that action replied, that he was not indebted to the defendant in any ſum by which he might be attached to appear; and this was held a good replication, becauſe becauſe it is iſſuable whether he was indebted or not, for if he was not indebted, then he could not be attached. Cro. Eliz. 598.

Debt was brought in C. B. upon a bill penal of 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* they pleaded in bar a foreign attachment in London, made by one Moulton of 13*l. in his hands*; and upon demurrer to this plea it was adjudged ill, becauſe it did not appear that the 13*l. attached* was part of the debt of 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* due to the plaintiff in the original action; but the chief reaſon was, becauſe it appeared in the plea, that the attachment was made after the return of the original in the C. B. and ſo pending that action in that court, which ought not to be. Cro. Eliz. 691.

Action of debt, &c. the defendant pleaded in bar, that there was a cuſtom in London to attach the debt before the day of payment came; et per curiam, ſuch a cuſtom may be good, but to have judgment to recover the debt before the day of payment is come, cannot be a good cuſtom, becauſe the debtee himſelf could not recover in ſuch caſe, and therefore he who made the attachment ſhall not. This cuſtom was pleaded, that the debtee in perſon, or by his attorney, may ſwear that the debt is due; but this cannot be good as to the attorney: it was agreed, that goods might be attached by a foreign attachment, and that the value thereof ought to be found before judgment; but that this plea was ill, becauſe the defendant did not aver it, viz. et hoc paratus eſt verificare. W. Jones 406.

In action of debt on bond, the defendant pleaded in bar the cuſtom of London, wherein the caſe was thus: viz. John North, the now defendant, owed Winſkell 55*l.* and Winſkell owed John North 53*l.* who being dead, and his widow being adminiſtratrix, commenced this action againſt Winſkell, and ſet forth, that he levied a plaint in the counter againſt the adminiſtratrix, for this 55*l.* (but did not ſet forth, that it was due to him at the time of the plaint levied;) that ſhe was ſummoned by a ſerjeant at mace to appear at the next court, who returned that ſhe nihil habuit within the city by which ſhe might be attached, and ſhe not appearing, Winſkell affirmed ore tenus, that he owed John North 53*l.* (but did not ſet forth, that it was within the juriſdiction of that court) and prayed, that ſhe might be attached by that money in his own hands to appear, which was done accordingly, and ſhe not appearing in four courts, afterwards, Winſkell at the fifth court prayed execution of the ſaid debt of 53*l.* ſo attached in his hands, and made oath, that John North owed him that money, and that his adminiſtratrix detained it from him, and thereupon he had judgment to recover the ſaid 53*l.* in part of the 55*l.* due to him, and found pledges to reſtore, if the debt ſhould be diſproved by the adminiſtratrix within a year next enſuing, and averred, that the debt for which he was now ſued was parcel of the ſaid 53*l.* which could not be, becauſe the 55*l.* was due to himſelf, and that the bond upon which the adminiſtratrix had declared againſt him was given to her to ſecure part of the debt of 53*l.* due from him to the ſaid John North, which is contradictory to what he had averred before; beſides, upon a demurrer to this plea, it was held, that the debt muſt be due to Winſkell before he made the attachment; and he having ſet forth that it was not due before that time, he cannot levy a plaint for a debt before 'tis due, and by conſequence cannot have a foreign attachment to compel an appearance to ſuch a plaint. 2 Lutw. 977.

Ruled, that money owing on a judgment obtained in the King's court, cannot be attached. 1 Mod. 103.

The plaintiff brought an action of debt in London againſt the Hambrough company, who not appearing upon a ſummons, and a nihil returned, an attachment was granted to attach the debts owing to the company in the hands of ſeveral perſons; and this being removed by certiorari into B. R. it was objected, that the debts owing to a corporation are not attachable; but a procedendo was granted, for they are proper judges below, whether this is within the cuſtom of London; if there is no ſuch cuſtom, and they rule that there is, the party grieved may have his remedy at law; ſo let them proceed according to their cuſtom, at their peril. 1 Mod. 212.

Debt upon bond, conditioned to pay 50*l.* before ſuch a day; the defendant pleaded the cuſtom of London of foreign attachmnet, viz. that where a man is indebted to another, and that man hath money due to him from one in London, that the creditor may attach it before it is due to him, and that ſuch a creditor of the now plaintiff did attach 50*l.* in the defendant's hands before it was due to the plaintiff, and gave ſecurity, according to the cuſtom, to repay the debt, if it ſhould be diſproved within a year and a day, and that on ſuch a day, (which was after the date of the bond) he paid the 50*l.* to the creditor, upon a ſci. fa. brought againſt him (the defendant) according to the cuſtom; and upon a demurrer to this plea in bar, it was inſiſted, that a cuſtom to attach money before it was due, could not be good; but adjudged, that it was, for though it might be attached as a debt, it could not be levied before it was due; and ſo the cuſtom was laid. Sid. 327.

The caſe referred by the Ch. Juſt. Holt at a trial before him, for the opinion of the judges was thus: ſſ. Maſters owed money to Gosfreight, and died, and the defendant Lewis afterwards received 250*l.* due to Maſters the inteſtate; Gosfreight contended the adminiſtration, and before it was granted, he levied a plaint in the ſheriff's court againſt the archbiſhop of Canterbury, for the debt due to him from Maſters the inteſtate, becauſe till adminiſtration granted, the ordinary did repreſent his perſon: upon this plaint there was a nihil returned, and upon four ſummons, there was a ſcire facias and judgment againſt the archbiſhop; and this money was attached in the hands of the defendant Lewis, as a debt due from the archbiſhop to the inteſtate, and it was afterwards condemned and paid to Gosfreight; then adminiſtration was granted to the plaintiff Maſters, who brought an indebitus aſſumpſit againſt Lewis; and upon non aſſumpſit pleaded, the queſtion referred was, whether this payment to Gosfreight was a good diſcharge to Lewis by virtue of the cuſtom of London of foreign attachment; and adjudged, that it was not, becauſe the plaint was levied againſt the archbiſhop, who was neither debtor or debtee, therefore could neither ſue nor be ſued: the reaſon why money is attachable in the hands of the garniſhee is to make the real debtor appear, upon whoſe appearance the garniſhee is diſcharged, and then the debtor muſt put in bail to render his body, or pay the condemnation money; but the archbiſhop cannot be compelled to do either, and therefore he is not within the cuſtom, nor the defendant Lewis neither, becauſe he was never indebted to the archbiſhop, and therefore could not be compelled to appear, by levying a plaint againſt the archbiſhop, to whom nothing was due; the plaintiff had judgment. 5 Mod. 75, 92.

The caſe was: Wallis owed Snell 500*l.* and Parker owed Wallis 220*l.* which he aſſigned to Snell in part of his debt; Wallis being alſo indebted to Lewis in 250*l.* he levied a plaint againſt Wallis in the ſheriff's court of London, ſuggeſting, that Parker owed him 220*l.* which Lewis attached in the hands of Parker, and Snell became bail for Wallis at the ſuit of Lewis, and afterwards brought an habeas corpus, and removed the plaint into B. R. and was alſo bail for Wallis there, and Lewis declared againſt him there: afterwards Wallis came before a judge of B. R. and declared, that he never conſented that Snell ſhould be bail for him, either upon the attachment, or upon the habeas corpus, and all was done without his knowledge; whereupon he prayed a procedendo to the action in London, which the judge granted, it being confidently affirmed to him, that no bail could be put in upon a foreign attachment, unleſs the lord mayor was preſent, nor then, if the defendant did not conſent; and upon this procedendo Wallis confeſſed the action below at the ſuit of Lewis, and he had judgment, and Snell, who was his bail, was taken in execution, and paid the money to Lewis. Et per curiam, after Wallis had aſſigned to Snell the debt due to him from Parker, it then became the right and property of Snell, and Wallis was then no more than a truſtee for Snell; if ſo, then Snell being bail to the foreign attachment, it was quaſi for Wallis, and by his aſſent, and that being done, both the foreign attachment, and all proceedings on it, are at an end; for the deſign of a foreign attachment is only to compel the defendant in the original action to appear, and after bail was put put in upon the habeas corpus, and Lewis had declared in B. R. then the court was poſſeſſed of the cauſe, and it ſhall never be reſtored afterwards to the inferior court by any ſuggeſtion of the defendant, as it was done in this caſe by Wallis; therefore a ſuperſedeas was awarded to the procedendo, quia improvide, &c. by which the judgment, and all the proceedings in the ſheriff's court were coram non judice, and reſtitution was ordered to be made to Snell, and Lewis was left to proceed upon the action removed by the habeas corpus. T. Jones 222.

Where a foreign attachment is pleaded to an action, the cuſtom is to ſet forth, that he who levied the plaint ſhall have execution of the debt owing by himſelf, and by which he was attached, if the plaintiff in the original action ſhall not diſapprove it within a year and a day; now if the plaintiff in the action below doth not ſet forth ſuch conditional judgment given by the court, 'tis wrong, becauſe he doth bring his caſe within the cuſtom. 2 Lutw. 985.

In aſſumpſit, &c. there was evidence given, that the debt was attached by the cuſtom of London before the action brought, and that it was condemned there before the plea pleaded; and this evidence was given upon the general iſſue non aſſumpſit, and it being inſiſted for the defendant, that this ſhould relate ſo as to defeat the plaintiff's action; it was adjudged, that where there is an attachment and condemnation before the action brought, it may be given in evidence upon the general iſſue becauſe there is an alteration of the property; but if the attachment be only before the action brought, and the condemnation afterwards, the attachment may be pleaded in abatement, and the condemnation may be pleaded in bar, but ſhall not be given in evidence on the general iſſue, becauſe by the condemnation the property is altered, but not before. 1 Salk. 280.

In aſſumpſit, the defendant in diſcharge of the note upon which the action was brought, produced the record of a foreign attachment, wherein the ſaid debt was attached and condemned, and Trevor, Ch. Juſt. of C. B. held this a good diſcharge; but if the plaintiff could have ſhewed an original precedent to the attachment, ſo that it might appear that the court was poſſeſſed of the action before the attachment, the plaintiff might have recovered, notwithſtanding the debt was attached and condemned; but in this caſe the declaration was between the time of the attachment and the condemnation. 1 Salk. 291.

W. R. broke, and went beyond ſea; but before he went he aſſigned his goods to three perſons for the equal benefit of his creditors; two of theſe aſſignees being his creditors, ſet up a truſtee for them to attach the goods in London: now upon an attachment there always goes a ſcire facias by way of garniſhment, to which theſe two aſſigns, who were creditors, would not appear, but the third aſſignee, who was no creditor, offered to appear and plead, but the judge of the court refuſed his plea, unleſs he would appear for the other two, and thereupon moved for a prohibition, and the court inclined againſt the cuſtom to compel one garniſhee to appear for the reſt; but the common ſerjeant ſaid, that if he put in bail, and wage his law alone, that would diſſolve the attachment. Mod. Ca. Smyth v. Mayor of London.

Attachment of the foreſt, Is one of the three courts held there. Manwood 90, 99. The lower court is called the attachment; the middle one, the ſwainmote; the higheſt, the juſtice in Eyre's ſeat. The court of attachment ſeemeth to be ſo called, becauſe the verderors of the foreſt have therein no other authority, but to receive the attachments of offenders againſt Vert and Veniſon, taken by the reſt of the officers, and to enroll them, that they may be preſented and puniſhed at the next juſtice ſeat. Manwood 93. And this attaching is by three means; 1. By goods and chattels. 2. By the body, pledges, and mainpriſe. 3. By the body only. This court is kept every forty days. See Crompton, in his Court of the foreſt.

Attachment of privilege, Is where a man by virtue of his privilege calls another to that court, whereto he himſelf belongs, and in reſpect thereof is privileged, there to anſwer ſome action. N. B. of entries 431. For the diverſity of attachment, ſee Reg. Orig. verbo Attathiamentum, in indice.

Attainder, (attincta and attinctura) Is when a man hath committed treaſon, &c. and after conviction ſentence is paſſed on him: or where a perſon is attainted of treaſon, and condemned by parliament. Acts of attainder of criminals have been paſſed in ſeveral reigns, on the diſcovery of plots and rebellions, from the reign of king Charles the ſecond, when an act was made for the attainder of ſeveral perſons guilty of the murder of king Charles the firſt, to this time; among which, that for attainting Sir John Fenwick, for conſpiring againſt king William, is the moſt remarkable; it being made to attaint and convict him of high treaſon on the oath of one witneſs, juſt after a law had been enacted, that no perſon ſhould be tried or attainted of high treaſon, where corruption of blood is incurred, but by oath of two lawful witneſſes, unleſs the party confeſs, ſtand mute, &c. Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 3. But in the caſe of Sir John Fenwick, there was ſomething extraordinary; for he was indicted of treaſon, on the oath of two witneſſes; though but one only could be produced againſt him at his trial.

The 8 Will. 3. cap. 5. requires Sir George Barclay, major general Holmes, and other perſons, to ſurrender themſelves to the lord chief juſtice, or ſecretaries of ſtate; or to be attainted. Huſband and wife were tenants in ſpecial tail; they had iſſue a ſon, the huſband was attainted of treaſon, and died, the wife continued in poſſeſſion as tenant in ſpecial tail, and the ſon was reſtored by act of parliament, and made inheritable to his father, ſaving to the king all advantages which he might have by the attainder; the wife died; adjudged, that the father had not any eſtate forfeitable, for the wife being likewiſe tenant in ſpecial tail, the eſtate ſurvived to her, and was not impeached by the attainder, and ſhe dying, the ſon is then inheritable to the eſtate tail, which might certainly have been barred by a common recovery ſuffered by the wife, and in ſuch caſe the king would have been bound. 1 Leon. 157.

Grandfather, father, and ſon; the grandfather was tenant in tail, the father was attainted of treaſon; here, though the blood is corrupted, yet the ſon would formerly inherit per formam doni; but ſince the ſtatute 26 H. 8. which gives the forfeiture of the lands of tenant in tail for treaſon, the law is otherwiſe, and by the attainder of the tenant in tail, the iſſue in tail is barred. 8 Rep. in Digley's caſe.

There was a gift of the caſtle and manor of Mulgrave to a man and the heirs of his body, which by ſeveral meſne deſcents came to Sir Ralph Bigod, who anno 6 H. 8. made a feoffment thereof to the uſe of his laſt will, and died, and the right of the land, together with the intail, after the will performed, deſcended to Sir Fran. Bigod, who made a feoffment of the caſtle and manor to the uſe of himſelf, and Katherine his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; they had iſſue a ſon and a daughter; then the ſtatute 26 H. 8. cap. 13. was made, by which the lands of tenant in tail were made forfeitable for treaſon, and three years after Sir Francis Bigod was attainted of treaſon, and executed, and notwithſtanding the ſaid general act of parliament, anno 26 H. 8. of forfeiture of lands by tenant in tail for treaſon, a ſpecial act was made for the attainder of Sir Francis, and the forfeiture of his lands: anno 6 Eliz. his ſon was reſtored in blood by the parliament, and died without iſſue, and his daughter married Roger Ratcliffe; the queen ſuppoſing ſhe had a right to the intailed lands by virtue of the attainder of Sir Francis Bigod, anno 34th of her reign, granted the ſaid manor and caſtle to Edmund Lord Sheffield, and the heirs male of his body, between whom and Roger Ratcliffe, the grandſon of Sir Francis Bigod, there was a ſuit in the Exchequer concerning the title of the lands; and it was adjudged, that Sir Francis Bigod, who had the eſtate-tail in poſſeſſion, had alſo a right to a remainder of the old eſtate-tail, veſted in him at the time of his attainder, which was forfeited to the king by virtue of thoſe ſtatutes and his attainder, and by conſequence it was veſted in the queen, and her grant of the eſtate to the Lord Sheffield was good, under which grant 'tis enjoyed at this day. Hob. 334.

There were two brothers, the youngeſt was attainted of treaſon, and executed, leaving iſſue one ſon; the elder brother having ſome cauſe for a petition of right to certain lands in the king's hands before the attainder, died without iſſue, and then the ſon of his younger brother was his heir in blood, and he was reſtored in blood in parliament by theſe words, viz. that he and his heirs ſhall be enabled only in blood as ſon and heirs of his father, and ſhall have and enjoy all ſuch lands which ſhall deſcend, remain or revert from any collateral anceſtor of his ſaid father; but that the ſaid act ſhall not extend to any lands which were in the king's hands, or any other perſon by the attainder; the queſtion was, whether by theſe clauſes he was enabled to have the petition of right as heir to his uncle, who was his father's elder brother? and adjudged that he was, for it appears, that the intention both of the king and the parliament was liberal to the ſon, who was thus reſtored. Dyer 274.

Covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to Thomas Palmer, the eldeſt ſon of his brother John Palmer for life, remainder to the eldeſt ſon of Sir Thomas Palmer in tail male, remainder to his own right heirs; afterwards the covenantor was attainted of treaſon, and executed before the birth of any ſon of Thomas; adjudged, that this attainder was a bar to the after-born ſon, and that the fee ſimple was veſted in the crown, diſcharged of all remainders. Moor 815.

Three of the Regicides, viz. Corbett, Okey, and Berkſted, were brought from the tower to the bar by habeas corpus, &c. and by a mittimus out of Chancery, directed to the chief juſtice et ſociis; the tranſcript of the act of parliament (by which they were attainted of high treaſon) was certified by Brown, the clerk of the parliament, and ſent to B. R. under the great ſeal, encloſed in wax like a ſubpœna, and the priſoners being ſeverally demanded, what they could ſay why execution ſhould not be awarded, they ſaid they were not the ſame perſons mentioned in the act of attainder, upon which the attorney general joined iſſue, and the ſheriff of Middleſex returned a jury within an hour, (ſitting the court) and they were found by verdict to be the ſame perſons; then they objected, that this court could not award execution, becauſe they had no record of their offence before them, and that there was no addition to their names; but theſe exceptions being over-ruled they had ſentence, and were executed at Tyburn, on Saturday, 19 April, 14 Car. 2. Sid. 72.

T. S. having an eſtate for three lives, was attainted on the ſtatute 8 & 9 Will. 3. of treaſon for counterfeiting the coin, by which ſtatute corruption of blood is ſaved; and for that reaſon it was a queſtion, whether the lands were forfeited to the king, which were given to Baron Lovell as forfeited, who brought a bill in the Exchequer to redeem, and had a decree, from which there was an appeal to the houſe of lords, where the judges held, that in treaſon the lands came to the king as an immediate forfeiture, which was a diſtinct penalty from corruption of blood, for the corruption may be ſaved, and the forfeiture ſtill remain. 1 Salk. 85.

A man being convicted of felony, and in Newgate, and there being a judgment againſt him in debt upon a ca. ſa. directed to the ſheriffs of London, they ſerved it upon his body in Newgate, and afterwards he was pardoned; the queſtion was, if the execution was lawful? and if it was, whether it was not diſcharged by the pardon; and adjudged, that the ſheriff might chooſe whether he would ſerve it or not, becauſe by the attainder for felony the king had an intereſt in the body of the felon, and ſuch an intereſt as would privilege the felon againſt any action or execution of a ſubject; but if the ſheriff will ſerve the execution, then the felon ſhall be in execution for the debt, but ſtill ſubject to the judgment for the felony, and if he eſcapes, the gaoler ſhall be anſwerable both to the king and to the party; and if he eſcapes after a pardon, or is diſcharged by the gaoler, he ſhall be anſwerable for the debt; ſo that the attainder doth not extinguiſh the debt of a ſubject, nor the pardon neither, for by the pardon the execution is revived. Moor 178.

In an action of debt, the defendant pleaded, that after the debt became due he was attainted of felony, and upon a demurrer, this was adjudged an ill plea; and one of the judges cited the Lord Northampton's caſe, who after he was pardoned, was compelled to pay his debts. Moor 753.

Adjudged, that an attainder of felony makes a forfeiture of the eſtate to the lord only by way of eſcheat pro defectu tenentis, and the not deſcending is the conſequence of the corruption of blood. 1 Salk. 85.

Attaint, (Attincta) Is a writ that lieth after judgment againſt a jury that have given a falſe verdict in any court of record, in an action real or perſonal, where the debt or damages amount to above 40*s.* Cowell. It is called attaint, becauſe the party endeavours thereby to ſtain or taint the credit of the jury with perjury, by whoſe verdict he is grieved: And if the verdict be found falſe, then the puniſhment by the Common law was, that the jury Amittant liberam legem, forisfaciant bona et catalla, quod terræ et tenementa in manus regis capiantur, uxores et liberi ejicerentur, domus proſternantur, arbores extirpentur, prata arentur, et corpora ſua carceri mancipentur: But if it paſs againſt againſt him who brought the attaint, then he ſhall be impriſoned and ranſomed at the King's will. See Co. Lit. 294. b. Glanv. lib. 2. c. 19. F. N. B. 109, 110. Fortescue, c. 26. Smith de Rep. Anglor. lib. 3. c. 2.

Stat. 3 Edw. 1. cap. 38. Attaints ſhall be granted upon inqueſts in plea of land, or any thing touching freehold.

Stat. 14 Edw. 2. cap. 2. In attaint, if the firſt jurors which ſhall be living appear not at the firſt grand diſtreſs, or be returned to have nothing, by their abſence there ſhall be no delay made of the taking of the jury.

Stat. 1 Edw. 3. c. 6. In a writ of treſpaſs, an attaint ſhall be granted by the Chancellor, without ſpeaking to the King, as well upon the principal as upon the damages. And in all caſes of attaints, the juſtices ſhall not let to take the attaints for the damages not paid.

Stat. 5 Edw. 3. c. 6. Niſi prius ſhall be granted in attaints, but no eſſoin of the King's ſervice, or protection; and five days by the year ſhall be given before the juſtices of the Common bench at leaſt.

Stat. 5 Edw. 3. cap. 7. Writs of attaint ſhall be granted, as well in pleas of treſpaſs moved without writ as by writ, before juſtices of record, if the damages adjudged do exceed 40 s.

Stat. 28 Edw. 3. cap. 8. An attaint ſhall be granted as well upon a bill of treſpaſs, as upon a writ of treſpaſs, without having regard to the quantity of the damages.

Stat. 34 Edw. 3. cap. 7. An attaint ſhall lie as well in plea real as perſonal; and it ſhall be granted to the poor (who ſhall make affidavit, that they have nothing whereof to make fine, ſaving their countenance) without fine, and to all others by eaſy fine.

Stat. 11 Hen. 6. cap. 4. The plaintiff in attaint ſhall recover againſt all the jurors, tenants, and defendants, the coſts and damages which he ſhall ſuſtain (by delays from falſe pleas or any of the jury or parties, or otherwiſe) in that ſuit.

Stat. 15 Hen. 6. cap. 5. No ſheriff, bailiff, or coroner, in writs of attaint of plea of land, or detenue of deeds concerning lands of the yearly value of 40 s. or more, or of plea perſonal, whereof the judgment to recover extends to 40 s. or more, ſhall impanel any but ſuch as inhabit within their bailwicks, and have freehold or inheritance (not ancient demeſne within the five ports, or gavelkind) worth 20 l. per ann. and ſhall not return againſt them leſs iſſues than 40 s. at the firſt writ of diſtreſs; 100 s. at the ſecond; and double afterwards; on pain to forfeit 10 l. to the King, and as much to the plaintiff; and none but perſons of that worth ſhall be impanelled upon attaints, if challenge thereof be made by the plaintiffs. And if any of the defendants plead a foreign plea, and fail thereof, the juſtices ſhall give judgment againſt them, as if the grand jury upon the articles of the writ had paſſed againſt them: howbeit, the reſt of the defendants ſhall not be prejudiced thereby; neither ſhall this act extend to cities or boroughs.

Sect. 2. If there ſhall not be in the county (under the degree of a baron) enough of that worth to fill the panel, then ſhall the ſaid officers impanel and return the moſt ſufficient perſons there under that worth upon the like pain.

Stat. 18 Hen. 6. cap. 2. Owners of inheritance or freehold lands in gavelkind of 20 l. per ann. may alſo be impanell'd upon attaints, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of 15 Hen. 6. cap. 5.

Stat. 11 Hen. 7. cap. 21. ſect. 2. An attaint may be ſued by bill in the huſtings of London, upon any falſe verdict given in any of the courts of that city; and thereupon the mayor ſhall award a precept to every alderman, or his deputy, to preſent unto the ſaid mayor at the next huſtings, the names of four indifferent and diſcreet citizens out of each of their wards, each of them being in eſtate 100 l. at leaſt, out of which the mayor and ſix aldermen, or more, ſhall impanel forty-eight, whom the mayor ſhall cauſe to be ſummoned, together with the tenants or defendants in the attaint, to appear at the next huſtings: and if upon default of appearance, or otherwiſe, there ſhall be a tales, the panel ſhall be ſupplied out of the reſt preſent, or by other ſuch citizens at the diſcretion of the mayor and ſix aldermen; and all pleas in ſuch attaints ſhall be tried there by inqueſts of the ſame city, and not elſewhere. And in an attaint there, no challenge ſhall be for lack of ſufficiency in eſtate; provided that the judgment in ſuch attaint ſhall not extend to lands or tenements, nor to other puniſhment of the petit jury, or other proceſſes, than ſuch as are limited by this act; and in ſuch an attaint, if the petty jury be attainted, judgment ſhall be againſt the defendant as at the Common law; and againſt the petty jury, to forfeit each of them 20 l. or more, at the diſcretion of the court, to ſuch uſe as other penalties forfeited before them, and to ſuffer ſix months impriſonment, or leſs, at the like diſcretion of the court, and to be for ever diſabled to be a juror. But if the verdict be affirmed, aud the grand jury ſhall inquire into the corruption of the petty jurors; and if any of them be found to have taken any reward, &c. he ſhall forfeit ten times the value thereof to the plaintiff, and ſhall ſuffer impriſonment, and diſability to be a juror as aforeſaid; the like forfeitures alſo and impriſonment ſhall be inflicted on the tenant or defendant that ſhall give ſuch reward or promiſe. And if a debt, coſt, or damages are recovered in the firſt action (whereupon the attaint is brought) and that verdict found falſe, the plaintiff in ſuch attaint may ſue an action of debt for reſtitution of ſuch debts, coſts and damages, by writ or plaint, in any of the King's courts. And in ſuch attaint, if the plaintiff be nonſuit, or the firſt verdict affirmed, the plaintiff ſhall be impriſoned, and make fine (to the uſe of the city) at the diſcretion of the court; and where there are two or more plaintiffs, if any of them die, or be nonſuit, and albeit all the tenants or defendants, and ſome of the petty jury die, yet ſhall not the attaint abate, ſo that two of that jury remain in life. And the grand jurors, that make default, ſhall forfeit for the firſt default 40 s. for the ſecond 5 l. and for every other afterwards 10 l. And likewiſe proceſs ſhall be made againſt the jurors and parties in this attaint, as is uſually made in attaints at the Common law, and ſhall be returnable at every huſtings. And the attaint ſhall not remain to be taken after the firſt ſummons returned, for the default of the tenant or defendant, or any of the petit jury; neither ſhall any protection or eſſoin be allowed in the ſame; provided, that on attaints in the ſaid city upon any record, wherein the trial was per mediatatem linguæ, the mayor and aldermen ſhall impanel half ſtrangers, worth 100 l. apiece.

Stat. 23 Hen. 8. cap. 3. ſect. 2. Upon every untrue verdict betwixt party and party, before judges of record (where the thing in demand extendeth to the value of 40 l. and concerneth not life) the party grieved ſhall have an attaint againſt the petty jury, and againſt the party that hath the judgment thereupon. And the proceſſes ſhall be ſummons, reſummons, and diſtreſs infinite, as well againſt the petty jury as againſt the grand jury; who ſhall be of the accuſtomed number, and have lands of the yearly value of twenty marks out of ancient demeſne. And upon the diſtreſs, which ſhall be delivered of record, open proclamation ſhall be made in court; and the diſtreſs ſhall be awarded fifteen days before the return thereof, and ſhall be made upon the land of every of the grand jury, as uſed in other diſtreſſes. And if the defendant, or petty jury, or ſome of them, appear not, the grand jury ſhall be taken againſt them that make default.

And

And if any of the petit jury appear, the plaintiff ſhall aſſign the falſe ſerment, whereunto the petty jury ſhall have no other anſwer (if they be the ſame perſons, and the writ, proceſſes, return, and aſſignment be good) but that they made true ſerment, which ſhall be tried by 24 of the grand jury; unleſs the plaintiff hath before been nonſuit, or diſcontinued his ſuit, or had judgment againſt the ſame jury for the ſame verdict. And the defendants may plead that they gave a true verdict, or any other matter, which may bar the attaint; but notwithſtanding ſuch plea, the grand jury ſhall nevertheleſs enquire whether the firſt jury gave a true verdict or no.

Sect. 3. If the petty jury be found to have given an untrue verdict, they ſhall each of them forfeit 20 l. to be divided betwixt the King and the plaintiff.

Sect. 4. The petty jury ſhall incur ſeverally fines, at the diſcretion of the juſtices, and be ever after diſabled to give teſtimony in any court. And if the defendant's plea in bar be found againſt him, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment to be reſtored to that he loſt, with his reaſonable coſts and damages.

Sect. 5. Outlawry in action perſonal or excommunication ſhall be no plea againſt the plaintiff in attaint; and in the aforeſaid proceſs ſuch day ſhall be given as in dower, but no eſſoin or protection allowed. And if the grand jury appear not, ſo that the petty jury's verdict remains untried, the defaulters ſhall upon the firſt diſtreſs forfeit 20 s. upon the ſecond 40 s. and upon every default after 5 l. the like penalty is alſo to be inflicted upon the tales. And the attaint is maintainable ſo long as any two of the petty jury are alive.

Sect. 6. An attaint ſhall alſo lie for a perſonal thing under the value of 40 l. in manner aforeſaid; ſave only that in ſuch caſe the grand juror is to have lands worth five marks per ann. (out of ancient demeſne) or to be worth an hundred marks in goods; and the forfeitures of each petty juror ſhall be but 5 l.

Sect. 7. For want of ſufficient jurors in one county, a tales ſhall be awarded into another county, at the diſcretion of the juſtices. And an attaint ſhall alſo lie for him that is aggrieved by untrue verdict of any inheritance in deſcent, reverſion, or remainder. And if the plaintiff be nonſuit, or diſcontinue, he ſhall be fined at the diſcretion of the juſtices.

Sect. 8. All attaints ſhall be hereafter taken in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, and not elſewhere; and niſi prius ſhall be granted upon the diſtreſs at the diſcretion of the juſtices. Alſo any of the petty jury may appear, and anſwer by attorney. And the moieties of the forfeitures ſhall be recovered by the King and parties reſpectively by capias ad ſatisfaciendum, or fieri facias, or elegit, or action of debt, againſt each of the petty jury, their executors or adminiſtrators having then ſufficient goods of the teſtator's not adminiſtred. And judgment and execution of reſtitution to the plaintiff, and of diſcharge of reſtitution to the tenant or defendant, ſhall be given and had, as hath been uſed. And the nonſuit or releaſe of one plaintiff ſhall not prejudice his companions, but they may be ſummoned and ſevered.

Sect. 9. In every writ of attaint upon this act, after the teſte, theſe words ſhall be inſerted, per ſtatutum uſque annum 23 H. 8. Dei gratia, &c.

Sect. 11. This act ſhall not be prejudicial to the ſtatute of 11 H. 7. cap. 21. but every man for an untrue verdict in London, may bring an attaint upon this or that ſtatute, at his pleaſure. Made perpetual, 13 Eliz. cap. 25.

Stat. 37 Hen. 8. cap. 5. ſect. 3. Citizens of London, being worth four hundred marks in goods, may be impanelled and returned by the ſheriffs of London upon attaints there. And the juſtices ſhall hereafter ſit upon attaints in London at Guildhall, or ſome other convenient place in that city, and not elſewhere; neither ſhall the citizens there be compellable to appear upon any ſuch attaint in any other place, notwithſtanding the ſaid ſtatute of 23 Hen. 8. cap. 3.

2. Who ſhall have an attaint.

He who had a reverſion after the death of a tenant for life, might have an attaint at Common law, upon a falſe verdict given againſt the tenant for life; and now by the ſtatute 1 R. 2. cap. 3. he may have it in the life-time of the tenant for life. Dyer 1.

Treſpaſs againſt the defendant, who pleaded, that he, with another, committed the treſpaſs, &c. and averred, that it was the ſame, &c. and that the plaintiff did releaſe him; now, if it ſhould be found againſt the defendant, and damages given, yet he who was no party to the iſſue may have an attaint as well as his fellow. Hob. 66.

Attaint was brought upon the ſtatute 23 H. 8. againſt the executors of Sir John Barker, whereas the verdict was in a cauſe between him and one Auſtin, and the ſtatute gives an attaint between the parties, and doth not mention heirs or executors, yet this attaint was held good; ſo an executor ſhall have reſtitution upon the ſtatute 21 H. 8. tho' that ſtatute doth not mention executors. 1 And. 24, 25.

Where treſpaſs is brought againſt baron and feme, and the plaintiff recovers, the baron alone ſhall not have attaint, for it ſhall be brought according to the record. Br. Baron and Feme, pl. 22.

Succeſſors of a parſon ſhall have error or attaint of judgment againſt the predeceſſor. Br. Attaint, pl. 110.

If a man has iſſue a ſon by one venter, and a daughter by another, and intails the lands to him and his ſecond feme, and the heirs of their two bodies, and recovery is had againſt them by falſe oath, the attaint is given to the ſon and not to the daughters; per Forteſcue. Br. Attaint, pl. 40.

So, per Forteſcue, where a man has two ſons in burgh engliſh, and loſes by falſe verdict, and dies, the attaint is given to the eldeſt ſon, and ſo the daughter and the youngeſt ſon ſhall falſify the recovery by him, which Yelverton utterly denied. Ibid.

If a man brings bill quod reddat T. 40 l. quas domino regi & prædicto T. debet upon the ſtatute 23 Hen. 6. cap. 10. and the jury paſs againſt the defendant falſely, attaint lies for the defendant; for the King is not merely party; for the party may diſcontinue or releaſe without the King, notwithſtanding that the King ſhall recover the moiety; and therefore the attaint was demanded; quod nota; and ſo it is admitted, that if the King was meerly party attaint does not lie. Br. Attaint, pl. 130.

It was ſaid, that upon information made by the King, which paſſed upon iſſue tried, the King nor the informer ſhall not have attaint; for the informer is not fuly party; and when the defendant has anſwered, the attorney of the King replies for the King, and no further mention is after made of the informer; and therefore the one or the other ſhall not have attaint, but was awarded to anſwer to the points of the writ, and could not have day of continuance without iſſue. Br. Attaint, pl. 127.

None ſhall have attaint but he that may be reſtored to the thing loſt by the judgment; per Bramſtone Ch. J. Mar. 210.

3. In what caſes an attaint doth lie, and where not.

It lies upon a falſe verdict given in caſes of felony, 6 Rep. in the caſe of pardons; but where the Queen is ſole party, and the jury find for her, no attaint lies; aliter where the ſuit is tam pro domino rege quam pro ſeipſo. 4 Leon. 46.

In a writ de valore maritagii, iſſue was joined upon the tenure, and found for the plaintiff, and damages to 40 s. and coſts to 20 s. but the jury did not find the value of the marriage, which they ought to have done; and if they had found exceſſive damages, an attaint lieth againſt them, and this defect of the verdict ſhall not be ſupplied by a writ of enquiry of the value, becauſe that would prevent the party of his remedy by attaint. 10 Rep. 118.

In debt on bond for performance of covenants, one of which was, that in conſideration the plaintiff would have a new mill upon the lands demiſed to him by the defendant, dant, and bring a water-courſe to it, he the ſaid defendant leaſed the ſaid land to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff aſſigned the breach in ſtopping the water-courſe; upon which they were at iſſue, and found for the plaintiff; the defendant brought an attaint, and the falſe oath was found. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here was no iſſue and conſequently no verdict, and ſo no falſe oath, and then no cauſe of attaint; for the iſſue was upon the ſtopping the water-courſe, which is no cauſe of action upon the party's own ſhewing; for there was no expreſs covenant that the plaintiff ſhould enjoy the water-courſe; beſides, the defendant in the action might have alledged this matter in arreſt of judgment, and ſo he ſhall not be helped by an attaint; neither does it appear that execution was taken out, and this attaint being brought upon the ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. cap. 3. which gives this remedy to the party grieved, and becauſe before execution the defendant is not a party grieved, it doth not lie; but as to theſe objections the court ſaid nothing; but the reporter adds a quære, if the plaintiff be not pars gravata, becauſe he is ſubject to the judgment, and liable to the execution. Lem. 278. tl. 377.

Where the evidence given to the jury is falſe in part, tho' it be in a point not material, yet this is ſufficient excuſe for their not giving him credit in any other part of his evidence, and ſo had no cauſe to find their verdict upon this oath againſt the party againſt whom it was given. Cro. Eliz 309, 310.

It lies againſt a jury, for finding the bond of Edward the bond of Edmond. Palm. 286.

The jury may be attainted two ways; 1ſt, where they find contrary to evidence; 2dly, where they find out of the compaſs of the allegata. But to attaint them for finding contrary to evidence is not eaſy, becauſe they may have evidence of their own conuſance of the matter by them, or they may find upon diſtruſt of the witneſſes, or their own proper knowledge; but if they find upon evidence that does not prove the allegata, there it is eaſy to ſubject them to an attaint, becauſe it is manifeſt that what is ſo found is an evidence not correſponding to their iſſue, and this was the only curb they had over the jurors; for the judge being beſt maſter of the allegata, if they did not follow his direction touching the proof, they were then liable to the danger of an attaint; and therefore ſince the judges, from the difficulty of attainting the jury, have granted new trials, whereby jurors have been freed from the fear of attaint, they have taken a great liberty in giving verdicts; but ſince the attaint is only diſuſed, and not taken away, 'tis neceſſary that a certain matter ſhould be brought before them; and therefore in treſpaſs, the quantity and value of the thing demanded muſt be ſo conveniently deſcribed, that if the jury find damages beyond ſuch quantities and value, it may be apparently exceſſive, and they ſubject to the attaint; and ſo on ſpecial contracts, they muſt be ſet forth ſo preciſely, that if evidence be given of another contract, and not in the allegations, and yet the jury find for the plaintiff, they may be ſubject to an attaint; and were it otherwiſe, if the plaintiff had a jury to his turn, and the judge ſhould direct that the plaintiff be nonſuit, yet, if the plaintiff would ſtand the trial, the judge muſt give poſitive directions to find for the defendant, there would be no means of compelling the jury to find according to the direction of the judge, if they were not under the terror of an attaint, if they did otherwiſe; ſo this is the only curb that the law has put in the hands of the judges to reſtrain jurors from giving corrupt verdicts. Gilb. H. C. B. 128.

Where a jury finds a thing which is out of the iſſue, there a verdict is void, becauſe they are ſworn to try the iſſue between the parties, according to the evidence given; ſo that whatſoever they try beſides the iſſue, is not per juratores; and therefore if that matter ſo tried is falſe, 'tis no perjury, nor doth an attaint lie againſt them. Hob. 53.

In ejectment the plaintiff had a verdict for the land, and the defendant brought an attaint, and pending the writ, a feoffment was made of the land; adjudged, that the attaint is extinguiſhed and gone; for tho' 'tis collateral to the right of the land, for no land is demanded by an attaint, and 'tis only to reform the erroneous proceedings, viz. the falſe oath; yet becauſe by a verdict in attaint the land ſhall be deveſted and the right removed, the attaint is barred and extinct by the feoffment. 1 Rep. 111.

4. Proceedings, pleadings and evidence in attaint.

The writ of attaint muſt be returnable in B. R. or C. B. and not elſewhere. Co. Lit. 294.

By the aforeſaid ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. c. 3. the proceſs in attaint ſhall be ſummons, reſummons, and diſtreſs infinite againſt the party and petit jury, and alſo againſt the grand jury.

At the return of the writ of attaint, by the ſaid ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. if any of the petit jury appear, the plaintiff ſhall aſſign the falſe oath of the verdict untruly given. And by the ſame ſtatute, if the defendant, or any of the petit jury appear not on diſtreſs, the grand inqueſt ſhall be taken by default.

The petit jury can plead no plea, but ſuch as may excuſe them of the falſe oath. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

The petit jury cannot plead that the plaintiff in the attaint was tenant after the attaint purchaſed. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

Attaint was brought upon appeal of Maihem. The defendant pleaded releaſe of execution meſne between judgment and execution, and one of the petit jury pleadded arbitrement by ſubmiſſion made between the plaintiff and defendant, and a good plea; per Danby; for he may plead releaſe made by the plaintiff to the defendant, and all pleas which go in excuſe of the falſe oath and the puniſhment ordained for it; and ſo ſee that it is admitted there, that attaint lies upon appeal of Maihem, and ſee now the new ſtatute 23 H. 8. of attaints; and ſee if this ſtatute does not ſerve to have appeal of Maihem upon, though the law was otherwiſe before. Br. Attaint. pl. 12.

In attaint the petit jury cannot aſſign error in the original; for it is not party to the record, but ought to anſwer to the falſe oath. Br. Attaint. pl. 93.

Attaint by two upon aſſiſe paſſed againſt them, and one of the petit jury pleaded outlawry in one of the plaintiffs before the day of the aſſiſe; and held that he cannot have it; for he cannot have plea but in maintenance of his verdict, or in bar, and not plea to the writ, as to ſay that the writ is brought pending another writ of attaint of the ſame matter, or that the feme plaintiff was covert baron, her baron not named, &c. Br. Attaint. pl. 85.

In attaint at the diſtringas, one of the petit jury ſaid that the defendant is dead, and a good plea for him; per cur. for now the plaintiff cannot have judgment againſt him, nor be reſtored. Br. Attaint. pl. 2.

In attaint upon a writ of treſpaſs, one of the petit jury pleaded a concord between the plaintiff in the attaint and the defendant, and this was held a good plea in 13 Ed. 4. by the better opinion; and in all actions founded upon tort, as treſpaſs, conſpiracy, maintenance, &c. where nothing certain is demanded, nor to be recovered, beſides a damage, concord is a good plea. Dyer 75.

Attaint is given to the party grieved by the ſtatute 23 H. 8. c. 3. and it was brought againſt the defendant upon a falſe verdict in an aſſiſe, who died pending the writ; but it was ruled, that the attaint ſhould not abate by his death. Dyer 139.

An attaint as well as a writ of error ſhall follow the nature of the action upon which 'tis founded; ſo that if ſummons and ſeverance lies in the firſt action, it ſhall do ſo likewiſe in the attaint, but this is not a ſuperſedeas as a writ of error is; adjudged likewiſe, if damages are recovered againſt ſeveral in an action of conſpiracy, all of them muſt join in an attaint, and the nonſuit of one of them ſhall not hurt the reſt. 6 Rep. 25.

But adjudged, that where an aſſiſe was brought againſt three coparceners, who all pleaded that there was no tenant of the freehold named in the writ, and the jury found that two of them were diſſeiſors and tenants, &c. and that the third had nothing, &c. and afterwards they all three joined in an attaint, and after appearance the third ſiſter, who was acquitted as aforeſaid by the ſaid verdict, was now nonsuited in the attaint, in that case the attaint was abated, because she had no cause to bring an attaint, for there was no verdict against her. 1 Leon. 317.

In attaint the parties and the jury appeared and demanded oyer of the record upon which the attaint was founded, which record being in the Common Pleas, they had it, and thereupon the plaintiff assigned the false oath; the defendants pleaded, that they made a good and lawful oath; upon which they were at issue, and in the same term the record was removed by a writ of error into the King's Bench; adjudged, that notwithstanding it was thus removed, the court of Common Pleas might proceed, if the process for the grand jury were returned. Dyer 284.

So that court may write to other inferior courts to have the record certified to try a thing depending before them; for the Common Pleas hath a jurisdiction to hold plea, either in error or attaint, upon a judgment or false oath given in other courts. Dyer 250.

Judgment was given in the Exchequer, and an attaint was brought in London, and before execution the record was removed by certiorari into the King's Bench, and the plaintiff prayed execution upon it, and had it; for an attaint is not a supersedeas as a writ of error is, nor doth a supersedeas lie in attaint. Dyer 82.

In ancient times it was held, that where a man recovered a debt upon a bond, the judgment was, that the bond should be damned, that is, cancelled; but now, since attaints and writs of error are so frequent, the judges have thought it dangerous to cancel deeds, either where the plaintiff recovers, or where the verdict and judgment is against him, because in both cases it may be reversed by a writ of error or attaint. 6 Rep. 45.

Attaint was brought in the Common Pleas against a jury, for a verdict given in the King's Bench, whereupon the record was removed from that court to the Common Pleas, and there the verdict was affirmed; adjudged, that the plaintiff in the action shall have execution according to the verdict, for the record is in the King's Bench, and nothing but the tenor thereof in the Common Pleas; but if the verdict had been set aside, and execution had been put upon it before it was set aside, then the court of Common Pleas might have awarded restitution to the party grieved. Cro. Eliz. 371.

Upon a certificate from a judge, that the jury gave a verdict against his opinion, the judgment was stayed; but upon motion to the court for judgment, it was granted, and accordingly it was entred; for the party may have an attaint against the jury, and there is no other remedy for him. Style 138.

The testator had a verdict upon a quo minus brought by him in the Exchequer; an attaint was brought against his executors; adjudged, that it lieth against executors by the equity of the statute 23 H. 8. cap. 3. which was in mitigation of the Common law, for it lies against any one who hath the benefit of the thing recovered; and in this case the executors pleaded a concord made between the plaintiff and their testator; upon which plea the plaintiff demurred; and it was adjudged, that in all actions founded upon a wrong, as trespass, conspiracy, &c. where nothing certain is demanded, nor any thing to be recovered but damages, there concord is a good plea. Dyer 202.

The plaintiff had a verdict in an action of trespass, and the defendant brought an attaint, and one of the jury pleaded an accord, with satisfaction between the plaintiff and the defendant in the action, and adjudged a good plea; for the writ of attaint is not grounded alone upon the record, where the matter is made certain, but upon matter of fact, for the supposition of the falsity of the oath is matter of fact. 6 Rep. 44. in Blake's case.

Adjudged, that the plaintiff in attaint may not produce more witnesses, nor give farther matter in evidence than what was deposed in the first action, but the defendant in attaint may give matter in evidence to enforce the first verdict, and the plaintiff shall have time to disprove it, if he can. Dyer 59.

In an attaint, more evidence cannot be given to attaint the first jury than was given to the first jury; for no default was in the first jury, if it was not shewn to them. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

In an attaint the plaintiff cannot give in evidence a record which was not given to the petit jury; for they were not bound to find it; it was not shewn to them. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

In assise, issue was taken whether lands were contained in letters patent or not, which by the Common law were not contained, tho' by the statute of 4 H. 8. they were contained. The justice of assise would not suffer that statute, it not being pleaded, to be given in evidence to the jury; whereupon they found that the land was not contained: hereupon an attaint was brought, and the court would not suffer that statute to be given in evidence to the grand jury, which was not given in evidence to the petit jury. Hob. 227.

The judgment in attaint was so severe, that they allowed all manner of evidence in support of their verdict; but against the verdict they admitted none that was not given at the former trial, because the jury might give in their verdict, not only on the evidence given in court, but on their own knowledge; and therefore whatever other ways they came to the knowledge of [as to] the fact, they might give in evidence for the support of their verdict; but the evidence not offered on the trial can never be brought against them, because such evidence might have alter'd their judgment, had it been given; and the want of that light, which the party neglected to offer, cannot convict them of falsity, which, if it had been offered, might have founded a different verdict. Gilb. H. C. B. 71.

Attainted, Attinctus, Is used in our Common law, particularly for such as are found guilty of some crime or offence, especially felony or treason: however a man is said to be attainted of disseisin. Cowell. West. 1. cap. 24 & 26. an. 3 Ed. 1. A man is attainted by two means; by appearance, or by process. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 44. Attainder by appearance is by confession, by battle, or by verdict. Id. fol. 122. Confession, whereof attaint groweth, is double: one at the bar before the judges, when the prisoner upon his indictment read, being asked whether Guilty or Not guilty, answers Guilty, never putting himself upon his country; the other is, before the coroner in sanctuary, where he was in former times upon his confession constrained to abjure the realm; and therefore this kind of attaint was called attainder by abjuration. Id. fol. 182. Attainted by battle is, when the party is appealed by another, and chusing to try the truth by combat, rather than by jury, is vanquished. Id. fol. 44. Attainder by verdict is, when the prisoner at the bar, answering to the indictment Not guilty, had an inquest of life and death passing upon him, and is by their verdict found guilty. Id. fol. 108 & 192. Attainder by process, otherwise called attainder by default, or utlary, is, where a party flieth, and is not found until he have been five times publickly called in the county, and at last outlawed upon his default, pronounced or returned outlawed. Id. fol. 44. The same author, fol. 108. makes a difference between attainder and conviction; and with this agrees the statute 34 & 35 Hen. 6. cap. 14. and 1 Ed. 6. cap. 12. in

12. in these words; that then every such offender being thereof duly convicted or attainted by the laws of this realm, &c. add hereto 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 23. and Staundf. fol. 66. saith, a man by our ancient laws was said to be convicted presently upon the verdict Guilty; but not to be attainted, till it appeared he was no clerk, or being a clerk and demanded of his ordinary, could not purge himself; whereby it appeareth, that attainder is larger than conviction, conviction being only by the jury; and attainder is not before judgment. Perkins, Grants, nu. 27, 29. Yet it appears by Staundford, fo. 9. that conviction is sometimes called attainder; for there he says, the verdict of the jury do either acquit or attaint a man: and so it is in Westm. 1. cap. 14. and likewise in many ancient writers. Et si quis aliter quam sic fecerit, & de hoc convictus fuerit & attaintus, ponatur in carcere. Du Fresne. Britton, fo. 75. uses the participle attaint in the sense we say attainted unto. This ancient law touching the purgation and conviction of clerks, is altered by 23 Eliz. cap. 2. as you may read further in Clergy.

Attendant, Attendens, Signifies one that oweth a duty or service to another, or in some sort dependeth upon him. For example; there is lord, mesne, and tenant; the tenant holdeth of the mesne by a penny; the mesne holdeth over by two pence: The mesne releaseth to the tenant all the right he hath in the land, and the tenant dieth; his wife shall be endowed of the land, and she shall be attendant to the heir of the third part of the penny, not of the third part of the two pence; for she shall be endowed of the best possession of her husband. And Kitchin, fo. 109. saith, that where the wife is endowed by the guardian, she shall be attendant to the guardian, and to the heir at his full age; with whom agrees Perkins in Dower, 424. Cowell.

Attermining, (from the Fr. terminer, to limit, to bound) Is used for a time or term granted for payment of a debt. Ordinatio de libertatibus perquirendis, an. 27 Ed. 1. And in the stat. West. 2. it seems to signify the purchasing or gaining a longer time for payment of debts. —— Atterminent querentes usque in proximum parliamentum. West. 2. c. 24. Cowell.

Attile, (Attilium, attillamentum) The rigging or furniture of a ship. This word is mentioned in Fleta, lib. 1. c. 25. Batallus (that is, the boat) cum omni onere et attillamento. Cowell.

Attillamentum. See Attile.

Attornare rem, To atturn or turn over money and goods, viz. to assign or appropriate them to some particular use and service. Ken. Paroch. Antiq. p. 283.

Attornato faciendo vel recipiendo, A writ to command a sheriff or steward of a county court, or hundred court, to receive and admit an attorney, to appear for the person that owes suit of court. F. N. B. 156. Every person that owes suit to the county-court, court-baron, &c. may make an attorney to do his suit. Stat. 20 Hen. 3. c. 10.

Attorney, (Attornatus) Is a person appointed by another to do any thing in his stead, and is as much as procurator or syndicus in the Civil law. Cowell. West in his Symb. part. 1. lib. 2. sect. 559. defines attornies thus: Attornies are such persons as by the consent, commandment, or request of another, do take heed, see to and take upon them the charge of other men's business in their absence.——But the person here treated of is an attorney at law, who is appointed to prosecute and defend for his client, and is considered as an officer belonging to the courts of justice; concerning whom are several statutes and adjudications.
